"Any candidate for public office who pledges himself to defy or evade the laws of the nation," the committee said, "is either dishonest or otherwise unworthy of the confidence of the people. For he must know that, if and when he is inducted into the office he is now seeking, he must take an oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States. And the Constitution of the United States means what the Supreme Court of the United States says it means."

The committee which drew up the appeal is composed of Atlanta educators, churchmen, labor leaders and business people. Dr. L. D. Reddick, chief librarian at Atlanta University, is serving as coordinator for the group.

Mrs. Thomas Pledges Role For Negroes

Gubernatorial candidate Grace Wilkey Thomas told Atlanta Negro voters Monday night she plans to appoint Negroes to a biracial commission to help carry out the U.S. Supreme Court's decision against public school segregation.

Mrs. Thomas made the pledge in a campaign address at Friendship Baptist Church.

The candidate denied charges that she was "planted" in the race by Talmadge forces and termed a vote for her eight opponents "a choice among demagogues."

"There are enough good people in Georgia," she declared, "to assure my victory on Sept. 8."

Mrs. Thomas was introduced at the rally by Prof. C. A. Bacote of Atlanta University.

Thompson Is Endorsed By Negro Voters League

The Atlanta Negro Voters League Monday night announced its endorsement of gubernatorial candidate M. E. Thompson.

The organization, which had backed Thompson in 1948 and 1950, voted 29 to 13 to again support him.

The league's endorsement of Thompson came two days after the State Organizing Committee, a new Negro organization, endorsed Charlie Gowen.

A. T. Walden and Rev. W. M. Jackson presided over the meeting. Rev. W. W. Weatherspool and C. A. Scott urged the endorsement of Thompson.

BLASTED AS FARCE

Immediately after the meeting, J. H. Calhoun, secretary of the league, said the "so-called endorsement of Thompson was a farce." Calhoun, who also is a leader in the State Organizing Committee, said the Atlanta Negro Voters' League is not participating in the election. He said even he and Jackson were not notified of the meeting until a few hours in advance. He charged that most of the 40 persons present were workers in Thompson's headquarters in the Walden building, or students brought in to pack the meeting.

SWAP CHARGES

Negro supporters of Gowen and Thompson swapped charges that large sums of money are being poured into the campaign to try to influence Negro votes.

J. M. Atkinson of Brunswick, leader of the State Organizing Committee and Gowen supporter, charged that money is being used to try to get Gowen supporters to switch.

He made this charge after Walden had declared that "someone" had turned over considerable sums of money to the newly formed State Organizing Committee.

Walden said the new organization represents less than 10 per cent of the Negroes Atkinson branded this "grossly untrue."

Race Between Himself, Thompson, Griffin Says

By KEN TURNER
Journal-Constitution Staff Writer

AMERICUS, Ga., Aug. 28—Gubernatorial candidate Marvin Griffin, again declaring the race is between him and M. E. Thompson, said votes for "splinters" candidates are "thrown away."

Addressing a large crowd here that braved a pre-rally cloudburst to gather in front of the Windsor Hotel, the lieutenant governor laid it on the line like this:

"If you want a governor who is opposed to segregation, the county unit system and is subservient to the NAACP, then vote for the former ex-acting governor M. E. Thompson.

"BUT IF YOU want a governor who will stand fast on the county unit system, preserve segregation and the Georgia way of life, Marvin Griffin is your man.

"If you want Thompson, vote for him. That's your privilege. But don't beat around the bush and waste your vote on Tom Linder and these splinter candidates."

The gubernatorial candidate confidently predicted a sweeping victory on Sept. 8. He declared: "We've got them on the run" and the big crowd gave a roar of approval.

He added: "The people of Georgia are going to elect a governor this time, not the professional politicians. We don't have a big slush fund like some of the other candidates. But we don't need one. You can't buy the people of Georgia."

THE HEAVY DOWNPOUR which threatened for a while to wash out the rally halted about 30 minutes before the meeting started officially. And just before Mr. Griffin began his campaign speech over a statewide radio hookup, the sun broke through.

Taking note of the size of the crowd which braved the early downpour and a traffic jam to hear his speech, Mr. Griffin declared:

"This is evidence enough that Marvin Griffin's friends are not fair weather friends."

BEFORE COMING to Americus Mr. Griffin spoke at Thomaston in Upson County where he was presented with a $750 campaign contribution.

Motorcades were present here Saturday from more than a score of southwest Georgia counties. It was one of the best rallies of the campaign.

In both speeches Saturday the lieutenant governor made only brief references to the Atlanta newspapers which have been one of his principal targets throughout the campaign.

Mr. Griffin, while hammering home the importance of maintaining segregation, denied he was a "race hater" or "race baiter."

HE SAID during the present administration, of which he is a vital part, the colored people of Georgia have made more progress than at any time in history.

He said he wanted to continue this progress, but he warned it will not be done if the Negroes of Georgia listen to the NAACP agitators and insist on the ending of segregation.

As governor, Mr. Griffin pledged to conserve and develop Georgia's "great God-given natural resources"; to bring more industries to the state; to increase old-age pensions; to raise workmen's compensation disability benefits and to foster a great rural road-building program.

He charged that some selfish politicians "bottled up" a Senate-approved measure last year which would have given Georgia workers increased compensation benefits. He said if elected he would see that this crowd is not around the Capitol next year to bottle it up again.

THE CANDIDATE said he favors an adequate program of education for Georgia's schoolchildren, both white and Negro, but on a segregated basis. He chided M. E. Thompson for not talking about his record in office.

"I don't blame him, I'd be ashamed of it, too," Mr. Griffin declared.

These Wild Charges Should Stop!

(AN EDITORIAL)

We are gravely concerned by the wild but serious charges that "huge" sums of money are being spent in the Negro community to influence the votes of our racial group. This paper has operated in this community and tried to live up to the highest principles of honesty and integrity in the conduct of its news and editorial policies and we believe the people have trust in us. We make this statement without impugning the motives or integrity of anyone else. We can say that money has never influenced us. This paper nor its editor has ever accepted one penny of money in connection with any political position we have taken in our history. We believe this is true for every member of our staff and if any member ever violates this policy he will remain on our staff no longer than the moment we find that he has allowed himself to be corrupted with money.

We recognize the fact that money can be spent legitimately in connection with campaigns but we take the position that leaders should keep their hands clean from money in connection with their political leadership.

Last Saturday a so-called Organizing Committee issued a release of the endorsement of Candidate Charlie Gowen for governor. The truth is, this committee is largely made up of workers for Mr. Gowen. Their endorsement was an anti climax as no one in that group, to our knowledge, is for any candidate but Mr .Gowen. As a result of the Saturday announcement, the leaders of the Atlanta Negro Voters League had a special meeting of that group and endorsed Former Governor M. E. Thompson. Then the charges of money began to fly in the press.

In order to help clear the confusion, we are inviting the candidates to send to us a a sworn statement of the names and amounts that they are paying to Negro workers in their campaigns. We think the people are entitled to know the paid workers from those who are working because of their free and honest convictions. Paid workers are used in most campaigns from those for President on down the line.

We are making this suggestion in order that the people shall never permit the Negro voter to become a commercial pawn. We fought through the years for this precious right to vote for our people and we do not intend to see our people misled by the influence of money.

This is a critical hour for the Negro leadership. We see an attempt to smear the established organizations in an effort to supplant them by new organizations. We heard last fall that attempts would be made to effectively neutralize the Negro vote in this election. If certain people are opposed to the present leadership then there is a proper way to change it without being a party to a plan to split the Negro voters in this crucial gubernatorial election.

We hope all concerned will stop making baseless charges and be specific with the proof if they have it. If not then we think the charges should cease less the confidence of the people be impaired.

Thompson, Gowen Seek Negro Votes, Hand Says

By ALBERT RILEY
Constitution Staff Writer

AUGUSTA, Aug. 31—Gubernatorial candidates M. E. Thompson and Charlie Gowen have "lost the respect and support of the white people of Georgia," because they are fighting with each other to get the Negro vote, House Speaker Fred Hand declared here Tuesday night.

Hand's attack on Gowen and Thompson in a television program here came a few moments after Gowen had completed a 15-hour radio and television Talkathon in Augusta.

HITS STATEMENT

The House speaker also charged that the name of one of his own supporters in Augusta was falsely called out on Gowen's Talkathon as being a contributor to Gowen's campaign.

Earlier in the day, Hand blistered Thompson, Gowen and Marvin Griffin in a speech at Hartwell as he stumped for votes in northeast Georgia.

Hand also emphasized a statement he made Monday night that he does not believe Gov. Talmadge would "stab a friend in the back" by supporting another candidate.

"Gov. Talmadge has told me repeatedly that he is not supporting anyone," Hand said. "I do not believe Gov. Talmadge is a liar. He has told the press I would make a good governor, and that if he could appoint a governor he would appoint me.

"I have fought for his legislation, and I was standing by his side when the Legislature elected him governor at 2 o'clock in the morning," Hand continued.

"I am sure he would not stab me in the back."

LASHES STAFF

Lashing out at some Talmadge administration employes for working on state time in behalf of other candidates, however, Hand had this to say at Hartwell:

"Watch those state employes," he said. "See whose rallies they are attending and whose posters they are tacking up.

"If those employes are not needed in state government any more than that, I'm going to fire them when I am elected," he said.

RAPS PATROL

He specifically implied that the State Highway Patrol is taking part in political activity.

"In 25,000 miles of campaigning over Georgia, I haven't seen more than half a dozen State Patrol cars," he said. "Well, we've got some good men on the State Patrol, but I don't know what their instructions are. I'm going to see that the patrolmen are put back on the highways."

Hand warned his Hart County audience that his opponents are spending "hundreds of thousands of dollars" trying to create a bandwagon and "trying to set a clever trap to make you think the governor's race is only a choice between M. E. Thompson and Marvin Griffin.

MONEY SOURCE

"Where has this money come from? It has come from the highway contractors and the liquor crowd," he declared.

Hand ripped into Griffin's rural road-building authority plan as a "dangerous" scheme to create a second highway department that would not be subject to legislative control or state audits.

Asserting that Thompson had the support of the NAACP, Hand said: "You can't get that crowd's support except by making a trade. And the white folks of Georgia are going to eliminate M. E. Thompson in no uncertain manner on Sept. 8."

Chatham Negro Seeks Tax Post

SAVANNAH, June 7 (AP)—Apparently for the first time in local history, a Negro qualified Monday as candidate for public office.

Edward B. Law qualified as candidate for the office of Chatham County tax receiver in a special election.

Political experts pointed out that it is entirely probable that the four white candidates will divide the white vote, leaving the field clear for an easy victory by Law on the strength of the Negro vote.

GEORGIA NEWS

Nominate 2 Negroes at Gainesville

Two new positions on the Gainesville Board of Education will be created by an ordinance given first approval by the city commission Thursday and two Negro men have been nominated to new seats when the ordinance is given its final approval.

It will mark the first time that Negroes have been nominated for the school board in Gainesville. Named to the two proposed board seats are Dr. E. E. Butler, a physician, and R. S. Lowe Jr., manager of a motion picture theater here. Dr. Butler was nominated for a two-year term and Lowe for a one-year term.

The ordinance was introduced by Commissioner Charles Martin and seconded by Mayor R. M. Knickerbocker. Commissioner Perry Chapman went on record as opposing the naming of Negroes to fill the new positions.

Martin and Knickerbocker said the action was taken "in an effort to preserve the excellent relationship between the two races in Gainesville and comes after at least three requests from the Negro community during the past three years for representation on the City Board of Education."

Knickerbocker, who is a member of the school board, said the board members had unamiously agreed to accept either advisory representatives or appointed members from the Negro community.

Dr. Butler, a native of Macon, is a graduate of Morehouse College in Atlanta and received his medical training at Meharry Medical School in Nashville, Tenn. Lowe is a native of Gainesville and is a graduate of Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama. He is president of the Men's Progressive Club in Gainesville and a veteran of 18 months overseas service during World War II.

Griffin Appeals For White Votes In Gov. Campaign

He wants to be governor, and he is making a bid only for the white vote in Georgia. Furthermore he openly accuses the Supreme Court of following the dictates of Walter White and "We shall not tolerate this vile and despicable tommyrot in Georgia."

This was the public appeal made by a public official yesterday as Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin qualified for the race, announcing, "I take my stand with the white people."

"It is plain," Griffin declared "that the United States Supreme Court is taking its views from Walter White, head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who believes and says that the only answer to the segregation problem is to be found by intermarriage."

Laying out his program, Griffin promised "protect and preserve" school segregation and the county unit system if elected. Ironically, his entrance fee was paid by men who had served with him during World War II in the South Pacific, in an effort to rid the world of this same type of thinking.

Savannah Voters Face Dilemma In Election

SAVANNAH, Ga. — As Chatham county voters filed to the polls Tuesday to cast ballots in a special election, they found themselves caught in a dilemma — should they support a Negro candidate accused of being a puppet of the Reactionary Chatham County Democratic Committee, or a white candidate sponsored by the liberal Citizens' Committee of Savannah.

The controversy centered around Edward B. Law, 46, local businessman, one of the last to file as a candidate for the office of tax receiver.

The opposition hinted that Law was another Chatham County Democratic Committee candidate. The committee is said to be a reactionary faction of the Georgia Democratic party and operates with the blessings of Herman Talmadge, anti-Negro governor of Georgia.

It is charged also that over the years the CCDC has allowed underworld elements to operate unmolested in Savannah Negro neighborhoods in exchange for the Negro-vote. The CCDC is adamant about questions regarding the Negro.

One of Law's four opponents Marvin Heery, candidate of the Liberal Citizens Committee. The Committee is composed of a reform group of young men who won a surprise election for their one candidate for the legislature last year. The victory rocked the city bosses, accused by the Citizens' Committee of having racket tie-ins.

The Citizens' Committee declared in an advertisement placed in the Savannah Morning News on June 11 that Law is employed by the Ebony Finance and Loan company. Ebony's president, J. Q. Jefferson, the advertisement said, is a long-time CCDC Negro leader.

There are 44,710 registered voters in Chatham county — 9,386 are Negroes.

Law, a native of Savannah, was educated in the Savannah public schools and later Savannah State college, and was awarded the master degree in education at Boston university. He is also a graduate of the Chicago Business Institute.

He taught for a time in the Beaufort County, S. C. schools and later was principal of the Swainsboro Vocational and Training school. Law began his business career as an auditor for the Guaranty Life Insurance company and at present is manager of the Ebony Finance and Loan company. He is married and has one daughter, a student at the University of Michigan.

VOTE PLEAS CENTER ON SEGREGATION

Candidates Dispute Merits of Plans, Sincerity of Others

Segregation continued to hold the political spotlight Saturday as the state's gubernatorial candidates expressed wide differences as to which candidate may best be trusted to preserve it.

And Marvin Griffin, at a rally in Douglas, claimed the "NAACP crowd" sabotaged his loudspeaker system by disconnecting the wires from his amplifier. The candidate delivered his speech with voice-power alone.

Candidate Fred Hand told a Thomaston gathering that his opponents are "justly worried" about the showing Mr. Hand is making in the race.

"MY CAMPAIGN'S really rolling," he told a cheering political rally.

Candidate Tom Linder said in Hartwell that the end of the white race is the aim of the NAACP.

"They will not stop until they have broken down segregation at the marriage altar," Mr. Linder declared.

In Tifton, M. E. Thompson added a new plank to his platform, proposing development of a long-range water conservation program.

Speaking in drought-parched country, he said one of his first official acts as governor would be the promotion of a water shed authority for the state.

CHARLES GOWEN, in a Cleveland speech, said his campaign is gaining strength while the candidacies of his opponents are either standing still or declining.

He asked the voters not to be "deluded" by bandwagon tactics, but to vote for the best man in the race—himself.

There isn't any such thing as "throwing away your vote on a candidate," Mr. Gowen declared.

MR. GRIFFIN jumped on former Gov. Rivers. He included the former governor in a general broadside which included Candidates Thompson, Hand and Linder and former Gov. Ellis Arnall.

"We have some strange bedfellows in the same political bed this summer," he declared.

"When you pull up the sheet on Ellis Arnall, M. E. Thompson, Ed Rivers, Roy Harris, Gov. Cox and A. T. Wildman—all side by side—that's more stress and strain than the good old state of Georgia can stand."

He listed himself as the only candidate who would be able to preserve school segregation in Georgia.

MR. GRIFFIN, besides serving Gov. Rivers as executive secretary, served Mr. Arnall as adjutant general.

He had attacked Mr. Arnall earlier in the race, but not Mr. Rivers.

Mr. Hand said both Mr. Griffin and Mr. Thompson would buckle under a court order to mix the races.

He said Mr. Griffin wrote in his Bainbridge Post-Searchlight in 1950 that Georgia would have to abide by the segregation decision of the Supreme Court.

MR. THOMPSON again restated his pledge to run a clean campaign. He declined to indulge in any "name-calling" of opponents, and attributed their alleged name-calling of him to the fact that he is "so far in the lead."

That's one reason, he said, that he hasn't answered the charges they've thrown his way. He said the other reason is that he'll be governor of every Georgian, not of just some

MR. LINDER charged that the NAACP has picked schools for its main target because "they were the easiest target."

He said the destruction of segregation in the schools would mean the destruction "of the finest thing in society today."

He reiterated that he is the only candidate who has a plan to maintain segregation. He spoke at Winder and later Saturday spoke at Hartwell.

Governor Rules Out Reelection Try Race for Agriculture Commissione

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Gov. Talmadge Tuesday eliminated himself as a potential candidate for commissioner of agriculture and, simultaneously, declared he would not call the Legislature into special session to permit him to seek reelection as governor.

"I would like to have some time to spend with my family, my farms and my personal affairs," Talmadge said.

Reps. Bill Freeman of Monroe County and L. G. Lifsey of Lamar County Tuesday were urging that the constitutional ban on a governor succeeding himself be removed.

TALMADGE SUPPORTER

Lifsey, a Talmadge supporter, and Freeman, normally in the other camp, said several legislators favored making it possible for Talmadge to offer for reelection.

The governor declared he is not giving any encouragement to the proposal.

A similar plan was discussed privately prior to the meeting of the Legislature last fall, but failed to materialize when the governor gave it no encouragement and others called it unwise.

FAILED TO LIFT BAN

In former Gov. Ellis Arnall's last year of office, the General Assembly summoned itself into special session to consider lifting the constitutional ban. After a bitter fight between Arnall and House Speaker Roy Harris, the General Assembly failed to lift the ban.

Concerning the agriculture post, Talmadge expressed appreciation to the thousands of friends who had pledged their support to him. He said these included newspapers, large and small, and farm leaders and people throughout Georgia — including many who had not heretofore supported him. Most of the potential candidates for commissioner had offered to withdraw for him, he said.

"I have given the matter mature consideration," the governor said. "I have decided not to offer as a candidate. My decision is predicated largely on personal matters. At the conclusion of my present term I will have been engaged in war and politics for 13 consecutive years. During the war I was away from my family for 22 months at one time. My eldest son was 18½ months old before I ever saw him. I would like to have some time to spend with my family, my farms and my personal affairs."

Talmadge said a number of "fine, well-qualified gentlemen have signified their intentions of running for commissioner of agriculture." He voiced no preference for any particular candidate.

Candidate Griffin Draws The Line

During the past week there been some important developments in this, one of the most important gubernatorial campaigns in Georgia's recent history.

We find that Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin is persisting on the front of race-baiting and injecting into this campaign other petty matters having really no place in a gubernatorial contest. In his speeches, he makes special appeals to white people to support him on the grounds that his leading opponent has the support of this newspaper.

The racial emphasis is clear and unmistakable. Apparently the Lieutenant Governor feels that this sort of campaigning will pay off in votes as it has done in former years, save on rare occasions.

We have no personal quarrel with the Lieutenant Governor we merely stick to our God-given right to disagree with him on policy and practice and to this end we accept the challenge of his battle cry.

Speaker of the House Fred Hand has declared that the contest was between himself and candidates Griffin and Thompson. To this deducation we agree and wish to add that Speaker Hand has not made out-right appeals to prejudice in his campaign; his closet approach was an emotional thrust that he "would go to jail" in an effort to keep segregation in the schools.

Former Governor M. E. Thompson, who has a record in that office to his credit, is the same as he was in 1948 and 1950, except he is older and more seasoned.

He has never aligned himself with the forces of reaction as candidate Griffin, who still takes pride in abusing and humiliating the Negro at his every opportunity.

Hence, as a matter of principle we are opposed to his philosophy and doubt his ability to ably and impartially administer the affairs of state.

At this time we wish also to pay our respects to Rep. Charles Gowen and Mrs. Grace Thomas. We appreciate their statements in their campaigns, but in the light of the way this campaign is drawn and how we feel the people will react, we do not consider their having a chance to win in this contest.

The issue in this campaign is not segregation, over which the courts have jurisdiction. The strategists who set up the State Education Commission, however, would have the people believe this is the issue. It was to confuse the white people into electing a governor who was most outspoken and extreme on the question of segregation. But, this strategy is also confusing a few of our people.

Segregation is not an issue; it is a problem or question that must be dealt with and we believe the extremists on both sides of the racial line are incapable of meeting it with a minimum of disturbance.

The people will take their choice. They have heard all the candidates and have their own evaluations. They are reaching conclusions as to who the real candidates are, and those who are not seriously in the race.

We are asking our people not to nullify their votes, but to come upon this plane in a solid phalanx, on this occasion when the very peace and harmony of the state are involved.

We have seen the fruits of strong-arm tactics and want no more of them.

It is encouraging to note from all over the state the attitude of the people in saving the prestige of the state. They fully realize that we are at the crossroads where we are to make a choice between reaction and tolerance.

Lt. Gov. Griffin has drawn the line and he appeals to the white voters of the state for support on the grounds that candidate Thompson has our support. Be ye not fooled, the issue is the same as in 1948 and 1950. It was and is now the question as to whether we will use our sacred ballots intelligently so as to eliminate this practice and pastime of race-baiting from the political scene of this state.

That's the over-riding issue in this campaign.

GEORGIA

Griffin Blames Communists For End Of Segregation "Plot"

KINGSLAND, Ga. — Speaking here Thursday with about a dozen other candidates for governor and other offices Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin, one of the Gubernatorial aspirants, blamed what he called a "plot" to end segregation on "Russian Imperial Communism."

Griffin said: "the Communists and fellow travelers tell us 'be calm—while they light the fuse that, if not quenched Sept. 8 by a storm of votes will blow white civilization into bits and substitute the Negro civilization."

THOMPSON PRESENT

Former Gov. M. E. Thompson and Rep. Charles Gowen, both candidates in the governor's race reiterated their desires to keep segregation in the schools. He said no effort should be made to divide white people on segregation.

Speaker of the House Fred Hand commented that he felt the candidates are in general agreement on four issues: segregation, the county unit system, taxes and toll roads. He also said he favored holding to segregation by various means.

Four candidates for the post of Lieutenant-Governor also expressed determination to keep segregation. They are Rep. John Greer of Lakeland, Adj. Gen. Ernest Vandiver, Sen. William Dean of Conyers and William Barrett, director of the State Veterans Service Department.

Gowen warned that if Georgia's public schools are destroyed, Communists will rush here to set up private schools. Without public supervision, isms will infiltrate the education of Georgia's children.

ATTY. GRACE W. THOMAS

NOT AFRAID—In face of threats of lily-white demagogues, courageous Atty. Grace W. Thomas, white, of Atlanta, who filed for Governor on a platform advocating compliance with the Supreme Court's ruling against segregated schools, is determined to stay in the race until the finish.

Not A Hypocrite

Grace Urges Compliance In Ga. Governor's Race

By LILLIAN S. CALHOUN

ATLANTA, Ga. — Georgia political campaigns are always different, but this summer there will be something new under the hot Georgia sun. A woman, Mrs. Grace Wilkey Thomas, a long-time Atlanta attorney, has thrown the gauntlet of law and order in the teeth of eight other candidates, all men and all vying to devise the best way to circumvent the recent anti-segregation decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

In Atlanta, last week, Mrs. Thomas told the press why she entered the already crowded race for the governor's chair.

Mr. Law

In Savannah, Ga., Chatham County's Democratic Club has denied, through Alderman David F. Knight, that it sponsored Negro candidate Edward Law during the recent election for county tax receiver. The denial came after GOP stalwart J. Howard Jarrott III said that the winner, Martin P. Heery Jr., had been aided in his race by Law's candidacy.

Negroes Rap Campaign Use Of Prejudice

Georgia Negro Democrats Saturday called on all gubernatorial candidates to "desist from any appeals to racial prejudices and lawlessness that is defiance or evasions of Supreme Court rulings."

Meeting in Atlanta, the Georgia Assn. of Citizens Democratic Clubs adopted a resolution that called for the "observance of law and upon the constitution of the United States as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States."

SOME 100 DELAGATES from 20 Georgia counties attended the one-day meeting held at the YMCA on Butler Street. President A. T. Walden, Atlanta attorney, presided.

In calling for the candidates to desist from any appeals to racial prejudices, the association said "these appeals will confuse and divide our people now and leave permanent scars after the current election campaign is over and forgotten."

The association heard the relative merits of the gubernatorial candidates discussed but failed to endorse any.

Griffin Draws Racial Line Tighter In Blast At Thompson

Thompson Promises Fair Treatment For Negroes

Declaring that the current gubernatorial race is between himself and former Governor M. E. Thompson, Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin attempted in his speeches Wednesday and Thursday to attract white voters in the state by his declaration that the "Negro bloc vote" would go to Thompson.

In speeches in Fort Gaines, Buena Vista, Forsyth and Cochran, Griffin cited an Atlanta Daily World editorial recommending Thompson over him and interpreted it as foreshadowing of a bloc vote. Of this possibility, he asked his (Cochran) audience: "Are we going to be less smart than the Negro agitators?"

In Forsyth, he remarked: "Isn't it strange that the only candidate they are against in the race is Marvin Griffin and the only one they are for is M. E. Thompson?"

He asked Georgia white voters to support him and "let's not deplete ourselves" in a fight against a bloc vote.

THOMPSON SPEAKS

Former Governor M. E. Thompson continued to ignore attacks made upon him by Griffin and others. His speeches, on the other hand expressed confidence in his ultimate victory over "the mudslingers."

His speeches have dealt primarily with specific public benefits which he says will result from his elections. He illustrated in Sylvania how money from tax refunds would finance several state improvements.

He also cited his record of public service as acting governor and in the state revenue and education departments.

WANTS "FAIR BREAK"

Mr. Thompson also declared that regarding education, Negroes have not been treated fairly. He indicated that Negroes would, with him as governor, receive a fair share of school funds. He stated that there would be no mixing of the races in the schools.

Fred Hand took Marvin Griffin to task by citing his pardoning record under Former Governor Ed Rivers. He exhibited a photostatic copy of a pardon he claimed Griffin signed for himself.

Faced with this evidence, Griffin admitted having done so.

Hand also claimed that Gov. Herman Talmadge, said by Griffin supporters to be backing Griffin, has "given me his word" that he is not backing any candidate.

Charlie Gowen centered his fire on Griffin whom he accused of being an "enemy of labor."

He said Griffin in his six years as Senate president never made a move to aid labor.

"If Marvin had wanted to, he could have introduced and passed legislation in to increase workmen's compensation.

by stating he "had a hand in the drafting and passage of all major legislation of the present administration."

Hand insisted that "it had been a privilege as speaker of the Georgia House to work closely with Gov. Talmadge in writing his great programs into law.

Charlie Gowen launched an attack on the Talmadge school plan which he said "would open the doors wide to Communism and other dangerous 'isms.'"

Gowen attacked insurance companies saying they should live up to policy agreements. He added

GRIFFIN PLEDGES TO CARRY ON IDEALS OF TALMADGE REGIME

Significant developments in Georgia's gubernatorial campaign were the intensified campaign by several hopefuls to woo support of the Talmadge faction and the "turn the other cheek tactics" of Former Gov. Melvin E. Thompson.

Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin got what was widely interpreted as a virtual endorsement from Gov. Herman Talmadge who had refuted a claim by Roy Harris, political kingmaker, that he didn't "politically trust" Griffin.

Griffin has pledged "to carry on high ideals" of the Talmadge administration.

Thompson, meanwhile, ignored the Talmadge love feast and flatly declared that "while I am governor there will be no new taxes imposed upon the people of this state."

Speaking at Covington, the former acting governor stated that "there is no need for new taxes for we shall eliminate waste in state government and do a better job of collecting existing taxes."

He also said there "is too much" government in daily living and again attacked the "silly law" which now requires you to report to Atlanta how much you owe on your car or truck before you can buy a tag."

PRAISES ADMINISTRATION

Fred Hand went out with a fond overture to Talmadge supporters that hospital rates can be reduced in Georgia."

He also insisted the merit system could be improved.

GRIFFIN HITS ARNALL

Griffin went on record as stating "Herman (Talmadge) and I worked as a team in 1948 and 1950 and you elected us both times. We both told you then we were for the same things and we still are."

Griffin blasted former Gov. Ellis Arnall, who has endorsed M. E. Thompson in the present campaign.

Griffin said:

"It was Arnall who 'city slicked' Agriculture Commissioner Tom Linder into the gubernatorial race in an effort to split the white vote. Arnall also 'city slicked' Linder in 1942 when Linder took off his Red galluses, 'stabbed' Gene Talmadge in the back, and endorsed Arnal.

The lieutenant-governor also accused Arnall of giving "aid and comfort through the years to proponents of mixing the races in public life."

Mrs. Thomas Hits Peril of Demagogues

Special to The Constitution

SAVANNAH, Aug. 27—The two real dangers confronting Georgia are "Russian communism and American demogoguery," candidate for governor, Grace Thomas said in a radio speech here.

"Communism cannot win the world," she said, "without American demagoguery to help it. The demagogue is Russia's right-hand man."

Mrs. Thomas, only candidate in the race pledged to uphold the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court on segregation in the schools, said the demagogue in Georgia is "not paid by Russia."

"He is paid by large corporations right here in our state," she declared, "but he is working day and night for Russia."

Speaking at Plains Mrs. Thomas said she plans a water conservation system and an irrigation system for Georgia farmers if she is elected.

Mrs. Thomas also said she favored periodic examinations of all automobile drivers as well as all vehicles, "to make our highways safer."

Mrs. Thomas Offers 'Right, Wrong Choice'

Mrs. Grace Thomas, candidate for governor, says she entered the race for governor to give Georgians a choice between democracy and demagoguery.

Speaking at the Old Slave Market in Louisville, Mrs. Thomas said she was offering the people a chance to choose between right and wrong."

Quoting from the preamble to the U.S. Constitution, she declared that equality extends to all people, "regardless of race, creed or religion in education, at the polls and on the job."

Mrs. Thomas asked that all "Christian Democrats" go to the polls Wednesday and "say Grace."

THE SOUTH:

March of the Negro

The maltreatment of a Negro in the South, a trespass upon his rights as a freeborn American citizen, the brutality of a hooded mob—these are the isolated occurrences that make headlines and provide grist for the Communist propaganda mills. The unromantic fact is that in recent years the Negro has been moving ahead at a lively pace, coming into his political birthright. The past month has seen six Negroes elected to public office in North Carolina. Last week, in Georgia, a Negro defeated a white man in a citywide Atlanta election. William A. Emerson Jr., chief of Newsweek's Atlanta bureau, discusses these victories in relation to the new position of the Negro in the changing South.

Newsweek

For the first time since the carpetbaggers controlled the city during the Reconstruction after the Civil War, the voters of Atlanta last week elected a Negro to the Board of Education. Dr. Rufus E. Clement, 52-year-old president of Atlanta University, polled 22,259 votes to 13,936 for his opponent, J.H. Landers, a board member since 1927, an able man who had the endorsement of the Atlanta newspapers. Clement won overwhelmingly, despite a late charge that he was a Communist sympathizer. His own interpretation of the victory is as good as any:

"It isn't a personal victory. It's a victory for the people. I've been feeling for some time that the people of the South are far ahead of what some people think they are . . . The white population is ready to work constructively with the Negro population . . . There is a very solid core of good will in the middle of each group."

To students of the race problem in the South, Clement's victory was a signal manifestation of the emergence of the Negro as an individual. "During my campaign," he remarked, "I was accepted as an individual—sometimes very warmly." As the experts see it, the South is at the end of a legalistic era in race relations, an era characterized by court decisions establishing the Negro's rights in the community; ahead lies a period during which the Negro has to get himself accepted as an individual into everyday life.

Negroes in Politics: Since 1940, by court order, the South has opened the all-important Democratic primaries to Negro voters; abandoned segregation on interstate buses and railroads; admitted Negroes to institutions of higher education in ten Southern states; and recognized the right of Negroes to serve on juries in cases involving other Negroes.

Meanwhile, the South has voluntarily taken many strides forward. Some typical examples: twenty years ago only a few communities used Negro policemen; now several hundred are employed in nine cities. Ten cities have fire stations manned by Negroes. A survey of 34 daily papers in the Deep South showed more than half used "Miss" and "Mrs." before the names of Negro as well as white women—with no significant protest from white readers. Tuskegee Institute, after 65 years of record-keeping, reported for the first time a lynching-free year in 1952. Between 1947 and 1952 the number of registered Negro voters in the South jumped from 645,000 to 1,110,000.

Reports on the emergence of the Negro during the past two decades by states follow:

▶North Carolina: Twenty years ago the color line was unbroken. In 1950 the Negro registration was 100,000 out of 549,000 over 21. This spring, about twenty Negroes ran for municipal offices; six were elected. North Carolina now spends about $155 a year to educate each Negro; about $132 for each white.

▶South Carolina: In Charleston recently a petit jury of twelve contained six Negroes. There is a Negro on the Darlington County school board and a Negro member of the board of the State Medical Association. In Florence recently an all-white jury sent three white officials to prison for beating up Negroes who had been arrested on minor charges. Negroes have been playing professional baseball in South Carolina parks. Political observers agree that Negroes soon will find their way to public office.

▶Louisiana: Negro registration mounted from 300 in 1946 to 90,000 now. New Chrysler, International Harvester, and Kaiser Aluminum plants hire Negroes without discrimination. The state has no elected Negro officials, but Negroes run for office without being intimidated.

▶Alabama: There are about 50,000 qualified Negro voters, twenty times more than in 1933. Negroes are called for jury service along with whites. Segregation remains on local transit lines, but the feeling is that segregation is doomed. "We're getting in the human-being class," one Birmingham Negro commented. His wife added: "And the white folks don't seem to mind."

Bill Warren

Dr. Clement: The people's choice

▶Mississippi: Negro voters were negligible twenty years ago; ten years ago there were 10,000 who qualified; now there are 30,000. Negroes are being put on juries in cases involving Negroes. In Greenville the employment of two Negro policemen and two Negro policewomen has reduced the murder rate in a tough Negro section to nothing.

▶Georgia: Clement's election is the big news here, though Augusta already has a Negro on its school board. There is no poll tax in Georgia, and in cities of 25,000 and over the Negro registers and votes as easily as he does in the North.

▶Texas: Negroes have won no important political offices in Texas but more are running all the time. They serve regularly on grand juries in state courts and on Federal court juries.

To sum up, employment and housing throughout the South have not kept up with voting, office holding, jury duty, and participation in public life. Housing is given as the cause of three fourths of the racial violence, with urban Negroes crowded in substandard housing. But this problem is no worse than in the North.

Chatham Negro Seeks Tax Post

SAVANNAH, June 7 (AP)—Apparently for the first time in local history, a Negro qualified Monday as candidate for public office.

Edward B. Law qualified as candidate for the office of Chatham County tax receiver in a special election June 22.

Political experts pointed out that it is entirely possible that the four white candidates will divide the white vote, leaving the field clear for an easy victory by Law on the strength of the Negro vote.

Griffin and Thompson Stress State's Rights

Two gubernatorial candidates Monday tied the segregation theme into freedom and states' rights, as they addressed Independence Day audiences.

Former Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson, speaking at Guyton, declared that the South depends upon Georgians, both white and Negro, to rally together to defend their free status. He said Georgians want separate schools, equal and public.

ASKS PLEDGE

Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin, addressing a Franklin audience, urged Georgians to pledge "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor" to preserve segregation and the Georgia way of life.

Griffin's headquarters listed another "political name" for the campaign opener at Moultrie Saturday. Charles Worrill of Cuthbert, justice emeritus of the State Supreme Court, will introduce Griffin at Moultrie, it was announced. Earlier, the headquarters said that W. A. Blasingame of Moultrie, president of the Georgia Association of County Commissioners, will preside Saturday.

THOMPSON HERE

Thompson will address the Kiwanis Club at the Atlanta Athletic Club at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday. Thompson formally opens his campaign at Douglas Saturday.

Candiate Fred Hand will open Saturday at Camilla, while candidate Charlie Gowen will open at Jesup on the same day. Ben Garland said he will broadcast Saturday at 6:15 p.m. over WAGA-TV. Tom Linder opened last Saturday at Hazelhurst.

Thursday at 3:30 p.m., four candidates—Gowen, Garland, Linder and Griffin—will share the same platform at Rhine in Dodge County. Randall Evans and M. E. Thompson Jr. will represent Thompson. Neither Thompson nor Hand can be present.

Discussing the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, Griffin said Monday: "Nowhere in the Constitution was one word 'education' mentioned. All powers not granted to the federal government nor prohibited to the states in this Constitution were delegated to the states. Since 'education' was not mentioned in the Constitution, it became a state responsibility."

Thompson said that Georgians and the South 90 years ago faced a crisis such as they face today.

"Ninety years ago we won because of united white support and because the best type of the Negroes were loyal to the whites," Thompson asserted.

Clark Gaines, candidate for commissioner of agriculture, spoke on the Guyton program Monday.

10-POINT PROGRAM

Woman Candidate Segregation Foe

Georgia's woman candidate for governor, Mrs. Grace Wilkey Thomas, is an active Atlanta attorney, a Sunday school teacher and a grandmother.

She is also the only candidate in favor of obeying the Supreme Court's ban on segregation in schools.

Mrs. Thomas, 44, announced her 10-point platform as she qualified with the State Democratic Committee Saturday. She came in almost on the noon dead line.

"I couldn't make up my mind before this," she said.

She says she will conduct a vigorous speaking campaign over the state. And she doesn't expect the eight gentlemen in the race to treat her differently from any other candidate.

They don't need to pull punches and she won't either, she indicated.

THE FIRST PLANK in her platform calls for working "toward orderly compliance with Supreme Court decisions, to seek unity in working out our problems."

Earlier she had said the segregation decision specifically is one she believes in obeying. And Saturday she said she would be more explicit about the first plank later.

Other planks in her platform call for fighting communism; more and better roads; increased assistance to old people; better health facilities; greater opportunities for women and young people; lower taxes; efficiency in government and wisdom, justice and moderation.

HER PLATFORM also calls for better education for white children, "as well as non-whites," and better paid teachers.

And it says: "Instead of tearing down schools, I am in favor of more and better schools."

It also calls for "a re-evaluation of spiritual values and a greater emphasis on the individual under God."

Mrs. Thomas also gave this background information about herself:

She lives 2392 Westminster Way, and her husband, Herndon Thomas, owns an electronics company.

Her two daughters are Miss Rose Marie Thomas and Mrs. Laura Grace Thomas. Her grandson is two-year-old Michael Herndon Thomas.

SHE TEACHES Sunday School at the First Baptist Church, and practices law in state and federal courts here.

Mrs. Thomas said she received her LL.B and LL.M degrees at night school while her children were growing up.

"You can do anything if you want to," she commented.

She is a member of the American, Georgia and Atlanta Bar Assns.; past president of the Georgia Assn. of Women Lawyers, and state delegate to the National Assn. of Women Lawyers for the past three years.

AS CHAIRMAN of the national association's Committee for Jury Service for Women, she was active in campaigning for Georgia's woman-juror law. She also is a member of the national association's committee for uniform divorce laws.

Other memberships include secretary of the Equity Club of Atlanta women lawyers; Eastern Star, Delta Sigma Gamma National Legal Sorority and the Soroptomist Club of Atlanta.

the race for governor, one of whom qualified yesterday.

ALL EIGHT MEN

Secondly, she has the distinction of being the first gubernatorial candidate to run on a desegregation platform. All eight men oppose the United States Supreme Court decision outlawing school segregation. Each has vowed to uphold the old practice if elected.

Mrs. Thomas declared Thursday:

"There is nothing the Communists would like better than strife in Georgia and disobedience to the law. I think we should work for the unity of the people.

THE CHRISTIAN THING

"It would be to the advantage of the white children as well as the colored children. It is the Christian thing to do. It is anti-Communist. It is good citizenship. As a lawyer, I think we should obey the law."

Arthur H. Neeson, 41, Atlanta businessman, qualified for office yesterday. He is out to "save" segregation, as are the rest who are running for governor.

They are Fred Hand, Tom Linder, Marvin Griffin, M. E. Thompson, Ben Garland, Charles Gowen and Edmond Barfield.

Two Negroes Seek Seats On Fulton Executive Unit

Candidates Qualify for Both Positions In Third Ward; Both Are Opposed

Two Negroes from Atlanta's predominantly Negro Third Ward Saturday became the first of their race ever to seek posts on the Fulton County Democratic Executive Committee.

They were qualified without question by the all-white committee shortly after entries closed at noon.

J. C. Dougherty qualified with Committee Secretary Neill Leach for the first bracket committee post in the Third Ward. He will oppose three white candidates, T. J. Couch, George Johnson and James A. Wofford.

The Rev. R. B. Shorts entered the race for the other Third Ward post, against John F. Cloud, the only white candidate—formally certified by the committee Saturday.

TWO NEGROES were elected to the Atlanta City Executive Committee, city counterpart of the county group, in the 1953 city primary.

But they had to force the committee in office at that time to hold an election.

The Sept. 8 primary is, for executive committeemen, an election. Not all incumbents formally qualified Saturday, but the committee ruled those who did not but want to will be eligible.

The list released by Mr. Leach, and possibly not including some who may run, is:

Woman Qualifies In Governor's Race

Mrs. Grace Wilkey Thomas, prominent Atlanta attorney, made history in Georgia in two instances Saturday when she qualified as a candidate for Governor.

Candidate Thomas Is Begging The Question

In somewhat of a tilt of issues, and would be issues between one of the gubernatorial candidates, Mrs. Grace Thomas and Rod Harris, who spoke in favor of former Acting Governor M. E. Thompson, the mass meeting of voters at the Mt. Moriah Baptist Church, was beyond a doubt more enlightened on the real issue in this campaign. We repeat as we have on former occasions, it is the same as it was in 1948 and '50, and Mr. Harris stated in no uncertain terms that the campaign strategy was set up to confuse the voters, with some making segregation the issue.

Mr. Harris made it plain that this was not, as was claimed by Mrs. Thomas, a campaign in which, whether to obey or not to obey the Constitution of the United States, is an issue. It was shown conclusively that this is not a question on which any particular candidate could lay claim for votes.

Mrs. Thomas in her rebuttal, insisted that law and order was the issue. Who ever heard of the obeying of the law being an issue? Who ever heard of in this set up of a democracy, an office holder having an option in either obeying the law or defying it?

But this goes on to show that this campaign was shrewdly set up and pitched in a manner in which both sides of the street could be well worked. In that, those who would not bite for race-baiting, would bite for "law enforcement" when the enforcement or obeying of the law does not have to be campaigned and voted for. Hence, vote nullification.

While we appreciate the nice things Mrs. Thomas says in her speeches and we further insist that we have no quarrel with her, as there are hundreds of other nice people who would say nice things. But we could not in this hour, be consistent if we were content to vote for somebody with a nice vocabulary and no chance at winning this election, when the times are calling for a full time man for a man-sized job.

Baby talk is fine for babies; it soothes and consoles. The baby is content with his milk bottle. This is a stern rugged steel age of streamline transition. The question is "To be or not to be."

The Negro has been fed on baby talk for generations. While it fattened his muscles it served as an anesthetic which put him to sleep. Like Rip Van Winkle he returned from his long sleep to find his gun rusted, his dog gone and unable to be recognized by his neighbors.

Soon or late the real issue in this campaign must be met head-on. We might as well face the facts and seize the opportunity to fight it out now in the selection of the strongest candidate with the possibility of getting elected, that this Negro "cussin" business might come to an inglorious close.

The mountain just isn't coming to Mohammed.

Woman Wins Georgia Race

ATLANTA —(AP)— Rep. Phil Campbell won a close race for commissioner of agriculture, defeating Gordon Boyd by 24 unit votes in virtually complete but unofficial returns from Wednesday's primary in Georgia.

In another of Wednesday's close races, Mrs. Iris Blitch defeated veteran Congressman Don Wheeler for nomination for the 11th district post.

Mrs. Blitch received 25,729 votes and carried 13 of the 20 counties. Wheeler got 24,343 votes in final unofficial returns, and a third candidate, Brunswick attorney Wesley R. Quaggs, got 5,724.

Mrs. Blitch pitched her campaign on charges Wheeler was guilty of absenteeism and lack of party loyalty.

Cook Asks Griffin List Segregation Plan

By BERT SPENCER

Georgia Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook Monday called on Gov.-Nominate Marvin Griffin and each of seven other former gubernatorial candidates for a "detailed memorandum" on plans to preserve school segregation in the state.

Meanwhile, Gov. Talmadge pledged his personal support and James A. Peters, chairman of the State Democratic Committee, promised the committee's support in the campaign for passage of the socalled "private school amendment" to be voted on in November.

Cook said details of plans to circumvent the U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing public school segregation were needed at once for him to draft legal defense of such circumvention.

The Georgia Education Commission, of which he is a member, needs the details to draft recommendations of legislation aimed at preserving segregation to present to the 1955 General Assembly, Cook said.

In a letter to the candidates, the attorney general asked that the memoranda include "legal briefs or legal authorities" to uphold the plans.

Gov.-Nominate Griffin, resting from his campaign, was unavailable for comment.

House Speaker Fred Hand said he would submit details of the plan he outlined during his campaign, but that he has another plan he would not reveal until after the Supreme Court hearing in October, at which the high court will study implementation of the anti-segregation decision.

Hand commented that every time details of a circumvention plan are revealed before the October hearing, "we tip our hand" to opponents of segregation who will argue before the high court.

M. E. Thompson, former acting governor and another gubernatorial candidate in the primary Griffin won last Wednesday, said he would reiterate his plan for control of segregation by budgetary methods in reply to Cook's request.

Charlie Gowen of Brunswick, another defeated candidate, also said his plan to maintain segregation had been aired in the campaign and before the Education Commission and that he would refer Cook to the transcript at a commission hearing in which he presented his plan and defended it under cross-examination by commission attorneys.

Agriculture Commissioner Tom Linder was not available for comment.

William A. Early, superintendent of Chatham County schools and a past president of the National Education Association, told the Savannah Exchange Club Monday "It is foolish to propose democracy and then close down our public schools."

Denouncing the Talmadge-proposed private school amendment, Early said it is "unlikely" the Supreme Court will "definitely order white and Negro children to attend school together."

Until such an order is issued, he said, "We need not worry about the anti-segregation ruling."

The attorney general said he felt sure the defeated candidates would cooperate with his office and the education commission. He said no letter went to Mrs. Grace Thomas because, as a gubernatorial candidate, she advocated compliance with the high court decision.

Peters said he was sure the State Democratic Convention would approve Talmadge's private school amendment at its session Sept. 29 in Macon.

The chairman said he believed Griffin's victory reflected Georgians' feelings on the issue.

Griffin will be in charge of reorganization of the state party at the convention, which meets to formally nominate candidates.

Griffin Wins As Georgia Governor And Takes Up Segregation Fight

BY PETER S. WILLETT
United Press Staff Writer

ATLANTA, Sept. 9—Late returns completed Marvin Griffin's smashing victory in the Democratic primary today and the newly nominated governor planned to resume campaigning almost immediately in behalf of a plan to keep schools segregated.

The plan is to amend the constitution so that schools can be turned over to private operators to avoid compliance with the U. S. Supreme Court Ruling against separate public schools.

The amendment comes up for popular vote in the November General Election. It first was sponsored by outgoing Gov. Herman Talmadge and the 47-year-old Griffin took it up when he rode to victory over eight opponents in the primary with Talmadge's implied blessing.

Returns from 1646 of the 1893 precincts in yesterday's voting gave Griffin 201,164 popular votes and 298 county unit votes to 135,148 popular votes and 56 unit votes for his nearest rival, Former Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson.

Only 206 unit votes were necessary for a majority and nomination under the unique voting system in which the rural vote is heavily weighted against the metropolitan tally.

Thompson had hoped to enter a run-off, at least, in the belief that two other so-called Talmadge candidates in the race, House Speaker Fred Hand and Agriculture Commissioner Tom Linder, would split the vote favorable to the administration. But Hand and Linder between them had only 48 indicated unit votes.

With his victory apparent, Griffin appeared on a television program with Talmadge today and the outgoing governor held up the winner's hand to announce Griffin was "taking up the torch" to preserve segregated schools.

Rep. James C. Davis was returned to his Fifth District Congressional seat over Morris Abram, eight unit votes to six. Mrs. Iris Blitch, Democratic National Committeewoman, was leading Rep. W. M. (Dom) Wheeler in the Eighth District where the race was decided on the popular vote.

With 116 of 163 precincts reported, Mrs. Blitch had 16,972 votes and Wheeler 15,222.

John J. Flynt was apparent winner of a three-way fight to succeed the late Rep. Sidney Camp in the Fourth District. Sen. Richard B. Russell and seven other Congressmen were nominated without opposition.

THE WINNAH!—Gov. Herman Talmadge (right) of Georgia raises the hand of Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin in Atlanta, when it became apparent that Griffin had won a smashing victory in the nine-man gubernatorial race in the Democratic primary. Former Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson, Griffin's nearest rival, finally admitted that "it is apparent that Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin has won the election."

RACIAL ISSUE IN ATLANTA

Negro Leaders Stress Court's Ruling Against Segregation

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 12—A committee of 100 Atlanta Negroes has called on Georgians to repudiate any candidate for office who proposes to defy the Supreme Court segregation ruling or who uses appeal to racial prejudice.

The committee will try to get the signatures of 500,000 persons in support of its campaign before the Sept. 8 primary.

"Any candidate for public office who pledges himself to defy or evade the laws of the nation," the committee said, "is either dishonest or otherwise unworthy of the confidence of the people. For he must know that, if and when he is inducted into the office he is now seeking, he must take an oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States. And the Constitution of the United States means what the Supreme Court of the United States says it means."

The committee which drew up the appeal is composed of Atlanta educators, churchmen, labor leaders and business people. Dr. L. D. Reddick, chief ilbrarian at Atlanta University, is serving as coordinator for the group.

South's Greatest Political Victory Seen in Atlanta, Ga.

Negroes Reveal Strength

By JOHN L. CLARK
(Courier Political Analyst)

ATLANTA, Ga.—The city of Atlanta turned in the South's greatest political achievement in 1953 by voting Dr. Rufus Clement into a school board post and electing Atty. Austin T. Walden and Miles G. Amos to membership on the Democratic City Committee to represent the Third Ward.

Last year Atlanta played a prominent part, if not the deciding role in defeating the proposed extension of the county unit system to general elections.

In the balloting of 1952, General Eisenhower received 35,147 votes in Fulton County (principally Atlanta), while the remaining 158 counties contributed 163,832 — slightly more than 1,000 to a county.

Eisenhower's total vote in Georgia was 198,979, highest ever received by any Republican Presidential candidate.

ILLINOIS GOVERNOR Adlai Stevenson, Democratic nominee, carried the state with 452,323 votes.

Republicans assisted in defeating the county unit amendment in that same election and get credit for assisting this year in the nomination of Dr. Clement, who, after being accused of associating with Communist-front and subversive groups, was defended by a Catholic priest.

But the election of Attorney Walden and Dr. Amos to the City Committee on May 13, was accomplished by 10,500 Democrats with Negroes supplying 7,000 of the votes cast.

Walden is a nationally known lawyer, counsel for the NAACP and close friend of William B. Hartsfield, Mayor of Atlanta.

Governor Herman Talmadge rates Walden highly as a political factor, warning white voters that the noted Negro attorney and Hartsfield "want to boss the whole State of Georgia."

NEITHER WALDEN or Amos ver tried for City Committee membership before.

Originally a Republican, Walden changed his political affiliation eighteen years ago "because Republicans were doing nothing to build strongly in Atlanta."

He organized the Atlanta Voters League and Fulton County Citizens Club.

Walden is president of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs, which has sixty units in the state's 159 counties.

Three-fourths of this membership vote Democratic.

According to political workers, Negroes encounter no trouble or delay when trying to register in Atlanta or Fulton County.

Small rural counties with large Negro populations make it hard to vote, but that practice is rapidly disappearing.

POLITICAL observers estimate that less than twenty mounties use delaying methods of any kind at registration or polling places.

Mrs. Grace Hamilton, executive secretary of the Atlanta Urban League, rightfully rates the election of Walden and Amos more important in a political way than the victory for Dr. Clement.

She also calls attention to the composition of Negro voters in Atlanta.

More women than men are registered and many households have husbands who are not registered.

The 1946 registration drive by the Citizens Committee combined the Urban League, NAACP, Civic and Political League and Democratic Clubs.

It was successful because neighborhood groups enlisted and worked.

The Urban League endorses the philosophy that "civic education and participation are major means of correcting social conditions."

ATLANTA IS the capital of Georgia and operating center of the state's Republican party.

The Courier missed John Wesley Dobbs on Aug. 4, being informed that he had not returned from Europe.

On Aug. 18, Mr. Dobbs was in Denver, Colo. By the time he returned to Atlanta, the Elks Convention was in full swing and he was not contacted.

John Wesley Dobbs is vice chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, and known as one of the most outspoken and hard-driving Republican leaders in the South—or any section, for that matter.

He was on the losing end of a vote this year to force the state chairman, Elbert P. Tuttle, to resign that post after Tuttle was appointed Counsel to the Treasury Department of the United States.

APPOINTMENT OF a Federal District Attorney without Dobbs' approval was taken to mean that he no longer had a voice in policy-making or patronage in his party.

Unofficial reports estimate that thirty-three of the forty-three Negro members of the Republican State Committee voted against Dobbs and the resolution to displace Tuttle.

The full committee has 132 members of all races.

W. J. Shaw disputes these reports, says friction in the state group has been smoothed out and that Dobbs was never dropped on policy or patronage.

Mr. Shaw, head of an audit firm, owner of the six-story Odd Fellows building on Auburn Avenue, is assistant secretary of the Republican State Committee.

HE BELIEVES the outlook is good for a strong Republican party in Georgia.

The present membership is composed of representative people, interested in the party and willing to work to build a challenging majority.

He explains, however, that the Republican National Committee must help and candidates must be offered in city, county, state and national elections.

Mr. Shaw realizes that new, white members attracted to the Republican party last year, and apparently inclined to remain, will outnumber Negroes who have been loyal all through the twenty-year Roosevelt-Truman administrations.

In a letter, dated Aug. 23, Mr. Shaw advised Negro leaders in Georgia:

"Many of these newcomers will be very influential in their communities, and will make substantial contributions to the party, not only in votes but in money.

"What we (Negroes) do will be watched."

SHAW EXPRESSED himself as being hopeful that the response will be radically different from a similar message sent by Ben Davis in 1930.

The national committeeman for Georgia of that period asked county chairmen to raise $10 each to pay expenses of meetings.

Forty-five white and only eleven Negro chairmen sent the requested money.

Georgia had 161 counties in 1930, and 110 of the counties elected Negro Republican chairmen.

Davis was attempting to avert the elimination of Negro members and officials in the Republican party, which had virtually been demanded by President Hoover.

Henry Lincoln Johnson had been elected national committeeman in 1924. He died in 1926 and Davis was selected to fill out the unexpired term.

BEN DAVIS handled the presidential campaign of 1928, when Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia voted for Hoover.

Georgia failed to join the "Hoover parade in the South," but gave 63,498 votes, highest cast for any Republican presidential candidate in six previous campaigns.

Clarence Brown of Ohio, postmaster general under Hoover, is charged with engineering a change in patronage policy, accepted by the President, to recognize only "lily-white" Republicans in Georgia and other parts of the South.

Mr. Hoover was persuaded to believe that his administration was the one to build a strong Republican party with whites only.

Ben Davis was in other trouble.

Prior to 1928, he had been recommended for a national post.

HE WAS secretary of the state committee at the time, and opposition claimed he should give up one job.

Davis was the object of charges of misuse of his office and criticized on tactics to hold the party together.

Behind the whole scheme, though, was a patent plan to drive Negro leaders from the Republican party and make it a typical "white supremacy" clique!

The Hoover administration refused to recognize Ben Davis in patronage matters.

Under Eisenhower, the Republican party in Georgia is energetic, and leaders of both races are recognized by the national administration.

Democrats in Atlanta are more fortunate than in many Northern cities.

They have a Mayor, William B. Hartsfield, who says that he was elected by "intelligent white and colored people."

He is able, an expert on housing and conducts his office on a policy of "fair treatment for everybody."

HE INFORMED the Courier that Negroes are not only wanted in politics, but are solicited as customers in downtown stores.

While he would not answer the question of what part he played in the election of Dr. Clement, Walden and Amos, it is evident that he convinced the City Democratic Committee that these promotions were wise, and Negro voters would be grateful for them.

If Republicans can succeed in attracting more voters, Atlanta can be the political beacon light of the South.

...sfield has already shown that he is bigger than all other Mayors in the South, and more humane and unprejudiced than the state's Governor Herman Talmadge.

J.O. Thomas Deplores Position Of Candidates On Segregation

At an impressive mass meeting comprising citizens of every walk of life, the Westside Voters League featured an address by Hon. Jesse O. Thomas, former Urban League executive, who recently retired from an extended service with the Red Cross.

The guest speaker was introduced by Rev. T. J. Flanagan, presiding elder of the Monticello District AME Church, who surveyed his early works in a civic and educational capacity and proclaimed him a statesman and "Happy Warrior."

Mr. Thomas, was deeply interesting and humorous as well in his gripping narrations dealing with the handicaps the use of first class citizenship had encountered.

At the outset he presented a contrast of attitudes in a Negro voting community. He recalled several instances in which the Negro experienced neglect as well as humiliation when he did not have the ballot.

He challenged those who would enjoy the fruits of first class citizenship to make known their intention by getting qualified to vote. "A voteless people is a heglected people" he proved and to the end of getting registered eligibles on the books there was an aroused public.

In a brief summary, he cited the statements of the various candidates for governor as relate to segregation, betraying their intention to use every effort possible if the practice is outlawed to carry on under some other blanket.

Already he cited, with the Negroes voting in large masses changed attitudes and otherwise considerations coming within their grasp.

In his conclusion, he enjoined his hearers in the question once asked Moses, as to what was in his hand.

He ably exhorted the enthusiastic hearers to get the ballot in their hands.

The address was ably responded to by Rev. A. Franklin Fisher pastor West Hunter Street Baptist Church and C. A. Scott, editor of the Atlanta Daily World.

Rod Harris, a former candidate for city office and one of the executives of the Westside Voters League suggested a more wholesale meeting of the League scattered over the entire westside.

Shelby Armstrong, of the Pullman company, Madam Walker local public spirited person, Rev. R. B. Shorts of Butler Street CME Church and several others made contributions to the forum.

Business, professional men and the various churches were enlisted in a service to reach every eligible voters in the city.

J. C. Long, served as chairman and Miss Cassandra Maxwell local attorney at Law served as secretary.

HONOLULU, Hawaii — (ANP)—Wendell F. Crockett, Republican Senator from the Island of Maui, lost here last week in his bid for re-election to the Senate of the Hawaiian Islands.

An outstanding Negro leader in the island's legal and civic circles, Crockett was unable to survive the Democratic upset which overthrew the strongest Republican stronghold outside the continental United States.

Hawaii had been under the Republican domination since 1900. But the lineup now is a Democratic majority of 22 to 8 in the House, and 9-6 in the Senate.

3 Seek Chicago Council Posts

Defender Chicago, Ill.

Chicago's aldermanic elections, scheduled for February, is shaping up into one of the hottest local political contests in recent history. Three Negro leaders have already accepted the Democratic candidacies in the heavily populated Negro wards.

The three newest candidates for aldermen include Ralph H. Metcalfe, Third Ward Committeeman and famed ex-track star Claude A. Holman, Fourth Ward Committeeman, and Admiral LeRoy, a 27th Ward precinct captain.

Committeeman Metcalfe, who will oppose the GOP's Ald. Archibald Carey, announced his candidacy after his selection by the 87 precinct captains in his ward. All 87 precincts in Metcalfe's ward went overwhelmingly Democratic in the Nov. 2 Congressional election, thus prompting Third Ward politicos to run the Committeeman in an effort to unseat Carey.

Both, Holman and LeRoy, if elected in February, will become the first Negro aldermen from their respective wards.

LeRoy, bidding for a council seat on the strength of his record as precinct captain and sanitary district engineer is banking heavily on capturing most of the Negro votes in his ward. About 78 percent of the ward's population is Negro.

Racial Issue Defeats Vail Bid in Chicago

Chicago. — A former Republican Congressman who hoped to regain his seat in the House of Representatives with an appeal to race prejudice received a trounding in the Nov. 2 election.

He is Richard B. Vail, a Chicago manufacturer who represented the second Illinois district in the 80th and 82d Congresses.

Rep. Barratt O'Hara beat Vail by 27,000 votes, the most decisive victory in four contests between the two men.

O'Hara credited the political activity of organized labor with a large share in his victory.

Vail at one time was a Democrat. In 1914 he ran for the Illinois legislature in a Democratic primary, but was defeated. He became an outspoken Republican during New Deal days.

During the early days of the Wagner Act, employes of the Vail Manufacturing Co. tried to organize. Vail called them in just before Christmas and told them to choose between their jobs and their rights under the new law.

Workers who made the wrong choice were fired. The National Labor Relations Board, after lengthy hearing, found the Vail Manufacturing Co. guilty of unfair labor practice. The U. S. Supreme Court eventually upheld the finding.

While in Congress he made a record of opposition to labor. In 1948 he lost to O'Hara by 7,000 votes, although Dewey carried the district by 3,000 against Truman at the head of the ticket.

GOP Picks Genoa Washington To Oppose Dawson For Congress

Regular party candidates won out in almost every case in Tuesday's primary elections. The vote was the lightest in a quarter century.

In the Congressional races, Genoa Washington of Chicago beat out James Vance and Anthony Polley for the Republican nomination to the House of Representatives for the First District. He will run against incumbent William L. Dawson, who was unopposed for the Democrats.

Richard B. Vail, campaigning on race hate defeated Thomas A. Lewis for the Republican nomination in the second district. He will oppose incumbent Democrat Barratt O'Hara, who defeated Vail in 1952.

In the race for the state legislature, Corneal A. Davis and Robert E. Romano got the Democratic nomination for the house of representatives in the first senatorial district. Ernest A. Greene was picked by the Republicans. The Republican selection in the third district was still undetermined at press time between Frank Crispo and William H. Robinson. Both sought the seat held by Charles J. Jenkins for 25 years. The Democrats named George G. Noonan and James Y. Carter.

Charles M. Skyles, Louis G. Berman and Kenneth E. Wilson ran well ahead of Marmaduke Carter to get the Democratic nominations in the Fifth district. Noble W. Lee was the Republican choice.

Donald A. Bourgeois, an Independent Republican was defeated in the 13th district. Rev. T. D. R. Griffin was defeated for the Democratic nominations.

In the state senate race, Fred J. Smith was unopposed for the third district Democratic nomination. Republicans picked P. S. Neville. Marshall Korshak, incumbent, was named again by the Democrats in the fifth district. His opponent will be Benjamin H. Lucas for the Republicans.

Both parties nominated the regular slates for Municipal court and the county commission.

Among those picked by the Republicans for the Municipal court bench is George S. Barnes. Judge Fred "Duke" Slater was renominated by the Democrats.

Edward M. Sneed was among those picked by the Democrats for the County Commission and Golden B. Darby and Dr. John A. Feaman were selected by the Republicans.

The Senate race in November will be Paul Douglas, Democratic incumbent, was unopposed, against Joseph T. Meek, who swept the Republican nomination from a field of nine candidates.

Crenville Beardsley won over William A. Cunnea for the Republican nomination as County assessor for Cook County.

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 11-13-54 p. 5

By GEORGE DANIELS

Richard B. Vail was the Republican candidate for Congress, from Chicago's well-integrated Second District, whose idea of crushing his Democratic opponent (Cong. Barratt O'Hara) was to show a picture of his rival shaking hands with a colored man.

Vail was defeated, along with his campaign of racial hate which had all the substance of the prejudice that one once thought could only be found today in the Deep South . . . not in Chicago.

What many thought would be a close race between O'Hara and Vail, actually shaped up into a sound victory for O'Hara who led Vail by more than 23,000 votes.

On Chicago's Southside the Second Congressional District stretches through the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 10th wards. This is one of the areas in which the Negro population has been growing constantly, and whites are becoming more and more liberal.

This is one of the numerous Chicago areas where Negroes and whites go to the same church, attend the same school, eat in the same restaurant. This area probably has a greater percentage of interracial families than most others, too.

Only two of the wards — the 7th and 8th — normally turn out GOP majorities. And in the past they have had a high percentage of straight ticket voters.

Into these wards Vail poured thousands of copies of a four-page newspaper (the Southeast Record) which made a frank appeal for the white voter.

In one issue the newspaper, published by the Citizens for Vail committee, printed a three column picture showing Cong. O'Hara (who has a Negro secretary) shaking hands with a Negro member of the Chicago Conference for Brotherhood. Others in the picture included Cong. William L. Dawson, Bennie D. Brown (executive director of the organization), Dr. Charles Proctor, a college professor, Lewis H. Caldwell, a businessman, and Atty. Charles Lane.

The paper also attacked the Chicago Defender (which was praised by O'Hara) and its Washington correspondent, Ethel Payne, who had written a feature entitled: "Full Citizenship: Unfinished Business of Democracy."

DISAVOWED

One of the planks in Vail's platform was a promise to seek legislation prohibiting Negroes from moving into all-white neighborhoods in his district. Another was in opposition to a Fair Employment Practices Commission.

Before Vail made public his campaign of racial hate, the Chicago American, a daily paper endorsed him in an effort to give President Eisenhower his Republican Congress. The paper later disavowed Vail.

It said: "Race hatred has been introduced, since our endorsement, into Vail's campaign. We are sure the voters will not tolerate that, nor will we lend our support to it."

Vail's campaign was well organized, but it was not the type of action most people in the Second District would swallow.

In many neighborhoods civic leaders, white and colored, began appealing to the common sense and dignity of voters, urging them to defeat Vail. The liberal element was soon taking hold.

Scores of Chicago clergymen, political and civic organizations printed anti-Vail leaflets, mailed letters to Gov. William Stratton and Republican committeemen of Second District wards, all urging the withdrawal of Vail from the Congressional race.

Bennie Brown, former YMCA executive and one time secretary of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, organized families in his neighborhood, in a "vote against Vail" drive.

Similar protests were launched by the CIO Political Action committee, Chicago Council Against Discrimination and the Church Federation of Greater Chicago and the Independent Voters of Illinois.

Messages were sent to ministers of the various wards, who, in turn, made "Christian-like" appeals to their congregations.

The Negro vote alone never would have defeated Vail. It took the combined efforts of every race and nationality that lived in the community. Whites, Negroes, Japanese-Americans, Puerto Ricans, and Chinese-Americans, joined in the anti-Vail campaign.

On Nov. 2, approximately 109,928 voters in the Second District trekked to the polls. Of that number 66,594 voted against Vail and sent Cong. O'Hara back to Congress.

Amedee, Rainey Set Rough Pace

Negro candidates in the city election this month continued their blistering pace of campaigning during the past week. Attorney Earl J. Amedee and Octave J. Rainey, independent candidates for the councilman-at-large post, also appeared on WDSU-TV Tuesday night on the "Dateline New Orleans" program.

Attorney Amedee was the guest of John E. Rousseau, newscaster for the Monarch Life Insurance Company, on station WJMR Sunday morning. Later he appeared at the Old Zion Baptist Church, the Second Missionary Baptist Church, the New Light Baptist Church, and addressed 250 commissioners and workers for him in the coming campaign.

Monday night the New Orleans lawyer was the guest speaker for the London Avenue Improvement Association which held its monthly meeting at St. Augustine high school. The latter part of the week he is scheduled to speak at the St. John Fourth Baptist Church.

Mr. Rainey addressed the members of the downtown branch of the Keystone Life Insurance Company, the Cement Finishers Local, the Stronghope Aid and Pleasure Club No. 3, the Poro Beauticians, and the Algiers Independent Voters.

Mr. Rainey made a breakfast address at 8 a. m. Sunday before the Holy Name Society of the Holy Ghost Church. Later he appeared over WJMR and at Peoples Defense League.

The candidate told the London Avenue Improvement Association Monday night that a councilman-at-large who understands the need and will work for basic community improvements as streets, drainage, sewerage, schools, and housing before civic monuments, is of utmost necessity at this time. Otherwise social unrest and demoralization and lack of faith in government will result, Rainey concluded.

UVL Backs Schiro

Commissioner Victor H. Schiro, candidate for councilman-at-large, was the principal speaker of the United Voters League at James Chapel Baptist Church last Sunday. Ellis Hull, president of the organization, presided at the meeting.

Other candidates speaking at the meeting were Glenn P. Clasen, James E Fitzmorris, Jr., L. J. Scanlon, George Montgomery, Jr., Clyde F. Bel and Nat Gros.

The United Voters League's citywide rally will be held Thursday, Jan. 21, 8 p. m. at its headquarters, 1607 Orleans, at which time the principal speakers will be Mayor Morrison and Commissioner Schiro. According to Hull, the group's other headquarters will be located at 2514 Tonti.

The speakers who appeared at the meeting in addition to Mayor Morrison and Assessor James E. Comiskey have been endorsed by our organization, Hull concluded.

2 Qualify For City Council At Crowley

By Clarence A. Laws

Crowley.—History was made here last week when two Negro citizens qualified as candidates for city councilmen to be decided at elections scheduled for April 13.

The history-making candidates are David L. May, principal of the Ross High School and leader in civic and welfare circles; and Joseph A. (Joe) Pete, proprietor of a barber shop and head of a Masonic Lodge. They will oppose the incumbent aldermen Russell Chachere and Frank Sorrentola.

In an interview with Mr. May last week the amiable and poised educator repeated what he had said when he initially announced his candidacy on February 2. Declared he: "We do not want to work for one race or one section. I think that Crowley is a good city with many fine citizens of both races and I would like nothing better than working for the total good of all of these citizens."

Reflecting a while he added, "Over the years we as a race have made significant contributions to the growth and development of this city. We are proud of these contributions. And now we feel that we can make a worthwhile contribution in a political way."

Mr. Pete, neat, soft spoken and business-like, expressed similar views. Said he, "If elected I will do the best possible job for the city and for the third ward. I would rather not have the race question enter the campaign at all. It should not be."

Reviewing the voting interest of Negroes in the city he continued "I have thought of offering myself as a candidate for a post in our city government for many years but Mr. May and I reached a definite decision in the matter only two months ago."

A native and life-long resident of Crowley, Mr. Pete is married and the father of four children, a son and three daughters. The son, Joseph Jr., is a graduate of Southern University and has completed a year's work toward a master's degree at the University of Michigan. He is presently doing a tour with the U. S. Army in Korea. Miss Evelyn Marie Pete, oldest daughter, is likewise a graduate of Southern and has done advance study at Michigan. She teaches in Crowley. Gloria and Delorias are mid-term graduates and juniors at Southern, respectively.

DAVID L. MAY

PH A. PETE

Mr. May was born in Delhi, La., and has been in education for 27 years. He is a graduate of Southern and has done additional study at Atlanta University. Following are some of the organizations with which he is affiliated: State President of La. Interscholastic Athletic and Literary Assn.; chairman LEA Finance Committee; member of Southern Alumni Federation; Commander of American Legion, Miller Post No. 506; District Chairman, Seventh District of American Legion; Auditor of People's Investment Co., and Notary Public for the Parish of Arcadia.

Both May and Pete live in the third ward which is predominantly Negro. As of last week Negroes in this ward led whites with 1100 registrations to 900. Both candidates were calmly confident and expressed appreciation for the "tireless" and "solid support" which they are receiving from all of the organized forces of their ward.

There are four wards in Crowley. Each ward elects two councilmen and the city elects one councilman-at-large for a total of nine aldermen.

Housewife Announces For State Legislature Post

Mrs. Moweaner W. Mauldin, 3038 Feliciana, formally announced her candidacy for the position of State House of Representatives from the Ninth ward in the special city election March 9, according to her campaign manager, Attorney Earl J. Amedee, Monday evening.

Mrs. Mauldin, an outstanding figure in civic and educational circles in the New Orleans area, announces her platform as follows:

"I am an independent candidate not connected with any political faction.

"I support and endorse a state bonus for Korean veterans.

MRS. M. MAULDIN

"I am for the maintenance of the permanent registration law with improvements that will enable the masses of qualified citizens to vote in elections.

"I shall support and endorse legislation to make the building of a free bridge across the Mississippi river at Canal street or vicinity an immediate possibility.

"I shall work for the maintenance of our present civil service laws on both city and state levels.

"I shall work for legislation to improve the child welfare agencies of the State of Louisiana.

"I shall work for increased state appropriations for our public school system.

"I shall foster legislation that will promote better human relations between all of the citizens of our city and state."

Mrs. Mauldin, who was educated in the local public schools and Xavier university, stated that she is running for this position because of the need of intelligent independent thinkers in our city and state government.

The candidate, a life-long resident of the Ninth ward, is married and the mother of two children—Matthew, 10, and Ellodee, 4. She is a member of Old Zion Missionary Baptist church, Ninth Ward Civic and Improvement League, president of the Socialite Savings and Social club, and member of the Victory Circle Social and Pleasure club.

Mrs. Mauldin is interested in child welfare and improvement of conditions for the benefit of future generations. She was chairman of the women's division of the Volunteers for Earl J. Amedee, a candidate in the recent first city Democratic primary.

Mrs. Mauldin is a well-known speaker, having won numerous oratorical awards through the city in 1938-39.

WOMAN ANNOUNCES FOR SEAT IN HOUSE

Mrs. Moweaner W. Mauldin, 3038 Feliciana, Saturday formally announced her candidacy for state House of Representatives from the Ninth Ward in the March 9 election as an independent candidate.

She said she supports a state bonus for Korean veterans, improvements in the permanent registration law which "will enable the masses of qualified citizens to vote in elections" and legislation for a free bridge across the Mississippi river at Canal.

She also said she will work for maintenance of civil service, improvement of child welfare agencies, and increased appropriations for public schools. She lives at 3038 Feliciana and is a junior in the school of education at Xavier university. She is married and has two children.

Candidates Promise Cooperation And Improvements

Crowley Not Disturbed Over Election Of Two Negro Councilmen

By Clarence A. Laws

While other communities in Louisiana and the South might ponder and speculate on the prospect of Negro councilmen at Crowley beginning this July, citizens of that municipality seem to be well pleased. Members of both races accept the historic development with nonchalance, pride and good spirit which do credit to this thriving community of 15,000, known as "The Rice City of America".

The Negro citizens whose nomination and election as councilmen are an accepted fact are David L. May, high school principal; and Joseph A. Pete, operator of a barbership and a leader in the Masonic fraternity. Their victory was assured a fortnight ago when the incumbent withdrew from the race due to ill health. A week before another incumbent had died after brief illness.

A fortnight ago citizens and political aspirants were interviewed for the purpose of determining and reporting attitudes in this typically Southern community relative to its new political look. Not one discordant note was heard and many seemed delighted that their city is leading the state in this show of democracy.

Every candidate contacted expressed not only willingness but a desire to work with Mr. May and Mr. Pete if elected.

Following are answers to the question, "What is your reaction to the nomination and assured election of two Negro councilmen at Crowley and what would be your attitude toward working with them should you be elected to the public office which you seek?"

Emile A. Carmouche, Sr., engineer, civic leader and candidate for mayor observed, "The assured nomination of Professor David L. May and Mr. Joseph A. Pete, as aldermen from the Third Ward of the City of Crowley, will, for the first time in the history of Louisiana, bring into the governing body of one of our municipalities, two gentlemen of the Negro race. Crowley in my opinion, may well be proud of this distinction, particularly inasmuch as we have good reason to assume and believe these particular men are of exceptional integrity, are sincerely civic minded, are able and will seriously and tirelessly make every reasonable effort to discharge the obligations of the trust reposed in them, in a manner which will do honorable and worthwhile credit to all of our citizens, regardless of race or creed."

After reflecting upon the responsibilities of the Negro aldermen, Mr. Carmouche asserted, "When I personally extended my congratulations to these two future members of our City Council, I was gratified and pleased to learn that both of them had already considered their new trust in the light I have indicated, and seemed earnestly bent upon doing everything within their power to earn the respect and applause of all."

Promising to do everything that is "proper" and within his "power" to afford Negro citizens of Crowley an opportunity to better living and economic prosperity and public recreation and health facilities which have long been denied them, Mr. Carmouche concluded, "In connection with this, I wish to say that I will look to Alderman May and Alderman Pete to make a thorough study of the particular needs of their people, and they may be assured that I will wholeheartedly lend my support to any program or recommendation they may suggest that is truly meritorious, right and just."

Joe Gielan, owner of an oil company and candidate for mayor declared, "Having worked with David May and Joe Pete in civic affairs I know them to be sincere and hard workers to make our city a better place in which to live and raise our families. I feel that being elected members of the City Council, they will work for a progressive administration. I know these men to be very well qualified to serve their people and the city of Crowley."

Aaron L. Cart, retail grocer and candidate for alderman-at-large stated, "I believe that the election of two Negroes to the city council will serve to cement better relations between the races. Without casting reflections on anyone I say that these are excellent men and if I am elected I shall be glad to work with them."

Mr. Cart said that he had served with Mr. Pete on a grand jury and had been associated with Mr. May in the American Legion program since 1940.

Declared Chief of Police Maxie Barousse, who is seeking re-election, "If I am re-elected Crowley's chief of police, I will abide by the decisions made by the city council as I have in the past. I will work and cooperate with David May and Joe Pete to make Crowley a bigger and better Police Department and for the advancement and betterment of the city. I have two colored police officers on the force today."

JOE PETE

"The team of Progress—Joe Gielen for mayor, Clyde Hodge for alderman-at-large and Maxie Barousse, chief of police, promises to construct a colored swimming pool in the September 1954 budget."

Said W. H. Underwood, electrical engineer and candidate for chief of police, "I am proud to see Negroes represented in the city government. It has always been my contention that Negroes who live in West Crowley pay taxes just as whites who live in East Crowley. I am in favor of Negro police and will continue this policy if elected. I have already told Joe Pete that I will request his appointment to the Police Committee if I am elected chief of police."

Jack D. Lawrence and Clyde Hodge, other candidates for mayor and alderman-at-large, respectively, could not be reached for statements.

DAVID MAY

Last week Mr. May and Mr. Pete, along with other political candidates running in the April 13 primary, heard a spokesman for 14 rice milling firms outline some of the problems facing that important industry. The meeting, held in the courtroom of the city hall, was called especially for the candidates.

Negroes Elected To Crowley, La. City Council

CROWLEY, LA.— This rice city of 15,000 not only elected the first Negro to the City Council, but it elected two Negroes at once to the City Council without opposition, and without any bitterness or hostile reaction.

Ten men elected were Prof. David L. May, principal of the high school; and Joseph A. Pete, operator of a barber shop and a fraternalist.

Clarence A. Laws, from the Louisiana Weekly, went down to Crowley and interviewed the candidates for mayor, the candidates for chief of police, and the white candidates for the Council. It was remarkable that all of them spoke highly of the two Negro candidates. He also interviewed other people in the city and got the same results.

As one old lady said, "It all goes to show you that you never know what will happen." The candidate running against one of the Negroes died, and that left that one without opposition. Then toward the end of the campaign, the candidate running opposite the other Negro retired because of illness. Most people in this area admit that Crowley, Louisiana, was the last place that they would have expected two aldermen to be elected with the acclamation and absolute receptivity of the whites. For that matter, most will admit that they are surprised to find Crowley a progressive, liberal town where the race relations are good.

In Louisiana

Two Elected Unopposed

CROWLEY, La.—Two Negroes have been tentatively elected aldermen in the Third Ward of this city for the first time in Crowley's sixty-seven-year history. Unopposed in Tuesday's Democratic primary election were David L. May, principal of Ross High School, and Joseph Pete, businessman.

The Democratic nomination, tantamount to election here, where the Republican party is practically non-existent, left no doubt that May and Pete will be the first Negroes to sit on Crowley's City Council.

FILES FOR LA. SCHOOL BOARD

SHREVEPORT, La. — (SNS) — A Negro dentist filed Thursday notice of seeking to the Caddo Parish (County) school board in the July 27 Democratic primary.

Dr. C. O. Simpkins was the first Negro to seek election to an elective post in Shreveport since the turn of the century.

Dr. Simpkins is a native of Mansfield, who has lived in Shreveport since 1942.

Shreveport's last Negro officeholder was a city trustee (or councilman) appointed to a two-year-term in 1887.

Crowley, La. Ready To Accept Its First Two Negro Aldermen

CROWLEY, La. — History will be made in Crowley, La. this summer.

Two Negro leaders are expected to take their seats on the city council early in July, marking a new era in race relations in this thriving community of 15,000.

The nomination and election of David L. May, high school principal, and Joseph A. Pette, operator of a barber shop and a Masonic leader, is an accepted fact. Their victory was assured here recently when the incumbent withdrew from the race due to ill health. A week before another incumbent had died after a brief illness.

A survey taken among white residents of Crowley shows they are overwhelmingly in favor of welcoming May and Pette into the city governing body. They will be the first two Negroes to hold such important city posts in Louisiana since Reconstruction days.

Emile A. Carmouche, Sr., engineer, civic leader and candidate for mayor, declared that "Crowley, in my opinion, may well be proud of this distinction, particularly inasmuch as we have good reason to assume and believe these particular men are of exceptional integrity, are sincerely civic minded, are able and will seriously and tirelessly make every reasonable effort to discharge the obligations of the trust reposed in them, in a manner which will do honorable and worthwhile credit to all of our citizens, regardless of race or creed."

The opinion of Carmouche echoed by leading Crowley citizens and other white candidates for office. Aaron L. Cart, retail grocer and candidate for alderman-at-large stated:

"I believe that the election of two Negroes to the city council will serve to cement better relations between the races. Without casting reflections on anyone, I say that these are excellent men and if I am elected I shall be glad to work with them."

Chief of Police Maxie Barousse, who is seeking re-election, pledged his support to May and Pette.

This unique Louisiana town is setting precedent in a state which has been noted for its efforts to keep Negroes away from the polls. There are two Negroes on the police force and future plans include a proposed swimming pool for Negroes.

May is principal of Rose high school in Crowley. He is 42 and a graduate of Dillard university of New Orleans.

Father of three children, May has lived in Crowley most of his life and taught school for three years there before being appointed principal of the high school.

He is youthful appearing and belies his age because while studying at Dillard U., he was a good athlete.

May studied law — at Dillard —and first became interested in politics 10 years ago when he sought to run for a council post and was defeated.

But May did not permit that setback to deter him. His name reappeared often and was finally placed on the ballot for this year's council elections after a white candidate withdrew because of ill health.

May is a World War II veteran, serving in the Army, and is a member of the Methodist church.

Pette, 41, is a life-long resident of Crowley. He is a high school graduate and has played a leading role in the Negro civic life of his community.

Pette owns a barber shop and is a close friend of David L. May. He is married and the father of four children.

Pette has been an active participant in politics. Both he and May have led campaigns in Louisiana for admission of Negroes to universities of the state —particularly at Louisiana State university in Baton Rouge.

Pette is well-liked and those who know him say he was a logical and popular choice for the other councilman post which became available when a white candidate died. He has been a leader among Negro political groups for the past ten years in Crowley.

Like his friend May, he is a veteran of the Second World War and of the Methodist church.

Linwood Koger first to file for Congress in Maryland

BALTIMORE

Linwood Koger, local lawyer who filed as a Republican candidate for the House of Representatives, Friday, has an extensive political background.

When he tendered his application to the Secretary of State, in Annapolis, he became the first colored person in the State's history to file as a candidate for Congress on a major political party ticket.

In the 1948 general election Dr. J.E.T. Camper filed as candidate for the same seat on the Progressive party ticket.

Mr. Koger is seeking nomination to the Fourth District seat —which is predominantly colored—now held by George H. Fallon.

On announcing his intention to run for Congress, the prominent attorney said: "It is high time that a colored Marylander be in Congress. I am confident I will win a seat with the support of well thinking voters."

Unsuccessful Bids

Previously he has run unsuccessfully for the City Council, House of Delegates and the State Senate.

He lost in a race for election to the State Legislature, as a member of the House of Delegates, in 1930 by 700 votes.

In the spring of 1939, he also lost a close election for a seat in the City Council.

In 1942 he filed as a candidate for State Senator, first colored man to run for the Maryland State Senate in more than a quarter of a century.

Mr. Koger lost that race by 2,921 votes. He polled 7,098 votes against 10,019 for his rival, E. Milton Altfeld.

Assistant City Solicitor

In January, 1944, he was appointed an assistant City Solicitor by Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin.

In April, the same year, more than 250 persons attended a testimonial banquet for the new assistant solicitor and George McMechen, newly appointed school board member.

In November 1944, Mr. Koger created a furor when he resigned as a member of the Commission on Problems Affecting Colored people in protest against the naming of Josiah Henry as a part-time executive secretary of the Commission.

Mr. Koger said at that time: "The effecting of improved relations between the races is too important to all of us to have a part-time person who is without special training or experience in the field of race relations."

Calloway Protege
Charter Legion Member

He was a charter member of the Walter Green Post, American Legion in 1919, and became the first legionnaire of his race to hold the positioon of vice-commander of the Maryland Department.

In March, 1941, he organized a local chapter of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, Inc.

Married to the former Ruth Wilson in 1917, Mr. Koger is the father of three children, a daughter, Ruth, and two sons: Linwood Jr., local lawyer, and Harry O. Wilson Koger.

He lives at 1619½ Division st.

Vote Check Sends Negro To Md. Senate

BALTIMORE, Md.—(ANP)— After a dramatic official canvas of returns from elections, a Negro will sit in the Maryland Senate for the first time in history.

Two Democratic victories were upset in Baltimore's Fourth legislative district and two more Negroes will go to the General Assembly as a result of the recount.

Republican Harry A. Cole, Negrom assistant attorney general, unseated State Sen. Bernard S. Melnicove of Baltimore, and Emory Cole, another Negro Republican, was elected to the House of Delegates.

Unofficial returns at first showed Melnicove the winner of the Senate race by 132 votes and Milton H. F. Saul, the winner of the sixth spot on the House of Delegates list.

But in the official canvas, Cole picked up 182 votes, more than enough to wipe out Melnicove's unofficial margin.

Harry Cole and Emory Cole will join Truly Hatchett, Fourth district, democrat elected last week, who was believed to have been the first Negro known to have become a member of the legislature.

4th District sends two to assembly

Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE

Unofficial returns show that two colored Baltimoreans were elected to the House of Delegates in Tuesday's elections to become the first of their race to win seats in the Maryland Legislature.

Elected were Truly Hatchett, 72-year-old realtor, a Democrat and Emory H. Cole, 60-year-old lawyer, a Republican. Both were elected in Baltimore's heavily populated Fourth Legislative District.

Here are exclusive interviews with these two men who made history.

Sat. 11-13-54

Emory Cole

"If I go to Annapolis, I'll never forget how I got there or what I'm there for."

That was the promise made this week by Emory R. Cole, who, according to unofficial tabulations, won a seat in the House of Delegates by a margin of 91 votes.

A novice in the political field, the 61-year-old lawyer, a Republican, captured the sixth place in the Fourth District legislature race with 11,395 votes to top Democrat Milton Saul Jr., with 11,305 votes.

His election makes him the only Republican to win in the Fourth District.

UNTIL THE official returns are announced, Mr. Cole prefers to shield his excitement behind his law books. When informed by the AFRO that unofficial reports showed he had won, he merely smiled.

Even on election night, while listening to the returns over the radio, he admitted he wasn't excited. "I was tired from going all day. My nerves were on edge," he explained.

"At 12:30 a.m., my niece (Mrs. Blanche Garry) called me to congratulate me but I hadn't heard any report like that and I thought she was referring to Harry Cole instead of myself."

He said that after talking with his niece he drank a coke and went to bed.

SADDENED BY Harry Cole's narrow defeat, Mr. Cole said, "I thought both of us had a chance but he had a better working organization.

EMORY COLE
Elected to State Legislature

"I don't think he failed. I think the Democrats, by putting that extra candidate in, was what defeated him."

Mr. Cole overruled the contention of some people that his name and that of Harry Cole's were confusing to the voters.

"I can't say that I took votes from Harry. By working together we accumulated votes together Our names were on the same line but Harry's name came first.

"I may have gained some of his votes and he some of mine."

Because Mr. Cole was employed at the Post Office, he was not able to get into politics until after he retired Dec. 31, 1953. He worked there 30 years as clerk at night, keeping up his law practice during the day.

LAST JANUARY, he satisfied his long political ambition by joining the Theodore McKeldin Republican club "as a means of getting in on the ground floor."

"The political field was open and I was available," he said, explaining how he happened to toss his hat in the ring last June.

"They needed candidates so I filed for the primary. I went in with the purpose of winning since there had been so many failures of candidates who had run before."

In the primary, Mr. Cole had no opposition.

Though advised by politicians that he did not have a chance because "he wasn't well-known." Mr. Cole found this fact to be an asset in his campaign.

"By not being well-known, that meant I had a few friends to help me and no enemies to cross me up," he asserted.

GOING FROM door-to-door, distributing placards, shaking hands with the man in the street, addressing church and club groups, driving through the district with a loud speaker on his car:

These were the techniques Mr. Cole used in his extensive campaign which cost him nearly $350.

A life-long Marylander, Mr. Cole was born on a small farm in Cockeysville, Sept. 3, 1893. He helped his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cole, on the farm until he enrolled in Maryland State Teachers College.

At the age of 18, he began teaching in the county schools and six years later accepted a job as messenger in the government service in Washington.

DRAFTED IN 1917, he served 16 months in the army during World War I, eight months of which was spent overseas in France.

He was discharged in 1919 and returned to his post in Washington, the following year enrolling in the Howard University Law School.

In 1923 he received his law degree and came to Baltimore where he took the bar exam along with Linwood Koger, George W. Evans and E. Everett Lane.

He took the job as clerk in the Post Office in October of the same year and two months later opened his law office.

In March 1954, he had the honor of being admitted to the bar of the U.S. Supreme Court.

— o O o —

HE IS an active member of Payne Memorial AME Church, Urban League, Citizens Planning and Housing Association, Baltimore Fellowship, Boy Scouts of America, Masons, Elks, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Truly Hatchett

"The people of the Fourth District have the power to elect candidates of their own choice, if they use that power."

The statement was made by Truly Hatchett on Wednesday afternoon, as he sat at home and accepted the congratulations of friends and supporters for winning a seat in the House of Delegates in the Tuesday election.

In rolling up 11,437 votes to place fifth in the race for the six seats at stake, Mr. Hatchett, at 72, became the first colored man to win a seat in the Maryland Legislature.

THE STORY behind Mr. Hatchett's victory on Tuesday began several months before the June primary election, when he attempted to convince several younger men in the Fourth District that the time was ripe for a colored candidate to win a seat in the House of Delegates.

Failing to persuade any of the persons he contacted to enter the race, Mr. Hatchett decided to make the race himself, though it meant bucking the powerful Pollack organization which has controlled the Fourth District for many years.

Mr. Hatchett proved that he had a sound idea in the primary when he emerged with the sixth highest total among the Democratic candidates to qualify for the general election. In the process of winning, Mr. Hatchett also defeated Pollack's son who was seeking the nomination.

AS THE Fourth District usually returns a heavy Democratic majority, Mr. Hatchett was conceded an excellent chance to win in the general—but politics being what they are, his election did not become definite until late Tuesday night when the voting was over.

As the first successful candidate, Mr. Hatchett realized the historic importance of his election:

"It will open another opportunity to the members of our group. They should have someone to represent them in Annapolis and it is an honor to be able to represent them."

IN HIS campaign, Mr. Hatchett relied a great deal upon the reputation he has built up and the friends he has made in the 52 years he has lived at 2026 Druid Hill Ave. Well acquainted with the problems of the district, he was able to convince the voters that he could represent them effectively.

"I attribute my election to the fact that I have attempted to live a decent and useful life. I have always been active in religious, civic and fraternal affairs, and I have always been interested in the problems that face the people in this district.

"The friends that I have made through the years have helped elect me and I feel that I will do a good job in Annapolis."

MR. HATCHETT'S principal goal is to represent all the people in the district, which he terms a "melting pot" of different peoples who should join forces for better government.

"There are a number of things that I hope to accomplish during my term, but I have not yet made any definite plans as to how they will be accomplished. I do want to see some liberal measures adopted that will help advance Maryland as a forward looking state."

Mr. Hatchett's election was almost in the form of an anniversary present. On Thanksgiving he and his wife will celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary.

Mr. Hatchett has been active in politics for many years and was an early supporter of the late Mayor Jackson. He has run for office before, but this was his first successful attempt.

Negroes Elected In Maryland Differ On Cause Of Success

Advertiser p. 11

BALTIMORE, Nov. 18 (AP)—Did the first three Negroes elected to Maryland's General Assembly ride into office on the school segregation issue?

The answers they give are as different as the successful candidates themselves.

Harry A. Cole, state senator-elect, is a campaign-toughened veteran of three political races at 33.

Emory R. Cole, a fellow Republican but unrelated to the younger Cole, is a 61-year-old novice in politics who vaulted into the House of Delegates on his first try.

Lone Democrat

Truly Hatchett, the lone Democrat, made good in his second bid for a House seat more than 30 years after first running as a Republican and being knocked off in the primary. He is a vigorous 73.

Although all three agree that the school segregation issue influenced their campaigns in Baltimore's 4th District, they differ on the extent of that influence.

For instance, Emory Cole barely edged into sixth place in the race for the district's half-dozen House seats and says he doubts he would have made it without the segregation issue. Latest registration figures show that the 48,000-odd voters registered in the 4th are about evenly divided among whites and Negroes. More than two thirds are Democrats.

Hatchett, on the other hand, figures the issue actually cost him 2,000 to 3,000 votes. He was endorsed by James H. (Jack) Pollack, for years the dominant Democratic leader of the district, as well as anti-Pollack forces.

Republican Group

The Republican group had put up only five candidates for the six House seats. A leader said it was hoped Republican voters would make Hatchett their sixth choice.

Hatchett says he believes that general association of Democrats with prosegregation interests made some of his Republican friends "afraid to slip down to the 'B' line for anyone." Republican candidates were on the "A," or top line of the voting machines, Democrats on the "B" or second line.

Harry Cole concedes the segregation question "helped us" but considers the development of a new political organization in the 4th the most significant factor in his election.

Official tabulations Friday showed that Harry A. Cole, a Republican, had won his bid to become the first colored state senator in Maryland history.

The four-day count of the voting machines gave Mr. Cole a thin 37-vote majority over his Democratic opponent, Bernard Melnicove.

The totals gave Cole, 37-year old assistant attorney general 13,938 to Melnicove's 13,901.

Melnicove at first had claimed victory, but a 100-vote error was discovered in a 6th Precinct machine. Cole had been reported as having polled 85 votes, when a recheck of the machine revealed that he had actually polled 185 votes.

The official election of Mr Cole brought to three the number of colored members named for the first time in history to the Maryland Legislature.

Truly Hatchett, Democrat and Emory Cole, Republican, had previously been declared elected to the House of Delegates.

The attorney, who has 26 years of law practice behind him said: "So many people have been after me to file, I decided to do it." He filed Wednesday afternoon in the Supervisors of Elections office at Fayette and Gay Sts., a month ahead of the deadline which is the last week in December.

"They told me not to answer any questions" said Mrs. Gladys Johnson one of the eight persons alleged to have received $1 or $2 after voting on Nov. 2.

When asked who told her not to say anything, Mrs. Johnson replied, "That's a question, ain't it?"

"That's too hot for me," said a member of a group of construction workers when asked about the voting activity just inside the Township of LaPlata, the Charles County seat.

The worker said he didn't vote in the last election.

A GRAND JURY of 23 men and women, which convened in LaPlata, Monday, has been ordered to looking into electioneering, but the panel recessing Wednesday "at their own request," according to State's Attorney Richard T. Barbour of Charles County.

Mr. Barbour told an AFRO reporter he could not say what was being done about the election charges, "but, we're doing something.

"We have a nice little county here," Mr. Barbour added, after admitting that FBI agents had been in the area investigating the recent election activity.

Mr. Barbour said there are about 10,000 registered voters in the county of whom about 4,000 are colored.

The state's attorney said most of the colored voters were registered Republicans, adding with a smile, "Many of them don't even know Abraham Lincoln is dead."

CARL COOKSEY, a teller in the Southern Maryland Bank and Trust Co. across the street from the new county court house and a Board of Election clerk, estimated that 99 per cent of sixth district colored voters were registered Republicans.

Mr. Cooksey said he couldn't talk about the election activity during the grand jury investigation.

According to published reports, eight Charles County voters, all colored, have admitted receiving $1 or $2 from State Sen. James B. Monroe after voting in the sixth district polling place in White Plains, about two miles south of Waldorf, Md.

Sen. Monroe, the GOP incumbent, was reelected by 82 votes in the close voting in the traditional party stronghold.

"I didn't vote this time and I'm glad I didn't, said Mrs. Mae Shorter as she washed clothes in an outside pot on Pomfert Rd., about three miles from the white frame election headquarters.

"WE HEARD about this voting business, but I was too young to vote," Mrs. Shorter's niece, Miss Lucille Shorter, said.

The only person who talked readily about her election day activity was Mrs. Ella Lyles, 25-year-old mother, who was reported to have received two dollars from Sen. Monroe after voting.

"Yes sir, I signed a statement saying I was paid." Mrs. Lyles said from a day-bed in the combined living room-dining room of her four-room brick and frame cottage, high on the Berry Road.

"I don't know why I did it. To tell you the truth, I don't know anything about this whole business. This was only the second time I voted," she said.

Mr. Lyles

Mrs. Lyles

Mrs. Lyles is the wife of Paul Lyles, another registered voter reported to have been paid by Sen. Monroe.

The short, baby-face looking woman is expecting another child in addition to her five girls and one son.

"I started not to go to the polls that day because it was raining. But he (Sen. Monroe) came by here and told me to get ready and he would get the girl across the road to watch the children."

MRS. LYLES said the senator took her and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy Lyles, to the polls and brought them back. Miss Lyles was in Washington at the time the AFRO reported

"As he was coming back, he reached over and gave me a dollar. I didn't know what it was for. I wasn't even expecting it," she added.

When asked if the senator told her how to vote, Mrs. Lyles answered, "All he said is, 'Do you know what to vote for'?"

"I told him I knew how to vote Republican because I always voted Republican. He told us if we didn't vote Republican we may have to walk back."

Mrs. Lyles said she told the same thing she was telling this reporter to a "white press man" when he came to her house.

"THERE WERE four of them and one sat down at that table with a typewriter and took down what I said and tole me to sign.

"I don't know whether I did the right thing or not. I hear punishment is $10,000 fine and two years," she said. sighing.

Mrs. Lyles was asked if she thought she had been tricked into signing the statement. "I wouldn't say I was and I wouldn't say I wasn't," she replied.

TWO OTHER Berry Road residents told AFRO reporters they voted in the November elections but shook their heads negatively when asked if they knew about voters paid. Sylvester Dent, 52, said he was a registered Republican and had always voted the GOP ticket. "I didn't even see Sen. Monroe that day," he said.

Mr. Dent

Robert Lyles, 44, a cousin of Mrs. Ella Lyles, also said he was a registered Republican but when asked how he voted, replied:

"I didn't think I had to tell that."

MR. LYLES, who was armed with a shotgun while going rabbit hunting, said he saw Sen. Monroe around election day, "but I didn't say anything to him."

When asked what he thought about voters getting paid, the man replied, "that's too hot for me.'"

Mrs. Sallie Bair, alto a Berry Road resident appeared to have summed up the attitude of the small White Plains community.

"I don't know why they would pay anybody to vote Republican around here. They always do, anyway," she said.

3 Negroes In Md. Legislature

BALTIMORE, Md. — Maryland now has three Negroes in its State Legislature. As a result of a recount of votes in the recent election, two others joined Truly Hatchett in becoming the first Negroes to gain such positions.

The two men are Senator-Elect Harry Cole and Delegate Emory R. Cole, who both won by very narrow margins.

All three were elected from Maryland's Fourth Legislative District. Both Senator Cole and Delegate Cole are Republicans Mr. Hatchett is a Democrat.

Senator Cole is a former student of Morgan State College here and received the LL.B. degree from the University of Maryland School of Law.

Delegate Cole, a native of Harford County, Maryland, is a graduate of what is now Wowie State Teachers College. He completed his Law studies at the Howard University School of Law. He is a retired postal employee.

Mr. Hatchett, a real estate and insurance man, is a member of the Board of Barrett School for Girls.

Winning Negro Candidates Split On Effect of Segregation Issue

Answers Differ On Its Influence

34 a (2)

Baltimore, Nov. 25 (AP)—Did the first three Negroes elected to Maryland's General Assembly ride into office on the school-segregation issue?

The answers they give are as different as the successful candidates themselves.

Harry A. Cole, state senator-elect, is a campaign-toughened veteran of three political races at 33.

Emory R. Cole—A fellow Republican but unrelated to the younger Cole—is a 61-year-old novice in politics who vaulted into the House of Delegates on his first try.

Truly Hatchett, the lone Democrat, made good in his second bid for a House seat more than 30 years after first running as a Republican and being beaten in the primary. He is a vigorous 73.

Although all three agree that the school-segregation issue influenced their campaigns in Baltimore's Fourth District, they differ on the extent of that influence.

Voters Evenly Divided

For instance, Emory Cole barely edged into sixth place in the race for the District's half-dozen House seats and says he doubts he would have made it without the segregation issue. Latest registration figures show that the 48,000-odd voters registered in the Fourth are about evenly divided among whites and Negroes. More than two thirds are Democrats.

Hatchett, on the other hand, figures the issue actually cost him 2,000 to 3,000 votes. He was endorsed by James H. "Jack" Pollack, for years the dominant Democratic leader of the district, as well as anti-Pollack forces.

5 Republicans Up

The Republican group had put up only five candidates for the six House seats. A leader said it was hoped Republican voters would make Hatchett their sixth choice.

Hatchett says he beleives that general association of Democrats with pro-segregation interests made some of his Republican friends "afraid to slip down to the 'B' line for anyone." Republican candidates were on the "A" or top line of the voting machines, Democrats on the "B" or second line.

Harry Cole concedes the segregation question "helped us," but considers the development of a new political organization in the fourth the most significant factor in his election.

Segregation Smoldering Issue

Segregation had smoldered as a campaign issue from the time, several weeks before the November 2 election, that State Senator Edward Turner advocated continuing separate schools for Negroes and whites in his campaign for Congress from the Eastern Shore First District. Another Democrat, State Senator George W. Della, called in a South Baltimore campaign speech for a return to "white supremacy in our schools and our police stations."

"These things made it easier for our organization to get out the vote," said Cole, "but the organization had to be there in the first place."

"Why, in one precinct alone we had 17 workers."

Integration Talk Fogs Outcome of Maryland Race

Washington, D.C.

Sun. 10-31-54

P. 1B

By Frank R. Kent, Jr.

Staff Reporter

POLITICIANS in Maryland on the eve of the gubernatorial election can be described only as baffled and apprehensive. This state of mind could be said to apply more to the Democrats than the Republicans as far as the governorship was concerned, but neither party's strategists were sleeping well.

The reason for this perturbation is that a number of intangible factors make prediction extremely difficult. Few professional politicians in either camp will venture a forecast as to the reaction of the Maryland voter.

Aside from these imponderables, the race between Democrat H. C. Byrd and Republican Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin appears to be pretty close.

The Integration Puzzle

THE GREATEST single unknown factor is voter reaction to the issue of integration in the public schools. The question perplexing the politicians is whether or not the state's one million registered voters feel strongly enough on the subject to turn out in great force. If they do, what has appeared to be a close contest could have a lopsided result.

One of the difficulties facing forecasters is that this is the first modern election in which the racial question has been brought into the open on a state-wide basis. Politicians in both camps have expressed private regrets that it has been injected. They regard it as a two-edged sword.

The issue was first raised by State Sen. Edward Turner, Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives in the First Congressional District, comprising the nine counties of the conservative and largely Southern-minded Eastern Shore. Turner said he favored separate but equal school facilities for whites and Negroes and local option.

His Republican opponent, Rep. Edward T. Miller, running for reelection to a fifth term, branded this an unprincipled effort to win votes. Miller pointed out that the matter was before the United States Supreme Court. He said he favored a solution at local levels.

'Card' Worries Byrd

IN THE gubernatorial race, Dr. Byrd came out with a "home rule" plan for integration. McKeldin has not mentioned the issue in his formal speeches but has said in reply to questions that he represents the law. This is interpreted as meaning that as Chief Executive of the state he is bound by oath to uphold all laws—state and Federal.

Byrd is acutely aware of the reaction to a card circulated during the closing days of his bitter primary fight with George P. Mahoney. It quoted out of context a part of a speech Byrd made before a Negro club in Baltimore and thereby implied that the candidate was promising to do more for the Negro than any other Governor. Byrd reportedly feels that it almost cost him the nomination.

The question is still an academic one in most of Maryland, as no school in the state system has begun integration. Baltimore City, however, instituted it this term, and the issue blazed up there October 22.

State Sen. George W. Della III of the Baltimore Sixth District, president of the State Senate in the last two sessions, at a political rally called for the election of Democrats so that the state might have "white supremacy" in its courts and schools. Byrd was reported to have been present.

City Could Be Crucial

SOME OBSERVERS believe that the Della statement could be the turning point of the campaign, just as the Baltimore vote might well decide the election. The city has a registration of 313,742 Democrats to 81,290 Republicans.

Nevertheless, Baltimore elected McKeldin Mayor and gave him a 46,412 majority when he defeated W. Preston Lane, Jr., for Governor in 1950. The Negro vote there is fairly evenly divided, with 35,983 registered Democratic and 31,012 registered Republican.

Negro leaders have predicted that as a result of the Della statement and the raising of the integration issue in general, the Baltimore Negro vote will go almost solidly to McKeldin. Lloyal Randolph, a Baltimore Negro Democratic leader, not only denounced Della, but called on Negro voters to support the state senator's Republican foe, Everett Smith.

CIO Still for Byrd

THERE were indications of a mixed reaction from labor, which has pretty solidly indorsed Byrd and is working for him. The head of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union for Maryland threatened that if Della did not retract, the union would be urged to vote against him for state senator. The Maryland State CIO Political Action Committee on the other hand reaffirmed its support of Byrd after he appeared before a special committee and told it that integration in the schools was "inevitable."

Baltimore politicians have reported that the Democrats' apparent position on integration has disturbed some other minority groups in the city besides the Negroes.

Another Baltimore development was the announcement that the powerful Sunpapers had thrown their editorial support to McKeldin. McKeldin, incidentally, is a native of Baltimore while Byrd was born in Crisfield, on the Eastern Shore.

Public Isn't Excited

ANOTHER "imponderable," in Baltimore, at least, is the apparent lack of voter reaction to the candidates' charges and countercharges. The public does not seem to have become excited over Byrd's attacks on McKeldin's Roads Commission and his charges of extravagance in the Republican administration. Nor has it been aroused by McKeldin's attacks on Byrd's administration as president of the University of Maryland.

Byrd's chief advantage would seem to be the huge Democratic majority in Maryland—767,000 registered Democrats to 316,000 registered Republicans. McKeldin's strength appears to lie in his personal popularity and in the fact that he has not antagonized any organized groups.

Wounded Member Worried

THREE of Maryland's seven congressional districts—the Third, Fourth and newly formed Seventh—are in Baltimore city. In the Third, Democratic incumbent Rep. Edward A. Garmatz is opposed only by a Progressive and is considered a sure winner. In the Fourth, Democratic Rep. George H. Fallon is running for his sixth term against Arthur Sherwood, a young newcomer running as an Eisenhower Republican. Fallon, one of the Congressmen wounded by the Puerto Rican fusillade in the House chamber, claims the edge, but recent developments are reported to have him worried. In the Seventh, Democratic Rep. Samuel N. Friedel is running for his second term against newcomer Edward N. Dukegait.

Washington D.C.

The Sixth District, including Montgomery County, is regarded as Republican territory, having sent J. Glenn Beall to the House five times before he was elected to the Senate and then having named Republican DeWitt Hyde to fill his House seat. Hyde is given a slight edge for reelection over Democrat Edward J. Ryan by some observers.

Much depends in this western Maryland district, however, on big and populous Montgomery, which has a registration of 51,955 Democrats to 33,870 Republicans but which gave McKeldin a 4000-vote margin in 1950. Democratic leader E. Brooke Lee has predicted that the county will come through handsomely for Byrd and Ryan. The Democrats are pinning part of their hopes on Montgomery's 20,000 Federal workers, who they say are disgruntled over the Eisenhower Administration's personnel policies. The Republicans dispute this.

IN THE SOUTHERN Maryland Fifth District, the Democrats claim a slight edge for Richard E. Lankford over Republican incumbent Rep. Frank Small, Jr., although they concede Small's strength. He defeated Lankford by about 1000 votes two years ago. The Democrats here are also counting on the many Federal workers who live in Prince Georges County.

Prince Georges has a registration of 55,010 Democrats and 33,870 Republicans but it also gave McKeldin a 4000-vote majority in 1950. On the other hand, it is Byrd's home county (and the seat of "his" University of Maryland), but McKeldin has paid it particular attention during the campaign. It is also Small's home county.

In the Second District, there is a hot race between Republican incumbent Rep. James P. S. Devereux and former Rep. William P. Bolton, Democrat. The Second includes metropolitan Baltimore County, which has a registration of 123,314 Democrats and 34,733 Republicans but which gave McKeldin a margin of nearly 10,000 votes in 1950.

Baltimore County is the home of George Mahoney, Byrd's bitter foe in the Democratic primary, and the Republicans are counting on this intraparty Democratic quarrel to aid them. Mahoney's supporters are another "imponderable" in the gubernatorial race. Mahoney reappeared last week after a long absence from the scene, however, and reaffirmed his support of the Democratic ticket.

THE BYRD and McKeldin campaign techniques have differed widely. McKeldin believes in personal contact. His "blitzes" through the State, shaking hands and distributing photographs, have been something to see. He has estimated that he has shaken more than 4200 hands in a single day's tour.

The Governor has maintained that personal contact throughout his four-year term. There has seldom been a Sunday when he has not bobbed up at one or more churches in the various sections of the state. He has never let personal inconveniences interfere with a chance to speak before some group, political or otherwise, no matter how small. As he once said, if he saw three men talking in a room he would go through the door and start a speech.

Byrd has also made frequent handshaking tours, but he has relied principally on speeches and statements to put his story before the public. As the challenger, of course, he has taken the offensive all the way.

When the voters decide between them Tuesday, however, their different techniques will probably carry much less weight than the imponderables which have made this contest a politicians' nightmare.

34a62

DETROIT—Ten Negro candidates rolled roughshod over weak opposition last week to win nominations for state, city, and national offices in the November elections.

The most significant win was that of State Senator Charles C. Diggs Jr., who was nominated in the Thirteenth Congressional District, while swamping his nearest opponent, incumbent Democrat George D. O'Brien, with more than 20,000 votes.

George Isabell was unopposed on the Republican ticket for the office of Register of Deeds in the city of Detroit.

Pittsburgh Courier 8-14-54

SEEKING HER second term in the Upper House of the Michigan Legislature, Democratic State Senator Cora M. Brown piled up 25,000 votes to win.

Another lady, Charline White, received close to 10,000 votes in the Eleventh District race for State Representative on the Democratic ticket. Mrs. White has already served two terms in the State Legislature.

Opposing Mrs. White will be Robert L. Ward, a GOP warhorse for the past thirty years. Mr. Ward led the Republican ticket in his district.

OTHER NOMINEES included Earl Kennedy, also seeking office in the Eleventh District. Mr. Kennedy finished second on the GOP ticket. George H. Edwards received 3,000 votes to become Mrs. White's co-campaigner in the Eleventh District race.

Pittsburgh Courier 8-14-54

The Rev. Charles M. Diggs grabbed the Democratic nomination for the State House in the Ninth District by leading the field with 6,500 votes.

Youthful Atty. Fred Yates won out in the Fourth District contest for the State House with 6,025 votes. Rev. J. Morton, making his debut on the political scene for the firstt ime, was the Republican nominee in the Fourth District.

RELAXING AFTER VICTORY — State Senator Charles C. Diggs, jr., of Detroit, Mich., relaxes with his wife and family following his successful bid for Democratic nomination for Congress, 13th Congressional District. Diggs is virtually assured of election as Michigan's first Negro representative. If elected he will become the third Negro in Congress. Diggs will oppose Landon Knight, Republican nominee, in November.

Charles Diggs Becomes 3rd Negro Congressman

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 11-20-54

DETROIT — For the first time since Reconstruction 3 Negroes are in the United States Congress. All are Democrats, well schooled in the "business" of politics. Two of them were re-elected last week; they were Adam Clayton Powell of New York, and William L. Dawson of Chicago.

The third Congressman is Detroit's Charles C. Diggs, jr., one of the youngest (33) U.S. Congressmen today, and son of former State Senator Charles Diggs, sr.

Young Diggs, himself a State Senator, soundly defeated Landon Knight, son of newspaper publisher John Knight, for a seat in the U. S. House of Representatives last week.

Diggs' rise to State Senator and Congressman are significant, not only because he has become the first Negro to become a Congressman from Michigan, but moreso because he defeated Cong. George O'Brien, a veteran of more than 15 years in the U. S. Congress, to win the congressional nomination last August.

Diggs was practically assured of election to Congress, from the 13th Congressional District, when he beat out a list of 20 Negro candidates in the Primary.

Member of a wealthy Detroit family, Diggs opposed another wealthy nominee—Landon Knight.

As most Detroiters can testify, Diggs is quite wealthy in political experience and background.

When he was in high school his father was in politics, thinking about running for State Senator. And in later years his father made his bid and won.

The elder Diggs was not a "political power" in 1932, but he was one of the instrumental figures in the state who helped the late President Roosevelt capture 60 per cent of the Negro vote in Michigan and the presidency, for the Democrats.

When the younger Diggs began to take an active part in politics, he thus inherited not only his father's know-how, but reputation and contact.

He was already well versed in theoretical politics, having studied at Fisk university in Nashville, the University of Michigan, Wayne university, and the Detroit College of Law. The following years added the necessary experience and Diggs soon began to build his own reputation, disassociated from that of his dad's.

Diggs remained a Democrat but fought his own battles for those he represented, both as undertaker and State Senator. The little man who had everything to gain because he really had so little, the auto factory worker and the wealthy, all began to line up with young Diggs, and his popularity soared fast, and never once showed signs of declining throughout the years.

A World War II veteran, Diggs is married to pretty Juanita Rosario Diggs. Their children are Charles, III. 4. and Alexis, 1.

Candidate's father blasts his opponent

DETROIT — Charles C. Diggs Sr., former state senator and father of Charles C. Diggs Jr., Democratic candidate for Congress in 13th District, scored last week what he called "untrue, unfair and unwarranted things" used against his son by Landon Knight, Republican opponent.

In his statement to the press, Mr. Diggs said:

"In my long years of experience in political life I have never encountered a candidate who would stoop to the unprincipled tactics that young Landon Knight has resorted to.

"He is raising anti-social (racial) issues which would affect adversely America's future and which the enlightened citizens of Detroit have left behind in the dark days of yesteryear."

Morehouse Graduate Elected To Michigan Legislature

World Thur. 12-2-54

GEORGE H. EDWARDS, Morehouse graduate and former resident of Atlanta, was elected to the State Legislature of the State of Michigan on November 2.

Mr. Edwards received the B. A. degree in business administration from Morehouse in 1936, will serve as state representative from the 11th District of the city of Detroit.

Edwards is the nephew of W. J. "Bill" Shaw of Atlanta. He has done graduate study in economics, taxes, and accounting at Atlanta University and at New York University, and he did special study in accounting at Indiana University and at Michigan State College. He is a member of the American Association of Hospital Accountants, of the American Savings and Loan Institute, and of the Society of Savings and Loan Comptrollers. He has served as neighborhood commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America.

At the time of his election to the Michigan Legislature, Edwards was serving as auditor of the Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Detroit. He is also vice-president of the Friendship Mutual Insurance Company of Detroit. A member of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity and a officer of the Detroit Morehouse Club.

Charles Diggs Jr., Our New Congressman, Talks to AFRO

Undertaker Afro-American is liberal

Baltimore, Md.

- Won't move his family to Washington

Sat. 11-13-54

- Asserts Ike didn't aid his GOP foe

DETROIT — Michigan has sent a brilliant young liberal to the U.S. Congress, an exclusive AFRO interview with Charles C. Diggs Jr., elected Tuesday to the House of Representatives from the 13th District, revealed, Friday.

Diggs, who will not be 32 years old until December, told the AFRO he is interested in full employment, repeal of the discriminatory McCarran Immigration and the Taft - Hartley laws and the extension of public housing.

His major concern, in addition to civil rights, he disclosed, is legislation to help the two extreme age groups, the very young and the old.

Married to the former Juanita Rosario, he is the father of three children. He said he does not plan to move his family to Washington, but will prefer commuting back to Detroit on week ends.

Following is the text of the interview:

AFRO: Congratulations on your victory.

DIGGS: Thank you very much.

AFRO: I thought since we circulate along the Eastern Seaboard, we should introduce you to some of the people out this way who admire your victory. Would you be willing to answer a few questions?

AFRO: Could you tell me briefly to what single factor you attribute your victory?

DIGGS: Well, there are several principal factors which probably have comparable import.

Of course I was running on the Democratic ticket in an area which holds 76 per cent of the vote in the Democratic column in the primary and it would have been quite an upset to have defeated a Democrat in this area.

I think that's one thing that's probably the principal thing in our favor. In addition to that, we put up quite a strenuous campaign.

Of course, there were other factors that could have tipped the scales regardless of the partisan pattern in this district and there were attempts made to tip the scales based on those faltors. But we beat them anyway. They, of course, brought out the race issue.

— o O o —

AFRO: I was going to ask you about this chap Landon Knight (son of a daily newspaper publisher and Diggs' Republican opponent). I heard some rumors that he was using some questionable tactics.

MR. DIGGS: Yes, yes, he really did in the last week or so. He started out with a pamphlet that was sent out to— I don't know how many people in the district, principally in the white areas, but some colored people got them, too, because our people don't live in a ghetto or anything anymore since the restrictive covenent decision.

This particular literature had a picture of him looking like a movie star and my picture on there all smeared, darkened up; and it seems as though there was another reference in there just to bring out the fact that I was colored — this smearing of the picture.

Baltimore Md.

AFRO: Had you made any effort to conceal the fact that you were colored?

Sat. 10-13-54

DIGGS: Oh, No. We took the race issue out of the campaign right from the beginning.

In the first place, being well-known in the community, the family being well-known, most people know that we are colored even though those that didn't certainly could have seen that through our advertising.

We used pictures of ourselves on billboards and on campaign material.

In adition to that, we campaigned all over the district; and, of course, we are easily identifiable on sight as far as the race question is concerned.

AFRO: We heard that Governor G. Mennon Williams came down and campaigned in your district the last day before the election. Was it unusual for him to do that?

DIGGS: Well, they had a Governor's Day in each district, and it happened that the Governor's Day in the 13th was the day before the election; but we did have Stephen Mitchell (chairman of the National Democratic Committee) come down.

AFRO: Did congressman Dawson help you any?

DIGGS: Dawson was in last Sunday at a mass rally, and Congressman Powell was in two weeks ago.

— o O o —

AFRO: What about the employment situation?

DIGGS: I think that that was probably the biggest single factor in the triumph of the Democratic Party in Wayne County. There's no question about that.

That is, they would have won anyway, I believe, but from the standpoint of the margin of victory, I think that that was the biggest single factor in Wayne County, an industrial area.

AFRO: Do you think it's significant that all three of our congressmen now are Democrats?

DIGGS: Yes. I made that statement in several speeches It wasn't just incidental that we were in the Dmocratic Party

It reflected back to the philosophy of the Democratic Party that meant the most to working class people of which the colored group is the principal segment.

— o O o —

AFRO: What was the principal appeal you made to the voters in the 13th District?

DIGGS: I talked issues.

AFRO: What is the pro-rata of the colored population in this district?

DIGGS: 45 percent, But their voting participation is only about 38 percent.

AFRO: was there any apparent apathy? A lot of people were talking about apathy before the election.

DIGGS: Well, the vote in this district exceeded the vote in 1950. Of course, it wasn't as high as it was in 1952, which is understandable. There's always a higher vote in the presidential election.

AFRO: Did you poll more votes than Governor Williams for your district?

DIGGS: Well, I haven't seen the break-down by districts for the governor's vote. I don't imagine so, because I'm sure he carried Highland Park. Highland Park is a city within the 13th District; and I missed carrying that by 1,100 votes, but I'm sure he carried it.

AFRO: What was the total number of votes you polled?

DIGGS: Well, in round figures, 64,000.

AFRO: How did that compare with Knight?

MR. DIGGS: In round figures — 32,000.

AFRO: Don't you think your experience as a State Senator will help you consideraly in Washington

— o O o —

DIGGS: Oh, yes, there's no question about it. The legislative process is a — well a very peculiar experience; and I'm certain that the four sessions that I have served in Lansing will help orientate me into the national Congress.

AFRO: You were in the State Senate then four years

DIGGS: Four years, that's right.

AFRO: Did you hold any previous office

DIGGS: No, I've never held any previous office.

AFRO: What persuaded you to go into politics

DIGGS: Well, my father, you know, was State Senator before me. He'd been there for four terms: senator for eight years. It was a natural thing.

AFRO: Where did you go to school

DIGGS: I started out at the University of Michigan, I entered there in September, 1940. I went there two years.

Then with the draft pending, I pushed down to Fisk in Nashville.

I wanted to get that kind of varied education. I went down there in September of 1942 until I got drafted in February, 1943. I was there five months.

AFRO: Did you serve overseas

DIGGS: No. I entered the Army as a private and I eventually got promoted to sergeant. Later, I was accepted for officers candidate school and went there in Jan. 1, 1944, down at Miami Beach, Fla., Air Force Strategic Command.

I was graduated from there on April 29, 1944, and was sent to Tuskegee Air Force Base, where I served as the base process officer.

AFRO: Do you have a family, sir

DIGGS: Yes, I have three children, a boy and two girls, and my wife.

AFRO: I'd like to have your wife's maiden name, too.

DIGGS: Her first name is Juanita. Her maiden name is Rosario.

AFRO: When do you plan to come to Washington

— o O o —

MR. DIGGS: Well, I'll probably make an exploratory trip sometime this month and then of course I'll be coming in January.

I don't intend to move my residence there. I'll be commuting practically every week end.

AFRO: You don't plan to establish residence in Washington

DIGGS: No. We've got our business here. Not only that I think that's one of the things that help me beat the incumbent was the fact that he didn't keep in touch with his district.

He moved to Washington; got a home out there in Virginia or somewhere outside of Washington. By the time he came

About Diggs

Born in Detroit on Dec. 22, 1922, he's 5 feet, 10 inches tall and weighs 192 pounds.

He's married to the former Juanita Rosario. They have three children, Charles 3rd, 5; Denise, 4; and Alexis, 3. She's Catholic; he's Baptist.

He was elected to the Michigan State Senate in 1950, succeeding his father, who had served four terms.

He attended the University of Michigan, Fisk University and the Wayne University School of Mortuary Science.

He is president of the House of Diggs, largest funeral establishment in Michigan.

He entered service as a private Feb. 19, 1943 and was discharged as a second lieutenant on June 1, 1945.

home. I had him beat.

AFRO: Do you have any preferences in the matter of your placement on committees

DIGGS: Well, that's the purpose of the exploratory trip to kind of see what the situation is.

I think that there are possibilities of getting a decent committee assignemnt.

Of course it's not just the assignment but your application to the assignment that counts and if you get a less important committee assignment, you want to work very hard to make something of it.

It's a peculiar position to be a pioneer.

— o O o—

AFRO: Do you plan to focus your attention on any given program in congress?

Diggs: Well, I'm, of course, interested in the full employment program. I'm interested in repeal of restrictive labor legislation, Taft Hartley.

I'm interested in the repeal of th ediscriminatory immigration Act.

I'm intersted in the extension of public housing, the expediting of purchasing of housing in little income groups.

I'm interested in legislation which has to do with the two age extremes — the young and the old — old age pensions, social security; I'm interested in the code for congressional committees; and then, of course, I'm interested in civil rights legislation.

AFRO: Do you think Eisenhower's appearance in Cadillac Sq. hurt your candidacy?

DIGGS: Oh, no! It didn't have any effect whatever.

AFRO: Could you give me the names of organizations to which you belong?

— o O o —

DIGGS: Well, I belong to the Elks, I'm state director of civil liberties of the Elks; and I belong to the Prince Hall Masons, 32nd Degree.

I belong to the American Legion; and I'm president of the Cotillion Club here in Detroit which is composed of business and professional persons of about 50 — very prominent groups here.

I belong to the NAACP and Calvary Baptist Church.

My wife and my children are all Catholic. I married a Catholic girl; I'm Baptist, myself.

I'm a funeral director by profession — president of the House of Diggs Inc., which is the largest funeral home in the State of Michigan, not just colored, but all funeral homes.

It's probably the largest funeral home in the United States.

AFRO: That's a full-time job?

DIGGS: Well, yes. Of course, I operate on a policy level, but I'm also in the active part of the business.

I conduct funerals as often as I'm assigned to them. We've got a pretty good-sized staff.

I principally have to go out on funerals on Saturday to the cemetery, but I go off on assignments on funerals regardless of whether it is a so-called big funeral or small — whether the person is well-known or almost anonymous.

AFRO: I guess that accounts for the success of your business?

DIGGS: Well, yes, of course, our firm does a volume of business, dealing principally with working class people. We buried over 1,400 persons last year.

AFRO: That's quite a record.

DIGGS: Oh, yes.

— o O o —

AFRO: Do you have many hobbies or do you have time for any hobbes?

DIGGS: Well, I guess I haven't any hobbies you take time for. I don't have any in particular. I read quite a bit.

I don't have any particular hobbies as far as sports are concerned. I'm more a spectator than a participant.

AFRO: Do you smoke or drink?

MR. DIGGS: I smoke and am cosmopolitan in other ways.

AFRO: Your age is 32?

DIGGS: 31. I'll be 32 next month.

AFRO: When is your birthday?

DIGGS: December 2nd.

AFRO: How tall are you?

DIGGS: 5' 10", weight about 192.

I'll be the youngest member of the Michigan delegation.

AFRO: You're probably the youngest man in Congress?

DIGGS: I might be now. Somebody was telling me that the youngest congressman was a fellow from Californria. I understand the average age of the California delegation is around 35. If I'm not the youngest, I'm one of the youngest.

DIGGS: Right with them. I know I was by far the youngest man in the State Senate all the time I was there.

AFRO: I want to congratulate

ELECTION FIRSTS!

WASHINGTON—Several chapters in political history were written in this year's "off-year" election. Here are a few:

For the first time, three colored Democrats will take seats in the House of Representatives.

Charles C. Diggs Jr., 31, Detroit undertaker, became the first colored congressman from Michigan. He won over his white opponent, Landon Knight, 64,000 to 32,000.

William L. Dawson, Chicago, polled 67,000 to 22,000 for his opponent, Genoa Washington, to become the first colored congressman elected for a seventh term.

Fred W. Martin, a bathhouse attendant, became the first colored member of the Hot Springs, Ark., city council.

Truly Hatchett, Democrat, and Emory Cole, Republican, both of Baltimore, became the first two colored members of the Maryland legislature in its 168-year history.

Mrs. Susie Monroe and Mrs. Sarah A. Anderson, Philadelphia Democrats, became the first two colored women elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature.

Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, ex-chorus girl, is the first woman of her race elected to the New York Assembly. She's a Democrat.

Dr. Eldrew Browne, Kansas, is the first colored Democrat elected to the Kansas Legislature. He defeated Myles C Stevens, father of Kansas' FEPC law.

Mississippi Roundup—

Voters To Elect School Boards Today

JACKSON, Miss., May 3 (AP)—Mississippi voters tomorrow elect county school board members, with the possibility that a Negro candidate may be elected in Jefferson Davis County.

Members of the powerful boards —inegral parts of the program to equalize Negro and white schools —will take office June 1 when the old boards got out of office.

The boards will recommend the amounts of local taxes, plan consolidation and new construction and oversee local efforts as the equalization program begins to roll.

In Jefferson Davis County, Isaac Hargrove is a candidate from Beat 1, usually "a Negro box," the circuit clerk commented.

He is faced by a white opponent.

If elected, he would be the first Negro on the county's board of education since reconstruction.

Another Negro still is listed as a candidate in Warren County (Vicksburg) but was pushed out of contention by a legislative act that forbids residents of a municipal separate school district from running for the county board.

More than 400 districts will elect members tomorrow, one from each district in most of the 82 counties.

Before the equalization program was passed, members of county boards of education were elected by trustees of the various schools within the county.

First Negro Seeks Office

PRENTISS, Miss.—Isaac Hartzog, local farmer, is the first Negro in the history of this city to announce his candidacy for Board of Education member from District 4. The election is May 4.

Hartzog's wife, Mrs. Essie Hartzog, is a local teacher at the Oak Grove School. The candidate is 49.

Of the 777 registered voters in four precincts of the district, 224 are Negroes. Mount Carmel, one of the districts, has 193 electors, all Negroes.

Hartzog, opposed by Lawrence Polk, a prominent farmer and cattle buyer, is 49 years old and the father of two teen-age children. His wife, Essie, is a teacher at the Oak Grove Negro School in district No. 4.

Pass Law To Bar Miss. Candidate

VICKSBURG, Miss. — After it became apparent that he was assured of victory, the Mississippi state legislature passed a bill which disqualified the first Negro to become a candidate for the Warren County board of education since reconstruction days.

After qualifying to run for the post, George Lee Jefferson, sr., a wealthy civic leader in Vicksburg, was declared ineligible by a bill passed in the legislature which required board members to be elected from outside the municipal school districts.

Several white candidates were also disqualified under the new bill. Jefferson, however, has hinted at plans to test the constitutionality of this bill, signed by Governor White.

Jefferson first qualified as a candidate on March 31. The election is scheduled for May 4.

On the final date to qualify, April 3, only one candidate qualified to oppose Jefferson and he was an employe of the Warren County Health department which automatically eliminated him under provisions of the Hatch Act.

It was then that whites fearful of Jefferson's election were alleged to have interested members of the legislature and the governor to sign the bill on April 21, which eliminated Jefferson. An amendment has also extended the time for qualification allowing new candidates time to file.

In Prentiss, Miss., Isaac Hartzog, a farmer, became the first Negro in the history of Jefferson Davis country to run for the county board of education.

Jackson Voters Not Eligible For School Election

Residents of Jackson will not be eligible to vote in the special election next Tuesday to elect members of county boards of education.

H. T. Alford, Hinds County Circuit clerk, said the new law expressly forbids residents of cities with 20,000 or more population and who have the municipal separate school district of their own from voting in the election.

Ashford said the ruling was made on the voting matter by the attorney general.

Ashford said only one district of Hinds county has competition in the race. The other four have only one candidate each on the ballot.

Municipal separate school districts have their own board of trustees.

John P. McDonald, chairman of the Hinds county election commission, said the ballot will include the following names: District 1, A. Carter Blake, Jr., District 2, Robert Trotter, District 3, G. W. Simmons, District 4, Irwin M. Lee and James Arden Barnett, and District 5, J. W. Combs.

The deadline for filing for the office has already passed.

Eastland Hits At CIO, NAACP —Gartin Recalls Bilbo Fight

Nationwide Fight Seen—

By JAMES GUNTER
Staff Writer

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss., Aug. 11. —Senator James O. Eastland told Gulf Coast Mississippians Wednesday that proponents of racial segregation will build an organization in Augusta, Ga., in September to fight the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its allies on a nationwide scale.

"I have been in touch with people from other parts of the South" the senator said. "Our organization will be nationwide in scope and will fight the CIO, the NAACP and those groups who are out to destroy segregation."

Song of Death

The 49-year-old senior senator swung along Mississippi salt water beaches with speeches at Waveland, Bay St. Louis and Pascagoula. He rolled up his sleeves on the Hancock County courthouse steps here, reared back and warned an audience of 100 that anti-segregation forces are "singing a song of death and destruction for the South."

"I am alarmed at the apathy of the people," he said. "Under the decisions of the Supreme Court the laws of segregation are not worth the paper they are written on. The entire legal basis for racial segregation has been swept away."

He said the South stands today where it was in Reconstruction Days and can expect a program in Congress giving the President power to implement the Supreme Court rulings.

"We need [illegible] of experience to fight this program," he said. Senator Eastland, campaigning for nomination to a third term in the Democratic Primary Aug. 24, whipped out against the CIO which he charged is backing his opponent, Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin.

CIO Attacked

"T man who thinks the CIO is a labor organization ought to have his head examined," he said. "The official publication of the CIO says its primary objective is elimination of all forms of racial segregation."

He said the CIO put up $75,000 in June for use by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in financing lawsuits against segregated school systems. One such suit has been filed in Columbus, he said.

He said the CIO set up a group June 6 to promote integration of the races.

"I have found that the average man in the North thinks just as you do and he's sick of this drive toward socialism," the senator said. "You're going to find that the average Northerner is your ally.

"I think victory will be won easier than you think," he said. "We're going into the North and attempt to pledge legislators just as the NAACP does.

"Future generations of Southerners will bless the men who take a stand now," he said.

Introduced By Mayor

The senator was introduced here by Mayor John A. Scafide. Appearing on the stand with him were attorney Robert Genin, City Attorney Dan M. Russell Jr., banker Leo Seal, and City Commissioners J. C. Glover and S. J. Ladner Jr. at Waveland, a small fishing and resort town, he was greeted by Mayor Garfield Ladner and Ed Gibson, general manager of the city gas and water works. H. A. Thompson Sr., retired engineer, introduced the campaigner.

The graying, bespectacled legislator was the guest of City Commissioner Slyvan Ladner at the luncheon meeting of the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club. He moved from here to Pascagoula for a night address.

Johnny Fisher's Dixieland Band of Biloxi performed from a truck at Waveland and Bay St. Louis before the speaking.

Driving into this crepe myrtle and tung nut country, the senator spoke fo his efforts in behalf of the price support program. He said he had much to do with saving the tung industry from bankruptcy in 1949 and last week fought to keep the Republican Administration from dropping tung from the parity program.

He described his work to include shrimp in the school lunch program and to launch an exploration ship which discovered tuna schools in the Gulf. He said he helped the President to approve a sand beach and seawall project across parts of Mississippi and Louisiana.

Picnic, Fair Today

"Now we are hearing a lot of talk about sending American boys to fight in Indo-China," he said. "France will not send her own sons to fight for a French possession.

"I'm going to be re-elected to the Senate by a big majority," he predicted. "And this vote will never becast to send American boys to IndoChina or to fight another hopeless war like Korea."

The crowd applauded.

Senator Eastland said he was confident the location of Keesler Air Force aBse in South Mississippi influenced the action of the United States Government in Central America.

"I wouldn't be at all surprised if I learned that our government promoted a revolution to stamp communism out of the Western Hemisphere," he said. "Ammunition and money mysteriously found their way down there and

MARGIN NOW IS 54,000

Democrats In All But 11 Counties Favor Deltan For Third Term—Many Judges Are Re-elected

(Vote Table on Section Page)

By KENNETH TOLER

From The Commercial Appeal Jackson, Miss., Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 25. — With his third term cinched by the Democrats of Mississippi in Tuesday's primary, Senator James O. Eastland Wednesday readied himself for a major role in a nationwide organization to fight for establishment of a legal basis for segregation.

Senator Eastland said the organization will be set up next month in Augusta, Ga., with outstanding Southern leaders participating. He has already introduced an amendment to the Constitution seeking to curb the power of the United States Supreme Count in matters affecting schools, marriage, health and morals.

Bared Plans In Campaign

The Mississippian outlined plans for the nationwide movement during his recent re-election campaign which he won Tuesday over Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin of Laurel. He said it will promote adoption of his resolution, the only way he said segregation can be restored since the court's decision striking down all existing laws on the subject.

In Tuesday's primary, senior Senator Eastland won easily over the state's No. 2 ranking official, returns from 1,754 of the 1,805 precincts giving him a majority in excess of 54,000 votes and the lead position in all except 11 of the 82 counties.

The vote was:

EASTLAND 137,017
GARTIN 82,494

The counties in which the lieutenant governor lead were Clarke, Clay, George, Greene, Itawamba, Jackson, Jasper, Jones (his home), Lauderdale (where he was born), Lee and Pearl River.

White Backed Loser

Senator Eastland's home county of Sunflower gave him a one-sided vote, while Scott County, where he was born, went 2-to-1 for him. He led in Gov. Hugh White's Marion County; Atty. Gen. J. P. Coleman's Choctaw County; Paul B. Johnson's Forrest County; Ross Barnett's Leake County, and former Gov. Fielding L. Wright's Sharkey County.

Governor White, Atty. Gen. Colean and Mr. Barnett voted for Mr. Gartin, while Mr. Johnson and former Governor Wright were for Senator Eastland. All except the Governor are expected to be he has never yet denied my charge that he is a half-time senator," Mr. Gartin said.

State Senator Kenneth Stewart introduced the candidate to 50 persons in the auditorium of the school at Gilchrist. Mayor L. G. Alford presented him to 200 persons who sought shade around the sunny City Hall at McComb.

"My opponent says I run every time you mention labor," Mr. Gartin said. "I served as mayor of Laurel during a period when we had much strife there between labor and management.

"I believe both labor and management are entitled to their rights under the law," he said. "But I will not be dominated or controlled by either group."

Challenge Answered

Speaking of Senator Eastland's challenge to tell how he would vote on amendments to the Taft-Hartley labor law, Mr. Gartin said:

"I'll support any amendment to any law any time that makes for better relations between labor and management. I don't do like my opponent does, hate the little it was a great victory for America."

On the way to Pascagoula, the senator stopped at his Harrison County headquarters in Gulfport where he visited with Ashton Barrett, county manager, and Mrs. Marie Hoke, manager of the headquarters.

His Thursday's schedule: Farm Bureau picnic at Houston 10 a.m. Neshoba County Fair, 1:30 p.m. and Starkville 8 p.m.

Mr. Gartin follows the senators speech at the Neshoba County Fair with an address at 2:30 p.m. in next year's race for the governorship.

Junior Senator John Stennis' Kemper County went for the senior senator.

In another contest involving a veteran in the state's congressional delegation, Representative Colmer of the Sixth District walked to an easy win over two opponents for his 12th term in Washington. On the basis of returns from 352 of the 362 precincts in the South Mississippi district, Mr. Colmer had 39,288 votes; State Senator Clem Britton of Laurel, recorded 8,973, and Walter Lowry of Pascagoula and Hattiesburg, trailed with 3,045.

With less than half of the state's voting strength of 525,000 participating in the off-year election, the outcome was apparent from the start of tabulating.

Wired Congratulations

About three hours after the polls closed at 6 p.m., Mr. Gartin admitted defeat, and wired his congratulations to Senator Eastland. Shortly afterwards, the senior senator came through with his victory proclamation.

"I am humbly grateful to the people of Mississippi for the fine vote of confidence which they have give nme," he said. "I am deeply grateful to my friends for their loyalty and the fine work they did in my behalf. In fact, this victor ywas due to my friends.

"I sincerely hope that throughout my tenure I shall continue to merit the confidence which the people have reposed in me," Senator Eastland said.

It was shortly after 9 Tuesday night that Lt. Gov. Gartin said "the returns from the election show Senator Eastland has been returned to the United States Senate by the people of the state.

Grateful To Friends

"I am grateful to my many friends who worked so hard and enthusiastically," he said. "All the people of Mississippi were wonderful and courteous to me, and I have enjoyed visiting with the people of my state.

"We have a wonderful state and we must all work together in the future in an effort to solve the problems that confront us," Mr. Gartin said.

His telegram to Senator Eastland read:

"Congratulations on your victory. I know you are proud of the confidence expressed in you by the people of Mississippi. You have my best wishes and in the future you will have my co-operation."

Senator Eastland pitched his re-election bid on his seniority, his efforts in behalf of agriculture, his fight for segregation and his opposition to asserted "weakening" amendments to the Taft-Hartley Law. He said his 14th place in seniority in the 96-member Senate gives the state a position of influence it could not afford to lose at this time. He is only 49 years of age.

Judges Re-elected

Mississippians also returned to office the four of the 17 chancery court judges who faced opposition, with two of the three circuit court judges who were opposed assured of re-election, and the third in a nip-and-tuck finish with his lone opponent.

Circuit Judge Burkitt Collins of Laurel, of the 18th District, was behind Lunsford Casey, also of Laurel and county court judge, by 49 votes.

On the basis of unofficial returns, the younger Mr. Casey had 4,880 votes, and the veteran Judge Collins, 4-831.

A runoff Sept. 14 developed in the selection of a judge for a new 12th Circuit Court District composed of Forrest and Perry Counties. In the runoff will be William Haralson, Forrest County judge, and Francis T. Zachary, young attorney of Hattiesburg. Former Chancellor Ben Stevens of Hattiesburg was eliminated. The vote was: Haralson, 3,139; Zachary, 2,570; Stevens, 1,628.

Chancellors re-elected were:

Herbert Holmes of Senatobia, Third District, over Fred M. Bush Jr., of Holly Springs. The vote was: Holmes, 11,184; Bush, 7,845.

The vote by counties showed (with Chancellor Holmes' vote first):

Benton, 457 to 382; Marshall (with two precincts out), 741 to 886; De Soto, 1,077 to 292; Grenada, 988 to 732; Lafayette, 1,040 to 934; Montgomery, 1,070 to 912; Panola, 1,489 to 590; Tate, 1,258 to 376; Tippan, 1,098 to 1,001; Yalobusha, 759 to 609; Calhoun, 1,207 to 1.131.

L. Arnold Pyle of Jackson, Fifth District, over B. D. Wade of Jackson, 16,165 to 1,819.

D. M. Russell of Gulfport, Eighth District, over former State Senator Cornelius Ladner of Bay St. Louis, 8,757 to 5,054.

William Neville of Meridian, 12th District, over W. F. Latham of Quitman, 7,217 to 2,195.

Circuit Judges Re-elected

Circuit Judges renamed were:

James A. Torrey of Meadville, Sixth District, over C. F. Cowart of Meadville, 5,751 to 2,023.

Homer Currie of Raleigh, 13th District, over former State Representative George Grubbs of Mendenhall, 5,659 to 3,152.

Yazoo County threw its state senate contest in a runoff, with Norman Mott Sr., editor of Yazoo City, pitted against W. F. Martin, also of Yazoo City. James Vandevere and E. B. Roberts were eliminated. The vacancy was created by the resignation of Senator William McGraw of Bentonia, on his appointment to the State Parole Board by Governor White.

Trendless Trend

It's hard, as everybody knows, to beat a United States senator. That seems to be the conclusion to be drawn from the overmastering victory of Senator James Eastland over Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin in Mississippi. Senator Eastland is not the most attractive senator from Mississippi or any other state, being a flannel mouth of indefinite endowments and abilities. Possibly the best you could say of him was that the stenciled liberals wanted his hide on the door. Gartin made an energetic campaign and the word went in the beginning that Eastland was struggling for survival. But the vote shows that Eastland never was in trouble.

Those who seek to show either a "liberal" or a conservative trend can't do much with the evidence at hand in this summer's politics. The "liberals" can make something out of the victories of Senator Scott over Lennon in North Carolina, Senator Sparkman over Battle in Alabama and Kefauver over Sutton in Tennessee. But in two cases, Kefauver and Sparkman, the victors were entrenched incumbents. Against that, there are Eastland and Senator McClelland in Arkansas, but the conservative McClelland won by a narrow margin over "liberal" Sid McMath.

There realy isn't much to conclude from what has happened so far. The House elections in November, however, will relate a great deal.

'By 25,000 Votes'—

By JAMES GUNTER
Staff Writer

M'COMB, Miss., Aug. 21.—Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin predicted Saturday he will defeat Senator James O. Eastland in Tuesday's Democratic primary by a 25,000 vote majority.

"I expect to carry 51 of Mississippi's 82 counties and I believe I have a good chance of 10 more counties," the 41-year-old lieutenant governor said.

After four speeches in South Mississippi, the candidate plunged to the Gulf Coast for night addresses at Pascagoula and Biloxi.

Appeal To Negroes

At Gloster he was introduced by Sidney Hughes, grocer, to a sidewalk crowd of 250 persons. Many of them were Negroes. "I want to say a word to the colored folks I see out here," Mr. Gartin said. "Don't you listen to these radicals outside the state who care little for your welfare and want to turn you against the best friends you have on this earth—the good people of Mississippi who are interested in better things for your children."

The senatorial hopeful beat off his opponent at every stop for his record of attendance in the Senate.

"He can talk about how pretty I am and say all the things he is saying in his desperation, but man who makes a living by the sweat of his brow."

Mr. Gartin scoffed in this railroad center at claims by Senator Eastland he was responsible for state legislation of benefit to railroad men when he was a member of the Legislature.

One of Mr. Gartin's sound trucks parked directly in front of the headquarters of Pike County Women for Eastland.

Raleigh Speech Set

As soon as the speech was over the loudspeakers blared forth with Mr. Gartin's theme song: "Move over, big dog, the little dog's moving in," the speakers added, "A vote for Carroll Gartin will help the little dog win."

The only definite engagement the lieutenant governor has made for Monday, final day of the campaign, is at Raleigh. He will make his last appeals Monday night over radio and television, probably in Jackson and Meridian.

KERR AND GARY WIN LANDSLIDE OF VOTES THAT PLACE DEMOS IN POWER THROUGHOUT NATION

Daily Dispatch Sat. 11-13-54

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Last-Minute Move by Governor-Elect Being Watched With Reference to Integration

MISSISSIPPI TO HALT NEGRO SUFFRAGE

Tuesday's election swept into office U. S. Senator Robert S. Kerr and elected Raymond Gary governor of Oklahoma. The surprise, however, of the Tuesday's plebiscite [illegible] out of the fact that Raymond Gary led the ticket i[illegible] of Kerr. Gary jumped more than 25,000 votes over l[illegible] and this is largely considered representative of opposition coming from Negro voters over Oklahoma to the man who has voted against all civil rights legislation.

Late returns show that the Democrats have grabbed control of both the upper and lower houses of Congress ,which means the Democrats will in a large measure be responsible for legislation stemming from the many integration problems now facing the nation, and which may become acute following the December sitting of the Supreme Court.

Kerr even fell down in his home county where Fred Mock edged him off the front rider's seat by a margin of better than 2,000 votes. Trained election officials actually believe if Mock had had a substantial campaign chest, and had Oklahoma had a good crop year, Kerr would have been vanquished. As it was, Mock was barely able to keep a few workers in the field, in addition to his personal effort.

Three states, Louisiana, Georgia and Mississippi, affirmed the idea of maintaining segregation in their commonwealths, and they contributed in a large measure to success for the Democratic ticket in their section. In fact, many people assume the thousands of voters Tuesday were voting, or assumed they were voting, for or against the Supreme Court rulators in the event the U. S seeks to enforce its segregation edicts.

The Tuesday vote is a very challenging one to the liberals in the Democratic party of the Roosevelt-Truman stripe. They will be hard put to stifle the type of legislation which their colleagues from the deep South will seek to foster in the national legislature.

The last minute coverage of the state with handbills, in which Gary is purported to have repudiated his previous bold stand on civil rights, have Negroes in a quandary generally as to what the future holds in Oklahoma the next four years with reference to its public school system.

In his statement immediately following the Supreme Court decision Gary said he would support the court's ruling, but in the campaign sheet immediately preceding the election, the statement is made that enforcement of the law will bring about strife in Oklahoma, and that only a few Negroes desire this legislation.

JOPLIN, Mo.—Two Negroes are among 38 candidates who will vie for nine seats in the city council in the election to be held April 6 under the new home rule charter for Joplin that was approved in a special election held February 9.

Pa. 4-27-54

They are M. W. Dial, 315 North Mineral St., principal of the Lincoln high school, a candidate for councilman-at-large; and the Rev. M. G. Edmonson, 218 North Division Ave., assistant pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church, one of the six candidates for councilman from zone 1.

P. 1

At the close of the filing period Tuesday, March 23, 12 persons had filed petitions for nomination as zone candidates and 26 had filed as general or at-large candidates.

The city is divided into four zones.

For zone nomination, a candidate was required to obtain 80 names on a petition and those who intended to run for the office of general councilman were required to obtain 150 names.

The "Citizens for Good Government," held a meeting at which an election of a 25-member board of governors was elected, from a list of 50 names of nominees, one from each of the city's 25 precincts. The board of governors, in addition to an executive committee composed of six officers, will act as the nucleus of the organization.

L. D. Hackney, was elected from the fifth precinct.

A two page questionaire has been submitted to the council candidates designed to throw light on the qualifications of city council candidates prior to the April 6 election.

Proponents Determined Another Chance Be Given

By STEVE DUNCAN

The Dean of St. Louis, as represented by Liberal Christian and democrat concepts, was literally knifed in the back Friday when the Board of Aldermen—taking a giant step down the path of racial intolerance—defeated two civil rights measures which would have outlawed discrimination in hotels, theaters and restaurants here.

Ten aldermen voted for progress in race relations. Seventeen cast their ballots on the side of bigotry.

This stab in the back by the 17 "honorable" lawmakers voting against Board Bills 13 and 14 was not as fatal, however, as the attack on July 6 Jessar.

Sponsors of the measures are determined to re-introduce them when the Aldermanic Body convenes for a new term in April.

Albanese, Berra Opposed

Both Board President Charles Albanese and Alderman Louis Berra, vice president and majority floor leader, voted to kill the anti-discriminatory ordinances.

A number of groups urged passage of the bills prior to the voting Friday.

Among them were the Mayor's Council on Human Relations, the Committee on Racial Equality (CORE), the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Metropolitan Church Federation, the Catholic Interracial Council, the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, the St. Louis Pharmaceutical Association, the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority and the AFL Teamsters Union.

Hotels Opposed

The most outspoken opposition to passage of the bills came from the Hotel Association of St. Louis using the archaic and trite line of reasoning which said, in effect, "they aint ready yet."

The Hotel Association's position was made known to the Board in a letter sent to white aldermen only. The letter, dated November 11 and signed by John K. Bryan, executive vice president, said, in part:

"As you know, the customs and traditions of St. Louis relative to this matter have been long established and observed. In the last several years, there has been a softening by reason of education and also by the conscientious, cooperative effort of all interested groups, including hotels. However, while this progress has been marked, we do not believe that the city and its citizens are yet ready for the abrupt change as proposed. We believe that the passage of the bills at this time would not effect the purpose intended, but rather will retard the progress now being made toward the ultimate goal of non-discrimination of all phases.

Behalf of Minority

"These bills are proposed in behalf of a minority. Hotel operators are also a minority. It is not equitable that the one minority in their anxiety to move forward too fast and accomplish an end for which the community is not ready, should be permitted to bring about a penalty on hotels who certainly cannot control the sentiments of their thousands of patrons."

Alderman DeWitte T. Lawson said Tuesday that he and Alderman Sidney R. Redmond, co-sponsors of Board Bills 13 and 14, are going to present similar proposals on the first day of the new term of the Board. The new term begins on the third Friday in April.

Redmond, arguing for passage of the bills Friday, said "Negroes are stigmatized when they are denied the privilege to go to public places."

Candidates

Citizens set up screening to back best qualified

A list of 12 questions for candidates from the Central Ward who will seek seats in the first city council election in Newark next May, has been prepared by a committee of colored citizens.

The committee was appointed by a citizens' group representing 30 or more civic, community and fraternal organizations primarily interested in unified action to insure the election of a colored councilman from the Central Ward.

The committee is headed by Herbert H. Tate, prominent attorney, a former member of the Newark Board of Education, who recently returned from the Dominion of Pakistan where he served two years as a cultural attache of the U. S. State Department.

Selection Committee

The questionnaire is available to candidates and prospective candidates and are returnable by January 18 to the office of Attorney Tate at 126 Court st.

The citizens' group which will decide on a permanent name at its next meeting, will name a Selection Committee that will screen the candidates and will report its recommendations on the best candidate or candidates not later than January 25.

Here are the questions councilmanic candidates from the Central Ward must answer to be considered by the citizens group:

Funds, Tie-Up

1. Do you aspire to be a candidate from the Central Ward in the City of Newark for Councilman or are you a candidate-at-large?

(a.) What are your plans for financing this campaign?

2. Do you intend to run as an independent candidate or have you made a tie-up with any other candidate?

3. Do you intend to make such a tie-up if you become the choice of the colored voters?

Must Tell Qualifications

4. What do you feel qualifies you to run for this office from the standpoint of background and training?

(a.) Have you ever held an executive or administrative office?

(b.) Have you ever served on policy-making boards?

Challenge Posed

5. If you are not selected, would you back the candidate in Ward C and the candidate-at-large selected by the screening committee and the organizations pledged to back one colored candidate?

6. Do you have a platform upon which you desire to run?

7. Give us the details of that platform.

8. Would you accept an interracial campaign committee?

9. Do you have any contacts with other racial groups?

10. What and who are these contacts?

Must Tell Affiliations

11. What are your political, religious and fraternal affiliations? Are you a registered voter and have you voted?

Coudert, Republican, Has Won 4 Times in 'Silk Stocking' Area

Herald Tribune 10-28-54

By W. GRANGER BLAIR

Two lawyers, one who is campaigning for re-election to a fifth term in the House of Representatives and one who is seeking a first term, are attracting considerable interest in the Seventeenth (Silk Stocking) Congressional District of Manhattan.

The incumbent is 56-year-old Frederic R. Coudert Jr., who first was elected to the House from the traditionally Republican Seventeenth in 1946. His opponent, the Democratic-Liberal candidate, is Anthony B. Akers, a 40-year-old transplanted Texan and World War II patrol-torpedo boat officer.

Since World War I, the Seventeenth has gone Democratic in Congressional elections only three times, the last time in 1936. For this reason Mr. Coudert feels that the voters "will not be misled" by what he terms are "attempts to distort and misinterpret my record."

Mr. Akers, understandably, sees things differently. He believes that as the candidate of the "outs," he will get the protest vote as well as that of the independents. He asserts that "if Mr. Harriman [Averell Harriman, Democratic-Liberal candidate for Governor] runs strong, I will win by 3,000 votes."

Includes Slums and Riches

The Seventeenth stretches from Greenwich Village to 100th Street, from Ninth Avenue to the East River, and among its well-known sections are Fifth, Park, and Madison Avenues. Within its regular borders are some of the town's best residences and highest-priced apartment houses—as well as some of the city's worst slums.

Coudert sees the central issue of the campaign in this light:

"The voters have the choice either of going forward with the Republican Administration, which has achieved a remarkable record, or of voting for a Democratic, Liberal, C. I. O., and A. D. A. candidate who is inevitably committed to support a restoration of Trumanism and all that has meant in the way of war, inflation, paralyzing taxation, and softness to Communists in government."

For Mr. Akers the issue is "one of responsibility of government," and he has criticized both Mr. Coudert's voting record and the legislative proposals advanced by the incumbent while in Congress.

Both Back Eisenhower

If elected, Mr. Akers says he "would support the President, certainly as much as my opponent has." Mr. Coudert responds that Mr. Akers "has stated repeatedly that he will vote with the Democrats to organize the House, which means sabotaging the Eisenhower Administration, and a return to Trumanism."

Mr. Coudert lives at 988 Fifth Avenue with his wife and two of their three children. A graduate of Columbia University in 1918 and Columbia Law School in 1922, he is a member of the law firm of Coudert Brothers.

Mr. Akers lives with his wife and two children at 920 Fifth Avenue. A graduate of the University of Texas in 1936, he moved to New York in 1938. He was in the Navy from 1940 to 1946, and was one of the patrol-torpedo boat officers who helped Gen. Douglas MacArthur escape from the Philippines. He is mentioned in the book "They Were Expendable."

In 1949 Mr. Akers was graduated from Columbia Law School.

Thrilled—And why shouldn't glamorous Mrs. Bessie Buchanan be thrilled? You would, too, if you had become the first Negro woman ever to become elected to New York's State Assembly. Mrs. Buchanan gives a victory smile over a pile of congratulatory telegrams.

Mrs. Bessie Buchanan Is Legislator

Courier Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 11-13-54

NEW YORK — Following the line that long ago gave her social and civic status in the community, Mrs. Bessie Buchanan swept to victory in her initial bid for political office becoming the first Negro woman to be elected to the State Assembly.

Defeating her equally glamorous Republican opponent, Mrs. Lucille Pickett, 22,399 to 6,013, Mrs. Buchanan was assured victory when she knocked out Assemblyman Leslie C. Turner for the Democratic nomination in September.

Generally acknowledged as uptown's top social leader, Mrs. Buchanan is the wife of Charles Buchanan, owner of the Savoy Ballroom.

FORMERLY AN actress, she left the theatre on her marriage to Mr. Buchanan, petite and beautiful, Mrs. Buchanan looks more like a woman in her thirties than 52.

For years she has made "best-dressed" lists throughout the country, and has often been paged to do guest modeling chores in fashion shows.

The new assembly lady has never permitted her wide social activities to interrupt her work with many civic and welfare agencies.

For a number of years she has been affiliated with Forest Neighborhood House in the Bronx. She is also a leader in the drive for funds for Minisink Town House and Camp Minisink.

SHE WORKED diligently for the St. Charles Community Center and for a number of other organizations devoted to the care and welfare of youth.

In her $7,500 a year seat in the Lower House of the State Legislature, Mrs. Buchanan says she hopes to open wedges for women in other branches of the Government.

She is especially interested in fighting for increased Workmen's Compensation and Unemployment Insurance benefits, curbs on juvenile delinquency, and greater care for foster children.

Too excited about her victory last week, Mrs. Buchanan could only say "thanks to everyone especially the women who helped in my campaign and to the leaders who gave the Democratic nomination to a woman."

She termed the election "the most wonderful experience I have ever had in my whole life."

Democratic Strength Makes Powell Sure Winner in Harlem

Thur. 10-28-54

By EMANUEL PERLMUTTER

The only question about the contest in Harlem's Sixteenth Congressional District is whether Democratic Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. will be re-elected by his usual overwhelming plurality.

The reason for this minor uncertainty is the fact that in a recent Senate investigation into Federal Housing Administration scandals, Mr. Powell was named as the recipient of an unpaid loan from a builder.

Harold C. Burton, the Republican nominee, thinks the incident will cost his opponent votes. Mr. Powell doesn't think so.

At the Senate Banking Committee hearing here it was brought out that Mr. Powell had received, but not paid back, a $3,000 loan from David Kent, builder of a Queens interracial apartment project. In addition, two of Mr. Powell's Federal secretaries were shown to be receiving $8,500 each a year in fees from the housing project.

Mr. Powell replied that the loan was a personal matter that had nothing to do with the housing agency. He denied doing political favors for Mr. Kent.

The New York Times Oct. 28, 1954

'Campaign' Lackadaisical

Surprisingly, Mr. Burton has not made a political issue of the housing testimony. Mr. Powell has also ignored the matter. In fact, neither candidate has done much campaigning.

The consensus in the district is that the dynamic 46-year-old Mr. Powell, a clergyman, will be elected to his sixth term without trouble. Early in his political career he won office on the American Labor party and Fusion tickets. Many believe he could be elected without party designation.

Mr. Powell, whose address is 435 Convent Avenue, is pretty much of an idol in Harlem and one of the most nationally publicized members of his race. He was the first Negro to be elected to the City Council and the first Negro from the East to go to Congress. In the past, he was often identified with left-wing causes, but he appears to have abandoned many of those views.

In 1952 Mr. Powell received 72,562 votes to 15,937 for the Republican candidate and 7,125 for the Liveral party nominee. He is being opposed again by the Liberals, who have nominated Formington Taylor, a civil service guard, to run against him.

Gains for Negroes Cited

Mr. Burton, a 66-year-old machine Republican, has been appealing for support on the argument that the Eisenhower Administration has improved the conditions of the Negro population both in respect to civil rights and on the economic front.

Secretary to Elections Commissioner David B. Costuma and Republican leader of the Twelfth Assembly District South, Mr. Burton has been a party stalwart for forty years and is vice chairman of the New York Republican County Committee. He is married, has five children and lives at 10 East 138th Street.

Mr. Powell is minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, which has a claimed membership of 15,000 and owns property valued at $750,000. He has a B. A. degree from Colgate, an M. A. from Columbia, and a D. D. from Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C. His wife is Hazel Scott, the jazz pianist and night club entertainer. They have a son, Adam Clayton Powell 3d.

The Democratic incumbent has been criticizing the Republican record on labor legislation and its conduct of foreign affairs.

Mr. Taylor, the Liberal candidate, is 55 years old and a member of the executive committee of the New York County organization of his party. He has been campaigning mainly on a promise to improve Federal aid to schools and housing. He is married, has no children, and lives at 10 East 138th Street.

Victorious Democrats in Important New York Posts

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Oliver Williams in assembly race

BROOKLYN, N.Y. — Designation of Oliver D. Williams, prominent Brooklyn lawyer, as the regular sixth organization's candidate or the State Senate, was announced last week by Assemblyman Bertram L. Baker, head of the United Action Democratic Association.

Mr. Williams

Mr. Williams will seek the seat allotted to the new 11th senatorial district which embraces the 6th, 10th and 17th assembly districts in Brooklyn.

Qualifications Cited

Selection of the Brooklyn-born attorney, who has practiced law and actively participated in community affairs for almost three decades, was made, said Assemblyman Baker, "because he is eminently qualified for this high position of service and responsibility.

Mr. Williams faces a primary contest in September within the regular organization. Challenging him for the nomination are Walter Cooke, leader of the 10th district, and Samuel Berman, sponsored by 17th A.D. leader, Vincent Carney.

Race Used As Weapon In N. C. Politics

RALEIGH, N. C. — (INS) — Democrats in North Carolina cast their ballots in a statewide primary climaxing one of the most unusual battles for the U. S. Senate which has ever been fought.

Sen. Alton Lennon, the incumbent, has flung charges at the challenger, former Governor W. Kerr Scott, for three months. Scott completely ignored the specific charges, and his opponent, until this week.

The hot war began two days ago over a newspaper political advertisement urging Negroes to "Vote for Scott, a friend of the Negro." Scott forces claimed it was planted by Lennon forces. Lennon supporters said a prominent Negro, who has supported Scott, was responsible for the ad.

Injection of the race issue in the campaign was expected to bring out a larger vote than was at first expetceed. The turnout in the state's 2,020 precincs was estimated at over 500,000, with polls open from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.

There are seven senatorial candidates. Only Alvin Wingfield, Jr., a retired typewriter salesman, was given any chance for good showing.

Besides a candidate for U. S. Senator, voters were picking five Congressmen, a State Treasurer, a State Insurance Commissioner, and numerous local officials.

MAN - WOMAN SEEK OFFICE

SPECIAL TO JOURNAL

GOLDSBORO — History was made here last week when two Negroes, a 40-year-old farmer and a retired school principal, filed for nomination to county political office.

Wade Durham, farmer of near Mt. Olive and Mrs. Maude M. Kornegay, former supervisor of County Negro Schools, filed respectively for seats of the Board of Commissioners and the County School Board to become the first Negroes to seek Wayne county political office in recent years.

Election officials could not recall any Negro candidates in previous county primaries, although last year Dr. M. E. DuBissette sought election to the Goldsboro Board of Aldermen in a city primary. He was seventh in a race for the five-man board. There were 15 candidates.

CANDIDATE GOT WHITE SUPPORT IN '52 RACE

The JOURNAL predicts that Dr. Hubert A. Eaton will win a seat on the New Hanover County Board of Education in the forthcoming Democratic Primary, to be held on May 29.

The JOURNAL predicts also that Dr. Eaton, outstanding civic leader, will again be accorded a large white vote as was given him in the 1952 election, when he missed a seat on the board by about 250 votes.

There is a healthy opinion, according to veteran politican observers, that white citizens of New Hanover County feel that a Negro should sit on the six-man board, in-as-much as Negro children make up at least 1-3 of the entire school enrollment of the county.

This democratic concept has been successful in contests for municipal posts.

Furthermore, it is a fact that Negro candidates, winners and losers, all over the South, have been given strong white backing.

If Negro Wilmington and New Hanover County arise to the occasion and exercise the duty of good citizens, veteran politicians concede Dr. Eaton's election.

However, Eaton's Campaign Headquarters weekly issue caution statements, advising the electorate to be enthusiastic but not over confident. The statements seem to be gaining attention, for campaign workers are busy getting folks on the election books.

The Thursday night meeting at St. Stephen AME Church was enthusiastic.

Weekly meetings will be held up until the time of election.

Thursday, May 13th's meeting will be at Mt. Olive AME Church at 8:30 p. m.

ELECT Dr. H. A. Eaton TO THE BOARD of EDUCATION

DR. EATON IS WAGING HARD CAMPAIGN

CAMPAIGN

The Thursday night meeting of the Eaton Campaign Committee at St. Luke AMEZ Church indicated that Dr. Hubert A. Eaton, candidate for the Board of Education, is waging a hard fight for a seat on that body.

Reports from block workers showed that the men and women who are working to get out a heavy registration and a huge vote for the physician are leaving no stones unturned to assure Dr. Eaton's election.

Overconfidence, however, has not entered the physicians camp. But, enthusiasm is present and according to one of the workers, thats what really counts.

Next workers' meeting is scheduled for Thursday, May 7, at St. Stephen's AME Church, 8:30 o'clock in the evening. The public is invited.

In the meantime, the Get-Out-The-Vote Campaign of the Business and Professional Men's Club has begun. 10,000 handbills urging Negroes how to register and vote have been issued, and a sound truck will be on the streets of Wilmington on the three Saturdays of registration and on election day.

The Business and Professional Mens' Club is non-partisan.

VOTERS REJECT DOCTOR'S BID

Negro voters of New Hanover County turned thumbs down a second time on the candidacy of Dr. Hubert A. Eaton, prominent physician and civic leader.

Dr. Eaton made his first bid for the board of education of New Hanover County, nearly one-half of the registered Negro voters failed to support Dr. Eaton by either remaining at home or not casting ballots for him.

Dr. Eaton was last in a six-man race for 3 seats. He got 4,234 votes.

A well directed and organized campaign had been mapped out in Dr. Eaton's behalf, and enthusiasm seemed to have been at a high point. Forums, a sound truck for registration, handbills, voters' clinics, etc. were inaugurated to get a large registration.

Negro registration figures hit an all-time high, but the voters did not return to the polls.

At press time, Dr. Eaton expressed himself as being grateful for the support which he got and intimated that he would not again make the race.

Dr. Eaton has proven himself an outstanding civic worker in the past three or four years, and a large number of Negroes have expressed their keen regret that he failed to win.

TheJOURNAL gave the medico all support possible.

Southern Tradition

The notion that some sort of strange leftward swing in the South has taken place in recent Southern elections seems to be preoccupying Northern commentators. The truth is that the nomination and renomination of liberals for the Senate by Southern Democrats is reaffirmation of the true liberal tradition of Southern Democrats.

Arthur Krock of The New York Times was one of those recently commenting about this matter. He said:

> Democratic primaries in the South have seriously raised the questions whether the day of the party conservatives is now ending and whether the Southern Democracy is about to join the Northern on the left side of the American political scene. The overwhelming majority of Democrats occupied that area in the first stages of the New Deal. But as its radicalism increased, a movement which reached its peak under President Truman and the Fair Deal, many Southerners returned to the more moderate political philosophy of the Wilson Administration. The recent primaries in North Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee and Arkansas gave superficial evidence, at least, that the immunity of the Southern conservatives may soon be a thing of the past.

Senator Estes Kefauver calls himself a "liberal" as contrasted with a conservative. The challenger of his renomination, Representative Pat Sutton, did his best to paint Kefauver's domestic record in the most vivid radical colors, and attacked him as an "internationalist" who would submerge the U.S. in a world government. Though there was substance in some of the attack, Kefauver won a smashing endorsement from the Democrats of Tennessee. In view of these events, it is not surprising that Democrats are wondering whether the Southern conservatives, whom neither a Roosevelt nor Truman could dislodge from office, are now nearing the close of one of their chapters in political history.

The truth, of course, is that Democratic liberalism began in the South with Thomas Jefferson. Furthermore in this century liberal Southern Democrats forced the nominations of Bryan, Wilson and FDR in Democratic national conventions over the opposition of the conservative Democrats in the state of Mr. Krock's Times.

What is happening in the South today is that there is new resentment against Republicans who they had been trying before, to make a Republican Party out of the Democratic Party in the South. There is a new surge against such conservatives in the South today but it takes the form of the reassertion of the liberal traditions of the South in the selection of Southern liberals for Southern leadership.

10-Cent Cigar, $41,372 Listed By Scott as Campaign Gifts

Election Put Him $16,113 in Red, N.C. Senator-Nominee Reports

By JAY JENKINS

Staff Writer, Raleigh News and Observer
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

RALEIGH, N.C., June 26—Among the contributions listed by U.S. Senator-nominate W. Kerr Scott in his campaign financial report was the gift of a 10-cent cigar from a political enemy.

This whimsical item on the credit ledger was joined by hard cash to the tune of $41,372.72. Despite the contributions, Scott in his report said his campaign cost $57,485.05, leaving him $16,113.33 in the red.

U.S. Senator Alton A. Lennon, who was unseated by Scott, also had to use red ink. Lennon said he spent $39,176.39, which was $748.03 more than he collected from supporters.

Prior to 1951, when a law was enacted removing limits of expenditures for political campaigns, neither Scott nor Lennon legally could have spent more than $15,000 — the salary of a Senator for one year. The old law limited expenses of the office-seeker to the salary for one year in the office sought.

Hypocrisy Practiced

Under the old law, hypocrisy was an essential element of any statewide political campaign. A candidate for a major office simply could not operate under it. Advertising, headquarters space, travel, office personnel — any one of these items actually could cost as much as the officeholder would be paid in salary for a year.

Yet when the time came for the candidate to file his financial report, he always followed the lead of the other candidates and listed his expenses as less than the limit. This mockery of the truth, glaring even among the wildest of political shenanigans, reached its zenith in the two bitterly contested primaries in 1950 between the late Sen. Willis Smith and Dr. Frank P. Graham. The two primaries are counted the most expensive in the history of the state — but the expense reports did not show it. The 1951 law followed.

NORTH CAROLINA

The anatomy of the political dollar, while not fully exposed, can be recognized in the Scott-Lennon reports. They spent a total of nearly $56,000 on advertising and printing in the Democratic primary, and the biggest slice of the melon — $18,703.55—went to radio and television. Newspapers, which unlike radio and television stations carried free the products of the publicity mills, collected a total of $9,686.51 for advertising.

Printing cost the two candidates a total of $17,869.17, and their headquarters space in two hotels took $5,709.88 in rent. Other combined bills: Telephone, $6,308.50; telegrams, $777.28, and postage, $7,348.71.

Scott's average contribution was about one-third that of Lennon. It required 847 contributors to make up the $41.372.72 given Scott while 238 accounted for Lennon's $34,428.36. Top contributors on both sides gave $1,000 but they were few.

Law Violation

It is a misdemeanor, under state law, for a corporation to contribute to a candidate's campaign fund. Both Scott and Lennon listed corporations as contributors. No action has been taken against the corporations.

There was one notable difference in the two reports. Scott listed $8,739.54 as paid in salaries to his headquarters staff (including two publicity men) during April and May. Lennon did not list any money as paid out in salaries to his staff, comparable in size to Scott's, and according to the report his publicity man got only $50 "for advertising."

Prior to the 1951 law taking the lid off expenditures, the general practice in evading the old law took the form of contributions made to and spent by persons other than the candidates or their managers. The practice still continues under the new law, but a degree of hypocrisy has been removed by it.

NCC Professor, 3 Other Negroes in Race for Durham Education Board

DURHAM, N. C. — (ANP) — Two North Carolina college professors and three other local citizens won nominations along with two whites for a vacancy on the Durham City Board of Education recently.

They are Dr. C. E. Boulware, professor of mathematics and James T. Taylor of the college's psychology department, A. T. Spaulding and G. W. Cox, insurance officials, and J. H. Wheeler, a banker.

The white nominees are Mrs. C. R. Hauser, wife of Duke university chemistry professor, and C. B. Sessoms, director of the Claims Department of the Hospital Care Association of Durham.

The Negro nominees were recommended by five local organizations, including the Durham PTA (Negro) council and the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs.

Councilwoman wins libel suit

Gets $5Gs damages from her accuser

CANTON, Ohio— Councilwoman Esther Archer last week was awarded $5,000 damages for malicious libel resulting from blackmail charges brought by a former member of the city council.

Mrs. Archer, second colored woman to serve on the council and recently reelected for a fourth term, wept following the verdict. She had brought a $102,000 suit against Fred Chat, the former councilman.

Blackmail Charge

The case was a result of charges against Mrs. Archer three years ago that she collected $25 a month from a caretaker of the city dump who earned $25 a week.

The caretaker, who originally testified in support of the charges, later withdrew his statements. He said he had been induced to make the statements to blacken Mrs. Archer's reputation.

Favor Thomas To Win Ohio Assembly Seat

TOLEDO, Ohio — Political observers here give William N. Thomas, 42-year-old lawyer, a good chance to become the first Toledo Negro ever to be elected to the Ohio General Assembly.

Entered in a 10-man field for 5 seats, for state representative, Thomas has been endorsed by the Lucas County Republican executive committee. He has conducted a vigorous city-wide campaign.

Herman Miller, county chairman told a Republican rally in the Indiana ave. YMCA, that all precincts in the city would back Thomas. He pointed out that the city's so-called silk stocking district — Ottawa Hills — swung the balance in Thomas' favor in the GOP primary. Thomas finished fifth in the primary.

Ohio Attorney Enters Race For Assembly Post

TOLEDO, Ohio —(ANP)—William N. Thomas, 42-year old attorney, is making a strong bid to become the first Negro to be elected to the Ohio General Assembly from Lucas county.

Political observers regard his chance this year as good. Endorsed by the Republican party, Thomas is making a strong city-wide campaign.

At a recent rally in the Indiana Ave. YMCA, Herman Miller, county chairman, declared that Thomas would receive party support from all wards and precidted that Ottawa Hills—the so called silk-stocking GOP district, would go down the line for him as it did in the party's primary.

John Landry, Thomas' campaign chairman, announced that a door-bell ringing canvass will be made on election day Nov. 2. He said a motorcade will be provided to carry voters to the polls. Three city-wide groups are working in behalf of Thomas, including a women's group, a young people's group and the Charles Cottril Republican Club

Negro Loses Suit Against Oklahoma Election Board

Courier Journal

Oklahoma City, Oct. 19 (AP)—Federal District Judge Stephen S. Chandler today held that the Oklahoma law requiring the word, Negro, after a candidate's name was not discrimination and a violation of constitutional rights.

Wed. 10-20-54

Chandler dismissed the suit, a $200,000 damage action by A. B. McDonald, Oklahoma City Negro real-estate operator.

Louisville, Ky.

The judge also held that Mr. Donald had not been deprived of equal protection under the law and that federal courts do not have jurisdiction in the case.

McDonald sued members of the Oklahoma Election Board because the word, Negro, appeared in parenthesis after his name last July on the Democratic ballot as a candidate for United States Senator. State election laws demand this procedure for Negro candidates.

Law Requiring 'Negro' After Candidate's Name Upheld

Wed. 10-20-54

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 19 (AP)—Federal District Judge Stephen S. Chandler today held that the Oklahoma law requiring the word Negro after a Negro candidate's name was not discrimination and a violation of constitutional rights.

Judge Chandler dismissed the suit, a $200,000 damage action by A. B. McDonald, Oklahoma City real estate operator.

The Judge also held that Mr. McDonald had not been deprived of equal protection under the law and that Federal courts did not have jurisdiction in the case.

Mr. McDonald sued members of the Oklahoma Election Board because the word "Negro" appeared in parenthesis after his name last July on the Democratic ballot as a candidate for United States Senator.

Negro Lawyer Candidate Files Election Suit

Advocate

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 9—A $200,000 lawsuit against the State Election Board was filed yesterday by a Negro lawyer attacking the required designation of Negroes on Oklahoma ballots.

The plaintiff, A. B. McDonald, was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator in the July 6 primary election won by Sen. Robert S. Kerr.

McDonald bases his suit on the word "Negro" placed after his name on ballots, and alleges the 1937 state legislative act providing such listing is unconstitutional and amounts to segregation in violation of federal laws.

City Commissioner

NOWATA, Okla. (ANP)—John H. Morgan, a plastering and cement contractor, defeated three white candidates to win the post of city commissioner by a majority of 88 votes.

Morgan will serve in the city's second ward. The new city commissioner takes an active part in community affairs. He is a member of Mt. Olive Baptist church and Masons.

Nowata Elects Negro City Councilman

Election of a Negro commissioner in Nowata for the first time in the city's history featured Oklahoma municipal elections yesterday.

Lack of voter interest was displayed by a light vote in most cities.

John H. Morgan, plastering contractor, was the successful Negro candidate at Nowata. He defeated three opponents by a majority of 88 votes in the second ward.

Negro Candidate Asks For $15,000 In Damage Suit

RED BIRD.—Jeff McHenry, recent candidate for governor of Oklahoma, has filed a suit in court demanding that the State of Oklahoma pay him $15,000 in damages because of the use of the term "Negro" beside his name on the ballot.

This is the second case of this type filed by a Negro. A. B. McDonald, Oklahoma City, who filed for U. S. senate, filed an identical action, for the same reason, but asked for $200,000.

Why Is Kerr Silent?

Statements to the effect someone is attempting to mislead the Negroes of Oklahoma about United States Senator Kerr, which were made last week in another publication are entirely beside the facts, declared Editor Roscoe Dunjee this week. The charge has been made the Black Dispatch has wilfully and maliciously distorted the truth in supporting Roy Turner to succeed Kerr, cannot be supported by the record, Dunjee continued.

All one has to do to fully advise himself regarding Kerr's record on civil rights is to address a letter to the Washington Bureau, NAACP, and the same and identical information we published two weeks ago will be reported in the files of the Washington Bureau.

The NAACP keeps its office in Washington busy compiling the record of senators and congressmen, and it is not the fault of the Black Dispatch that Kerr voted to support filibusters and a segregated army.

In order that there will be no mistake, the Blask Dispatch herewith republishes Kerr's senate record the past six years, as compiled by Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau, NAACP. Mr. Mitchell can be reached by addressing a letter to 100 Massachusetts Avenue NW, Washington, D. C.

Below we publish the voting record of Senator Robert S. Kerr just as it was sent to the office of the Black Dispatch by Mr. Mitchell:

Dear Mr. Dunjee

Your letter came today, but I did not get to read mail until after our girls had left for the day. Hence, I must apologize for typing this letter myself. However, the Kerr record is as follows:

He supported the filibuster by voting against the Barkley cloture ruling on March 11, 1949. As you will remember, the Vice President made a ruling that cloture applied to a motion to take up a bill. The southern group appealed from the chair's ruling. They won and Kerr helped them. This paved the way for the present senate rule which requires 64 votes to stop a filibuster. He against voted with the filibuster group on May 19, 1950 and July 12, 1950. On these two dates he was voting to prevent cloture in the anti-FEPC debate. He voted for segregation in the armed services on June 21, 1950. On March 7, 1951, he voted against an amendment proposed by Senator Lehman of New York which would have given protection to servicemen against physical attacks by civilians and police officers where such attacks are based on race. He voted against Alaska statehood by supporting a motion to send the bill back to committee on February 27, 1952. He again voted for filibusters by supporting a Taft move to table a rules change proposal on January 7, 1953.

I do not have a record of his absenteeism, but I will try to get it next week.

Best regards,

CLARENCE MITCHELL.

If Clarence Mitchell has in any way misled the people of this state by sending this information to the Black Dispatch, the Black Dispatch wishes to apologize to the Senator, but before we fully make the apology we believe the Senator should accept our invitation to correct the Mitchell statement in these columns.

Surely, Negroes of Oklahoma are not going to accept statements made by Negro apologists while Senator Kerr remains silent. This is a very important matter and we think it is of sufficient moment for Senator Kerr to give same special attention.

What we would like for Mr. Kerr to do is to tell Negroes why, when he talks to white audiences, he tells them Roy Turner has said he will vote for cloture if he reaches the senate. There could be no consistency in referring to this position taken by Mr. Turner other than the fact the senior senator from Oklahoma wants his audience to know that he will vote against cloture. Everywhere in the state the Senator talks these days he points out that Roy Turner has said he will vote for cloture.

There is not much profit the fifteen million Negroes of the United States can get out of Supreme Court decisions if after the court hits race prejudice a death blow, Negroes turn right around and send to the legislative branch of government a man who opposes everything for which the NAACP stands.

Chickasha Man, Joe Prince Seeks Commission Post

CHICKASHA — Joe Prince, prominent Chickasha businessman and former president of the commerce, candidate for corporation commissioner on the Democratic ticket, recently posed the important question, "Who Owns the Corporation Commission—the utilities or the People?"

A resident of Oklahoma for 50 years, Prince said he decided that the people of Oklahoma needed a change in personnel of the Corporation Commission "last year when and inconscienable and arbitrary raise in rates was granted the Consolidated Utilities company in Chickasha and the some 30-odd towns which this distributing company serves in Southwestern Oklahoma."

Prince said "the almost unthinkable increase was granted despite the fact 2,567 gas users signed a petition opposing the unreasonable hike in the rate."

"Application for gas rates raises were applied for in Oklahoma City last year," he continued, "and I am going to insist a searching analysis and examination be made of company records to determine whether requested increases are justified, and I am going to insist that a true picture of the capital structure of all utility companies be spread upon the records of the Corporation Commission so that scientific approach and study can be made in the interest of both the people and the utility companies."

Prince who seeks the support of every public-spirited citizen in the July 6 Democratic primary, has been a member of the Baptist church for 40 years, a deacon of the same church for 32 years, and a member of the Sunday school for 34 years.

He is a member of the First Baptist church of Chickasha, where the Rev. R. S. Corbin is pastor. He teaches the Men's Bible class, is president of the Brotherhood, and leader of the boys' organization of First Baptist church.

A homeowner and taxpayer in Grady county, he has worked on many civic and interracial organizational and committee projects throughout the county. He is president of the Christian Funeral home of Chickasha.

Roy Turner's Record

It is not enough to assume a negative attitude on questions. In every instance there should be some positive reasons why one is for the cause he supports. In supporting Roy Turner for the senate, Negro voters should keep in mind in Turner they have a candidate who agrees if he reaches the senate he will vote for cloture. The candidate under his signature has written this statement in clear understandable language, and it now resides in the files of the Black Dispatch. J. J. Simmons has a copy of this instrument, as well as Dr. H. W. Williamston, Idabel. This is no secret hidden solely in the deep recesses of the Black Dispatch office. Black Dispatch

As governor, Roy Turner, as did the attorney general, sought to uphold and enforce the laws of the state, but since the high court has fundamentally reinterpreted the constitution, Roy Turner as a loyal American believes he should follow through in the senate with legislation which will sustain the views of the courts. Okla. P. 3 Col 4 a(2)

But getting back to Roy Turner's regime as governor, this publication believes there is reflected there one of the best and clearest pictures of what he has in mind than can be drawn in any other way. A great many things happened during the Turner administration which were of incalculable advantage to the Negroes of Oklahoma.

Take Langston university, for instance. That institution was accredited during the Turner administration, and this incidentally was one of the Kerr promises, in which Kerr while governer failed the Negroes of this state. To accomplish this end Governor Turner agreed with the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, the accrediting agency, that he would end political patronage on the Langston campus. Prior to the Turner administration Langston university could always expect, and usually received a political turnover every four years. Dr. Harrison has remained at Langston over this long period of years because of the Turner comopact with the North Central not to interfere with the presidency of that institution every time the wind blows in Oklahoma. Oklahoma City

In addition to this the physical plant at Langston had to be renovated and improved. Those beautiful paved highways at Langston university are the work of Governor Turner's hands, as well as the health and physical education building, the auditorium-classroom building and the new water works system. Governor Turner substituted bombast and talk with action, and as a result Langston university became for the first time in its history an accredited educational institution. Gone are the days when every four years a half dozen peanut politicians would put on their alpaca coats and announce themselves candidates for the presidency of Langston university. Sat 6-26-54

But the place where Governor Turner really exhibited his spirit of fairness was in the expenditure of much of the $35,000,000 bond issue for the educational and eleemosynary institutions of the state. All Negroes know prior to that time mental defectives whose faces were black swarmed the highways of this state, and that Henry Argo, a mental defective, was lynched at Chickasha several years ago. Oklahoma state government up to the administration of Governor Turner had been utterly delinquent along this line.

The governor spent the better part of a half million dollars to protect future Henry Argos in Oklahoma. As a matter of fact he devoted almost one and a half million dollars to not only build this home for mental defectives, but to enlarge and improve the facilities for the insane, the incorrigible girls, and the deaf, blind and orphan children at the consolidated institutions at Taft. Figures covering what was done along this line are completely spell out in a front page article in this issue of the Black Dispatch. When the Kerr hirelings come around during the next two weeks to talk about what Kerr did do, ask them to tell you why Kerr failed on so many of the promises he did make to the Negroes of Oklahoma. Ask them why Kerr failed to place Negroes on draft boards as he faithfully promised when a candidate for governor. Ask them why did Kerr promise the Federated Club women of Oklahoma to separate the three state institutions at Taft and ended in tying them firmly together until this good day. Ask them why Kerr failed to get Langston university accredited as he said he would. Then show these Kerr workers what state records prove that Turner did while holding the office of governor,

Negro Community Leaders Rally To Assure Election Of Benefactor Who Erased Many Racial Barriers

Support for Senator Robert S. Kerr in his race for a second term in the United States Senate appeared to be reaching proportions of a landslide in many sections of the state this week as farmers, older citizens, colored voters and wage earners of all classes studied the record of the senior Senator during his first term. P. 4

It is conceded in virtually all sections of the state that Senator Kerr is the only candidate with a record of accomplishment and a program of progress planned to benefit all the people.

Kerr's record in behalf of Negro citizens speaks for itself and proves that greater benefits were received by colored citizens during the Kerr administration as governor than during any similar period since Statehood. Oklahoma

His record establishes beyond any question that Senator Kerr is NOW and always has been a friend of the people. As Governor, and as a generous Christian citizen he provided new opportunities and historic benefits for Colored Americans. The impact of his administration is shown in the improved condition of the schools, churches, hospitals and medical facilities.

Senator Kerr is known to have contributed of his time, money and energy in helping practically all Negro churches in the state. He has shared his wealth with the people in hundreds of ways, and on many occasions he has travelled great distance to dedicate a school or a church, or to help in some other enterprise for Negro citizens.

Kerr's chief opponent also is a very wealthy man, but the records are scant to show that he has participated in such affairs, or has given either of his time or money to help the progress of the Negroes.

While he was Governor Kerr created jobs in the state government for Negroes and he personally recommended and approved legislation to benefit the people.

During his regime Negro teachers got salary increases to double nearly the previous amounts, and since that time the teachers have been paid on an equal basis with the taachers in the schools for white children.

Kerr established Negroes in the school lunch program, and he named a Negro state supervisor on a 12-month salary basis.

He assigned a Negro high school inspector with offices at the state capitol and assured great improvements for the schools.

Kerr created the position of Enabling the colored citizens to have their own inspector of beauty shops, barber shops and other similar places of business.

A Negro worked out of the office of Governor Kerr as a special investigator. Kerr sponsored legislation to provide the money for extensive improvements at Langston University and made it possible for that institution to later be accredited by the North Central Association—an accomplishment that Kerr's opponent now claims as a major reason for asking for the Negro vote.

As Governor, Kerr set up the manual training and industrial arts departments at the training school for boys at Boley. The inauguration of the departments has since made it possible for Negro Boys To Emerge From the institution with the knowledge and skill to get jobs and become good citizens.

Kerr has always faithfully fulfilled his promises and obligations to Negro citizens, and his programs—while Governor and as Senator—have been pointed directly for the benefit of the rank and file of citizens, Negroes on an equal basis with all other American citizens.

The benefits to the people of Kerr's program have compassed the entire citizenship of the state in the way of his proposed Square Deal—for the farmers, the old folks, for labor and business and for the building, development and industrializing of the states.

FEPC law assured by voters in Pa.

New American 6/

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

PHILADELPHIA

State Senator George M. Leader led the Democratic forces of Pennsylvania to a stunning upset victory over Lieut.-Gov. Lloyd H. Wood and the Republican Party, according to unofficial election returns tabulated late Tuesday night.

Statewide unofficial returns at midnight gave the Democrats a lead of 230,00 votes, with 3,792 of 8,641 precincts reporting.

Shortly before midnight Lieutenant Governor Wood conceded defeat.

Baltimore Md.

The bulk of the votes which put Leader and his Democratic running mates in office came from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh where the colored vote is an important political factor.

For example, 14 predominantly colored wards iin Philadelphia gave Leader 128,000, while Wood received 64,000.

IT WAS this vote, according to experienced political observers, which substantially tipped the contest in favor of the Democrats.

Sat. 11-13-54

Further, the swing to the Democrats was interpreted as a protest against the failure of the Republicans to enact a fair employment practices law, the state sales tax enacted by the GOP and increasing unemployment throughout the state.

In addition to Governor-elect Leader, state-wide Democratic candidates elected to office are:

Lieutenant-Governor

Roy E. Furman, of Greene County, former State House Speaker.

Secretary of Internal Affairs

Miss Genevieve Blatt of Pittsburgh, secretary of the State Democratic State Committee.

Judge of Superior Court

President Judge Chester H. Rhodes and Judge F. Clair Ross, both having served terms on the appellate bench.

Judge Robert E. Woodside, who was nominated by both parties, also was re-named.

— o O o —

THE DEMOCRATIC sweep also cut the Republican representation in Congress.

Prior to election the Congressional representation from Pennsylvania was 19 Republicans and 11 Democrats.

In the Fourth District, W. Beverly Carter, the lone colored candidate for Congress, lost his bid to unseat Earl Chudoff, Democratic incumbent. The vote was 59,905 for Chudoff, 31,482 for Carter.

The Republicans also are believed to have lost control of the State Legislature.

If complete returns show this to be true, all pre-election calculations will have been upset.

A total of 25 state senators and 210 members of the House were elected.

With the Republicans, having a minimum of 15 holdovers in the Senate, pre-election predictions were that the party could easily win 14 of the 25 seats at stake and thereby retain control of the upper chamber.

AS WAS expected, the five colored candidates for the House were elected by Philadelphia voters.

They are:

Fifth district (wards 3-4-5-7-8-30) Granville E. Jones.

Eighth district (wards 7-20), Samuel Floyd.

Tenth district (wards 9-47) J, Susie Monroe.

Eleventh district (ward 32) Thompson Pettigrew.

Twenty - sixth district (ward 44) Sarah A. Anderson.

The election of the Democrats is seen as assurance that the next Pennsylvania Legislature will enact a FEPC law.

Prior to Tuesday's voting, both Leader and Furan came out strongly in favor of such a law.

Seeks seat on city council

COLUMBIA, S.C. (ANP)—The Rev. William M. Bowman, 39, last week tossed his hat into the race for a position on the Columbia City Council.

He is the second of his race to seek a council position in recent years The first, A. P. Williams, an undertaker, ran in the race four years ago, ending in last place.

Mr. Bowman contends that the best possible way to sell colored people on the South is to elect one of them to city council.

"Best Public Relations"

He said the election would serve as "the best possible public relations" in demonstrating that "The greatest opportunities for colored people are right here in the South."

His campaign speeches will attempt to point up the good side of conditions in the South. This he hopes, will offset some of the unfavorable publicity which has tended to stress only the bad side.

Not NAACP Member

Pointing out that he is not an active member of the NAACP, Mr. Bowman said he is not an organization candidate. He is appealing for support of white people as well as colored people.

Colored people in Columbia could well send Bowman to the capital for they are the largest percentage-populated city of colored in the state.

There are 31243 here out of a total population of 86.914.

Political Hypocrisy in S.C. Blasted by Militant Lawyer

Courier Sat-11-27-54 Pm

Pittsburgh, Pa.

GREENVILLE, S.C.—In an exclusive interview with the Courier last week, John Bolt Culbertson blasted the "political hypocrisy" of white candidates for public office

EDITOR'S NOTE—John Bolt Culbertson, prominent South Carolina lawyer, whose family roots are bedded in Pennsylvania soil, has met the enemies of fair play on their own battleground, and has been fighting them for years.

A white man, he believes in the principles of "first-class citizenship" as expressed by the NAACP. He has toured the state, speaking before Negro groups—at his own expense—and vows he'll continue the battle until South Carolina becomes a "decent state for all of its citizens to live in."

in this state . . . and urged Negro voters "to vote against everybody in office."

Culbertson's tirade was the aftermath of an expose, (pictured above) in which Edgar A. Brown was defeated in his race for the U. S. Senate by Dixiecrat Strom Thurmond.

South Carolina Democrats, in a frantic attempt to defeat Thurmond, purchased 50,000 political supplements prepared by the Courier, and attached the message above, in an effort to appeal to the "white supremacy" prejudice of white voters.

IT NOW appears that the Negro voters of this state . . . who voted 90 per cent for Brown . . . have found themselves all dressed up, with nowhere to go. Certainly, if this propaganda was used with Brown's knowledge, it proves he is just as much anti-Negro as Thurmond.

Thurmond, realizing he could not get the Negro vote, did not hesitate to announce his position.

A check of the records will reveal, according to Culbertson, that when Governor Thurmond did play with the idea that he could corrall the Negro vote . . . and the same time condemning Negroes to white audiences.

Ironically, he made an appointment . . . the first since Reconstruction Days . . . a Negro doctor in Charleston, S. C., to a medical board, and tried to keep it a secret. At that time, there was a heavy Negro registration in that city, and this group was the most politically active in the state.

THURMOND MADE the appointment in the hope of getting this vote, but when he saw it was politically expedient to ride the anti-Negro train, he had no hesitancy in doing so, when he ran against Senator Johnson. Out on a limb, the Negro had to accept Johnson as the lesser of two evils.

"I hope to see the day come when both factions of the South Carolina Democratic party will be compelled to openly bid for the Negro vote," Mr. Culbertson continued.

"Both sides are now acting in a most hypocritical manner," he stated.

"In Lee County, the home of Senator Baskin, the Negro outnumbers the white about three to one. Senator Baskin was the defendant as state chairman of the S. C. Democratic party in the Elmore case, where Judge Waring opened up the 'white primary' to the Negro.

"Senator Baskin made many speeches over the state denouncing the NAACP and all it stands for. Yet, in his bid for re-election to the State Senate last summer, he slipped around and dealt with certain Negro leaders he had been condemning and secured the Negro bloc vote in his county. This was the difference. Without it, he would have been defeated; with it, he was re-elected.

"I TRIED to persuade Negro leaders to support his opponent who was just as anti-Negro as Baskin, but when I saw they had set their minds on it, I kept my mouth closed.

"The same picture applies to other rural counties, with the result that several State Senators are in office now because they got the Negro vote. They won't admit it. Also in these counties with the largest Negro population, Negroes' basic civil rights are violated."

Here are some of the abuses suffered by Negroes, which could be changed if they used the ballot effectively, as tabulated by Mr. Culbertson.

1. No Negroes on juries.
2. No state jobs above menials.
3. Knowledge by Negroes that the men they help elect use every device that can be dreamed of to keep Negroes out of white state-supported colleges and universities.
4. Foreign students go to schools which exclude American Negro students.
5. No Negroes in Clemson Agricultural College, although the state has 15,000 Negro farm owners.

Mr. Culbertson's final blast:

"The proper policy, under present conditions in South Carolina, would be for Negroes to vote against EVERYBODY in office. In this way, Negro voters could knock out some of this deceit and hypocrisy."

Oak Ridge Councilman, Dr. Stewart, Confident In Face Of Recall

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — (SNS) — Chicago born Dr. Albert Stewart, Oak Ridge chemist and councilman, said in an interview with the Independent Call that in his opinion the recall petition initiated by a small segment of the populace of Oak Ridge would not get very far.

This is Dr. Stewart's first joust into politics. He said it was quite an experience to be the only Negro member of a southern city council. It was Dr. Stewart who seconded the motion of the resolution to integrate the schools of the Atomic City.

After the resolution was passed and forwarded to the Atomic Energy Commission upon action Dr. Stewart and his family received threatening telephone calls and had for a short while a police guard.

The petition was headed by Mr. E. J. Wyatt, who contends the resolution is not a true representation of the citizens. The petition was signed by 100 citizens; there are 30,000 people living in Oak Ridge.

Dr. Stewart is a candidate for the man of the year in the Atomic City. Among other things Dr. Stewart is a part-time instructor in physics at Knoxville College.

In a recent meeting the council passed another resolution requiring two readings of all important business to be passed by a majority vote. The resolution is to be retroactive and will affect the resolution passed by the council in regards to integration.

Judge Seeking Governorship On 'White Supremacy' Plank

Segregation Issue Also Injected In Sutton-Kefauver Campaign

By JOE HATCHER

Staff Writer, The Nashville Tennessean
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26—The U. S. Supreme Court's antisegregation decision has been plummeted into the upcoming Democratic primaries in Tennessee—perhaps as a major factor in heating up the races at least.

Chattanooga's Criminal Judge Raulston Schoolfield, who was qualified quietly just before the June 6 deadline in the governor's race, sailed his big "white supremacy" sombrero into the gubernatorial ring the past week.

Judge Schoolfield indicates that he will have only one issue, defy all efforts to abolish segregation in the state's public schools—or in any other phase of living.

Keeps Judgeship

With his belated announcement that he would make the race, Schoolfield merely adjourned his criminal court until September, and did not resign his judgeship, which has until 1958 to run.

Judge Schoolfield has been a "fire-brand" of politics in Hamilton County for years. He ran for several offices including district attorney general before 1948. Then he became a "reform" candidate opposing a criminal judge appointed to fill out an unexpired term, and reportedly close to the Ku Klux Klan. Schoolfield was elected and reelected in 1950 for a full 8-year term. However, he has since supported a candidate for congress and others in lesser races who have been soundly defeated.

He was for Gov. Gordon Browning in 1948 against Gov. Jim McCord, whose appointee he defeated for the criminal court. He supported state Sen. Clifford Allen in 1950 against Browning, and Memphis' Clifford Pierce in 1952. He is antiadministration in the city of Chattanooga, but opposed the previous city administration also.

A 'Spellbinder'

Thus his position in the upcoming gubernatorial race is completely speculative. He is little known outside the Chattanooga area, and highly controversial there.

He will wage a vigorous campaign, he says, and that means an emotionally pitched race on the segregation issues by an "old fashioned spellbinder."

Peculiarly, Schoolfield has had considerable strength among the Negro voters of Hamilton County since his fight on the Klan in 1948. Now he is advocating complete, rigid segregation beyond the public school question.

He is mapping a state-wide radio and TV campaign, and probably a spectacular helicopter speaking drive in the comparatively brief time remaining before August 5. He will seek campaign funds from small contributors over Tennessee and in neighboring states, it is indicated.

There are reports also that Texas millionaire H. L. Hunt will be a contributing factor as he is supposedly in U.S. Rep. Pat Sutton's campaign against Sen. Estes Kefauver.

Sutton incidentally is campaigning against Kefauver on a segregation platform much similar to that outlined by Schoolfield, who has conferred with Sutton on occasion.

Challenged Candidates

Schoolfield laid the groundwork for his candidacy some time ago by challenging both Gov. Frank Clement and former Gov. Gordon Browning to make definite statements on their positions or face a campaign on that issue.

Browning did declare his support of segregation and urged the races to work out the problem by agreement to continue segregated schools. His statement that he would preserve segregation "within the law" fell short of Schoolfield's demands. Gov. Clement merely urged long study "and calm approach" without committing himself in either direction. He is being charged with "riding both sides," courting the Negro vote on the one hand and assuring white voters of strong efforts for maintaining segregation.

Rep. Sutton's campaign against Sen. Kefauver got a shot in the arm, almost simultaneously with Schoolfield's entry in the governor's race, when former U.S. Sen. K. D. McKellar announced his support of Sutton against Kefauver.

Sen. McKellar was defeated by young Albert Gore in 1952 after 36 years' record-breaking service in the Senate. He has been in quiet retirement since his defeat until his announced support of Sutton. McKellar fought Kefauver in his 1948 campaign, and the two never joined forces in the Senate after McKellar did not introduce his new colleague as is customary.

TEXANS CAST VOTE IN BITTER RUNOFF

Shivers and Yarborough Fight Battle of 'Conservatives' Against 'Loyalists'

BY GLADWIN HILL

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Aug. 28 — Texans went to the polls today to select their Governor for the next two years and fight the latest battle in the "Dixiecrat" uprising that rocked the national political scene in 1952.

The contenders, in a "million-dolar" Democratic run-off primary that had aroused more interest than perhaps any other non-Presidential election in the state's history, were Gov. Allan Shivers and Ralph W. Yarborough, Austin lawyer. Victory in the primary is equivalent to election.

The candidates represented, respectively, the conservative "States' Rights" wing of the party, which swung Texas—along with Tennessee, Florida and Virginia—for General Eisenhower in 1952; and the regular "loyal" Democrats, allied ideologically with the main body of the party in the North.

"Independence" Is Issue

The fundamental issue between the two factions was the question of Texas "independence" in matters ranging from party regularity to labor-management relations.

Governor Shivers contended that his opponent represented a variety of Northern "interests," ranging from political leftists to "labor bosses" and exponents of racial desegregation anxious to gain sway in Texas. He argued that their influence should be excluded, and that the Democratic party should guard its freedom of initiative to repeat its 1952 bolt if necessary in defense of state interests.

Mr. Yarborough maintained that the Governor, seeking an unprecedented third two-year term, was trying to perpetuate a dictatorial domination of the State that had led him into grievous party disloyalty and maladministration.

The conflict paralleled similar factional cleavage in other southern states, among which, in recent primaries in North Carolina and Alabama, the liberal regular Democrats have scored victories that hinted at a new interregional party rapprochement.

Although the Eisenhower Administration was not an issue in the contest, the outcome was bound to affect the Administration. Governor Shivers has been identified with the President ever since 1952; much Administration support has come from the southern conservative Democrats; and the State will have an important role in the 1956 national election manouvering.

Yarborough Gained in July

Today's voting was a sequal to the State's July 24 primary, in which the liberals made a striking comeback, with Mr. Yarborough almost tying the Governor in a four-man race, in contrast to 1952, when Governor Shivers trounded him by a 2-to-1 margin.

Most of the State's political contests were settled in the July primary, victors including the Senate Minority Leader, Lyndon Johnson, and the House Minority Leader, Representative Sam Rayburn, both leaders of the regular liberal Democratic faction in 1952.

Aside from the Governorship race, the only State-wide contest on today's ballot was for a Supreme Court judgship. There were run-offs for two vacated Congressional seats—in the Fifth District (Dallas) between Wallace Savage and Leslie Hackler; and in the Fourteenth District (Corpus Christi and environs) between State Senator Wiliam Shireman and John J. Bell.

All of Texas' twenty-two seats in the House of Rerpesentatives have been held by Democrats, but the Republicans will have rival candidates for four of them in the November election.

There were no Republican run-offs or voting today. It was expected that many of the 30,000 mary July 24 might—since there who voted in the Republican pri-

Campaign Was Intense

The campaigning for the Governorship had been in progress with extraordinary intensity ever since last May. Each candidate formally reported expenditures of more than $200,000, but it was generally estimated that, with activities of supporting groups and inviduals, their actual campaign outlays aggregated well over a $1,000,000 each.

Mr. Yarborough had the formal backing of both the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, which claim an aggregate state membership of 425,000. Governor Shivers alleged repeatedly that one of his opponent's major sources of support was the C.I.O.'s national Political Action Committee.

Both candidates declared themselves opposed to desegragation of schools, despite the United States Supreme Court's decision of last spring outlawing segregation. But the Governor's repeated coupling of his opponent with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in all probabilities swung to Mr. Yarborough the preponderant support of Negroes, who comprise about 13 per cent of Texas' 8,000,000 people.

Governor Shivers contended that the segregation issue, and such questions as the development of water resources, presaged conflicts between State autonomy and Federal centralism that would far overshadow the offshore oil lands ownership battle that was the nub of Texas' 1952 bolt.

THE SOUTH PRODUCES NO STATESMEN, and a study of the gubernatorial race here in Texas will disclose why. Governor Allan Shivers is probably the best specimen of a politician that the South has produced in this era. He is well educated, he has graduated in law, he has been in politics long enough to know the ropes, he teaches Sunday School regularly. But for the sake of winning an election, he is willing to throw all the weight of the governor's office into an attempt to stir up racial animosity. He has made statements publicly, which have been repudiated almost before he made them, and he has not been able to even justify the contradicted statements. In a day when the darker races of the world outnumbered the Caucasians two to one, and when this matter of segregation and discrimination is affecting our international relations, the governor is giving the impression that both the Christians and the top leadership of the South are determined to plug for racial supremacy at the possible cost of America's existence. No wonder the South can't produce statesmen. The community that would tolerate the type of campaign that has been conducted here could not have sufficient moral standards to produce statesmen.

THE LAST WORD on this question of segregation in public schools will be delivered by the Supreme Court of the United States. Governor Shivers can't do any more about continuing segregation than he can about stopping the waves of the sea. The Supreme Court showed in its decision on May 17 that it was not only aware of what was going forward, but it knew how to deliver its decisions so as to meet any contingency. I have absolute faith in the decision that the Supreme Court will render to implement the desegregation of the schools. I again caution the people who read my paper to possess their souls in patience, and not listen to the ranting of politicians. In this connection I wish to leave a statement from the Honorable Everett L. Looney, eminent leader of the Texas Bar, who said:

"The eleven thousand-plus Texas lawyers will forthwith read, study and understand the opinion of the Supreme Court which has nullified Article VII, Section 7, of the Texas Constitution requiring separate schools for the white and colored children of this State.

"They will find a way for Texas to live with the decision without destroying the educational opportunities afforded by public free schools, described by our Constitution as 'essential to the preservation of the liberties and rights of the people.' While they may not agree with what the Supreme Court has done, they will nevertheless respect that decision and support the Constitution of the United States, even though they may believe the Fourteenth Amendment has been given a construction never intended by the Congress which submitted it or by the states which ratified it.

"Yes, the lawyer who respects his oath will do these things."

That statement is more likely what is going to happen in Texas, rather than the political speeches the governor is making for votes.

JEFF AND I DIFFER grievously over tho matter of supporting or not supporting Governor Allan Shivers. A copyreader sent over Jeff's column Monday, (from the Beaumont Informer) in which Jeff said that he still thought Shivers was the best bet. Everybody in the news knows that I think Shivers has forfeited his right to our votes by his appeal to racial hatred, and his defiance of the Supreme Court's decision of May 17. But I sent Jeff's column back to run, because it is his thinking, it is his opinion and he signed it, and it is a rule in the paper that any columnist, or anybody who writes in it, has a right to differ with the publisher. Jeff doesn't give any reasons, and he doesn't explain how he can believe in the Supreme Court's decision of May 17 and support a man who is breathing defiance of it every day, and using the Negro race as a butt to arouse racial animosity to get votes. If he means that Shivers will get elected, I don't think that is germane. That's like arguing that a man who has disemboweled all of my family, and sworn to break me and all the people of my race on the rack, should be reelected because prior to the time he went on the warpath against me and mine he did some decent things for me and mine, along with others. Votes are used most intelligently and often to affect current events, and it is the current issue that is important to Negroes. If the governor had given us six colleges in the past, but was now going all out against the Supreme Court's decision of May 17, and recklessly appealing to racial prejudices, I still would not feel justified in giving him my vote. Jefferson has grandchildren, for whom he should be trying to clear the path of discrimination in education. He knows that his own children suffered because of segregation and the resulting discrimination in schooling. Yet he is talking about giving a vote to a man who in his official capacity is now doing everything he can to defy the Supreme Court, and also to build up racial hatred because of that decision. What I say here of Jeff goes for the other Negroes who say they are going to support Governor Shivers.

Shivers in Hot Water in Texas

Governor Allen Shivers of Texas discovered his politics and religion had gotten mixed up down in the Alamo country last week in his race against an up-and-coming newcomer, Ralph Yarbrough, who has decided he wants to head the millions of whites, Mexicans and Negroes who reside down in Sam Houston's habitat.

Shivers, it will be recalled, broke away from the regular Democratic party when it nominated Stevenson and bolted for Eisenhower. He was the fair-haired boy of the plains country at the Eisenhower inaugural, and at that time it seemed to those who revolted in Texas against the civil rights plank endorsed by the Stevenson controlled Democratic party that they were doing the right thing.

But Eisenhower and his associates have gone way out on the limb for the very program the Shivers Democrats opposed. Nothing is more controversial in Dixie than segregation. It forms the vital base of second class citizenship, and without it there is not much need of Dixiecrats clinging to the principle of state's rights. It goes to show that when a man leaves home and takes up residence in a new country he can never tell just what he will run into.

Shivers at first, when the campaign began to warm up, did the perfectly natural thing. He denounced the Supreme Court decision and clung tenaciously in his speeches to the old order. He said the South would retain its segregation patterns at all costs, and it appeared for sometime that he was making headway with this position. People commented to one another that Shivers had probably made an honest mistake in supporting Eisenhower.

But the up and coming opponent of Shivers was not content to let the matter stay that way. He proceeded to expose the fact that Shivers' eldest son is actually attending one of the few unsegregated Catholic schools in the Lone Star state, which of course put Governor Shivers in an entirely new relationship to segregation. Yarbrough adherents were able to prove by divulged facts that Shivers does not practice what he preaches, and upon this one issue they have probably forced Shivers into a runoff, and there are many Texans who are willing to bet their money that Ralph Yarbrough will be the next governor of Texas, come November.

All of us know the Catholic church has taken an advanced position beyond Protestantism in opposition to segregation. Long pior to the Supreme Court decision the church in many sections of the nation had taken a positive stand for racial equality in education. Today, Shivers stands almost crucified because of the split between spiritual and secular government. Yarbrough is entirely justified in taking the position that the governor must have a split personality in that he preaches segregation in the state capitol and practices integration in educating his son, and Yarbrough's contention is, "Can a man serve two masters?"

Most assuredly Governor Shivers is going to have much difficulty developing consistency out of the fact his son is currently enrolled in St. Edward's parochial school in Austin, where Negroes matriculate, and his argument for the continuation of separate schools in his state. Such a position does not make sense in the Chinese language, but we assume there is just as much consistency in that sort of argument as there is in the argument of the average Southerner who casts all sorts of aspersions upon the black woman in daylight hours, but who in moonlight rendezvous has produced several million mullatoes in this country through sex relationship with daughters of Jethro. From where we sit it appears to us Governor Shivers is about to be found guilty of undercover association with integration. Hypocrisy is about to destroy him. What we know now almost convinces us the Texas governor was not entirely sincere when he was fighting against civil rights in the Chicago convention.

Shivers Victor In Texas

The victory of Governor Allan Shivers in Texas, in winning a third term as Governor of the Lone Star State, foreshadows another hot battle at the National Democratic Convention in 1956. Had the Liberal element of the State of Texas won the election, it is logical to assume that a so-called Liberal-minded delegation would have been sent to the National Convention.

As it now appears, a more conservative group of Democrats will probably be in attendance since the powers-that-be will have considerable influence on the make-up of that delegation. Conservative Southern delegations to National Conventions have traditionally caused rough sailing at these conventions.

When the Southerners were in the majority, they managed to nominate candidates with a Jefferson Democratic philosophy. However, in later years, the senior major party has concentrated on candidates generally conceded to have been further to the left, in a play for the vote in huge metropolitan areas.

In the last Democratic National Convention, at which Adlai Stevenson was nominated, three or four Southern States came within an eyelash of walking out of the convention and thus splitting the party on the eev of a national election. Such a split would have played into the hands of those who were hoping that President Eisenhower, running on the Republican ticket, would carry several Southern States. At is turned out, Eisenhower carried several Southern States anyhow, and there was quite a battle between Conservative and Liberal Democrats in the South, where the fight between these two factions is similar to the fight between the Republican and Democrats in other states.

The significant of the Conservative victory in Texas is that it counters an earlier trend in most parts of the South of a resurg- had appeared lately as if Conservative Democrats were on the ence of Liberal Democratic strength. In several Southern States it run, but the Texas election upsets the trend and provides a good point for those who would dispute the claim that a Republican candidate cannot carry any Southern States in 1956 in a contest with a Liberal Democrat.

City Committee Declines To Oust Dentist For Withdrawing Support From Party Nominee For Congress

Special to Journal and Guide

ROANOKE, Va.—Dr. Harry T. Penn, prominent in local and State political and fraternal, as well as professional affairs, came out victor in a brush with former Roanoke Councilman Benton O. Dillard, at a recent meeting of the City Democratic Committee

Norfolk, Va.

Because Dr. Penn withdrew his support of Democratic nominee for the House of Representatives Ernest Robertson just before the election, Mr. Dillard wanted the City Committee to ask Dr. Penn to resign. Sat. 12-18-54

Because the committee refused to do so Mr. Dillard walked out of the meeting saying that he declined to serve with a "disloyal committee."

THE PITCHED verbal battle between the two committeemen arose from the Nov. 2 Congressional election in which Republican Rep. Richard H. Poff won re-election over Democratic nominee Ernest Robertson by an overwhelming 13,000 votes.

Dillard accused Dr. Penn of "disloyalty" to the Democratic Party because Saturday before election the dentist announced he was withdrawing from Robertson's campaign. Dr. Penn claimed Robertson "deceived" Negro voters concerning his views on segregation.

The committee, striving for party harmony, headed off a Dillard's motion by tabling it. Dillard got his coat and hat and left the meeting amid pleas to "come back . . ."

DR. PENN challenged Dillard to support his charges of "disloyalty" to the party and questioned the right of the committee, if it had done so, to "request" his resignation. He pointed out that he was elected to the committee by Democrats in Loudon precinct—not by the committee.

The dentist also told Dillard that he would not resign from the committee.

ALSO TABLED in the harmony moves led by former Mayor Richard T. Edwards was a motion to accept Dillard's resignation.

After Dillard had left the meeting Dr. Penn said that he would say under oath that he has never voted for a Republican candidate. During the fireworks he challenged Dillard to prove that he could do the same.

DR. HARRY PENN
Caused Party Riff

Dillard compared Dr. Penn's withdrawal of his support from Robertson the Saturday before the election to a soldier deserting in the face of an enemy.

DR. PENN countered, saying that he acted on "principle" and that he had no intentions of continuing to urge Negroes to vote for Robertson in the face of what he charged was the Democratic nominee's "gross deception."

(Roanoke's two predominately Negro precincts—Kimball and Loudon — both went for Poff.)

REFERRING TO a newspaper chart of Roanoke's election returns the dentist reminded the attorney that his precinct, Raleigh Court 2, went for Poff, too.

"What happened in his (Dillard's) precinct," Dr. Penn demanded.

Journal and Guide

DR. PENN told Dillard that he never would have been elected to the City Council "without the help of Negroes." Sat. 12-18-54

Dillard, in pressing his motion, declared committeemen are not supposed to "represent special interests" and the issue of Dr. Penn's withdrawal from Robertson's campaign is not a question of a candidate but of party loyalty in a campaign.

DILLARD'S LONE support in the committee came from Paul Starkey who reminded the committee that by hard work his precinct, Jefferson No. 2, went for Robertson.

Dr. Penn then noted that Jefferson No. 2 went for Robertson by three votes.

Pleas for party unity were sounded by Roanoke's delegation in the General Assembly — Sen. Earl A. Fitzpatrick, Del. Julian H. Rutherford Jr. and Del. Kossen Gregory — who sat in on the 45-minute session. Most of the time was spent in the Dillard-Penn hassle.

SEN. FITZPATRICK urged the committee to start rebuilding the Democratic Party in Roanoke. He declared success depends on party activities being carried on with "dignity" and "on a high plane."

"Let us unite and go down the road together," Sen. Fitzpatrick urged in advocating that former Democrats who have voted Republican since the '52 Presidential election "be welcomed back into the folds."

Despite Republican successes in the last two years, Sen. Fitzpatrick declared, voters in the district are "independent" and will support the Democratic candidates when the party puts up topflight candidates.

IN A MOVE to strengthen the ties between the committee and the Roanoke Young Democrats' Club the committee voted to "invite" the Young Democrats to have two of its members on the committee as non-voting members of the committee.

The move was made by J. Albert Ellett, a member of the committee, who also is a vice president of the Young Democrats.

BEFORE THE Penn - Dillard flare-up started the committee appropriated $295 to settle the final bills from the Robertson congressional campaign.

No date was set for the next meeting.

Dillard, as he left the meeting, said he was not resigning from the Democratic Party—just membership on the committee.

Testimony in Favor of Senate Bill 692

By John Bolt Culbertson, Representing the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.

34 b

The Southern Conference Educational Fund wishes to take this opportunity to emphasize the need for the compulsory fair-employment-practices provisions embodied in Senate Bill 692. The Fund is a Southern organization; its directors and supporters are men and women, white and Negro, who live in the South. Therefore, the Fund's stand is taken with full cognizance that the bill up for consideration before this committee is opposed by several groups in the South.

We do not consider this opposition a significant factor in the issues involved. We are confident that much of this opposition would disappear once a law were enacted and its intentions and benefits became clear.

Black Dispatch

Perhaps it would be cogent here to emphasize that the temper of today's South is a more complex and reasonable thing than the naive upholders of so-called "tradition" would admit. Striking proof of this new maturity can be seen in the region's acceptance of court decisions that ended restrictions on Negro voters, Negro students and Negro travelers. As a result of these judicial edicts, the numbers of Negro voters have doubled, trebled, and even quadrupled in the Southern states. Negroes have campaigned for public offices and have won them. Negro college students have been received on the campus without question—and in many cases with pride—by their young white colleagues. In railroad coaches and diners, white and Negro ride and eat, side by side. All of this has come to pass within the last decade.

Oklahoma City Oklahoman

Behind such manifestations of mutual acceptance by white and Negro lies a growing regional awareness of a simple but profound truism: The South's greatest natural resource is its people, all of its people. To decree that the black one-third of the population must be the menial servants of the white majority; to divide the black and white into separate, walled-off communities—both of these arrangements are sheer folly. Both of these arrangements have been tried in the South and have demonstrated their folly in bitter, tragic terms.

In World War II approximately three-quarters of the draft registrants rejected for educational and mental deficiencies came from the Southeastern and Southwestern states. That high ratio of rejection for both physical and mental reasons continues to the present, reflecting educational and living standards that lag behind the rest of the nation. The U. S. Department of Commerce estimated the average per capita income in this country at $1,639 in 1952. But none of the Southern states reached this level; their averages ranged from $818 in Mississippi to $1,452 in Texas. Bureau of Labor Statistics figures for September, 1952, showed that Southern sawmill workers averaged $1.02 an hour while their counterparts in the Western states were getting $2.15. Mississippi manufacturing workers averaged $1.10 an hour in this same period; those in Michigan $2.04. A U. S. Department of Agriculture official stated in January of this year that two-fifths of the farmers in the South earn less than $2,000. All of these disabilities are, directly and indirectly, the heritage of racial discrimination.

The modern South, united with itself and with the rest of the nation as never before, and awakened to the possibilities of industrialization, is seeking a new, appropriate way of life for its people. It is a groping search, handicapped by vestigial taboos and a lack of precedent. A Federal Equality of Opportunity in Employment law would afford invaluable guidance and reassurance.

Where the worker in the South fears or despises the Negro worker, that feeling has its historical case in the use of Negro workers as strike-breakers or cheap competitors. In the harsh credo of the past Negro and white could not work side by side. A firm's employees had to be all of one race. If the firm employed both races, the workers were organized into separate units—and often played off, one against the other, to keep wages down.

A Federal Equality of Opportunity in Employment law would do much to lessen interracial tension and, correspondingly, would greatly increase the self-confidence and the earnings of Southern workers. It would speed the orderly entry of the Negro into industrial and white-collar fields. It would make clear that "block" hiring—either of whites or Negroes—would not be tolerated by society. It would permit workers to abandon racial anxieties and focus on legitimate concerns.

Where a Southern employer practices racial discrimination in hiring, he often does so with the knowledge that he is sacrificing efficiency and wasting money. The traditional Southern industries—ginning, weaving, mining, lumbering—were divided by rigid custom as to what color the work force should be. These divisions do not allow for the racial makeup of the available labor force. The custom-bound employer is sometimes obliged to hire the less skilled workers because the abler worker is of the wrong color. New industries in the South, concerned chiefly with attaining maximum production as quickly as possible, submit to such ground rules reluctantly. A great many employers would welcome a federal law as a shield against criticism, enabling them to adopt realistic hiring policies.

But overriding and pervading the specific attitudes and problems of workers and employers are two broad aspects of the Southern scene: (1) Agriculture will offer means of livelihood to fewer Southerners with every succeeding year. (2) Regional prosperity will depend upon diversification of industrial output, especially in finished goods, and an expanded local market that can consume those goods.

If the people of the South were going to remain an agricultural people, the need for legislation against discrimination in employment might be considered moot. But modern mechanized farming is transforming the economy. The field hand and sharecrooper are being replaced by automatic, tractor-powered devices; the small dirt farmers' holdings are being consolidated into giant, corporation enterprises. A study of 1950 census figres reveals that in five Southern states—South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Louisiana—1.8 per cent of the farmers owned 16.9 per cent of the farm land. They accounted for 27 per cent of all farm products sold and 37.1 per cent of the livestock products sold. This concentration is forcing rural people to migrate to urban areas in search of employment, and chief among these migrants is the Negro. According to the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee publication on "Employment and Economic Status of Negroes" only 19.2 per cent of the country's Negro male population was engaged in agricultural work—including forestry and fishery—in 1952, as opposed to 43.3 per cent in 1940. According to the same report, 60 per cent of the nonwhite population resided in urban areas in 1950, as opposed to 47.9 per cent in 1940. But how can the Negro make a decent living in his new environs if the taboos of the plantation era are allowed to abridge his employment opportunities?

Industrial development in the South has greatly increased in recent years, and the emphasis has been on the production of finished goods rather than on the processing of raw materials to be finished elsewhere. Clothing, hosiery, electrical appliances, automobiles, canned and frozen foods, and furniture are now important Southern products. The best natural market for these consumer goods is in the region itself. But as long as the median income of Negro families stands at about half that of whites, this market will be severely limited. In the economy of the modern South "cheap" labor is no longer an advantage but a positive detriment. Exclusion and exploitation of Negro workers have been the chief means of making labor "cheap." The earnings and prosperity of all Southerners now depend on a reversal of this policy.

The Southern Negro is prepared for admission into skilled fields o femployment. The Labor Committee report previously cited declares: "The percentage of all Negroes aged 5 to 24 enrolled in school increased appreciably between 1940 and 1950 . . . About 15 per cent of all Negroes aged 18 to 24 were enrolled in school in 1950, compared with 9 per cent in 1940. This increase was proportionately much greater than among whites." Dr. Eli Ginzberg of Columbia university found that, in 1947, only 4.4 per cent of the Negro population aged 14-24, were illiterate as opposed to 32.4 per cent of those aged 65 and older. If one considers the sacrifices that the education of a child demands of a lower-income family, the sincere and determined quest for advancement by Negro people cannot be challenged; simple common sense and decency demand, instead, that the barriers blocking their contribution to the progress of the region be removed, expeditiously and completely.

In conclusion, let it be emphasized that the Southern Conference Educational Fund feels that only a law with mandatory provisions such as those incorporated in the bill before this committee will have appreciable beneficial effect on human relations in the South. The Old Order buttressed itself in the South by means of all-inclusive segregation statutes. Fortunately, these statutes are wilting before the scrutiny of the courts. But unfortunately, no clear assertion of public policy has replaced them, and there is some uncertainty and lack of direction. A Federal Equality of Opportunity in Employment law would formulate explicitly the course our democracy is taking and would bolster those millions of people who want to make democracy a way of life.

Summary

The Southern Conference Educational Fund, whose directors and supporters are residents of the Southern states, urge the passage of Senate Bill 692. The end of racial restrictions on voting, higher education and transportation indicates that the South is ready to allow all of its people to make contributions to the general welfare on an equal footing. A Federal Equality of Opportunity in Employment law would give valuable guidance in this direction. Such a law would banish racial fears and complications that vex Southern workers and employers. More importantly, it would promote the successful transition of the South from an agricultural to an industrial region. It would insure the Negro a place in the new economy and would expand regional purchasing power to provide a market for the new manufactured products. The Negro, by his educational achievement, has indicated his readiness for full participation in skilled employment. Because of uncertainty and lack of direction in the South only a federal law with mandatory provisions would appreciably benefit human relations.

Nixon Cites Progress Of Federal Anti-Bias Group

WASHINGTON —(ANP)— The President's Committee on Government Contracts presented its first annual report to President Eisenhower last week. The report covered the initial phases of the committee's efforts to eliminate discrimination in employment of government contracts. The report was presented at the White House Tuesday by Vice President Nixon, chairman of the committee.

The report showed that the first goals of the committee was to strengthen and revise the non-discrimination clauses in government contracts. The new clause, approved by the President in September, is stronger than the previous one used by government agencies.

RATES OF PAY

Not only does this new clause require posting of a notice by the contractor indicating his agreement to provide employment without discrimination, but it also deals with upgrading, promotion, rates of pay, training and apprenticeship as well as employment.

The committee further reports it has established standards for a compliance program for various agencies. These standards are an educational program for government contractors, surveys of compliance, effective procedures for investigating complaints and a comprehensive reporting system with relation to the compliance program.

Considerable attention also has been paid to the District of Columbia by the committee, according to the report. The District government has adopted the federal program in connection with its contracting activities and now includes a non-discrimination clause in all its contracts.

Progress in the elimination of discrimination in employment policies of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company is reported as negotiations are currently being conducted with the Capital Transit Company for elimination of racial bars in employment of motormen and bus operators

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

The committee's educational efforts have included publication and distribution of 500,000 copies of a pamphlet, "Equal Job Opportunity Is Good Business." The booklet was mailed to officers and directors of all principal government contractors, accompanied by a letter from the committee chairman.

The committee has held two national conferences with representatives of national, state, and local anti-discrimination organizations, and is working out methods of cooperation to obtain equal economic opportunity and to eliminate discrimination because of race, religion or national origin.

This committee was appointed by the President in August, 1953, and charged with the responsibility for seeing that all contracting agencies of the government secured compliance with the mandatory non-discrimination provision in government contracts. This clause bars discrimination against employes or applicants for employment because of race, color, religion or national origin.

A Sound Attack on Racial Discrimination

President Eisenhower's strong concern with fair-employment practices is an evidence of his devotion to principle. It also shows again that he is not content to advocate a reform in abstract terms and then fail to follow through.

Discrimination in any form goes against what this country stands for. As every one knows, a vast amount of progress against this evil has been made in recent years. The Eisenhower administration has led aggressively on every front—in the victory against educational segregation, in eliminating the color line in the armed services, in transforming the District of Columbia. By example and by persuasion, a new climate of understanding is being created that is increasingly free of racial prejudice.

By no means the least important weapon in this fight for fairness is the government's determination to eliminate racial discrimination in work done under government contract.

There have long been prohibitions by executive order against bias by any government contractor. Since government is the biggest employer, and since no part of public funds should bolster an indefensible concept, this would appear to be a potent method of progress. But compliance in the past has been hard to get. This was partly because the contract clause was only a generalized statement of principle and partly because not enough people worked hard enough on the job.

President Eisenhower appointed early in his administration the Committee on Government Contracts. He gave it the task of improving and making more effective the non-discrimination provisions in contracts. The idea was to gain faithful compliance at every step and by every encouragement of educational program. Substantial headway has been made; the city of Washington, for instance, now insists on non-discrimination in its contracts. Much more can be expected before long, because the inadequacy of the old clause is at last recognized.

On the committee's recommendation, the President has now reinforced the principle by ordering a new clause which spells out the details and defines non-discrimination in such fields as recruiting, promotion, transfers, lay-offs, compensation and apprenticeship. In short, there is an exactness which all can understand. It is an advance of the most definite sort.

There are no elements of compulsion in this procedure. The emphasis has been consistently placed on education and persuasion, on co-operative relationships with the government contracting agencies and industrial executives. The objective is voluntary progress. The philosophy is to reduce basic causes of discrimination, to get ahead by mediation instead of penalties.

But for those few who may insist on being stubborn, it can be said that certainly no one is compelled to enter into a contract with the government. Surely there is an obligation for government to exert its influence in accordance with constitutional guaranties. The President's course is an example of the authority of the United States being used wisely and within proper limits to advance the national interest.

ALASKAN STATEHOOD BILL

aska Statehood ill Goes to Senate

By the United Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—The Senate Interior Committee today approved an Alaskan statehood bill, 14 to 1.

The committee previously approved an Hawaiian statehood bill.

Democrats are expected to try to tie the two bills together in the Senate. Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) has said the Hawaiian bill will be the Senate's next major business after the Bricker Amendment.

The administration has indorsed statehood for Hawaii, but has not supported statehood for Alaska during this session. In local elections, Hawaii usually votes Republican, Alaska votes Democratic.

Chairman Hugh Butler (R., Neb.) said several committee members reserved the right to vote against the Alaska bill, but felt the Senate should have the opportunity to debate it. It was learned Sen. Russell B. Long, (D., La.) was the lone dissenter today.

BILL TO AMEND HOSPITAL ACT

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL:

House passes bill to amend hospital act

Afro-American

By LOUIS LAUTIER
For the NNPA News Service
WASHINGTON

The House has passed and sent to the Senate a bill to amend the Hill-Burton hospital Survey and Construction Act, which was originally passed in 1946.

P.5

The purposes of the Hill-Burton Act were:

1. To assist the states to find out their hospital and public-health - facility needs through state-wide surveys and to develop state-wide programs for construction of those facilities.

2. To provide federal aid in the construction of those necessary facilities for public and voluntary non—profit hospitals and public health centers, which state and local resources were unable to build and maintain.

These were in conformity with the approved state construction program and the standards for construction projects required under the act.

Passed

Segregation Sanctioned

In 1949, Congress extended the act and increased the appropriation authorization from $75 million to $150 million. Last year Congress again extended the duration of the program through fiscal year 1957.

One of the provisions of the Hill-Burton Act, which is still in force, gave federal sanction to racial segregation in Federally-aided hospitals.

The new bill does not change this.

Ike's Recommendation

On Jan. 18, President Eisenhower sent to Congress a message recommending that the program be expanded to include additional assistance for the construction of public and other non—profit hospitals for the care of the chronically ill.

This was to include assistance in the construction of public and other non—profit nursing homes, rehabilitation facilities, and diagnostic or treatment centers.

He also recommended grants to the states for surveying their need for such facilities in order to provide a sound basis for federal assistance authorized by the expanded program.

The amendments to the Hill-Burton Act, which the House passed, are designed to carry out Mr. Eisenhower's recommendations.

No Colored Witnesses

Hearings were held on the amendments while they were under consideration by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

No colored witnesses appeared and, as far as can be learned, no survey has been made to determine how colored people have fared under the co-operative Federal-State program.

BILL - THAT WOULD BAR DISCRIMINATION IN INTERSTATE TRAVEL
SENATORS IVES AND BUTLER

Ives And Butler Hit Interstate Segregation

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senators Irving M. Ives of New York and John M. Butler of Maryland introduced a bill in the Senate last week that would bar race discrimination and segregation in interstate travel. Ives and Butler are Republicans.

The bill provides that interstate travelers shall be entitled to the "full and equal enjoyment" of the accomodations of a carrier, subject only to conditions applying alike to all persons, without discrimination or segregation.

Under its terms, it would be unlawful for any carrier to segregate or attempt to segregate or discriminate against any interstate passenger.

Any carrier or any of its officers, agents or employes who do so, or any person who aids or assists in segregating or attempting to segregate such passengers or in discriminating against them would be subject to a maximum fine of $1,000 for each offense and would be liable to suit by the injured person for damages or injunctive relief.

The bill provides that such a suit may be brought in Federal district court without regard to the sum or value of the matter in controversy, or in any state or territorial court which has jurisdiction.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP's Washington bureau, immediately called President Eisenhower's attention to the bill in a statement.

"Although the courts have repeatedly said that segregation in interstate travel is unconstitutional, colored people are still segregated on most all interstate trains and buses in the South," the statement pointed out.

"Colored servicemen and women are some of the chief victims in the South. For example, Lieut. Thomas Williams of the United States Air Force was jailed in Florida in 1953 because he did not sit in the colored section of a bus bound from Elgin Field, Fla., to Craig Air Base, Ala.," the statement continued.

"It should be noted that under Florida law colored passengers, who do not accept segregation, may be fined $50 or given six months in jail. Florida law also provides that passengers may be required to help in the rejection of persons who do not obey Jim Crow laws.

"Passengers who do not help remove Jim Crow law violators are guilty of a misdemeanor in that state," the report said.

The Bricker Amendment

President Eisenhower is at long last discovering the iniquities in states' rights, and he is getting his post course in this experience from prominent members of his own party. Chickens are finally coming home to roost, following that historic meeting held some twenty-odd years ago in Springfield, Ill., and called by reactionary Republicans who were fighting Franklin Delano Roosevelt, "a grass roots convention to discuss constitutionalism."

Beach Dispatch

Up to that time the Republican party, born in pre-civil war days, and inured to the principle of centralization of authority, was stubbornly opposed to states' rights. The 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments had been forced down the throats of Dixie, along with the Emancipation Proclamation in total disregard to states' rights, and the newly enfranchised black citizen was held in line for a half century because of the general knowledge the party of Lincoln was opposed to the ruthless selfishness of local self government. The truth is, if the boys who wore the blue uniforms at Appomattox and at Shiloh, had not all passed off the scene, the Republican party might have stood by its traditional guns and remained the party of freedom, but with their passing came the urge of another generation to follow a line of political expediency. The Bricker amendment represents the disposition of present day Republicans to indulge in a new idea.

P. 4 Oklahoma City Okla.

But when Franklin Delano Roosevelt rose to power during the thirties, and proceeded to revamp the Democratic party, with his so-called court-packing program, and attempt to develop revolutionary social programs for farmers, industrial workers and Negroes, the Republican high command had no way to offset the program that held the Democrats in power for a quarter of a century, other than to say Roosevelt and later, Truman, were ignoring the plain edicts and principles of the federal constitution. In that evil moment the Republican party adopted the traditional principles of Southerners, while the Roosevelt wing of the party proceeded to consolidate the gains already made among the three hitherto forgotten groups here in America.

Sat. 2-6-54

The South has always insisted that questions of education, health, labor, housing, land ownership and occupancy, and voting were all constitutionally under the administration of state government, and that the federal government had nothing to do with it. Roosevelt changed all of this idea and notion with the institution of NYA, his health program, fair employment practices, federal housing, and a federal court that outlawed disfranchisement and segregation. The South argued them, and still does, that this is an invasion of states' rights, and that the federal government has absolutely no constitutional right to pursue the course it has during the past twenty years. In this point of view it has been joined by many prominent Republicans who were converted to the "Lost Cause" following the advent of the revolutionary and controversial Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

But the South did not know when it went joyously to San Francisco to establish the United Nations that it was putting its foot squarely in its mouth so far as states' rights were concerned. With a religious desire to do something good, along with the rest of the world, Dixiecrat senators, along with all of the representatives of the most civilized nations on earth, attached their signatures to the San Francisco document, which was calculated to bring peace to the world for a thousand years. The South was sincere, because the blood of her sons had been spattered across two hemispheres, and the South wanted peace and tranquility.

But the United Nations pact is a solemn treaty between the nations of the earth, to set up high standards of idealism and brotherhood, and while the Southern statesmen were weeping in the United States because of her fallen sons, they forgot that a treaty signed by the government of the United States supercedes the federal charter and the constitution of the several states. That's the fly in the ointment so far as the Bricker amendment is concerned. Don't let anyone fool you about the intent and purpose of the Ohio senator's proposition. He represents the crowd who too late realizes the articles of the United Nations may later be used by minority groups to defend themselves against domestic tyranny.

It will be recalled Mrs. Roosevelt for several years headed a division of the United Nations devoted to Human Rights, and during her regime strong men and women of dark complexion, and some of them white, appeared before Mrs. Roosevelt to complain of problems relating to human rights in South Africa. Later, American radicals, through an instrument prepared by William L. Patterson, presented another statement regarding treatment of Negroes in the United States, to the United Nations. Still later, the NAACP prepared another instrument of similar nature.

All of this maneuvering on the part of minority groups has been extremely irritating to the South, and to other sections of the United States. For instance, California has statutes prohibiting certain aliens from owning property. The question is, does this statute violate the provisions on human rights of the United Nations, and if it does, should the laws of California be superceded? The same holds true with laws prohibiting the intermarriage of the races. While many states in the Union prohibit intermarriage of whites and blacks, our domestic government could with dilatory tactics and other subterfuges protect itself in divers ways against this ban on U. S. Negroes but it could not if a Chinese, East Indian, Japanese or any national who is denied land ownership and occupancy, along with the right to marry an American citizen, should take his case before the United Nations. Several courts have already held that the United Nations is now the supreme law of the land and must be regarded more sacredly than the federal charter.

Mr. Eisenhower now faces the age-old puzzling proposition of trying to eat his cake and have it, too. Unquestionably the President sees the wisdom and practicality in the provisions of the constitution bestowing upon the President the right to sign treaties with the advice and consent of the Senate, but the South wants to whittle this down down to suggest the President may do this following determination by Congress as to whether the proposed treaty invades the sacred domestic prerogatives of the forty-eight states. President Eisenhower is going to have to end up for or against states' rights. He cannot remain half-baked on this vital question.

At the present time the right to treaty-making is vested under the constitution in the Senate. The Bricker amendment wants to pull treaty making power down to the entire Congress, where it would have to be buffeted around for an interminable period by both houses. In an emergency, such as has developed a number of times in the history of the nation, the impracticality of such a dumb proposal stands out like a sore thumb. Many times Nero would be fiddling while Rome burned.

We have a lot of folk who continually argue they want no foreign "isms" in this country, but we have never been one of those who assumed America alone has a patent on common sense. If the instrument known as the United Nations charter is a more ideal document relating to the question of human rights and brotherhood than the American constitution, we say without reservation, let us permit it to supercede our federal charter. Already we have amended the constitution twenty-two times, and who is it who can say our organized society is now so perfect it will admit of no alterations? The twenty-third amendment given the American constitution via the United Nations charter is not going to materially damage our basic charter.

After all, the real question is whether or not we are going to be forced under the United Nations compact to expand and develop our domestic morality up to the level of our international decency. That's what states' rights are interested in just now and seemingly they forget the recent warning of Vice President Nixon, who returned from Asia and dark people to say that our domestic attitude towards black people in this country has destroyed opportunity to claim the confidence and trust of brown and yellow people.

The Bricker amendment when reduced to an understandable denominator exposes Dixie naked and bare attempting to hold on to its ideas of second class citizenship for 15 million dark people in this country. To do this they would weaken the treaty making power of the President and would reduce this nation to the impotency which well nigh destroyed America during the confused days of the Confederation, prior to the adoption of the constitution.

NCNW against Bricker bill

WASHINGTON

The National Council of Negro Women through its president, Mrs. William H. Mason, has joined the mounting opposition to the Bricker Amendment by notifying President Eisenhower of the resolution the Council made against the proposed legislation last Fall.

While Section 1 of the Bricker Amendment, affecting the treaty making powers of the President, is the most publicized issue of the controversy, NCNW views with deep concern the less talked-about provisions of Section 2.

These provisions will, in effect restore to each of the 48 states the power to nullify within their own jurisdictions treaties made by the Federal Government.

"We are too painfully conscious of the effects upon minority groups in traditional exercise of States rights not to see danger signals in this legislation" Mrs. Mason stated, "this feature alone redoubles our opposition to passage of the Bricker Amendment, to say nothing of its other objectionable features."

Mrs. Mason's letter to the President, also commended his stand that he is unalterably opposed to any amendment which would change our traditional treaty making power or which would hamper the President in his constituent authority to conduct foreign affairs.

Bricker amendment balks human rights

By LOUIS LAUTIER
(For NNPA)

WASHINGTON

Adoption of the controversial Bricker amendment, intended to assert the supremacy of the Constitution over treaties, would retard the advancement of world human rights.

Section 2 of the Bricker amendment would require that after a treaty was negotiated and ratified, both Houses of Congress would have to pass implementing legislation, and then, for the treaty to be effective, each of the 48 state legislatures would have to act favorably.

If the amendment were adopted, the United States would not be able to enter into treaties to promote and encourage human rights for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, which this country is pledged to do under the United Nations Charter.

Recognizes Rights

The rights which the UN covenant on human rights would recognize are the right to life, protection against torture, slavery, forced labor, arbitrary arrest, protection against imprisonment for debt, freedom to leave a country and freedom to return to one's country.

It supports the right to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty, freedom of religion, speech, assembly and association, and equal protection of the law.

These rights are consistent with the United States Constitution.

Constitution Supreme

It already is well established that if a treaty conflicts with the Constitution, the Constitution will have supremacy. The Supreme Court has so held in one decision after another.

But Senator Bricker wants written into the Constitution a provision that a treaty which conflicts with the Constitution shall not be of any force or effect.

Checks U.S. Action

If such a provision is adopted, he argues, "the United States could never become a party to the UN draft covenants on human rights, except, of course, by further amending the Constitution."

Senator Bricker knows that the United Nations cannot tell the United States what to do about human rights. But the United States may agree, through constitutional procedures, with other members of the United Nations to recommend certain human rights standards.

New Jersey Solon's Bill Cracks Down On Mob Violence Also

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(N N P A) — Representative Charles R. Howell, Democrat, of New Jersey, Monday introduced an omnibus civil rights bill to free individuals from race and religious discrimination.

Title 1 of the bill would make lynching a Federal offense. Persons participating in a lynching or inciting mob violence, upon conviction, would be subject to a fine of not more than $10,000 or a term of twenty years in prison, or both.

THE BILL ALSO makes it a felony for any state, county or city officer, who has authority to prevent a lynching to refuse or fail to do so, or any officer having custody of a person lynched to fail to make diligent efforts to protect such person from lynching, and any officer to violate his duty by refusing or failing to make diligent efforts to arrest and prosecute members of a lynching mob.

Violation of this section would be punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

THE NEXT OF kin of a person lynched would be entitled to receive from $2,000 to $10,000 from a county which a lynching occurrs unless it proved that it sought to prevent the lynching.

The Howell bill also would strengthen existing civil rights laws, prohibit discrimination or segregation in interstate travel, prohibit discrimination in employment, prohibit discrimination or segregation in the armed services, and deny all forms of federal aid to institutions of higher learning which practice segregation or discrimination.

THE SECTION designated to eliminate segregation and discrimination in education would make it an unfair educational practice for an educational institution to exclude, limit or otherwise discriminate against any person seeking admission as a student.

Religious or denomination educational institutions, however, would be allowed to select their students exclusively or primarily from members of such religion or denomination.

COMPLAINTS OF unfair educational practice would be filed with the Commissioner of Education, who would be authorized, if he failed to induce the institution involved to eliminate the alleged unfair educational practice.

If after a hearing the Commissioner determines that the institution has engaged in an unfair educational practice he would be authorized to issue cease and desist orders.

SUCH ORDERS would be subject to judicial review by the United States Court of Appeals of the judicial circuit in which the alleged unfair educational practice occurred or where the institution is located.

The court would be empowered to enter a decree enforcing, modifyying or setting aside the order of the Commissioner.

THE HOWELL BILL also would forbid the Commissioner of Education from making payments to school districts under the laws providing for federal assistance for construction and operation of schools in localities where federal activities have caused an increase in the school population if the local school board follows a policy of race or religious discrimination or segregation.

The bill also would prohibit federal agencies from insuring or guaranteeing any home mortgage unless the lender certifies under oath that in selecting purchasers or tenants for the mortgaged property he will not practice race or religious discrimination and will not sell the property while the insurance is in effect unless the purchaser make a similar certification.

IN THE administration of various housing acts, the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, and the Servicemen's Readjustment Act, the bill would declare it to be the policy of the Federal Government that there shall be no race or religious discrimination or segregation affecting any tenant, owner, borrower, or recipient or beneficiary of a mortgage guaranty.

The bill also would forbid such discrimination or segregation in the provision, operation, and maintenance of community facilities or housing under the provisions of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act.

THE BILL ALSO would create in the executive branch of the Government a Civil Rights Commission, raise the civil rights section in the Justice Department to a division in charge of an Assistant Attorney General, and create a joint congressional committee on civil rights.

It also would outlaw the poll tax as a condition for voting in federal elections.

Ike Victory Near on Farm Bill

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP) — President Eisenhower's long battle for a flexible farm price support program and broad authority to dispose of multibillion - dollar government surpluses was near victory today.

Eight senators and five House members ended four days of closed-door legislative horse trading by agreeing on a compromise omnibus farm bill.

Included was the key administration demand that dairy price supports be retained at the reducedlevel of 75 per cent of parity ordered by Secretary of Agriculture Benson April 1.

Hou[illegible] conferees fought in vain for an increase [illegible] cheese and milk price supports to 80 per cent of parity on Sept. 1, as voted by that body.

When the compromise finally was announced by Sen. Aiken (R-Vt) and Rep. Hope (R-Kan), chairmen of the Senate and House Agriculture committees, Hope was asked if the lower dairy supports resulted from White House pressure.

"No," he replied. "We receded because we couldn't get it."

Asked about the over-all character of the compromise bill, Hope said:

"It could have been better and it could have been worse."

The adjusted measure may be brought before both the House and Senate for final approval tomorrow.

Acceptance in both chambers send the controversial election-year measure to the White House containing most, but not all of the features asked by the President—plus a few he did not want.

One major request was not involved in the long conference because both the House and Senate voted for flexible price supports of 82½ to 90 per cent of parity on cotton, wheat, corn, peanuts and rice.

A sixth basic crop, tobacco, will continue to have 90 per cent support as long as producers approve rigid planting and marketing controls, as they always have done.

Before finally accepting the Senate provision that gives the secretary authority to retain dairy supports at 75 per cent, the House spokesmen won acceptance of a number of related House-approved dairy provisions.

These include use of up to 50 million dollars a year to increase consumption of fluid milk by school children until March 31, 1956; dispsal of surplus butter, cheese and dried milk to the armed services and Veterans Administration; use of 15 million dollars during each of the next two years to speed eradication of Brucellosis in dairy herds; and a study of the whole dairy support program by the secretary with a report back to Congress early next year.

FEPC

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL:

Congress can ignore fair employment law

34b FEPC

WASHINGTON (NNPA)— The overt omission from President Eisenhower's recent labor message of recommendation for laws prohibiting discrimination in employee - employer relationship left Congress free to ignore the principle.

Since the omission by the President, Congress has shown no disposition to write into labor legislation any safeguard against racial discrimination.

Even such liberal labor leaders as Walter Reuther, president of the CIO and the United Automobile Workers, have taken the position that anti - discrimination in employment provisions has no place in labor legislation.

Fight Should Not End

But omission from the President's message of a recommendation in that regard should not end the fight to have the Taft-Hartley labor law amended so as to forbid racial discrimination by employers and unions subject to its provisions.

It ought to be made an unfair labor practice for an employer to discriminate or agree to discriminate against any member of a labor union or of a class or craft of employees represented by a labor union in hiring, upgrading, promoting or tenure of employment because of race, religion, color, or national origin.

Likewise it should be made an unfair labor practice for a labor union to discriminate or agree to discriminate against any member of the class or craft which it represents, or to bar any person from membership, or to segregate a worker into a separate union or auxiliary.

Denial Of Bargaining

In addition, labor unions which bar colored workers from membership or segregate them ought to be denied certification as collective bargaining representatives.

Under current policies and practices of the National Labor Relations Board, such unions may represent colored workers of the class or craft, although the colored workers whom they represent have no voice in union affairs.

The Taft-Hartley law only makes it an unfair labor practice for an employer to discharge an employee under a union-shop agreement if membership in the union was not open to the employee on equal terms with other workers, or if membership in the union was terminated for reasons other than nonpayment of regular dues and initiation fees.

To make President Eisenhower's other proposals really serve the interests of all the people, anti - discrimination safeguards shoull be written into the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Predicts Senate action on FEPC

Afro American P.1 3-27-54

NEW YORK—In response to a protest against postponement of the scheduled Senate hearings on the FEPC bill, Senator H. Alexander Smith, (R., N. J.) last week expressed his "firm conviction that hearings starting February 23 can be concluded in sufficient time to have legislation on Senate floor for action."

Walter White, NAACP executive secretary, had charged that postponement of the hearings from January 12 to February 23 "would almost certainly prevent the measure from reaching the Senate calendar and being voted on in time to prevent a filibuster from killing the bill."

Senator Smith who is chairman of the Senate Labor Committee postponed the hearings over the objections of Senator Irving M. Ives, (R., N.Y), chairman of the subcommittee.

They'll Have To Get Along Without Sparkman

A NEW FEPC bill is pending in the Senate and is being sponsored by such zealots as Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, Roosevelt's colt, FDR, Jr., and Senator Lehman of New York. But this year, the FEPC sponsors are going to have to get along without the favorable statements of that 1952 tribune of the Southern people, John Jackson Sparkman. For Senator Sparkman, having failed to be elected vice president, is back home in Alabama explaining to the homefolks that his '52 statements were misunderstood, or something, or anyway, let's talk about something else like TVA or the Berlin conference and the Austrian peace treaty.

This 1954 FEPC bill, which is aimed at labor unions and employers in interstate commerce, is virtually the same as the 1952 one to which Sparkman made favorable reference for the benefit of the citizens of Harlem.

This is the bill which Senator Hill said would accomplish "state socialism" in America. We have previously printed Sparkman's favorable references to this federal cop legislation and will do so again as his denials of the truth are broadcast.

THE pending civil rights bill is the "Federal Equality of Opportunity in Employment Act." It creates a commission of seven members to be paid $15,000 a year each.

Their job would be to see that labor unions and employers (as for example, the Montgomery Fair or any other such firm) did not fire or refuse to hire anybody because of "race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry."

If a Dexter Avenue department store refused to hire a clerk for any of these reasons, it could be summoned to testify anywhere in the United States and then prosecuted in federal court.

TO GET such an FEPC bill enacted, the filibuster of Southern senators would have to be broken. In 1952, Sparkman ran on a platform promising to break these Southern filibusters. Sparkman was on the committee that wrote that civil rights plank and he said, "I think I can sell it to the South."

It is the record.

Check it.

LATER, in the campaign, he made a favorable statement about the bill.

It is the record.

Check it.

Then in the final days of the campaign, perhaps having seen that Eisenhower was going to win and he would have to come back to Alabama again after all, Sparkman made a statement to The Mobile Press-Register in a letter that he always had been against civil rights legislation!

The issue is not the race issue or the dangers of an FEPC bill, as described by Senator Hill with such fire and learning. It is the unreliability of Sparkman's political character. Whatever your political viewpoint on any issue, how can you depend on Sparkman?

NEWARK

Prompt passage of the proposed FEPC bill (S-692) was recommended by the New Jersey State CIO Council last week.

The bill provides for effective sanctions against anyone guilty of discrimination in employment because of race, color, creed or nationality.

Testifying in Washington before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee at public hearings on the bill, Carl Holderman, president of the New Jersey CIO, said:

"The CIO supports the bill because its provisions would effectuate our federal constitution, American foreign policy and the ethical principles contained in the Bible.

"We support this legislation because we have found that since passage of a similar law in the State of New Jersey, none of the fears expressed by the foes of such legislation have come to pass.

"While at the same time it has played a major role in ensuring equal opportunity in employment to all.

"No one has been jailed or fined as a result of its penalty provisions, but the New Jersey law's 'teeth' have made it possible to secure voluntary compliance on the part of employers who would not have agreed to non-discriminatory hiring otherwise.

Educational Impact

"Similarly, it has had a tremendous educational impact on thousands of other employers who have obeyed the law without question.

"It is inconceivable to me that any individual could question the desirability of breaking down racial and religious barriers in employment—a basic civil right.

"When you consider the moral, religious, political, economic and international consequences of any segregation or discrimination policy."

Covering Washington

BY ALICE A. DUNNIGAN
FOR ANP

CGC VERSUS FEPC

There is a vast difference in the operation of the President's Committee on Government Contracts and that of a Fair Employment Practices Commission, according to Jacob Seidenberg, executive director.

This observation was made in reply to a statement previously made by Elmer Henderson, director of the American Council on Human Rights.

Upon completion of a tour covering several states, Henderson reported that he found people at the grass-roots well pleased with the President's gesture in re-establishing a committee aimed at abolishing discrimination in industries working under government contracts. But, added Henderson, they are more interested in knowing when the committee is actually going to get down to work and knock the crow from the hiring policy of these plants. So far people of the states have seen little results of the workings of this committee.

When these findings were brought to the attention of Seidenberg, he specifically stated that this committee is not an FEPC. It has neither the funds, the personnel nor the machinery to set up branches in the states to investigate discriminatory hiring practices, he said.

But, he stated, the committee will look into any specific case of discrimination brought to its attention.

Perhaps the people of the states are not aware of the fact that they are to investigate these matters themselves and bring the problems which they find to the door of the committee, instead of waiting for the committee to come to them.

In this case, he advised, local civic organizations and colored individuals seeking employment had better get on the job and make application for employment. If they are rejected on a racial or religious basis then call in the President's CGC and see what happens.

CAN THE CGC FILL THE BILL?

When Seidenberg's statement was relayed to Henderson, he immediately took the position that if the Government Contracts Committee does not have the machinery to investigate plants in areas where it is most needed, then it should set up such machinery if it expects to be very effective.

He then made public a letter which he had sent to J. Ernest Wilkins, acting chairman, making 10 recommendations for effective operation. Among the things he suggested was the establishment of a locus for receiving complaints of persons who believe they have been discriminated against. This locus should be independent from a plant or from the local office of the procurement agency, and the local citizen must be made to believe that his complaints will get fair and sympathetic consideration. He also advised:

Anti - discrimination posters should be placed in prominent places in the plants particularly in the hiring halls of personnel offices. Periodic inspection should be made to see that hiring practices are in conformance with the open hearings, and the question of contract clauses.

Violations should be aired in re-negotiation or cancellation of contracts should be raised wherever violators are found.

If action is postponed until the contract expires the efforts will be "greatly frustrated," declared Henderson.

Minorities who wish fair employment opportunities had better seek to utilize powers of the President's Committee on Government Contracts as there is no possible hope for the passage of a fair employment practices bill in Congress this session.

Those who sat through the six days of hearings on this measure, spreading out over the past two weeks, felt from the very beginning that the public display was only "window dressing."

CONFERENCE ENDS AT HAMPTON:

Ike aide promises action on FEPC

HAMPTON, Va. — "The time has come for action rather than talk and the committee (President's Committee on Government Contracts) is determined to eliminate discrimination."

That statement by Alvin M. Rucker, consultant to the President's Committee on Government Contracts, U.S. Department of Labor, electrified the two - day conference on fair employment legislation at Hampton Institute here last week.

Mr. Rucker shared leadership of a panel discussion Friday morning with Elwood S. McKenney of Boston, commissioner of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination on FEPC on federal and state levels.

Dr. Mary P. Holleran, acting dean of the Hampton faculty, presided over the Friday morning session. Continuing his discussion of the activities of the President's committee, Mr. Rucker said:

"It (the committee) does not attempt to fit all government contract agencies into an arbitrary pattern, but seeks a unified criteria for them all; it investigates but does not look for them."

Citing cases in which the committee has acted to bring about fair employment, Mr. Rucker said:

"I feel the committee's action reflects its zeal and sincerity. The agencies are alert to the fact that the committee is backed by the prestige of the President and determined to reach its goal, which is making equal opportunity a living, breathing reality for all Americans.

"We have made considerable progress."

"It is time," said Elwood S. McKenney, "for the United States to put her best foot forward and heal the wounds of social intolerance which has marred this democracy," in speaking of FEPC on the state standards of employment.

A second panel discussion featuring Elmer A. Carter, commissioner, New York State Commission Against Discrimination, and George Schermer, executive director, Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations, closed the two - day conference.

Mrs. Sopholia Parker, assistant professor of business, presided.

Elmer Carter Talks

"The New York law against discrimination was enacted by the State Legislature in 1945," said Mr. Carter. "It was not called FEPC legislation," he continued, "because this term is so often misunderstood. The bill was passed as a bi - partisan measure because discrimination is not political and not partisan."

"Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations is unique," said George Schermer, "in that it is the only one established by vote of the people of the city.

"The Philadelphia commission is unlike many others in that it may investigate discriminatory practices whether they are in violation of the law or not. It has the power of subpoena, public hearing and public release of its findings."

Dr. Paul A. Freund, Fairchild professor of law at Harvard university, launched the conference on April 22 with an address on "Federalism and States Rights."

In view of the fact that students of the college were preparing for an essay contest on the conference, Dr. Freund outlined as he would in a class points under which governments such as Canada and the United States are bound by federal policy.

Among these points he included certain national standards as freedom of movement of individuals from one state to another, freedom of trade and minimum standards for protection of civil rights.

"The government cannot be expected to supervise and police every violation of civil rights," said Dr. Freund.

"It will take the co-operation of the press, churches, labor unions and other groups which influence public opinion and the national government must demonstrate by selecting examples of wrong."

Sen. Hill Explains FEPC To Union Labor, Store Clerks

SENATOR LISTER HILL evidently has no envy for Senator Sparkman's predicament and is building an ironclad shield to protect himself against being misunderstood. Senator Hill is yelling for the whole cockeyed world to hear that he never has "deviated" on FEPC, isn't deviating now, and won't deviate in the future.

Hill is a member of the Senate Labor & Public Welfare Committee, which handled the pending FEPC bill (692) by Senator Humphrey and 10 other sponsors.

On March 10 the committee recommended the bill's enactment. The vote was a voice vote, but in the daily digest of the March 10 Congressional Record, Hill took the precaution of asking that he be recorded as having voted no. He is busily writing a Senate document to further emphasize his "no" vote.

The Advertiser, something of an expert on FEPC bills and Alabama senators, hereby attests that Senator Hill's FEPC record, unlike Sparkman's, is as pure as baby's formula.

Many Alabamians are desirous of knowing just what FEPC is. We therefore reprint these excerpts from a 1952 editorial. It is an imaginary interview, but the words in quotes are those of Hill in writing of substantially the same Humphrey FEPC bill (3368) in 1952. This is the Humphrey FEPC bill to which Sparkman made favorable reference in 1952.

QUESTION—Would the FEPC proposed by the Democrats affect labor unions as well as department stores?

ANSWER—Yes. Labor unions are specifically mentioned in the pending civil rights bill proposed by Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

Q—But just what is this FEPC bill? Exactly what would it change in Montgomery, Ala., and how?

A—The bill pending before the Senate is S.B. 3368. The aim of the bill is stated in this language:

"To prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry." The new name of the FEPC bill is the "Federal Equality of Opportunity In Employment Act."

Q—What is the stated purpose of this Humphrey civil rights bill?

A—Section 2-A says: "The Congress hereby finds that . . . the practice of discrimination in employment against properly qualified persons because of their race, religion, color, national origin, or ancestry is contrary to the American principles of liberty and . . . forces large segments of our population into substandard conditions of living, foments industrial strife and domestic unrest . . .

Q—What does this bill propose to do about that?

A—The bill says: "The right to employment without discrimination because of race, religion, color . . . is hereby recognized as and declared to be a civil right of all the people of the United States."

Q—What's an example of the restraints it would place on the hiring of people in Alabama?

A—The bill would make it unlawful for a business house: "To utilize in the hiring . . . of individuals . . . any employment agency, placement service, training school or center, labor organization, or any other source which discriminates against such individuals because of their race, religion, color . . .

Q—You say the bill would put the federal cops on labor unions the same as a department store?

A—Right. The bill provides: "It shall be an unlawful employment practice for a labor organibation—

"(1) To exclude or to expel from its membership, or otherwise to discriminate against, any individual or any employe because of the race, color, religion . . .

"(2) To cause or attempt to force an employer to discriminate against an individual in violation of this section. . ."

Q—Who would administer this law?

A—Seven commissioners to be appointed by the President and to be paid $15,000 each.

Q—Then this would create another large bureau in Washington?

A—Certainly. It would resemble an OPS office. You can imagine how many snoopers, clerks and big wheels such a federal bureaucracy would require just to control the hiring practices along the main business streets of Huntsville, Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile.

Q—You mean that ill-famed Bureau of Internal Revenue that gouges my income tax money out of me every week as a business man or as a member of an Alabama labor union could take the money, fork it over to some hack and have him tell me who is to be hired or fired?

A—Yes.

Q—Can this commission take you to court?

A—Yes. Section 8 so provides for prosecution.

Q—What is the fine range?

A—$100 to $500.

Q—Could they send you to jail?

A—If you disobeyed a court order, you could be sentenced to jail for contempt of court. That, we take it, is why Senator Russell, Senator Hill and Senator Smathers of Florida speak of a "jail sentence" FEPC.

Q—Would this Humphrey bill apply to all labor unions and stores in Montgomery?

A—No. It would apply only to those labor unions and stores with 50 or more members or employes. For example, as we read the law, it would apply to the sales staff of the Montgomery Fair but not a small store like, say, Lerner's. It would apply to a large textile mill union, but not to union members in a small printing shop.

Q—Who else besides The Advertiser interprets the bill this way and says it is a monstrosity aimed at winning the Negro vote in the North?

A—Senator Hill of Alabama. Hill was on the Senate committee (Labor & Public Welfare) which held hearings on this Humphrey bill. Hill filed a minority report last summer attacking the bill in the harshest of terms, calling it fraud and evil. Hill's minority report is available in printed form and you can obtain it by writing his office. It is one of the most powerful, scholarly attacks on FEPC legislation we have seen.

Q—What does Senator Hill say about the Humphrey bill?

A—Senator Hill says in this document: ". . . Unless the government takes over all industry and trade, by public ownership or by dictatorial control, the government cannot enforce this declared [FEPC] right. The promise to do so is pure pretense . . . When private enterprise in the great essential industries of the nation is ruined, then all little business and agriculture will become entirely dependent on government-controlled big business and state socialism will be an accomplished fact . . ."

Q—Does Senator Hill interpret the bill the same as The Advertiser?

A—There is no dispute over the meaning on either side. Senator Hill wrote in his Senate committee report:

"If an employer, in a department store, for example, advertised for and hired only white sales people he would certainly be found guilty of violating this law on complaint by a Negro applicant whom he did not hire. He would then be compelled by an order enforceable by a court, to hire this rejected applicant, with, probably, the additional expense of paying 'back pay' for the period during which he 'unlawfully' employed and paid wages to an employe of his own choice (Sec. 7 [j], Sec 8). Any claim that such a law would not 'force the hiring' of unwanted employes is sim-

Q—What else did Senator Hill say?

A—Senator Hill also wrote: ". . . The bill not only authorizes federal officials to dictate to an employer whom he shall or shall not hire, but it also authorizes a continuing supervision over his detailed management of his working force. All 'compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment' must be free from any 'discrimination.' Every promotion, every assignment of duties, every privilege granted an employe, although decided on the basis of merit according to the employer's judgment, may be subject to review by the federal commission . . . It is difficult to imagine a law more certain to insure the eventual destruction of private enterprise, by removing from private management all effective control of a working force."

Q—Does Senator Hill also mention labor unions as you do?

A—He does. Senator Hill said of labor unions: "The small business man, already overburdened, would encounter new regulations, investigations, hearings, and litigation far beyond his time, his energy, or his finances. Labor organizations would be subject to interference and supervision of their internal affairs. And the law which tells the employer who his workers shall be today, can be reversed and the worker told who his employer shall be tomorrow—and where at what wages."

Q—Some states have FEPC laws. How do they work out?

A—Senator Hill says: "If we look at the history of the New York statute we can judge what such a commission would do. Following the precedent in New York it would rule that you cannot mention color or religion in advertising for employes, that you cannot ask for the photograph of an applicant, you cannot ask his birthplace, you cannot ask his original name and you cannot ask what holidays he celebrates. We would see a host of restrictions upon the rights of free speech and free opinion, all under the guise of rule and regulation."

Q—Okay, The Advertiser and Senator Hill satisfy me this FEPC business is so much fascism. But does The Advertiser support job discrimination?

A—No. The Advertiser's views on that are probably more liberal and more advanced than those of its subscribers. Evolution is in progress. We are not concerned about what comes naturally, about what is done voluntarily. What we fear and abhor is the idea of a federal cop telling a Montgomery department store it cannot refuse to hire this person or promote that one. When that time arrives, we might as well have Mussolini in the White House. That's right, isn't it, Senator Hill?

Battle Joins Hill In Stand Against FEPC

Speech At Anniston Asks Sparkman Show Hand On Civil Rights

Special To The Advertiser

ANNISTON, Ala., Feb. 18 — Congressman Laurie Battle, of Birmingham, ripped into Sen. John Sparkman in a campaign speech here tonight, accusing Sparkman of "toting water on both shoulders."

Congressman Battle ridiculed Sen. Sparkman for voting both for the Taft-Hartley Act and against the Taft-Hartley Act, and for his civil rights stand in 1952 when he was running for vice president.

Airplane Escort

Congressman Battle's speech, which was broadcast in this northwestern section of Alabama, was delivered before the Anniston Chamber of Commerce.

The lean, 41-year-old Battle probably became the first political candidate in the history of Alabama to be met on the outskirts of town by an airplane escort. Congressman Battle flew to Anniston this afternoon and Mayor E. C. Dloyd piloted his own Cessna plane aloft to escort Battle into the airport. Whereupon, Congressman Battle was greeted by a committee and rocketed into town with a conventional motorcade.

"As we used to say, I double-dog dare Sen. Sparkman," Congressman Battle told the Jaycees and his radio audience, "to tell where he stands today on the Taft-Hartley Act, the most important labor-management legislation of this generation. He voted for it, then he voted against it—Where is he on this issue today?"

'Mind-Readers' Needed

Moving on to the question of Sen. Sparkman's controversial civil rights posture in the presidential campaign of 1952, Battle asserted that "It would take two or three mind-readers to tell how Sparkman stands on segregation today."

Fro mthat point, the young congressman invoked the 1952 statements of Sen. Lister Hill to show that Hill and Sparkman were at loggerheads on civil rights in 1952. Battle said that Sen. Hill's civil rights stand had always been above reproach and that he and Hill had exactly the same viewpoint, and always had.

Congressman Battle said in attacking Sparkman's civil rights record:

"I want to make it plain that Sen. Hill's record on civil rights is absolutely above question. Unlike Sparkman, Lister Hill has never once wavered in representing Alabama on questions of civil rights and segregation. Hill's record on civil rights is as good as mine or any other congressman from Alabama.

"So on Sept. 25, at the height of the presidential campaign, Sen. Hill felt called upon to make it clear that he did not agree with Sparkman on civil rights. In a newspaper interview in Montgomery, Hill said he was against an FEPC and against any change in the Senate debating rules which would gag Southern senators when filibustering against Truman's civil rights measures. Here are the exact words of Sen. Hill:

"I'm making my position known, and Sparkman must make his own position clear.

"Neither now, nor in 1952 does Sen. Hill accept the 1952 civil rights plank of the party. If you doubt that statement, ask Sen. Hill. By contrast, Sparkman not only helped write the 1952 plank in Chicago, but Sparkman stood on it and he ran on it, from here to California."

Quoted AP Story

Congressman Battle went on to say:

"On Aug. 29, 1952, every newspaper in America carried an interview with Sparkman on his civil rights stand. This story was written by the Associated Press under a Chicago dateline. Here is that story about what Sparkman said in Chicago, far from Alabama in 1952:

"'Chicago, Aug. 29—Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama said tonight he is 'completely in accord with the view of his running mate, Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, on civil rights.'"

Congressman Battle continued and quoted the 1952 Associated Press story as follows:

"The Alabama senator declined detailed discussion of FEPC . . . but . . . he said the Democratic presidential candidate, Stevenson 'made a very fine statement last night' on civil rights. 'He didn't endorse any particular piece of legislation, but he did speak well of a bill proposed by the Senate Labor Committee.'"

Battle went on to quote the AP story as saying:

"Stevenson said in a New York speech, 'I have been impressed by a recent bill reported by Sen. Humphrey on behalf of the Senate Labor Committee.'"

Battle continued:

"Now that's the story. Well, just what was this civil rights bill of which Sparkman and Stevenson spoke so favorably?

"It was the very same FEPC bill that Sen. Hill denounced as a police-state operation against Alabama. This is Senate Bill 3386, introduced by none other than Sen. Humphrey of Minnesota.

"Here is what Alabama Sen. Lister Hill said about this 1952 FEPC bill of which vice-presidential candidate John Sparkman spoke with favor on Aug. 29, 1952:

'Destroy Freedom'

"'The effect of this bill,' Sen. Hill wrote in his official report, 'is to destroy the freedom of private management in the major business enterprises of the nation. When private enterprise in the great essential industries of the nation is ruined, then all little business and agriculture will become entirely dependent on government-controlled big business and state socialism will be an accomplished.'

"Sen. Hill went on to say the bill would work this way: 'If an employer, in a department store, for example, advertised for and hired only white sales people, he would certainly be found guilty of violating this law on complaint by a Negro applicant. . . .'

"This FEPC bill would apply to labor unions the same as department stores or any other kind of business.

"That's what Sen. Hill said about the FEPC bill to which Sparkman made favorable reference in 1952, far away from Alabama, in Chicago."

Postpone FEP Hearing In Congress To Feb. 23

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), chairman of the committee on labor and public welfare, Thursday, ordered that hearings on the bill to "prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry," originally scheduled for the second week in January would be postponed until Feb. 23.

This postponement was strongly objected by Sen. Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) chairman of the subcommittee on civil rights. Sen. Ives had announced from the floor of the senate last May that hearings on this measure, commonly known as an FEPC bill, would be held between Jan. 12 and 21.

This announcement was made according to Sen. Ives, at the direction of the members of the subcommittee on civil rights, and with the knowledge of the chairman and full labor committee.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) claimed that the President's refusal to include any civil rights proposal in his State of the Union Message apparently coupled with Sen. Smith's decision in postponing the contemplated hearings on the Ives-Humphrey equal opportunity in employment act, indicate that the Administration is turning away from the fundamental problem.

Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) expressed his disappointment at the decision of the committee's Republican majority in postponing these hearngs. He said:

"I have always believed in this measure, and nearly all of us on the Democratic side in the Labor committee were prepared to support it vigorously."

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL:

Use smear tactics in FEPC hearings

By LOUIS LAUTIER
(For NNPA)

WASHINGTON

One of the disturbisg things that has cropped up during hearings on civil rights bills in the current session of Congress is a tendency of supports of compulsory fair employment practice legislation to smear as dishonest and deserters all persons who would accept a voluntary measure.

Consideration is being given to three bills—the Ives-Humphrey bill to prohibit race or religious discrimination in employment and the Dirksen and Humphrey bills to create civil rights commissions.

In addition, there is a proposal that an amendment be written into the Taft-Hartley labor law making it an unfair labor practice for employers or labor unions to practice race or religious discrimination.

The Ives-Humphrey bill would give to a commission of seven members power to issue cease-and-desist orders where a complaint of discrimination is sustained after a hearing.

Like Truman Proposal

The Dirksen and Humphrey bills would set up a civil rights commission along the lines recommended by President Truman in his civil rights message of Feb. 2, 1948.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), has been an ardent advocate of compulsory FEPC legislation.

But Senator Humphrey now says that the bill to create a civil rights commission, sponsored by either him or Senator Everett M. Dirksen, Republican, of Illinois, is the only civil rights legislation that there is any hope for the Congress passing.

Advocates Should Fight

Of course, advocates of compulsory FEPC legislation should do everything possible to push the Ives-Humphrey bill and the proposal of Senator Irving M. Ives, to make race or religious discrimination by an employer or a union an unfair labor practice under the Taft-Hartley law.

If these two proposals fail—and it appears that the hearings on the FEPC bill are being held merely for educational purposes—there is no sound reason why the Dirksen bill or the Ives-Humphrey bill.

But certainly there is no occasion for smearing as dishonest or a deserter of civil rights anyone who advocates such a course.

Smearing Unnecessary

If the Dirksen bill is passed and proves inadequate, the principle of FEPC legislation would be on the statute books and efforts could be made to write in provision contained in the

RANDOLPH RAPS JOB 'IRON CURTAIN'

Cites FEPC need to Senate group

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — A jim-crow "iron curtain" exists in the hiring practices of all federal agencies as well as in private industry, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, charged Wednesday.

Mr. Randolph testified before the civil rights subcommittee of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee in support of the Ives-Humphrey bill to outlaw discrimination in employment.

The only colored employee at the White House, Mr. Randolph said, is employed "in a limited clerical classification."

Slip On White Figures

(Editor's note: Mr. Randolph was in error in this statement. There are quite a few colored employees at the White House, but there is only one secretary. She is Mrs. Lois Lippman. There are no colored staff members or professional workers there).

Mr. Randolph also pointed out that colored employees on staffs of congressional committees or in offices of members of Congress are "very rare indeed."

"This unfair employment practice has long been established," he said. "It has not been confined to any single political administration."

Raps State Department

He charged that it is impossible for a colored person to "crack the lilywhite color barrier" in the better jobs in the State Department here or in the foreign service.

Except for about a half-dozen positions, he asserted, a colored person does not hold an executive or administrative position on a policymaking level in any of the other Federal Government agencies.

The Atomic Energy Commission, which is spending millions of dollars developing plants throughout the nation, he charged, excludes colored persons from many types of jobs or denies them upgrading in their employment.

He referred specifically to the atomic energy plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and the hydrogen bomb plant in South Carolina.

U.S. Steel Job Policy Hit

Mr. Randolph also accused the U.S. Steel Corporation, which holds hundreds of millions of dollars worth of government contracts, of job discrimination.

U.S. Steel, he said, has received unfavorable publicity in recent weeks because of its racially discriminatory hiring practices at the huge plant it is developing in Bucks County, Pa.

The company hires colored workers "in a quantitative sense," Randolph said, "But U.S. Steel limits them to the dirtiest and most menial types of employment, completely excludes them from white-collar, administrative or executive positions.

Urges Bill's Passage

Other industries, some equal in size to U.S. Steel and other smaller, engage in similar practices, Randolph said.

"I believe that democracy has the responsibility to guarantee to all of its citizens equality of economic opportunity," He urged passage of the Ives-Humphrey bill as a 'step in the right direction."'

Labor Secretary Mitchell Endorses An FEPC Bill

Washington, D. C. — Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell Tuesday endorsed an FEPC bill but the administration as a whole appeared neutral on the proposal.

Mitchell wrote the senate labor committee endorsing a measure sponsored by Senators Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem., Minn.) and Irving M. Ives (Rep. N. Y.) creating a five-man federal commission to prevent job discrimination because of race, color or religion.

"The bureau of the budget," said Mitchell, "adivses that it has no objection to the submission of this report."

The bureau of the budget is charged with co-ordinating department statements on the president's program.

A spokesman said the words "no objection to" means that the administration is neutral on the subject, and the departments "are free to express their own best judgments" on the FEPC legislation.

STUDY TAFT-HARTLEY CLAUSE:

GOP administration endorses FEPC bill

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA) — The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee is considering writing into the Taft-Hartley labor law an anti - discrimination provision applying to both employers and labor unions.

Sen. H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, committee chairman, announced that such a provision was under consideration as hearings began Tuesday on the bill to prohibit race and religious discrimination in employment.

There are difficulties in the way of such a clause, Senator Smith said, but "we are determined to make as careful a study as we can and try to find steps for a program ahead, with regard to this very serious discrimination issue."

Non-Partisan Measure

The bill on which hearings are being held over a two - week period is the non - partisan measure which has 19 co-sponsors, including Sen. Irving M. Ives, (Rep., N.Y.), and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, (Dem., Minn.).

Several witnesses were asked whether they favored the Ives-Humphrey bill or an amendment to the Taft-Hartley law to make it an unfair labor practice for an employer or a labor union to practice racial or religious discrimination in employment, or with respect to union membership.

Most of the witnesses preferred the Ives - Humphrey bill, if its passage could be obtained, but were willing to settle for an anti - discrimination provision in the Taft - Hartley labor law.

Labor Secretary Writes

The highlight of the first day's hearing was a letter from Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell endorsing the Ives - Humphrey bill.

Inasmuch as the Ives-Humphrey bill contains enforcement provisions, support of that measure by Mr. Mitchell raised the question of whether the administration has shifted its views on fair employment practice legislation.

During the 1952 presidential campaign, General Eisenhower said he was opposed to compulsory legislation, but would use presidential powers to end race discrimination and segregation and would also appeal to state governors also to take action in that regard.

Unable To Attend

Mr. Mitchell had been asked to testify Tuesday morning on the Ives - Humphrey bill but was unable to be present because he had to be in Flint, Mich. instead,he sent Senator Smith a letter in which he said:

"Equality of opportunity regardless of race or color or creed is a moral and political right and the denial of such equality is repugnant to our ideals of freedom.

"We know that, despite this, discrimination because of race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry persists in, among other things, employment.

Action Of States

"Many States and municipalities have recognized the existence of discrimination in employment and have adopted laws to deal with it.

"The experience of such states and municipalities demonstrates that legislation of this type can be effective. Action by the Federal Government, however, is also needed if the problem is effectively to be met.

"I am in favor of federal legislation to eliminate discrimination in employment and, accordingly, I favor the provisions of S. 692 (the Ives - Humphrey bill)

"I particularly agree with its emphasis on the use of the processes of education, persuasion, conciliation and mediation and its provisions for the utilization of state and local agencies.

"I am prepared, however, to support any other reasonable proposal to achieve this objective."

Anti-Discrimination Laws

Twelve states now have laws against discrimination in employment. Seven of them — Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island and Washington — have compulsory FEPC laws, Senator Ives said.

"Opponents of federal action in this area of civil rights have maintained that a truly effective solution to this particular problem can be found only through the application of the voluntary processes," the senator said, adding:

"Having noted the difference in the results obtained in the seven states I have mentioned as compared to the five other states, whose anti - discrimination laws are without enforcement provisions. I am forced to disagree with those who would resolve this problem solely through voluntary means."

House May Kill Bill Granting Statehood For Alaska, Hawaii

Republican Leader Sees Complications if Senate Committee Action Stands

By J. A. O'Leary

House Majority Leader Halleck of Indiana predicted today that if the Senate leaves Alaska in the Hawaiian statehood bill "that kills it for this session."

"I would say you could not get the votes to put it through," Mr. Halleck said.

He was referring to the action of the Senate Interior Committee in voting yesterday to add the Alaskan statehood bill as a second title to the Hawaiian bill.

He said he resisted similar suggestions when the House was passing the Hawaiian bill last March by a vote of 274 to 138. He said he has seen nothing since to change his mind.

Held Up in Rules.

The separate bill for Alaska has been reported from the House Interior Committee, but has not cleared the important House Rules Committee. If the Senate passes a combined bill, it would have to go back to the House for action on the Alaskan amendment and other Senate changes.

Meanwhile, the hopes of Republican leaders to make Hawaii a State this year appeared to hinge on an effort they will make on the Senate floor to strike out the Alaskan title with a promise to bring out a separate Alaskan bill at an early date.

Before this can happen, however, the Senate Interior Committee must wait, probably a week or more, for a subcommittee to iron out details of the Alaskan title. The Alaskan bill was added to the Hawaiian bill yesterday without any consideration of these details.

Amendment Up Next.

This additional committee work probably will make no difference in the timetable on statehood, because Senate leaders had already decided to make the Bricker constitutional amendment on treaty powers the next order of Senate business.

But there was a decided danger that combining the two territories may weaken the chances for any statehood bill in this Congress. The administration has been pushing the Hawaiian bill only this year.

It was the vote of Senator Dworshak, Republican, of Idaho that tipped the scales in favor of adding Alaska in the closely divided Senate committee yesterday. His action countered an earlier switch by Senator Long, Democrat, of Louisiana, who decided to support the Hawaiian bill this year.

Senator Dworshak said he had no intention of delaying statehood for Hawaii. He said he favors statehood for both, and felt that unless the two were combined there would have been no chance to vote on Alaska this year.

Statehood Bill Passes Senate Unit

WASHINGTON —(UP)— The Senate interior committee, in a surprise move to avert a factional fight, gave its qualified approval Tuesday to a bill to grant statehood to both Hawaii and Alaska.

The committee unexpectedly added an Alaskan statehood provision to a measure it had been considering to make Hawaii the 49th state.

But it decided to "perfect" the new section before sending the bill to the Senate.

Chairman Hugh Butler, Nebraska Republican, said the committee appeared to report the new version immediately but after "a lot of jockeying back and forth" behind closed doors a subcommittee was named to iron out the details. He said this should take only "a few days."

Butler emphasized the committee can reconsider its action but he said "all the members appeared to be anxious" to let the Senate consider statehood for both territories.

Congressional statehood thinking generally has followed party lines. Hawaii, traditionally Republican, has won support from GOP legislators. Democrats in general favor statehood for Alaska which is normally Democratic.

House Kills Vital Part of Health Plan

238-134 Vote Sends Reinsurance Bill Back to Committee

WASHINGTON, July 13 (UP).—The House in a surprise action voted today to kill the heart of President Eisenhower's health program—his $25,000,000 health reinsurance plan.

By a top-heavy majority of 238 to 134, the measure was returned to the House Commerce Committee. House Majority Leader Charles A. Halleck (Ind.) said the action killed the bill for this session of Congress.

On the roll-call vote, 162 Democrats, 75 Republicans and Independent Frazier Reams, of Ohio, voted to send the bill back to committee. Opposed were 127 Republicans and 7 Democrats.

OFFERED BY PRESIDENT

Under the bill, the Government would have paid up to 75 percent of any "abnormal" losses suffered by private health insurance groups willing to broaden their coverage.

It was offered by the President as a substitute for former President Harry S. Truman's compulsory health insurance program.

The recommittal motion, offered by Rep. John Bell Williams (D., Miss.), won powerful support from House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn (Tex.), who called the bill a "blundering, stupid way to start" a health program.

APPEAL BY HALLECK

Halleck argued the measure would help bring "adequate prepaid voluntary care within the reach of millions and millions of our people," and pleaded with the House to "give it a chance."

The action was a sharp upset for Mr. Eisenhower, who had listed it as a major part of his health program, and a blow to House GOP leaders who earlier had predicted its passage.

House action came only a day after Mr. Eisenhower signed a bill authorizing a three-year $180,000,000 Federal program to encourage construction of hospitals and other facilities for the aged, chronically ill and disabled—another key feature of the President's health program.

OPPOSED BY AMA

Opposition to the reinsurance plan came chiefly from those who claimed it was a step toward "socialized" medicine—the charge leveled against Mr. Truman's program—and on the other side from those claiming it would do little to promote greater health insurance.

It was opposed by the American Medical Association on grounds it was professionally restrictive, and by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce as a step toward "socialized" medicine.

Labor unions condemned it on grounds it would not make health insurance available to those not now able to afford it.

VOTE DOWN AMENDMENTS:

New housing bill deals blow to minority groups

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) —Before passage of the Housing Act of 1954, the House last week rejected two amendments aimed at ending racial discrimination and segregation in the Federal housing program.

The first amendment, offered by Representative Adam C. Powell, (Demo., N.Y.), provided merely that the aids and powers made available under the several titles of the housing bill were not to be conditioned or limited in any way on account of race, religion, or national origin of the builders, lenders, renters, buyers or families to be benefited

An amendment, offered by Representative Jacob K. Javits, (Rep., N.Y.), as a substitute for the Powell amendment, would have given the Federal Housing Commissioner authority to make regulations to cause issuance of commitments for mortgage insurance, under the titles of the bill, to meet housing needs of minority groups.

But the Javits amendment specifically prohibited race or religious discrimination or segregation in FHA-insured housing projects.

As the Javits amendment was a substitute for the Powell proposal, the first vote occurred on it. Before the vote was taken, Mr. Powell announced "pride of authorship' meant "nothing in a vital issue like this and that he would support the Javits amendment.

On a standing vote the Javits substitute was rejected, 87 to 110. The Powell amendment was then rejected also on a standing vote, 74 to 113.

In offering his amendment, Mr. Javits told the House that "minority groups are not being adequately housed and the fault is lack of mortgage money."

He said National Association of Home Builders had found that lack of mortgage money was responsible for 40 per cent of the lack of activity in the field of housing minority groups.

The Housing and Home Finance Agency is trying to encourage projects to include minorities, Mr. Javits said, "but that is not the way the job can be done, laudable as it is.

Supporting the Javits amend- M. Pelly, (Rep. Wash.), declared:

"In the past few years, we have had men in high places giving lip-service to the program of anti-segregation. Now we have a man in the White House whose actions speak louder than words."

In wiping out slums, Mr. Pelly said, there must be housing to which slum dwellers can move. "If minority groups cannot find decent housing, they are forced to create more and worse slums."

Mr. Pelly added that the Javits amendment was in line with President Eisenhower's "wish to banish racial prejudice."

Reject 140,000 Units

The House also dealt President Eisenhower a sharp blow when it rejected, by a vote of 211-176, his proposal for 140,000 low-rent public housing units during the next four years.

As the law now stand, the low-rent public housing program, enacted in 1949, will die June 30, 1955. There is a chance that the Senate may insert a provision for low-rent public housing. But indications in the House are that opponents of such housing are dead - set to end the program.

The House first rejected, by a standing vote of 64 to 180, the amendment offered by Representative Brent Spence, (Demo., Ky.), to carry out Mr. Eisenhower's recommendation that the low - rent public housing program be continued for the new units to be built each year.

Then it rejected, on a teller vote of 72 to 164, the amendment offered by Representative William B. Widnall, (Rep. N.J.), to provide 35,000 low - rent public housing units during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

New Move Fails

The motion of Rep. Richard Bolling, (Dem., Mo.), to recommit the bill with instructions to the House Banking and Currency Committee to report it back forthwith with a provision calling for 35,000 units of low-rent public housing in each of the next four years failed on a roll-call vote of 176 to 211.

On this roll-call 156 Republicans and 61 Democrats voted against the President's low rent-public housing program. Voting for the program were 51 Republicans, 124 Democrats and Rep. Frazier Reams, (Ind., Ohio).

The House then passed, by a vote of 352 to 36, the complex Administration Housing Bill.

The bill's key provision would authorize lower down payments higher ceilings on Government-insured FHA mortgages.

But the amendment killing the President's authority to establish home loan interest rates also killed the section granting the new mortgage terms. The mortgage terms will probably be restored in the Senate.

The bill also would put existing homes on the same footing as new houses for Government insurance.

It also would authorize "open-end" mortgages to allow the outstanding balance to be increased to make available additional loan funds for improvement, alteration, or repair of the mortgaged home.

It also contains an experimental new program of no-down-payment, 40-year mortgages for cheap homes in urban areas for families displaced by slum-clearance programs.

The slum clearance - section is designed primary to broaden and redirect the present slum program by assisting communities in taking effective action to meet their overall problems of slums.

U.S. SPURNS HENDERSON AMENDMENT:

Says fair housing possible under bill

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Albert M. Cole, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, has rejected as unworkable a proposed amendment to the 1954 Housing Act that mortgage commitments for Federal Housing Administration insurance be issued "to all segments of the population" on the basis of their housing needs.

The proposal was made by Elmer W. Henderson, director of the American Council on Human Rights, during hearings before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on the housing bill.

Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.), committee chairman, sent the proposed amendment to the HHFA for study.

Mr. Cole, in his reply to Senator Capehart, who made the answer public, said new housing legislation, if passed, would be administered in such a way as to remove "shameful" disadvantages which colored people have faced in getting housing.

If, after a "reasonable period, satisfactory progress has not been made, "Mr. Cole said, he would recommend to the President that the Federal National Mortgage Association, the existing federal secondary market facility for home mortgages, give "direct, special assistance to housing for minority families."

Pending legislation would provide special assistance — when and to the extent that the President has determined that it is in the public interest — for the financing of selected types of home mortgages under special housing programs.

Problem Recognized

These would be designed to provide housing of acceptable standards at full economic costs for segments of the national population which are unable to obtain adequate housing under established home - financing programs.

FHA has recognized that one of the main problems in privately financed housing for colored people is the shortage of credit available to them for the purchase and construction of homes.

Mr. Cole, in his letter to Senator Capehard, said he and Guy T. O. Hollyday, federal housing commissioner, have repeatedly urged that the housing market for colored people be given "priority consideration."

He added that both the National Association of Home Builders and the Mortgage Bankers Association have recently established "working committee to push the production and financing of good housing" for colored people.

Javits Blames Segregation

To encourage the flow of mortgage money into housing for colored people, Mr. Hollyday recently told the House Banking and Currency Committee, FHA has encouraged investors to acquaint themselves with the opportunities for sound investment which is offered by the field of housing for colored people.

Rep. Jacob K. Javits, (Rep., N.Y.), believes that the root of the problem is racial segregation in projects made possible by FHA - insured mortgages.

But the House voted down his amendment which would have required the federal housing commissioner to issue regulations banning discrimination or segregation in projects made possible by FHA - inspired or Veterans' Administration - guaranteed mortgages.

Clarence Mitchell, NAACP legislative representative, proposed to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that it amend the housing bill to provide that projects made possible by FHA-insurance programs must be made available to all qualified persons without distinction as to race.

Cole explains how new housing bill will aid minority groups

WASHINGTON

Here is how the pending bill would provide an adequate amount of housing for minority groups, according to Albert M. Cole, Housing and Home Finance Agency administrator

1. By administering the program so that these citizens, like all others, have equal opportunity to buy or rent good housing.

2. By insuring mortgages on both new and existing housing on terms better adjusted to the paying ability of all families, of moderate income, many of whom are now effectively priced out of the market.

3. The FHA now requires that no distinction whatever be made as to race, creed or color on applications for mortgage insurance.

4. Other policy statements and instructions emphasize that each case is to be treated on its merits as an insurance transaction.

5. The federal housing commissioner and I have repeatedly stressed in public statements and conferences with industry representatives that the minority housing market needed and must receive priority attention.

6. Both the National Association of Home Builders and the Mortgage Bankers Association have recently established working committees to push production and financing of good housing for colored people.

7. The racial relations service of the HHFA is working closely with these new organizations.

8. If after a reasonable period of time I am not satisfied with the progress being made, I would have no hesitancy in recommending to the President that he use his authority under Title 3 of S-2938 to give direct, special assistance to housing for minority families.

Public Housing Fight Shifts to the Senate

AFL News-Reporter 4-3

The fight for public housing shifted this week to the Senate as Sen. Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, convened his group to write its version of the omnibus housing bill.

Sen. Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) said that he and others, dedicated to restoring a program that would go beyond the coming fiscal year, beginning July 1, had agreed to concentrate on one big effort to get a strong public housing section into the Administration omnibus housing bill.

This group sees President Eisenhower's proposal for the construction of 140,000 units in four years as a minimum, and 810,000 units, as proposed in the Housing Act of 1949, as the actual goal. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Senate Republican whip, took part in the talks.

The Maybank conferees decided against making the effort in connection with the Independent Offices Appropriations Bill, where the initial fight was made in the House.

Maybank, senior Democrat on the Banking and Currency Committee, and others in both parties in the Senate, believe that without an adequate public housing program, Administration plans for large-scale urban redevelopment and renewal can fail of realization. Low income families so displaced, he maintains, must have adequate housing accommodations provided at a rental they can afford.

Corrected Vote on Public Housing

Last week the AFL News-Reporter inadvertently printed the wrong roll call vote of members of the House of Representatives on public housing. Through this error, a number of Representatives who favor the public housing program were erroneously listed as having voted to kill it.

We deeply regret the mistake and any embarrassment caused any member of the House whose position on this important measure was misrepresented. The list below is the correct roll call vote on the key motion by Rep. Bolling (D., Mo.) to continue the public housing program by authorizing the government to help build 140,000 public housing units in the next four years. (F means voted for public housing; PF means paired for; A means voted against public housing; PA means paired against; NS means no vote and no announced stand.)

This list includes those who did not vote but announced their stand.

House Kills Ike Low Rent Housing Plan

Washington, April 2 (AP)—The house today voted down President Eisenhower's request for a new program of low rent public housing.

Acting on the administration's general housing bill, it also rebuffed the President by denying him the power he had asked to raise interest rates on GI home loans.

A standing vote of 164 to 72 turned down a plan, backed by Republican leaders, to authorize 35,000 additional public housing units.

Asked for 140,000 Units

These units would have been built in the fiscal year starting July 1, 1955. Republican leaders contend they already have authority to build 35,000 units. But the vote today leaves no authority for further construction after the units already under contract are built.

Mr. Eisenhower had asked for authority to build 35,000 units in each of the next four years—a total of 140,000. Republican leaders said he would have been satisfied, however, with authority for 35,000 in each of the next two years—with a promise of later consideration as to the remaining two years.

Bat. 4-3-54

Interest Plan Defeated

An amendment to authorize 35,000 new units after the next fiscal year was sponsored by Rep. Windall [R., N. J.]

Earlier, the house beat down, 180 to 64, a proposal by Rep.

Spence [D., Ky.] which would have authorized the full 140,000 units, originally asked by Mr. Eisenhower.

The provision the President had asked as to interest rates on GI loans was in the bill as it came to the house floor.

A standing vote of 141 to 68 knocked out this Presidential authority. Democrats solidly supported taking it out of the bill and many Republicans broke ranks on the issue.

Permitted 5¼ Pct. Rate

The provision stricken out would have permitted the President to fix interest rates on loans insured by the veterans administration and the federal housing administration up to a point 2½ per cent above the average on long-term government bonds.

Under the present market, this would be a maximum of 5¼ per cent interest. The law now limits GI loans to no more than 4½ per cent interest. The current rate for FHA loans also is 4½ per cent, plus a ½ per cent insurance charge, but the law already permits considerably higher FHA rates.

Public Housing Plans Killed by 211-176 Vote

President Eisenhower's public housing program was scuttled by the House of Representatives by 211 to 176. It then passed a modified version of the omnibus housing bill, 352 to 36, and sent it to the Senate.

Rep. Richard Bolling (D., Mo.) introduced the motion to approve the authorization of President Eisenhower's request for 140,000 public housing units in the next four years. Support came from 124 Democrats, but only 51 Republicans and Independent Frazier Reams of Ohio.

Against were 150 Republicans and 61 Democrats.

The House also rejected, 164 to 72, a move to give the Administration authority to build 70,000 units in two years.

Senate Action Awaited

GOP leaders believe the Administration can go ahead with 33,000 to 35,000 public housing units authorized under previous Democratic programs, but beyond the next fiscal year the House has killed public housing. The Senate, generally more favorable to such measures, may take different action.

Under the public housing program, instituted in 1937, the Federal government cooperates with local housing authorities created for the purpose in planning and building dwellings for low-income families. The local authorities float bonds to obtain funds for construction after the government agrees to share rental costs with tenants over a 40-year period.

About 187,000 units have been constructed, largely in the large cities, under the Public Housing Act of 1949 that called for 810,000 units to be built in six years. Unless there is new legislation, no more new contracts may be entered into beyond the 33,000 to 35,000.

Last week, AFL President George Meany urged that 600,000 units be started in the next three years. In a wire to House Speaker Joe Martin (R., Mass.), Meany said that the 140,000 units proposed by the President were the "absolute minimum" needed to help meet the nation's housing requirements.

Setback for Ike

The President suffered another setback when the Representatives refused, 141 to 68, to give him power to raise interest rates on GI home loans and other government-insured mortgages. Leading the fight against the President's request was Wright Patman (D., Tex.) who pointed out that the use of such power would raise the cost of veterans' homes by thousands of dollars.

The bill gives Eisenhower power to reduce sharply down payments on loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration and authorize longer payments of mortgages. There is no assurance, of course, that lenders would make the money available on more liberal terms than now exist.

More liberal terms also were authorized for home improvements. New slum-clearance measures were provided in the bill. Builders of homes carrying government-insured mortgages would be required to give buyers warranties that construction was in accord with plans and specifications.

Another provision would require the occupant or buyer of any housing aided by the government in the future to swear that he does not belong to any organization listed as subversive by the Attorney General. False statements would carry penalties of up to five years in jail and a fine of $10,000.

The legislation gives ex-servicemen and old-age pension recipients first call on public housing occupancy.

Here's How House Voted on Public Housing Program

Here is how members of the House stood, including those who did not vote but announced their stand, on the move to provide for continuing the public housing program by authorizing the government to build 140,000 public housing units in the next four years. (F means voted for public housing; PF means paired for; A means voted against public housing; PA means paired against; NS means no vote and no announced stand.)

IMMIGRATION BILL

New Bill Seeks End To Immigration Bias

Defender p. 21 Cleveland

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — A joint immigration bill, aimed to eliminate the discrimination against Negro, Asiatic and non-self-governing people, was introduced in Congress last week to replace the discriminatory McCarran Act.

Pit. 4-24-54

The new measure, sponsored by six members of the house and three members of the senate, calls for the elimination of discrimination against naturalized citizens and tightens up the loophole which could permit totalitarians of the right to enter the United States while barring communists. The new proposal revises and makes more just the standards for suspending deportation in deserving cases and eliminates the future mortgaging of immigration quotas which took place under displaced persons act.

The bill aims to modernize the quota system by establishing the 1950 instead of the 1920 census as the basis for determining nationality quotas. This will materially increase quota numbers available to nationalities from south and southeast Europe which now have such heavily oversubscribed quotas as to make immigration practically impossible.

In introducing the bill in the house, Rep. Javits said:

"We feel that the provision of the McCarran Immigration law with its discrimination between naturalized and natural citizens, its unusal hazards of deportation denaturalization without adequate statues of limitations, its injustices and discriminations against Negroes, Asiatic and other non-self-governing peoples and combersome procedures apparently designed to prevent rather than facilitate reasonable immigration make a rewriting job vital."

Javits quoted President Eisenhower as saying: "A better law must be written that will strike an intelligent, unbigoted balance between the immigration welfare of America and the prayerful hopes of the unhappy and oppressed."

The sponsors of the bill are Representatives Cretella (Conn.), Fino (N. Y.), Frelinghuysen (N. J.), Morano (Conn.), Scott (Pa.), and Javits (N. Y.); and Senators Henderickson (N. J.), Ives (N. Y.), and Saltonstall (Mass.), all Republicans.

KENTUCKY DAY LAW

House Passes Amendment To Day Law

Votes 52 to 32 To Let Negroes In Private School

By HUGH MORRIS

The Courier-Journal Frankfort Bureau

Frankfort, Ky., March 16.—The House today passed a bill to amend Kentucky's Day Law to permit private and church schools to admit Negroes as well as whites to any and all grades. The vote was 52 to 32.

The measure, House Bill 391, now goes to the Senate. It is sponsored by the Rev. Felix S. Anderson, the only Negro member of the General Assembly, and Mrs. Thelma L. Stovall. Both are Louisville Democrats.

Bill Failed In 1952

Passage of the bill was a personal triumph for Mr. Anderson, a native of North Carolina. He now is pastor of Broadway Temple in Louisville and treasurer of the Kentucky Annual Conference of Zion Church.

A similar bill, introduced in the 1952 session, failed to pass. The Day Law, enacted in 1904, prohibited Negroes and whites from attending the same schools. It was amended in 1948 to let Negro physicians and nurses take postgraduate courses in Louisville public hospitals.

House Is Quiet

The 1950 Legislature further amended the law to let Negroes attend institutions of higher learning, provided an institution's governing body approved and provided comparable courses were not available at Kentucky State College for Negroes at Frankfort.

The House of Representatives and its galleries were tense and quiet as today's 20-minute drama unfolded.

Although 32 members voted against the bill and 10 others did not vote on it, no one spoke against it on the floor.

THE REV. F. S. ANDERSON

Wins passage of bill

House Applauds

Majority Leader Harry King Lowman, Ashland, called the bill to the floor and yielded to Mr. Anderson for the explanation. As the 62-year-old preacher walked down the aisle the House broke into applause.

Mr. Anderson thanked the Rules Committee for bringing out his bill, told a humorous story explaining that he was wearing his black suit and tie just in case he had to "funeralize" his bill, then asserted:

"This is truly a simple little bill. It means so much not only to the colored people, it means so much to the white people, it means so much to the United States, it means so much to Christian people, and it means so much to men who believe in human relationships."

Anderson stressed that H. B. 391 would not require any private school to admit Negroes. It would merely permit their governing authorities to "elect" to admit Negroes to any grades, courses, or classes.

"This is a bill which breathes freedom," he declared. "It simply moves toward the true democratic ideals we are supposed to believe in.

Cites Christ's Preaching

"I wonder why I have to point out to Christians—and nearly all in this House are Christians—that Young Man who so long ago preached the value of human relations.

"I wonder why it is necessary for me to stand up here waiting for the United States Supreme Court to do something. I don't like to have somebody with a big stick telling me what to do."

River Makes Difference

Mr. Anderson said that on his visits to neighboring Indiana and Ohio he saw white and Negro children playing together, and added: "What a difference a little river can make. . . ."

"I wonder how it will be when I cross that other river, how it will be when you cross that other river? When you get there, will there be restrictions? Will someone say, 'You go there, where it is hotter,' or 'You go there, where it's cooler'? Will St. Peter say to me, 'You go there,' and say to you, 'You go here'?

Solving Own Problems

"All I'm asking is a little co-operation. This nation cannot exist without a little co-operation. Unite today and say that we, in Kentucky, are not so concerned about the decision of the Supreme Court. We are solving our own problems. . . ."

After the applause subsided, Representative Morris Weintraub took the floor to say he would be remiss if he did not tell the House what was in his heart:

"I, too, am a member of a minority group—a religious minority if you please. Unlike my friend from Jefferson (Mr. Anderson) I have been accorded every advantage. But I have had things said to me which were cruel and cut so deeply that I shall never forget. . . .

"I hope to live to see the day when we can wipe away this fear and prejudice which still exists throughout our land."

'Test Your Conscience'

Weintraub said that while the bill was being debated in the Rules Committee certain members said they feared political repercussions from back home if they supported the bill.

"Test your heart," he said, "and test your conscience. When you are ready to meet your Maker face to face are you going to ask Him, 'Are there any black men here? If there are, I don't want to enter the portals of Heaven.' Let's put God first."

Here is the roll call on the bill to permit non-tax-supported schools to admit whites and Negroes to all grades:

Right-to-Work Measure Passes Louisiana Senate by 22-14 Vote

Seven Proposed Amendments Are Beaten Down

(The Times-Picayune Capital Bureau)

BATON ROUGE, La., June 9—The Louisiana Senate after beating down seven proposed amendments during a day-long debate here Wednesday passed 22 to 14 a "right-to-work" bill banning compulsory unionism.

BATON ROUGE, June 9 (AP)—The Louisiana Senate after defeating six attempted amendments in over four hours of controversy, Wednesday began final consideration of the right to work bill.

Debate began on the measure banning compulsory union membership with speakers limited to 30 minutes. Proponents were to be heard first.

Amendments were offered which would:

1. Limit the bill to agriculture. Offered by Sen. Guy Sockrider of Lake Charles. Beaten 24-12.

2. Require secret strike votes and financial statements from unions. Offered by Sockrider. Beaten 24-12.

3. Remove the words "threatened violation" from a provision allowing workers or employes to obtain damages caused by violations of the act. Offered by Sen. B. B. Rayburn of Bogalusa. Beaten 20-15.

4. Preserve closed and union shop contracts now in effect. Offered by Rayburn. Beaten 21-15.

5. Submit the bill to the people as a referendum law. Offered by Sen. Harry Howard of New Orleans. Beaten 23-13.

6. In effect, replace the bill with a Louisiana version of the Taft-Hartley act. Offered by Sen. David MacHauer of New Orleans. Beaten 24-12.

The Senate chamber was hushed, despite a capacity crowd, as Sen. W. M. Rainach of Summerfield, one of the bill's sponsors, called the bill from the calendar.

Sockrider immediately tried to amend the bill, but Rainach refused to yield until he completed his opening remarks.

Rainach called the legislative act from the calendar first. It requires only 20 votes—a majority of the elected members—for passage. The right to work legislation was also introduced in the form of a constitutional amendment requiring a two-thirds vote or 26 votes.

Rainach charged the unions with "laying down a smoke screen to confuse the Legislature.

"There is one and only one issue," he said, "and that is to preserve the rights of the workers."

Sen. Charles Duchein of Baton Rouge opposed Sockrider's amendments because "these amendments would put more restrictions on them (the unions) than in any other state in the union.

"Why should we require public statements and secret votes of unions," he asked, "when we don't require it of corporations and companies. This is a step toward dictatorship and regulation of unions."

Duchein told reporters earlier in the week a recall petition was being circulated by union men around Baton Rouge because he supported the bill when the industrial relations committee approved it 5-4.

Sockrider contended the bill would prevent him, as a contractor, from entering into a contract with a union, adding that if his amendments were defeated "this bill will never become law. So you better get on the band wagon if you want to face your farmers.'

He referred to the backing the right to work legislation has from the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation.

Sen. Horace Wilkinson III of Port Allen, another of the seven sponsors of the bill, contended it would not destroy unions "but might break up a few people's parties in the top bracket. I'm willing to stake my reputation on this bill."

He said the proponents had only a few speakers for the bill because "we felt we had a good case and saw no need to impose on the committee by stringing it out.

"But I can understand why the opponents had so many speakers . . . a lot of those fellows on the union payrolls had to get their names on the record."

The Senate convened at 10:30 a. m., debated the bill until 1 p. m., recessed for lunch and went back to work at 1:45.

Among those present in the chamber as debate opened was former Gov. Earl Long.

The rollcall showed 36 senators present. Absent were Sen. Gilbert Hennigan of Fields, Edward Boagni of Opelousas and John Hunter of Alexandria. All are on sick leave.

Hunter, absent several days for an operation, led the opposition to the bill in the 26 hours of hearings before the industrial relations committee. He handled most of the cross examination for his side.

'Right to Work' Legislation Action Expected This Week

Storm of Debate in Senate Over Issue Forecast

By CHARLES D. PIERCE

(Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

BATON ROUGE, La., June 5—Louisiana's Senate is expected to tangle this week with the most explosive issue of the legislative session, the "Right-To-Work" legislation.

A similiarly worded legislative act and a constitutional amendment banning compulsory unionism were favorably reported last week five to four by the Senate industrial relations committee.

Sen. W. M. Rainach, Summerfield, who introduced the two measures, said Saturday that "it is planned to bring the bills up for final passage this week."

The measures will be on the Senate calendar by Monday ready for action any time Sen. Rainach wants to call them up.

The legislation is certain to touch off a storm of debate in the Senate. Bitterly opposed to the bills are three members of the Senate industrial relations committee—Sens. Guy W. Sockrider, Lake Charles, committee chairman; Sen. B. B. Rayburn, Bogalusa; and Sen. John R. Hunter Jr., Alexandria.

A large crowd is expected to pack the Senate chamber to observe the fireworks when the two measures come up for action.

Another issue that has stirred up clouds of angry verbiage in past years also is slated for Senate action as the Legislature enters its fifth week—stock law legislation.

A bill by Sen. M. Eloi Girard, Lafayette, to ban livestock from 3400 miles of state highways was favorably reported last week 11 to one by the Senate transportation and public works committee.

The only committee member to oppose the bill was Sen. Sylvan Friedman, Natchez, who said that when he campaigned for office he had promised never to vote for a stock law.

Committee members voting for the compromise stock law bill were Sens. R. S. Copeland, Leesville, committee chairman; Sen. C. C. Burleigh, Franklin; Sen. Elmore F. Bonin, St. Martinville; Sen. Laurance Eustis Jr., New Orleans; Sen. Guy G. Gardiner Crowley; Sen. Girard, Sen. W. E. Person, Ferriday; Sen. B. H. Rogers, Grand Cane; Sen. Marion G. Seeber, New Orleans; Sen. James D. Sparks, Monroe; and Sen. Alvin T. Stumpf, Gretna.

Gov. Robert F. Kennon won a major victory last week when the Senate and House gave final approval to the second administration bond issue which provides approximately $42 million for state institutions and colleges.

Gov. Kennon signed the $50 million highway bond issue bill which had been passed previously by the Legislature.

Proposed amendments by Sen. Dayton C. McCann, Effie, tireless critic of the Kennon administration, to delete bond issue funds earmarked for the state penitentiary and to convert the legislative act into a constitutional amendment were both beaten down.

As Sen. McCann rallied support with the battle cry of "come on, you dirty dozen," the amendment to convert the institutions bond issue bill into a constitutional amendment was defeated 26 to 10 and the penitentiary cut was buried 34 to 2.

The "dirty dozen" presumably referred to the 12 senators who voted against the administration's $50 million highway bond issue.

Seven of the eight senators from New Orleans scored a victory when they succeeded in having passed, despite the activity of certain lobbyists, legislation to transfer three mills of the Orleans levee board's taxing power to the Orleans school board.

Not voting on this legislation was the eighth senator from New Orleans, Charles E. Deichmann.

Solution

ONE-THIRD of the states of the union have laws designed to bust unions, and the legislatures of four more are set to receive bills with the identical aim.

States with such laws on their books are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. Similar legislation is expected to be introduced in Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan and Oklahoma. And five other states—Colorado, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts and Wyoming—regulate or restrict union security agreements.

These measures are given the counterfeit name of "right to work" laws. In reality, they are laws designed to kill or weaken labor unions, cut wages, and allow "free riders" to profit from benefits won by trade unionists. They are, in fact, almost identical with Article 118 of the constitution of Soviet Russia which leads off with the phrase, "Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to work."

The fate of such measures lies with union members. If the 1954 elections result in a victory for reactionaries, no union-busting law will be repealed and more will be passed. If on the other hand, working men and women unite to support their friends and defeat their enemies, the trend can be reversed.

Every AFL member can do his or her part by voluntarily contributing $1 to Labor's League for Political Education, and then by registering and voting on Election Day.

RIGHT TO WORK BILL
MISSISSIPPI

Mississippi Votes 'Right To Work'

Hiring Can't Hinge On Union Card

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. (AP)—The Mississippi House of Representatives passed the controversial "right to work" bill late today.

The vote was 92-42.

The measure now goes to the governor for his signature.

The bill prohibits denial of work because of membership or non-membership in a labor union. It outlaws the union shop and allows employers to refuse to check off union members' union dues.

The Senate passed the bill two weeks ago. Gov. Hugh White has indicated he will sign the measure.

Passage came after two hours' debate on the bill and another 40 minutes debate on four amendments that were defeated.

The first amendment would have penalized any employer who used the bill to break down racial segregation in work.

Sponsors of the bill said the amendment was introduced to kill the bill by slowing down the legislative process on irrelevant matters.

The amendment was defeated by an 85-46 vote. Similar votes turned down the other three amendments.

Miss. House OKs Anti-Labor Bill

JACKSON, Miss. The Mississippi house last week passed a so-called "right to work" bill, but defeated a proposed amendment to it which would have penalized any employers using the bill to break down the state's racial segregation policy.

The house passed the bill by a vote of 92-42, but defeated the proposed amendment, 85-46.

SHARKEY BILL

To Aid Intergroup Amity

Restrictions on City Commission Under Revised Sharkey Bill Opposed

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We are gravely concerned about the Sharkey bill, now pending in the New York City Council, designed to replace the largely ineffectual Mayor's Committee on Unity with a statutory New York City Commission on Intergroup Relations.

There has long been a need for a permanent, official, well-staffed intergroup relations agency in New York City that could deal with racial, religious and ethnic prejudice and tensions. It is precisely because the present Mayor's Committee on Unity, a voluntary organization, lacks adequate powers and staff that the Sharkey bill, originally providing for ample powers of investigation, public hearing and report, was introduced two years ago and enthusiastically supported by the major civic, religious and human relations organizations in New York City.

Recently, however, as a result of suggestions from the Mayor's office, drastic revisions have been made in the Sharkey bill. Their purpose and effect would be to transform the proposed commission from an autonomous and independent agency with power to investigate discrimination and bigotry wherever it is found into a body that could function effectively only with the Mayor's permission. This transformation has been brought about by the following three provisions:

Investigating Complaints

Section B1-5.0(4) (G) would forbid the proposed commission from investigating any complaint of discrimination against a city agency or official unless the Mayor gave his consent to such an investigation. The revised bill would actually forbid the commission even to receive such a complaint without the Mayor's permission.

Section B1-5.0(5) would forbid the commission to hold any public hearing in connection with any investigation (even an investigation of private groups) without the Mayor's consent.

The same section, which eliminates a previous reference in the earlier version of the bill to public reports to the Mayor of investigations made by the commission, indicates the intent of the administration that such reports are not to be considered public documents.

These new provisions reflect a deep distrust of a commission whose members would be appointed by the Mayor himself, and are unprecedented in the field of intergroup relations. In not one of the more than twenty-five cities having municipal intergroup relations agencies has the Mayor been given so tight a rein over such an agency.

Independence Pledged

It must have been in recognition of the dangers of executive control that Mayor Wagner, in urging such a municipal commission on group relations, pledged during his campaign for the mayoralty:

"It will have the right to hold hearings, investigate complaints, straighten out prejudices. It would be a functioning commission not dependent on the Mayor."

We are opposed to these new restrictions upon the commission, not because of any apprehension that Mayor Wagner would exercise these powers arbitrarily. But this local law, after all, is intended to govern the conduct of future administrations as well.

If we are to remain a government of laws and not men, we must insist that decisions involving the basic operations of a municipal group relations commission that can do so much to alleviate the tensions among the various racial, religious and ethnic groups of this city should rest upon sound principles and not upon the unlimited discretion of public officers, no matter how well intentioned.

It would indeed be ironic if this administration were to create mistrust it does not deserve because it insists on protections it does not need.

Racial Amendment To T-H Is Favored

WASHINGTON, March 31 (U.P.)—The House Labor Committee voted 25 to 2 today to amend the Taft-Hartley law to prohibit unions from denying membership to anyone because of race, religion or national origin.

The amendment was sponsored by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.). It would make such discrimination an "unfair labor practice" under the labor-management law.

Powell called it "a Magna Charta for Negro labor" that will end "segregated locals" by forcing them to give full and equal status to all qualified workers.

TAFT-HARTLEY LABOR LAW

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL:

Senate body dodges discrimination issue

Afro American p. 5

By LOUIS LAUTIER
(For NNPA)

WASHINGTON

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, in reporting amendments to the Taft-Hartley labor law of 1947, failed to include any proposal which would make it an unfair labor practice for an employer or a union to practice racial discrimination.

During hearings on the Ives-Humphrey fair employment practice bill there was much discussion about inclusion of such a provision in the amendments to the Taft - Hartley law.

But Sen. H. Alexander Smith, Rep., N.J., chairman of the committee, ruled out of order consideration of any proposal not submitted to the Congress by President Eisenhower on Jan. 11.

The amendments approved by the committee and reported to the Senate are substantially along the lines indicated by Mr. Eisenhower. During the January - February hearings, Senator Smith limited most of the testimony to the issues raised by the President's recommendations.

The major changes which the bill reported by the committee would make in the Taft-Hartley Act are:

1. Relieve the parties to a collective bargaining agreement of the duty to bargain about any changes in the terms and conditions of employment if such changes are to become effective during the life of the existing contract. 5-1-54

2. Permit employers and unions in the construction, entertainment, and other industries in which the NLRB finds employment to be intermittent, temporary or casual to enter into pre-hire agreements requiring membership in the union within seven instead of 30 days after employment begins or the contract becomes effective, whichever is late.

This provision is regarded as dangerous to colored construction workers and musicians. It would permit a white local to make a pre - hire agreement and then recruit for the contractor workmen who are members of the lily-white union only.

Kill T-H Anti-Bias Amendment

p. 4

Chicago Def

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) — Efforts to write into the Taft-Hartley labor law an anti-discrimination provision were scuttled Friday when the Senate voted, 50 to 42, to kill the bill to amend that law. 5/22-54

The Senate's 48 Democrats lined up solidly for the motion of Senator Lister Hill, Democrat, of Alabama, to recommit the bill to the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee. Two of them announced that they had pairs with absent Republicans. The other 46 voted for the motion.

Republican ranks were torn when three of them cast their votes for the recommital motion. They were Sen. William Langer, North Dakota; George W. Malone, Nevada, and Milton R. Young, North Dakota.

In the vote to recommit anti-labor Democrats from the South were joined by pro-labor Democrats from the North.

The vote turned not on the merits of the proposed amendments, but on the question of whether Sen. H. Alexander Smith, of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, had prevented Democrats from offering amendments in committee.

Senator Smith had ruled out of order any proposal that had not been recommended by President Eisenhower.

Weigh Travel Bias Bill

WASHINGTON — The hearings on bills to ban segregation in interstate travel got under way last week before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign travel with a battery of star witnesses to bolster support for the legislation.

Testimony was heard from Reps. William L. Dawson, III, and Adam Clayton Powell, N. Y. Speaking for the NAACP were Clarence Mitchell of the Washington Bureau and Robert L. Carter, New York of the Legal Defense Fund.

Dr. Herman L. Long of the department of sociology of Fisk university presented scientific data in support of the bills.

The chief witness was Lt. Thomas Williams of the Air Force who became a cause celebre last year when he was arrested and jailed when he refused to obey a Jim Crow order while travelling on an interstate bus between Florida and Alabama.

The handsome young officer who was given disciplinary action by his commanding officer for his refusal is now a medical student at Rutgers university and joined the national guard last week. Williams came from Philadelphia to testify in the hearings.

DAWSON MAKES PLEA

Congressman Dawson made an impassioned plea for passage of one of the six bills before the House, but he rejected a proposed amendment by Rep. Brooks Hays of Arkansas to give the states the right first to prosecute violations of the law.

Representative Powell told the committee that while the executive and the judicial branches had issued rulings on segregation in interstate travel, the Congress was lagging behind in the 19th Century and that the time had come for a uniform Federal law.

He said it was high time that the legislative arm of government got on board and passed some legislation.

Lt. Williams gave a review of the incident leading up to his arrest. He told the committee that the charge of reckless driving which was made a permanent part of his service record in connection with the case is now up before the Supreme Court of Florida.

The hearings were thrown into an uproar on the first day when Rep. John Bell Williams of Mississippi who admitted that 60 per cent of the people of his district were Negro, accused the committee of playing football with professional agitators by holding the hearings.

The next day, however, a somewhat abject Williams told the crowded hearing room that he wanted it to be known that he was not one who agreed that second class citizenship could continue in this country and that back in Mississippi race relations were improving.

He said to Congressman Dawson. "You are welcome in Mississippi anytime!"

In Travel Now In Hands of House Rules Committee

Washington—"The fate of the anti-Jim Crow travel bill is in the hands of Congressman Leo E. Allen, chairman of the House Rules Committee," Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declared here this week.

The NAACP sponsored bill to ban racial segregation in interstate travel has been favorably acted upon by the House Commerce Committee, Mr. Mitchell pointed out. The Republican-controlled 83rd Congress will not have another opportunity to pass any civil rights legislation, he stated.

"Even though the 83rd Congress is nearing its end, the anti-Jim Crow travel bill can be passed by the House provided the Rules Committee reports it out," the NAACP spokesman asserted. "Success in the House would enhance the bill's chance in the Senate where it has strong support. Southern opposition to the bill is expected to be less adamant than in the past."

Representative Allen, Illinois Republican, is reported to be considering calling a meeting of the Rules Committee to pass upon the measure. However, there has been no indication as to when such a meeting would be called.

Negro councilman tells how Bakersfield jim crow beaten

The Rev. H. Holton Collins, Jr., of Bakersfield, first Negro councilman in California history, listed five major goals in the fight aganist Negro discrimination during his lecture on that subject before Women For Legislative Action meeting Wednesday afternoon in Westwood.

Point 1 of the militant minister was: An all out struggle to rid the country of bigotry;

(2) A push for Fair Employment legislation;

(3) Constant remembrance that man is a social being;

(4) The abolishment of nasty cracks and racial jokes about all races;

(5) The practice of democracy, which means, the minister boldly told his all-white audience, social equality.

Councilman Collins opened his talk with personal reminiscences and accounts of Negro discrimination which he experienced directly and indirectly as a youth living in the South. Out of these unhappy experiences came a burning desire, he said, to fight the evil of bigotry.

Locating in Bakersfield some five years ago, he found a rare opportunity to carry on the fight since the city was known as "Mississippi moved to the North." Bakersfield's Board of Education was without a single Negro employee, and city school busses carried white students and forced Negro kids to walk to school.

The bus situation is now cleared up, reported the speaker; and, in addition, the city has 7 Negro teachers as well as Negro janitors.

Bakersfield restaurants and hotels now serve Negroes. Failure to do so carries a $50 fine. The climax of the struggle came when the Rev. Collins was elected councilman from the First Ward of the city, which is predominantly white. He ran on a non-partisan ticket.

The Rev. Collins spoke with definite hope and modest certainty. He reiterated over and over again that the struggle must be carried on without hatred towards whites, who have erred in the past. He added that the Negro people must also guard against discrimination towards other minority groups.

Women For Legislative Action is a non-partisan organiation, interested in effecting legislation for civil liberties; better education; the aid of labor, small business, the farmer and consumer; and for understanding in international relations.

Committee for the White House Conference

Talmadge slapped in Milton appointment

34c(1)

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—President Eisenhower Thursday slapped directly at Governor Herman Talmadge of Georgia by appointing Lorimer D. Milton of Atlanta to the Committee for the White House Conference on Education.

Mr. Milton is president of the Citizens Trust Company of Atlanta and a member of the Board of Trustees of Howard University.

The question of the participation of colored persons in the White House Conference on Education was raised when Dr. Samuel M. Brownell, United States Commissioner of Education, addressed the Conference of Land-Grant College Presidents in October.

DR. RUFUS E. CLEMENT, president of Atlanta University, and other college presidents reminded Mr. Brownell that Talmadge in 1951 had refused to name any colored persons as delegates from Georgia to a White House conference on youth and President Truman had to intervene to have colored persons from Georgia attend the conference.

Dr. Brownell assured the land-grant college presidents that colored educators and laymen would participate in the White House Conference on Education, to be held in 1955.

Apparently the first move toward that end was made with the appointment of Mr. Milton as one of the thirty-three persons who comprise the full committee.

The conference will "consider and report to the President on significant and pressing problems in the field of education."

CONNECTICUT

Lawyer For A City

George Crawford Has Formula For Success

ATTY. GEORGE W. CRAWFORD in his study.

ATTY. CRAWFORD confers with Mayor Richard C. Lee.

By ARNOLD de MILLE

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — "No amount of brilliance can take the place of hard work."

That is the advice to young men and women who might be giving some thought to law as a profession by George W. Crawford, the man, on Feb. 1, became corporation counsel for New Haven, state capitol of Connecticut.

Crawford was appointed to the office of corporation counsel of New Haven, by the newly elected Democratic mayor, Richard C. Lee, who took office Jan. 1.

"No one should choose law as a career unless he thinks he has more than ordinary talent," Crawford emphasized in his advice to young people who might be taking law for a livelihood. "You have got to match the talent against the difficulties you must encounter. Law is the hardest profession in the world in which to succeed."

LAWYER 51 YEARS

Taking over the office of the Corporation is new to Crawford, but looking into the city's business is by no means anything new. For he has been practicing in New Haven longer than most men care to remember, since he graduated from Yale Law School 51 years ago and has worked closely with the city and state administrations for a good many of those years in courts and on committees. The city has called him in on a number of important cases involving it.

Crawford's reputation as a corporation attorney is national. He has participated in several now famous cases involving corporation and trust laws.

The most famous was the Waterbury conspiracy case in 1938 which took several months to try and involved the lieutenant governor of Connecticut, the mayor and comptroller of Waterbury many others high in the Democratic and Republican parties who were indicated. Crawford was one of 19 lawyers participating and his clients were of the few exonerated.

FEW COMPETITORS

Another important case in which he was involved was one in which there was a determined effort to prevent the erection of a junior high school in New Haven.

Also, he led the big legal fight in New Haven and other Connecticut cities to prevent the introduction of the one-man trolley cars. He was counsel for the commission which investigated and broke up an ice trust in Southern New England when the ice business was flourishing in large municipalities.

The law firm of George W. Crawford is well-known through New England and has few if any competitors. A list of its clients looks like a page torn out of a Wall Street directory.

When he accepted the post as New Haven's Corporation Counsel, Mayor Lee said, "In Mr. Crawford the city will have a man whose background in the law of municipal corporation is the best anywhere in the State of Connecticut."

He pointed out that Crawford despite Crawford's tight schedule and many special assignments and committments, he finds time for active participation in many organizations devoted to the welfare of the race.

PRAISED BY PRESS

The New York Times, in a recent article on New Haven's new administration, reported that the Mayor had named for Corporation Counsel a man "who is considered a national authority on municipal corporation law."

Early in the century he was chairman of the Civil Rights Division of the Niagria Movement which was the militant organization that preceded the present National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"The appointment was made on merit an integrity and not politics," the Mayor added.

In announcing the appointment to the office, radio station WAVZ reported:

"George Crawford is a distinguished citizen of New Haven. The many fellow citizens who have worked with him think of Crawford is also a graduate of Tuskegee and Talladega, and for 25 years was a member of the Board of Trustees of Howard university. He is now an honorary member of the board.

LEGAL EDUCATOR

Early in the administration of President Johnson at Howard, Crawford was chairman of the trustee committee on law school at the time when the school was being reorganized. As a result of the reorganization, Howard became the first and only Negro institution to be admitted to the American Association of Law Schools.

Throughout the years, the new corporation counsel of New Haven has continued his interest in legal education. He is invited frequently to Yale university.

For the past 16 years Crawford has been vice chairman of the New Haven Housing Authority, which gave him a testimonial banquet last Friday night at the Faculty Club of Yale upon his resignation from the group. He had to resign from the post to accept the new assignment.

In all of the national publicity given him and his new post, little was given of his affiliation with the Masons. He is chief officer of the 33rd Degree Masons. NEW HAVEN, Conn. — George W. Crawford, attorney and nationally recognized authority on municipal law, will be corporation counsel for the city of New Haven for two years beginning Feb. 1.

Appointment of Mr. Crawford, an independent voter of New Haven for 50 years, was announced this week by Mayor-elect Richard C. Lee.

Mr. Lee said that the Crawford appointment was one based on "merit and integrity, and not politics." He added, "I feel privileged that he will be a part of my administration after Feb. 1."

GEORGE W. CRAWFORD
New Haven Counsel

Background Unequaled

"The corporation counsel for New Haven is, in effect, the director of law for New Haven, and as such is the chief legal advisor to a $17,000,000 corporation," Mr. Lee stated.

"In George Crawford the city will have as its chief legal adviser a man whose background in municipal corporation law is unparalleled anywhere in this state.

"He has had a tremendous personal interest for many years in better government" the announcement said, "and has served on each of the three charter study commissions which have studied the whole question of New Haven municipal law in the last quarter of a century."

Crawford has long record of service

NEW HAVEN, Conn. —The recent appointment of George W. Crawford as top legal adviser to the $17,000,000 corporate city of New Haven, is just one more highlight in the life of Mr. Crawford, who has steadily influenced progress in this area for the past 50 years.

Mr. Crawford is a graduate of Tuskegee institute and Talladega college in his native Alabama, and of Yale law school. He was admitted to the Connecticut Bar on January 26, 1904, and has since practiced law in New Haven.

One of his first local assignments was on the building Lines commission, which laid down the first comprehensive system of building lines in the city during 1910-1920.

Helped Zone City

He also was a member of Mayor David E. Fitzgerald's 1920's Zoning Commission which did the spadework for the New Haven zoning ordinance, the first to be adopted in Connecticut.

He has been a member of the New Haven housing authority since its inception n 1938 and for some years has been vice-chairman.

Mr. Crawford's special interest in city government has been expressed in many other ways, and he has been frequently consulted by successive city administrations to help solve troublesome problems.

Condemmed Land

He condemned for the city the ill parcels of land which constitute the West River memorial park, and he also condemned the parcels of land which are now Lighthouse Park, the city's largest beach facility.

In the field of charter study, Mr. Crawford was not only a member of three city charter commissions, but he also served as counsel for the commission headed by the late Harry C. Knight.

The commission drew up the charter draft which Mr. Knight's group submitted to the city in March, 1947. This was the same commission on which Mayor-elect Lee also served.

Fought For Education

New Haven's new legal adviser began his career in law as clerk of the probate court for the district of New Haven, under the late Judge Livingston W. Cleveland. He has held many other public offices.

Mr. Crawford has given many years of service to the cause of colored education. He was for 25 years a member of the board of trustees of Howard University in Washington, D. C., and is now an honorary trustee of the university.

He has been a member of the board of trustees of Talladega College for more than 40 years and is now chairman of the board, succeeding the late Dr. Oscar E. Maurer of New Haven in the office.

Wealth Of Human Details

Mr. Crawford is a member and holds office in numerous other philanthropic and civic organizations, and during his half century in New Haven has picked up a wealth of human details and anecdotes.

He recalls, for example, that the busiest intersection in New Haven back in the 1920's was not Church and Chapel streets but the intersection of State and George streets.

He speaks with the affectation of the man who takes a broad view of human affairs of his numerous court battles of the last four or five decades.

Law 'First Love'

One of his more outstanding fights was the one in which he led the civic forces against interests which attempted to stop construcition of what is now Wilbur Cross high school.

Of his career he says, "The practice of law has been and is my real love. I'll never retire from it."

Mr. Crawford is married and has one daugher, Mrs. Charlotte Crawford Watkins, who is a graduate of Wellesley College and holds a Ph. D. degree from Yale. His wife is also a graduate of Tuskegee Institute and holds a degree from Teachers College at Columbia University.

Two GOP Women Lose High Ranking Posts

Houston Tex.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Two high ranking government women were dismissed last week from their jobs here.

They are Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding, Charleston, W. Va., and Mrs. Ruth Mueller of New York. Mrs. Spaulding was fired from her $10,000 a year job with the War Claims commission and Mrs. Mueller was dismissed as assistant to Mrs. Bertha Adkins, head of the Republican National Committee Women's division.

Star 12-18-54

The dismissal of Mrs. Spaulding marks the second government job change she has experienced since the Eisenhower administration took over. She formerly was an assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. She supposedly split with Mrs. Hobby over the latter's stand on the race issue.

Mrs. Mueller was not as well known as Mrs. Spaulding and her appointment to the GOP committee surprised some republican stalwarts. Although active in New York republican politics, she was a relative newcomer in national and party worker she soon proved politics. However, as a speaker her worth.

A report that Mrs. Ruth Mueller, assistant to Mrs. Bertha Adkins, head of the Republican National Committee's women's division, had been also fired, was termed inaccurate.

Val Washington, head of the minority division of the Republican National Committee, said that Mrs. Mueller "emphatically was not fired, she was dropped from the payroll in the usual post-election cutback."

"However, she is in line for a government job. To say that she was fired is not fair to her," Mr. Washington insisted.

NEGRO GROUP HEAD SCORES MRS. HOBBY

N.A.A.C.P. Director Charges Secretary Forced Her Aide Out Because of Racial Issues

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—The Eisenhower Administration was accused today of having promoted a Negro woman leader last January with the idea of dropping her later.

The charge was made by Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mr. Mitchell said that the job of Mrs. Jane M. Spaulding as assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, had been abolished nearly a year ago in a departmental reorganization because of differences on racial matters between Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Hobby.

On Jan. 22, the department issued a press release giving the text of Mrs. Spaulding's resignation in which she accepted a higher-paying job with the War Claims Commission; and the reply of Nelson A. Rockefeller, who was then Acting Secretary, accepting her resignation. Her salary was increased by this move from $9,600 a year to $10,800.

Backed Eisenhower Campaign

Mr. Mitchell said that Mrs. Spaulding had accepted the promotion under Administration urging. She recently has been notified that she is being dropped from this position, effective Dec. 31, because of a reduction in force.

Mrs. Hobby, Mr. Rockefeller and Mrs. Spaulding could not be reached for statements today. Mr. Mitchell made public his correspondence in the matter.

Mrs. Spaulding was appointed as Mrs. Hobby's assistant on April 14, 1953. One of the first women Negro leaders to declare for General Eisenhower, Mrs. Spaulding, a West Virginia welfare worker, had been a key member of the women's division in the national headquarters of Citizens for Eisenhower during the 1952 campaign.

The had charge of organizing Negro voters throughout the United States for the Eisenhower ticket and also was special assistant to Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, co-chairman of Citizens for Eisenhower.

Mr. Mitchell said it was his understanding that her appointment had been pressed by Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. on recommendation of Mrs. Cheever Cowdin, New York Negro woman leader.

Mr. Mitchell asserted that in a memorandum to Negro leaders last Jan. 18 he had charged that Mrs. Spaulding's job had been reduced to "relatively simple matters" and "noncontroversial" speeches.

Charge Made Over Letter

The memorandum said the departmental reorganization had been designed to force Mrs. Spaulding's resignation for the following reasons:

"1. At the time when the N. A. A. C. P. and Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of New York City, exposed Mrs. Hobby's effort to delay integration in schools on military posts, Mrs. Spaulding was asked to send out a letter which would have had the effect of repudiating the charges made by the association and Mr. Powell. Mrs. Spaulding declined to sign the letter.

"2. Mrs. Spaulding has made several forthright speeches attacking discrimination.

"3. Mrs. Spaulding supports the N. A. A. C. P.'s position that a grant of $1,500,000 should not be made to a municipal hospital in Houston, Tex., unless that hospital agrees to permit colored doctors to have full use of its facilities. Mrs. Hobby favors the hospital."

On the first point, Mr. Mitchell said that the schools on fifteen of twenty-one military posts still were not integrated, including that of Fort Hood in Mrs. Hobby's home state of Texas.

On the last point, he said it was his understanding that Mrs. Spaulding's remarks on the proposed hospital, which chanced to concern Mrs. Hobby's home city, were made within the department and not in public speeches.

The press release issued by the department at the time of Mrs. Spaulding's appointment listed many honors that she had received. Later in 1953 she received the Woman of the Year award of the Philadelphia branch of the National Council of Negro Women.

NAACP Hits Ouster Of Negro Woman as Aide to Mrs. Hobby

By the Associated Press

An official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said yesterday the Eisenhower administration had shown "a complete lack of sincerity" in its treatment of Mrs. Jane M. Spaulding, Negro woman leader.

Clarence M. Mitchell, jr., director of the Washington bureau of the NAACP, said there was no doubt Mrs. Spaulding was dropped as an assistant to Secretary Hobby of the Health, Education and Welfare Department because of differences on racial matters.

Named Aide in 1953.

Mrs. Spaulding, a resident of Charleston, W. Va., and an Eisenhower supporter and worker in 1952, was named an assistant to Mrs. Hobby, a Texan, in April, 1953. Last January 22 the department announced Mrs. Spaulding's resignation and her acceptance of a $10,800 job with the War Claims Commission. Recently Mrs. Spaulding was notified she is being dropped December 31 because of a reduction in force.

Mr. Mitchell told a reporter today that the administration appointed Mrs. Spaulding to the War Claims Commission last January with the idea of dropping her later. He said she was offered a 90-day contract, which she refused. Then, he said, she was given a position.

"The fact that she was offered this position on a 90-day contract is an indication of a complete lack of sincerity," Mr. Mitchell said.

Notes "Great Fanfare."

When Mrs. Spaulding first went to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Mr. Mitchell said, "there was a great fanfare which was to show that the administration had made a significant appointment to a Negro."

But, he said, within a short time Mrs. Spaulding opposed Mrs. Hobby's views on racial matters and "immediately the whole atmosphere changed."

Mrs. Spaulding in 1953 received the woman-of-the-year award of the Philadelphia branch of the National Council of Negro Women.

Dr. J. Ernest Wilkins Says:

Justice Not Integration Of Races Negro's Desire

ATLANTA, Ga. — "It has been the role of Negroes to keep the problem of obtaining a more perfect justice and a larger and larger measure of equality a live issue in American political life," Dr. J. Ernest Wilkins told an Atlanta University audience Sunday, Oct. 17. The assistant secretary of labor delivered the convocation address at the Eleventh Annual Charter Day celebration of the University. He was introduced by President Rufus E. Clement.

"It may not be a role that Negroes would have chosen had they been given a free range of choice, but the fact remains that because of the existence of a substantial number of Negroes in American society, America has never been able to sweep the problem of social justice under the rug," the speaker continued. "In the long look of history I suspect that this fact may emerge as one of the factors of greatest significance in shaping America's destiny in the world."

Wilkins cited the record of the Eisenhower administration in eliminating racial barriers in employment. He said that the position of the administration was that we should avoid becoming involved in endless debate over this or any other aspects of the race problem and should concentrate on the full utilization of the manpower of the nation because of the urgent necessity to build strength on which the freedom of the world depends.

The Supreme Court decision on school segregation, written by Chief Justice Warren and concurred in by all the other justices, wiped out a blemish which had crippled our country for nearly 60 years, the speaker said. "I could not have lived in Washington of five or three years ago, but the nation's capitol of 1954 is rapidly becoming a capitol of which we may all be proud.

Dr. Wilkins said that although the present age is an age of crisis, it was not a time for fear. He noted that the ancient Chinese Symbol for crisis was a combination of the characters for danger and opportunity, and said, "it is important to all of use that we not only be alert to danger, but that we be ready to seize upon the opportunity with which history presents us."

Negroes have a unique role to play in the struggle for justice, Wilkins concluded. "It is not the role of Negroes in America to achieve inter-racial justice, but to achieve justice. It is not the role of Negroes to achieve only racial integration, but to achieve the association of free men devoted to justice."

In introducing the speaker, President Clement spoke of the dreams and hopes of the small inter-racial group which obtained a charter for Atlanta University in 1867. He said that their dreams were beyond the mere reading of the Bible, extending to the enrichment of every aspect of life. Those who came after them had continued to nourish the dream and see it grow.

Dr. John L. Lewis, president of Morris Brown College, offered the prayer. Music was furnished by the Atlanta-Morehouse-Spelman Chorus under the direction of Kemper Harreld.

Wilkins Hails Drive To End Race Barriers

New York City

Mon. 10-25-54

This is the twelfth in a series of fourteen mid-term reports prepared by members of the Administration at the request of the New York Herald Tribune.

By J. Ernest Wilkins

Assistant Secretary of Labor

The problems of race discrimination have been dealt with more effectively and sympathetically by the Eisenhower administration than any Administration since the time of Abraham Lincoln.

When I took the oath of office as Assistant Secretary of Labor—the first member of my race to be appointed to a sub-Cabinet position in forty years—I was asked why I was willing to take such a post when a few years earlier Dr. Ralph Bunche had turned down appointment to a similar office.

Assistant Secretary Wilkins

Major Change in Washington

My answer was that Washington has undergone a major change in the last twenty months since President Eisenhower has been in office. It isn't the same place it was when Dr. Bunche refused to serve here.

The District of Columbia, long a stronghold of segregation, has felt the pressure of the White House. Theaters and restaurants, which up until a very short while ago were barred to Negroes, are now open to the public—and that means everybody. It was done peacefully and quietly and with dignity.

For the first-time every District contract contains a non-discrimination clause. And the day after the Supreme Court decision in the school case was handed down, President Eisenhower told the D. C. school system that he expected the ending of segregation in Washington schools to set a model for the nation, and it has. No city now says it can't be done, because Washington, D. C., whose school population is nearly half Negro, did it. And remember Washington is south of the Mason-Dixon Line.

Principles of Eisenhower ..

Leadership

The principles of President Eisenhower's leadership are clear and simple:

1. Don't debate the race issue. The time for talk is long since past. Find out where we can do something to solve it and then do it.

2. Where there is Federal authority and responsibility there must be no discrimination. The government must be a model in fair, non-discriminatory policy and practice. Take it step by step, but take it.

3. Keep the issue out of narrow political controversy. Make gains steadily and quietly.

4. Appoint leaders to key posts who will give steady and intelligent leadership in this matter.

5. Be patient but persistent and vigilant in all steps to end discrimination.

Mon. 10-25-54

The ending of discrimination is not a special political sop to minorities. It is essential to our economy, to our unity as a nation and to our defense against tyranny in the world. We cannot afford the waste of man power which it involves.

Action Against Discrimination

A good example of the way President Eisenhower has gone into action against discrimination is the record of his Committee on Government Contracts, of which I am vice-chairman. When the President took office he was determined to make the government a shining example in the field of race relations. He felt that before the government could tell other people what they should do, the government itself should show what can be done by doing it.

This policy was in sharp contrast to earlier efforts which sought to clean up everybody else's back yard first. Ours is not the first President's Committee on Government Contracts, but it is the first one that has been effective. We have been successful because we have concentrated first on limiting discrimination in those areas where the Federal government has authority and responsibility. Instead of seeking more legislative authority now, we are using effectively the power we already have. With the best intentions, others have attempted to do the right thing the wrong way. We have demonstrated that it is not legislation, but determination that will end discrimination.

Some examples of the first, among many significant accomplishments of this committee are:

The President signed an order which requires a strict non-discrimination clause to be placed in every Federal contract. This came as a result of study by his committee.

Within a few weeks you will see thousands of posters with large lettering on it—"Equal Economic Opportunity"—which every business with a government contract will have to post.

Recently his committee distributed 500,000 copies of a pamphlet, "Equal Job Opportunity Is Good Business." This pamphlet describes the functions of the Government Contract Committee, explains the non-discrimination clause in government contracts, and points out what benefits non-discrimination brings to workers, to employers, and to our nation.

Gains Already Made

There have been significant gains made with respect to the integrating of employees in the offices of the telephone companies in the District, and the committee is presently working for the integration of workers in the transit company.

The committee has helped break down discrimination at atomic energy plants at Paducah, Ky., and the hydrogen plant at Savannah River, Ga., where for the first time Negroes are employed.

In Cleveland an aircraft supplier agreed to give Negro women production jobs as a result of the committee's work. In Chicago, in a dozen cases, discriminatory questions were taken out of job application forms.

The moves to end segregation in the armed forces and in all military establishments have been equally unequivocal and direct. It is nearly complete. There has been no backtracking, ducking or slowdown in this effort. The importance of this is enormous. The experience of millions of young men in the armed forces rubbing elbows, matching skills and working together without regard to race or religion is providing basic training in a new and more democratic kind of citizenship that will have a profound effect on the racial attitudes of the coming generations of our nation's leadership.

Although the President has a great and profound concern for the problems of Negroes and all other minorities in American life, he is fighting discrimination because he sees it as a threat to our freedom, our security and our national strength and unity. He is no special pleader. Minority groups do not want special pleading. They want only an equal chance. This he is determined to use every effort to assure. President Eisenhower believes that this country cannot take its place as the first nation of the world unless all of its citizens enjoy the same rights, privileges and opportunities.

'Spaulding, Mueller Not Fired'

Says One Still In; Other Was Only Temporary

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) — Robert A. Kennedy, executive director of the War Claims Commission, Friday denied that Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding, adviser and consultant to the commission, had been fired.

Speaking cautiously, Mr. Kennedy told the NNPA that the only information he had was that "she is still with us."

Val J. Washington, assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee, said Mrs. R. C. Mueller, assistant to Miss Bertha Adkins, head of the women's division at Republican headquarters, had been employed on a temporary basis and was among a group of twenty-four employees whose services were being terminated in an after-the-campaign reduction in force.

The committee, Mr. Washington said, is seeking to place all of these employees in government jobs.

A newspaper last week carried a story that both women had been dismissed from their jobs, and that their dismissals had "stunned" a great many people in Washington since Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Mueller had played active parts in the 1952 Eisenhower campaign and their jobs had been considered secure.

The War Claims Commission is due to go out of existence next March 31. It already has begun a reduction of its personnel.

Denying that she had been fired, Mrs. Spaulding said she knew the agency is temporary and that many employees have received notices of separation, but that she has not.

Mrs. Spaulding came into Government in 1953 as an assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, succeeding Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgman, who served as an assistant to the Federal Security Administrator from 1949.

Friction arose within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and in a reorganization of the agency Mrs. Spaulding was slated to lose her job by abolition of the position. When this became known, a transfer to the War Claims Commission was arranged for her.

Mrs. Mueller was not available Friday for comment on the termination of her services.

The dismissal of Mrs. Spaulding marks the second government job change she has experienced since the Eisenhower administration took over. She formerly was an assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. She supposedly split with Mrs. Hobby over the latter's stand on the race issue.

Mrs. Mueller was not as well-known as Mrs. Spaulding and her appointment to the GOP committee surprised some Republican stalwarts. Although active in New York Republican politics, she was a relative newcomer in national politics. However, as a speaker and party worker she soon proved her worth.

The Republican National committee has been inclined to use Negro club women as liaison officers between the party and Negroes. Another well-known woman whom it has used in this capacity include Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, president, National Association of Colored Women, who was an important factor in the last campaign.

Mrs. Gaines' predecessor, Mrs. Ella Steward of Toledo was also a vigorous campaigner and currently is on an overseas tour under the auspices of the State department.

The dismissal of both Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Mueller has caused many Negroes to wonder if the Republican National committee is so dissatisfied with colored support during the last election that it intends to make changes in its Negro personnel.

Smith appointed economic adviser

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES

WASHINGTON

A few weeks ago, colored Democrats were bemoaning the fact that, up to then, Governor Robert B. Meyner had not begun to fulfill his campaign pledge that he would appoint qualified members of the race to important state jobs.

From what I learned here last Friday on a visit to the State House, the Democratic State Committee's headquarters across the street, and the headquarters of Congressman Howell, the Senatorial candidate in the Hildebrecht Hotel, the Republicans have cause to worry.

The Governor is coming through with some good appointments between now and Labor Day—but not as good as they will be when colored Democrats in Essex and Hudson counties, the major November Congressional battlegrounds, stop cutting each other's throats and work as a party team.

ECONOMIC ADVISER — The Democratic administration of Governor Robert B. Meyner made its second important job appointment last week when James H. Smith, 43, a Trenton teacher for 18 years and World War II veteran, was appointed as a confidential assistant in the Department of Conservation and Economic Development by Commissioner Joseph E. McLean. Smith holds the M.A. degree from Rutgers University and is a 1931 graduate of Howard University. He is a native Trentonian. His salary was not announced.

THE RECENT appointment of Roger M. Yancey of Newark to a $9,000 post as a deputy attorney general, was followed up last week with another appointment that sets a precedent.

James H. Smith, 43, a native Trentonian, and a teacher here for 18 years, was named a confidential assistant to Commissioner Joseph E. McLean of the Department of Conservation and Economic Development.

Mr. McLean told the AFRO on Friday that Smith was not and will not be assigned to any "special duties."

— o O o —

HE POINTED OUT that his department is one of the most important in the government and deals with a variety of problems, such as parks, beaches, forestry aviation, fish and game, veterans' affairs, housing etc.

"Mr. Smith and my other confidential assistants are men of wide experiences and training in many fields. I shall utilize their services wherever they can improve the efficiency of the department," the commissioner said.

Smith's salary was not stated.

— o O o —

AFTER ATTENDING the local public schools, Smith graduated from Howard University in 1931. He received his M.A. degree at Rutgers Uniersity in 1953, and has taken education courses at New York University.

Prior to joining the local public school system, he served as an investigator for the Department of Public Affairs here.

Smith served with Division Headquarters of the 93rd Infantry Division in World War II in the South Pacific.

— o O o —

LATER, HE SERVED as an occupational counselor at Fort Devins Separation Center.

Active in civic affairs, he served as vice-chairman of the local chapter of the American Veterans Committee.

He was a member of the initial Human Relations Workshop at Rutgers University, and was active in the Citizens' Housing Committee which implemented construction of the first federal housing projects here.

— o O o —

SMITH LIVES on Franklin Rd. in Lawrence Township with his wife, Mrs. Mary Smith. He is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

He played an important role in the "Meyner for Governor" campaign last year.

When I arrived at the Department of Conservation and Economic Development, I observed Smith and a white confidential assistant engrossed in studying a stack of reports and correspondence.

BOTH MEN were so pre-occupied at their desks side by side that neither glanced in the direction of the commissioner and myself until our interview was over.

I went over to the State House Annex to see how Roger Yancey was doing in the Attorney General's office.

After greeting me and introducing me to another deputy who had been in the department more than 25 years, Roger pointed to a pile of legal documents before him and said:

"THIS IS PROOF to you and other taxpayers that when you are being paid $9,000 a year to work for the state you must give value for value received.

"This is no place for loafers. Our department is being run efficiently, and each deputy is giving of his best to fill his assignments with credit to the department and the people of New Jersey."

Yancey commutes daily to Trenton from his home in Newark.

Toomer to stay

SAVANNAH, Ga. (ANP) — Louis B. Toomer, register of the U.S. Treasury, denied reports that he would resign soon, but admitted he might quit in the spring.

Toomer, a business, banker and real estate man, said he was at home on three months leave without pay to look after business affairs.

He added that he was prompted to take leave also because the Treasury's appropriation was slashed by Congress.

Mrs. Sophia Holmes was the first Negro woman ever officially appointed to the services of the United States Government. She received an official commendation from the President and an executive appointment as janitress at $660 a year back in 1862 after she prevented a $200,000 theft from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

A thief had hidden the money in a wooden box with a hinged lid and had planned to return and pick up the box during the night. But he had not reckoned with Mrs. Holmes, at that time a $15-a-month charwoman. The inquisitive Mrs. Holmes reported to work early that evening and when she found the money-packed box, she sat on top of the box and waited far into the night until Treasurer Francis E. First Negro Meets With Ike's Cabinet

By Norman Walker
Associated Press

Six months ago J. Ernest Wilkins was a Negro lawyer quietly practicing law in Chicago. Yesterday—capping a meteoric Government career—he was summoned to the weekly Cabinet meeting with President Eisenhower.

It's the first time within knowledge of present White House aides that a Negro was called to take part officially in a session of the Cabinet, the Nation's top policy group.

Wilkins as Assistant Secretary of Labor, substituted for Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, who was away on a speaking engagement in New Jersey.

Wilkins later described the occasion as a "challenging experience," and praised President Eisenhower's handling of the meeting.

He told newsmen as he faced a battery of movie and television cameras after the Cabinet meeting:

"Obviously he (the President) had the matter well in hand and understood all of the items on the agenda."

Vice President Richard M. Nixon and several Cabinet members stepped outside after the meeting to pose for pictures with Wilkins.

When Mr. Eisenhower selected Wilkins last March for the Labor Department job, the 60-year-old attorney had only the average citizen's familiarity with Government, labor affairs and diplomacy. He's gotten a quick, liberal education in all three.

Shortly after taking the oath of office, Wilkins was selected to head a score of American Government, business and labor union experts as this Nation's delegation to the International Labor Organization meeting at Geneva. This caused quite a stir in international circles, particularly because of repeated Red propaganda accusing this country of mistreating Negroes.

Wilkins, born at Farmington, Mo., attended both the Chicago and Illinois universities and served as an infantry supply sergeant in France in 1918. Active in civic affairs in Chicago, he was president of the Cook County Bar Association in 1941-42.

He has three sons, one a nuclear physicist and the other two lawyers, one here with the Justice Department and one with his father's law office in Chicago.

Harold Flowers Named Assistant To Murphy

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—A colored lawyer, who campaigned for the renomination of Senator John L. McClellan in the Arkansas Democratic primary has been named executive assistant to James L. Murphy, chairman of the National Citizens for Eisenhower Congressional Committee.

He is Harold Flowers, of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, a formal president of the National Bar Association, who will have charge of directing the campaign for a Republican Congress among colored voters.

Flowers has been engaged in the practice of law in Pine Bluff since 1935. He has served as president of the Arkansas Conefrence of NAACP Branches and also as president of the Pine Bluff NAACP Branch which reached an all-time membership peak of more than 4,000 under his leadership.

A member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Flowers was named "Man of the Year" in 1952 at a five-state district meeting at Wichita, Kansas. He is a member of the Methodist Church and is one of two colored persons serving on its Board of Pensions.

"A Congress pledged to support President Eisenhower is a vital need for minority groups in the United States" Flowers declared Tuesday before leaving Washington on a nationwide speaking tour.

"The Republican Administration has paved the way for the establishment of a strong two-party system in the South," he said.

The Arkansas civil rights lawyer added that colored people must not forget that more than 10,000,000 colored people live in the South, that they constitute 70 per cent of the total colored population and have the opportuniy to paricipate in democracy only through a one-party system.

"In our Eisenhower group are citizens who share the mutual and burning conviction to support President Eisenhower," he said. "The local groups scattered over America are moving swiftly in integrating Negroes in political organization.

"We are out to win support for the President. In so doing, we must realize that effective political action comes from complete participation from all segments of the population.

"A new era in politics is approaching. With opportunities for better jobs increasing, colored workers should have the time to help determine the policy of our government."

The National Citizens for Eisenhower Congressional Committee is completely independent of the Republican party but its goal is the election of Republican congressional candidates who request its assistance and pledge support to the Eisenhower Administration.

Richardson To Head U. S. Parole Board

Associated Press

Attorney General Brownell yesterday designated 52-year-old Scovel Richardson, first Negro member of the Federal Board of Parole, as board chairman for the coming year.

Richardson, who resigned as dean of the School of Law at Lincoln University, St. Louis, Mo., last year to become a board member, succeeds as chairman Dr. Paul Tappan, a native of Danbury, Conn. Tappan resigned from the board early this month to become professor of sociology at Washington Square College of New York University and a lecturer in the university's law school.

Richardson formerly in private law practice in Chicago, is a native of Nashville, Tenn.

Brownell, at ceremonies installing Lewis J. Grout of Kansas City, Mo., and John E. Henry, a native of Waverly, Ill., as new board members, announced a new policy of rotating the chairmanship annually.

Grout, formerly chief probation officer for the Federal District Court at Kansas City, and Henry, former Montana Public Service Commissioner and former warden of the Montana State Prison, were confirmed by the Senate last month.

The Attorney General also announced that George Reed, board member from St. Paul, Minn., will continue as chairman of the board's youth corrections division.

Mrs. Dorothy McCullough Lee, former Republican mayor of Portland, Oreg., and the only woman member of the board, will continue to serve on both the youth and adult divisions.

The two members sworn in yesterday fill the vacancies created by Dr. Tappan's resignation and the death a month ago of James A. Johnson, former warden at Alcatraz.

The seven-member board will have another vacancy at the end of this week, due to the resignation of Richard A. Chappell, one-time chief of the United States Federal Court probation system. Chappell is leaving the Government September 30 to enter private law practice at Macon, Ga., and teach at Mercer College in that city.

Judge Scott Returns to Bench To Warn All Drunks About Jail

Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott was back on his old beat yesterday—Drunk court. He told the man kho stood before him at the bar to spread the word around.

For the next sixty days, Judge Scott warned he will send habitual offenders to Occoquan in short order if they appear before him more than once. "Bring your bags with you," he advised.

The Judge, 19 years on the bench, was brusque with a few men who said they didn't need help. But he told others he wanted to do everything he could for them. "I hate to send a man to jail for being drunk," he observed.

And he is still following his rule of taking a first offender's personal bond not to do it again and turning him loose. Thus, he was able to tell one citizen with no record: "I'm glad to meet you. It's a pleasure to be able to give your first chance."

This referred to a man who said he was from Wilmington, N. C. Judge Scott put the man to the test. "What's the main street there?" he asked. "Market Street," the man replied.

"You may go," said the Judge, whose home town is Wilmington, N. C.

But another man, who offered a cheerful "Good morning" as he asked the Judge to release him on his personal bond got a quick turndown. The jurist cited his long record and told him he could put him in jail for a year. "I might start doing that," the Judge mused reflectively, spearing the man with his eyes.

"Don't start on me, "quavered the man.

"Thirty days," said the Judge, "and tell all the other fellows when you get there."

"Good night," said the drunk as he stumbled out.

"Good night, sir," replied the Judge.

Republicans Name George W. Lee And Two Other Colored Leaders To Positions

Washington, D. C.—The Republican National Committee released on May 7th its latest list of prominent colored party leaders who had been appointed to responsible positions under the Eisenhower administration.

"Another first" was an item of news that could be attached to one of these appointments, meaning that the administration had again found a place for a colored American such as a member of the race had held under a previous administration.

The other two appointments went to Southern men well known for their activities in the G. O. P. for many years.

The list includes the name of Mallory C. Walker of Portland, Oregon, who has recently been appointed Immigration and Naturalization Examiner in the Portland Office. Mr. Walker received his public education in Kansas City Mo., his college education at Xavier University in New Orleans and is a graduate in law from Northwestern University in Illinois. Born May 28, 1924, Mr. Walker is only 30 years old. His is the "another first" appointment.

David E. Longley of Richmond, Va., is another appointee, named to the National Board of Field Advisers to the Small Business Administration for Region 4, which covers Virginia, the District of Columbia, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia.

Mr. Longley has 32 years of business experience, 18 of them in the insurance business with the Virginia Mutual Benefit Life. He is a former manager of an insurance company in Knoxville, Tenn.

The other appointee is George W. Lee of Memphis, a graduate of Alcorn A. & I. College in Mississippi, District Manager of the Atlanta Life Insurance Company and a Director of the Universal Life. He is an official of the Elks and sponsors that Fraternal Order's Annual Oratorical Contests.

The Tennessean also was appointed a field advisor of the Small Business Administration, Region 5.

Mr. Toomer's speech

Louis B. Toomer of Savannah, Ga., our new U.S. Register of the Treasury, is a homespun grass roots orator.

He recently made an address before the Second Annual Clinic of the Baltimore Business Council. Recorded, the transcription of it turned out to be 25 pages long.

About the middle of his speech, Mr. Toomer said, "in conclusion and finally" and then kept on talking.

With one - sixth of the way yet to go, Mr. Toomer said: "You know when I am speaking I have three 'in conclusions' and two 'finallys.' I am not going to carry you ladies and gentlemen that far. I have only had one."

It is not likely that Mr. Toomer will be invited back to Baltimore or anywhere else to talk that length of time.

If it just happens that he is, we would suggest to him that he limit himself to just one 'finally and in conclusion.'

And more important that he direct his speech writer to cut the length of his discourse to no more than 30 minutes and that it be provided with a beginning, a middle and an end.

AS FAMILY LOOKS ON:

Wilkins takes oath as Labor Dept. aide

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Before a standing-room-only audience, J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago lawyer and prominent layman of the Methodist Church, last week took the oath of office Thursday as Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs.

Thus Mr. Wilkins became the second colored man in the history of the United States to hold a "Little Cabinet" position. The other was the late William H. Lewis of Boston, who served as an Assistant Attorney General in the administration of President William Howard Taft.

The oath was administered by Justice Harold H. Burton of the United States Supreme Court, who had Mr. Wilkins to repeat the long form oath. Usually the short form is used at swearing-in ceremonies and afterwards the appointee signs the long form.

But at ceremonies at which he administers the oath, Justice Burton insists on the long form.

Mitchell Praises Him

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell again praised Mr. Wilkins for "skill that is seldom seen in government" with which Mr. Wilkins conducted the work of President Eisenhower's Government Contract Committee.

"I am confident that Mr. Wilkins will do an outstanding job," Mr. Mitchell said, "and will reflect credit on the country and the Department of Labor."

Mr. Wilkins, in turn, expressed his appreciation to President Eisenhower and Mr. Mitchell for his appointment, and to Justice Burton for taking "time out of his busy life" to administer the oath.

Mr. Wilkins introduced his wife, three sons and two daughters-in-law—Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Wilkins, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Julian B. Wilkins, and John R. Wilkins to the gathering.

J. Ernest Wilkins Jr., is a scientist with the Nuclear Development Associates, White Plains, N.Y. John R. Wilkins is a lawyer in the Department of Justice here and Julian B. Wilkins will take over his father's law practice in Chicago.

Others present included Dr. Samuel H. Sweeney, pastor of St. Marks Episcopal Church, New York City, who is the father of Mrs. Julian Wilkins, and Mrs. Effie Madden of Chicago, mother of Mrs. J. Ernest Wilkins Jr.

Also present was Maxwell M. Rabb, Cabinet Operations Officer and Associate Counsel to President Eisenhower.

Mr. Mitchell read a number of telegrams received by Mr. Wilkins, congratulating him upon his appointment.

Auditorium Was Full

The ceremony was held in the room back of the Departmental Auditorium. About 300 persons were present. All seats were taken and a number of people were lined up against the walls.

Mr. Wilkins will have charge of the Labor Department's international activities, including participation in the International Labor Organization, and labor aspects of the Foreign Service and Technical Assistance Program.

A native of Farmington, Mo., Mr. Wilkins graduated with high honors from the University of Illinois, served overseas in World War I and later practiced law in Chicago.

Jane Spaulding Quits Hobby, Takes New Job

By ETHEL PAYNE

Defender Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding last week resigned her post as assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of Health Education and Welfare and accepted a post on the War Claims Commission.

Her new job as research adviser on legal policy will pay $10,800. Her duties will be coordinator of research projects relating to war claims activities. Mrs. Spaulding's former position paid $9,600.

Mrs. Spaulding's resignation came after a break in relations with Mrs. Hobby over her refusal to sign a letter justifying Mrs. Hobby's slow-down of integration in schools on military posts. The White House is reported to have stepped into the situation when Mrs. Spaulding refused to yield to pressure to take a lower position or resign.

The situation is said to have caused the administration considerable embarrassment and alarm. Max Rabb, the president's legal adviser on minorities, held a long conference at the White House with Mrs. Spaulding.

Apparently, the administration wanted to save face for Mrs. Hobby but did not want to take the risk of wide-spread public reaction against the ouster of Mrs. Spaulding, who got her job as a reward for her hard work with the Citizens For Eisenhower Committee in the last presidential campaign.

Her political sponsor was Mrs. Oswald Lord who succeeded Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt as United States delegate to the United Nations.

John Russell, press officer for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said Mrs. Hobby, who could not be reached for a statement, was en route to Atlantic City to address a canning association meeting.

Asked whether the position would still be maintained, Russell said that he doubted that it would under the re-organization of the department.

Informed of the outcome of the case, Clarence Mitchell of the Washington bureau of the NAACP, which exposed the plan to oust Mrs. Spaulding, said: "This was a great day for the Confederates. When that announcement was given out it should have been followed by a band playing Dixie."

The resignation became effective Friday, Jan. 22. Assistant Secretary Nelson Rockefeller, who has been called the Cabinet man in the case, accepted Mrs. Spaulding's letter of resignation for Mrs. Hobby. The text of Mrs. Spaulding's letter follows:

"I have recently been offered a position in a field of activity in which I am tremendously interested. This position in the War Claims Commission represents for me opportunities for advancement and for service involving increased responsibility, and I want very much to accept it.

"It is therefore with deep regret that I hereby tender my resignation as assistant to the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

"In tendering this resignation, I wish to express my sense of appreciation for the privilege it has been for me to work with you in pursuance of the great humanitarian goals of the department."

Rockefeller replied:

"In the Secretary's absence from Washington, I should like to thank you for your letter of Jan. 21 in which you advise here that you wish to resign from the department to accept another position.

"Since your new position, as you say in your letter, offers opportunities for advancement, I quite understand your desire to accept.

"I have discussed your wishes with the Secretary by teephone and she has authorized me to accept your resignation.

"With thanks for your contribution to the work of the department and with kind regards."

Jane Spaulding On Her Way Out

BY ETHEL PAYNE

Defender Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, is currently planning to reorganize her agency and to eliminate the position held by Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding as assistant to the secretary.

The Washington Bureau of the NAACP released Saturday a confidential memorandum in which it said it had learned from unimpeachable sources details of the impending action.

Mrs. Spaulding, the memorandum stated, incurred the wrath of the secretary because she refused to sign a statement justifying Mrs. Hobby's deliberate slow down of integration of the 21 schools on military posts operated by local authorities.

The statement, which said that integration would cause the complete withdrawal of local authorities and leave the children without any education at all, was in defense of the expose of Mrs. Hobby's attitude by the NAACP and Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York.

Worried by resulting publicity, Mrs. Hobby has sought to use Mrs. Spaulding as a shield for her biased attitude. The Defender has reported in its columns on a number of occasions that Mrs. Hobby was quietly sabotaging the order for integration on military posts.

In addition to this, Mrs. Hobby wants to unload Mrs. Spaulding because she has made two forthright speeches attacking discrimination and because she has supported the NAACP position that a grant of one and a half million dollars should not be made to a municipal hospital in Houston, Texas if the hospital would not agree to permit colored doctors to have the use of its facilities. Mrs. Hobby favors operation of the hospital on a discriminatory basis.

The strategy of getting rid of Mrs. Spaulding will take one of two courses.

One, she will be offered a position at a lower grade and salary and it is expected that she will not accept this offer. Her present post pays $9,600. The lower post would pay $7,000 and would confine itself to the handling of juvenile delinquent problems.

Two, if Mrs. Spaulding is forced to resign, the department will attempt to explain its position on the grounds that there is a general reorganization of the department and white as well as colored persons had to be dropped. One is Mrs. Spaulding and the other is John F. Grindle of Pennsylvania, who has also fallen out of favor with the secretary. There is at present a vacancy in the department as assistant secretary, a job which pays $15,000 a year.

Mrs. Hobby, who reportedly wants no Negro as assistant or in any policy making position, will say that Mrs. Spaulding cannot be promoted to the post because she is not qualified, the memorandum stated. But the NAACP, which has made a thorough survey of Mrs. Spaulding's background, says that she is actually better qualified than Mrs. Hobby.

Although Mrs. Spaulding's present job has a civil service description which involves duties covering all phases of the department, she has been officially told by Mrs. Hobby to confine herself to special assignments which the secretary emphasizes must be "noncontroversial," according to the memo.

Mrs. Spaulding, who worked during the last presidential campaign with the citizens for Eisenhower committee, was named to her position a year ago in Feb.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Naomah Maise of Howard university, laughed and told the Defender: "I'm not thinking of resigning. I have entirely too much to do.

executive secretary of the National Council of Negro Women, is said to have been selected to fill the vacancy left by Mrs. Spaulding's resignation, but at a lower salary and classification.

When asked about a story published last week in a national magazine that he plans to resign because of Congressional criticism and threats of a probe, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president

REFUSED TO SIGN DENIAL LETTER:

Report Mrs. Spaulding to be eased out of HEW for backing NAACP proposals

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Authoritative sources revealed Saturday that the skids are being greased for dropping Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding of Charleston, W. Va., as assistant to the secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The method by which she will be eased out, usually reliable sources said, was through a reorganization of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which is currently being planned.

Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, was not available Saturday for comment.

Duties Confined

According to reports, Mrs. Hobby has asked Mrs. Spaulding to confine her official activities to special assignments, speeches on behalf of the department, and reviews of relatively simple matters referred to her by the department head.

A source, which asked that his identity be withheld, said Mrs. Spaulding's job sheet defining her duties, includes assignments in various phases of the department's activities.

The contemplated reorganization, it was said, is aimed at forcing Mrs. Spaulding's resignation because she had refused to send out, over her signature, a letter denying charges made by Rep. Adam C. Powell, (Dem.) and the NAACP that Mrs. Hobby was seeking to delay integration of schools operated by local school boards on military posts.

NAACP Support Hit

A second reason advanced is that Mrs. Spaulding is supporting the opposition of the NAACP to a grant of $1,500,000 in federal funds for the construction of a municipal hospital in Houston, Tex., unless the hospital agrees to permit colored doctors full use of its facilities.

Mrs. Spaulding also is said to have made several forthright speeches attacking discrimination.

The plan outlined for easing her out of the department, it was said, is to offer her a job at a lower salary. Her present salary is $9,600. The lower job, involving the handling of juvenile delinquency problems, pays a salary of $7,000.

Explanation Reads

If Mrs. Spaulding resigns rather than take a downgrading, it is was said, the department will explain its action on the ground that there was a reorganization and white as well as colored employees had to be dropped.

An informed source said, only two persons are scheduled to be dropped. They are Mrs. Spaulding and John F. Grindle, of Pennsylvania, who also appears to be in disfavor.

The only other person to be affected by the reorganization, it was said, is a white employee who will get a raise from $7,040 to $9,600 a year.

It was predicted that the department will say Mrs. Spaulding cannot be promoted because she is not qualified.

Republican Supporter

A life-long Republican, Mrs. Spaulding was a key member of the women's division in the national headquarters of Citizens for Eisenhower - Nixon during the 1952 campaign.

She organized colored voters throughout the country for the Republican candidates.

Mrs. Spaulding, a graduate of Fisk university, has had wide experience in social welfare work, having served four years as state director of colored relief for the West Virginia Relief Administration.

Our Opinions

The Mess That Hobby Made

The "resignation" of Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding as an aide to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of Health Education and Welfare to accept a better paying position offers a temporary solution to an ugly situation.

The ugly situation, according to information provided by the Washington bureau of the NAACP was a clash between the two women over certain matters of policy.

The information given us is that Mrs. Hobby wanted to use Mrs. Spaulding as the patsy in slowing down the execution of presidential order to end racial segregation in schools located on federal property.

The other point of difference between the two, reports state, was Mrs. Spaulding's objection to the appropriation of a $1,500,000 to a Houston, Texas hospital which has a Jim Crow policy.

This is supposed to have been a pet project of Mrs. Hobby who comes from Houston, and the protest voiced by Mrs. Spaulding is supposed to have infuriated the lady cabinet member.

The subterfuge of reorganizing the department to oust Mrs. Spaulding, of course, is the act of a small person misusing authority and raises the question in our mind of Mrs. Hobby's fitness for the high position she holds.

While giving Mrs. Spaulding another job that pays her approximately $1,000 more per year might fulfill the administration's obligation to reward her faithful service during the presidential campaign, it does not solve the basic problem involved.

The basic problem, it seems to us, is Mrs. Hobby's footdragging on carrying out a presidential order and secondly her racial attitude.

Mrs. Hobby as a citizen, a Texan and a southerner has the right to her theories and opinions on matters regarding the relationships of the races to each other in this country. We do not quarrel with that. If she is a white supremist or like Talmadge, Byrnes, thinks that east is east and west is west and never the twain shall meet, we can't do anything about that.

But as a public official, an important one, we have a right to concern ourselves when she allows her own personal views to interfere with her responsibilities to the public.

Regardless of the prestige of her office, she is still a public servant of all the people. She is bound to carry out the policy of the administration of which she is a part and should keep in mind that the funds over which she has jurisdiction come from the pocket of all the people.

A congressional investigation of Mrs. Hobby's conduct is warranted at this time and should be immediately instituted.

Of politics and politicians

Not too much attention has been paid to the real reason behind the dumping of Mrs. Jane Spaulding. That reason centers on the ambition of her ex-boss, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, to be elected governor of Texas. Mrs. Spaulding politely, but firmly, refused to take low on such politically explosive issues as discrimination and segregation. Something had to give. So it had to be Mrs. Spaulding. Meanwhile, Mrs. Hobby is pulling out all stops in an effort to halt integration of schools on military posts. The order has already been issued by Defense Secretary Wilson but that's no assurance. Backtracking White House aides could still side with Oveta.

Councilman Earl Brown has been named chairman of the NYC Council's Health and Education committee. He also holds membership on Housing, State Legislature Rules and Labor and Industry committees . . . Dr. William Myers, dentist, has filed as a candidate for the Petersburg, Va., city council, subject to the April 6 Democratic primary.

She did counselling, psychiatric and medical referral work in her community.

For a period of time she was employed by the Division of Parole and her assignments included preparation of parole reports.

Later, Miss Washington did investigation work for Women's Court, the Board of Education, Children's Court and served as as assistant to Dr. Harriett Goldbert, corporation counsel at the Board of Education in New York.

She will report for duty on April 26.

This is another example of the Eisenhower Administration's program in providing opportunities in government for young lawyers.

Appointment Of Protestant Judges Hailed

WASHINGTON — For the first time in 20 years two Protestants have appointed federal judges in the southern district of New York state.

The appointments among four made by President Eisenhower last week, were hailed by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D.-N.Y.).

"This was the first success we have made in reversing the Protestant massacre," Powell said. "I regret, however, that one of these appointments was not a Negro, for no Negro has ever been appointed."

Powell, himself a Baptist minister, said he will continue to press for Protestant integration at city, state and federal levels of government.

Labor Department aide J. Ernest Wilkins finds first congressional hearing smooth

WASHINGTON (NNPA) —Three days after he took office, J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of labor, appeared before the House Appropriations subcommittee on Labor Department appropriations but was not questioned about the request for funds for salaries and expenses of the Office of International Affairs.

Rep. Fred E. Busbey, (Rep. of Illinois) subcommittee chairman, introduced Mr. Wilkins to the other members of the subcommittee and had the Assistant Secretary of Labor to give them a brief statement of his educational and professional background.

Mr. Busbey interrupted Mr. Wilkins' statement to tell his colleagues that Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins were among the dinner guests at an affair he had recently attended.

The dinner was given by Senator Everett M. Dirksen (Rep., of Ill.), and Mrs. Dirksen for Government officials from Illinois, he revealed.

During conversation at the dinner table, Mr. Busbey said, Senator Dirksen mentioned Mr. Wilkins' three sons.

Very Proud

"I was very proud of those boys from what I learned, and I think you can be justly proud of them," Mr. Busbey told Mr. Wilkins.

The Illinois Congressman then had Mr. Wilkins to tell something of the accomplishments of his three sons—J. Ernest Jr., a physicist with the Nuclear Development Associates, White Plains, New York; John R., a lawyer in the Department of Justice here, and Julian, a member of the law firm of Wilkins Wilkins and Wilkins, Chicago.

Later during the hearings Representative John E. Fogarty, Democrat, of Rhode Island, asked Mr. Wilkins how long he had been on the job.

"This is my third day," Mr. Wilkins replied.

Mr. Fogarty told him he was impressed with his background and "I think you are going to do a good job."

NEGRO ATTENDS IKE'S CABINET MEETING; FIRST IN HISTORY

Wilkins, Asst. Sec. Represented Dept. Of Labor At The White House

WASHINGTON — The Eisenhower Administration, again made history last week.

For the first time since the birth of the Nation, a Negro attended the President's Cabinet meeting as a departmental representative.

James E. Wilkins, assistant Secretary of Labor represented the U. S. Dept. of Labor because Secretary of Labor James Mitchell was out of town on a speaking tour.

Chicago Negro Named to High Labor Post

By the Associated Press

President Eisenhower yesterday nominated J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago Negro attorney, to be Assistant Secretary of Labor.

"This is the first time, so far as we know, that a Negro has been appointed to a cabinet or sub-cabinet post," White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told newsmen.

The selection of Wilkins is subject to Senate confirmation. He would succeed Spencer Miller, Jr., whose resignation, effective March 10, was announced by Hagerty yesterday.

Wilkins, 60, is a native of Farmington, Mo. He received his AB degree at the University of Illinois, his law degree at the University of Chicago and a doctor of laws degree at Lincoln University in Missouri. Wilkins has been a practicing attorney in Chicago since 1921. He is a former president of the Cook County (Chicago) Bar Association.

Hagerty said Miller is resigning as assistant secretary to fill a commitment made last fall to give a series of lectures abroad.

However, there have been reports in labor-management circles for sometime that the Administration was disturbed by foreign policy statements made by Miller while travelling abroad, and wanted him to leave.

The assistant labor secretary post which Wilkins is to fill, succeeding Miller, is a job of supervising Labor Department contracts with labor movements in foreign countries.

There are three assistant secretaryships, the others being concerned with (a) employment and manpower and (b) standards and statistics.

Negro in 'Little Cabinet' Sees Self as Answer to U. S. Critics

Mitchell Aide Is His Race's First in So High a Position

J. Ernest Wilkins, the first Negro ever named to a "little cabinet" post, believes his appointment as an Assistant Secretary of Labor is an answer "more eloquent than any words to those of the world who say the American Government is not fair to all of its citizens."

Further, the 60-year-old Chicago attorney, said he regarded the appointment as an honor not so much to himself individually as "to the race I represent."

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said: "This is the first time, so far as we know, that a Negro has been appointed to a cabinet or subcabinet post."

However, Justice Department records show that a Massachusetts Negro, William H. Lewis, once held a comparable position when he served as an assistant attorney general in 1911-13 under President Taft.

Mr. Wilkins had something to say at a press conference late yesterday about racial conditions in Washington. He was reminded that Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, now a United Nations official, once refused appointment as an Assistant Secretary of State, saying he didn't wish his family to live in a city where racial segregation was practiced. Recently a colored leader turned down a post in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare on the same grounds.

Sees D. C. Improved.

"I think Washington has improved considerably," Mr. Wilkins said. "Conditions are much healthier for our people here now than they were only a few months ago."

Subject to confirmation by the Senate, Mr. Wilkins will be in charge of international labor affairs for the Labor Department. He will represent the United States in sessions of the International Labor Organization and at other conferences.

Republican and Democratic members of the Senate Labor Committee applauded the nomination, but stressed they would not be influenced by his race in considering confirmation.

J. ERNEST WILKINS.

"We're interested in his qualifications, not the color of his skin," said the committee chairman, Senator H. Alexander Smith, Republican, of New Jersey. Senator Smith said his committee will hold hearings on the nomination next week.

Spencer Miller Fired.

Mr. Wilkins would succeed Spencer Miller, jr., who was named by former Secretary of Labor Durkin and fired two days ago by Secretary of Labor Mitchell.

It was reported that Mr. Miller aroused the ire of the administration by speeches overseas in which he said Chiang Kai-shek, leader of the Nationalist Chinese forces, was in a position to invade the Chinese mainland and hold a beachhead in Red Chinese territory.

The administration apparently took the position that Mr. Miller was getting into the field of foreign policy and that this was none of his business.

In the $15,000-a-year job, Mr. Wilkins said he will have "the opportunity to advance the good will and understanding of the American Government in the labor markets all over the world." He pointed out that three-fourths of the world's peoples are non-white, and he believes he can help "these people recognize that America stands for fair play."

Glad to Be on "Team."

"Our present administration," Mr. Wilkins continued, "has been and will continue to do all of the things necessary to make this a Government of all the American people. I am happy to play on a team that has as its objectives fair play and equal opportunities for all of its citizens."

Mr. Wilkins was asked what he thought of President's Eisenhower's opposition to a compulsory Fair Employment Practices Committee. He replied it was a "matter that is not in my jurisdiction." Secretary Mitchell favors a compulsory FEPC.

For the past 32 years, Mr. Wilkins has been a practicing attorney in Chicago. Since last summer he has served as vice chairman of the Government Contracts Committee, which policies non-discrimination clauses in Government contracts. He has no labor or union background.

Born in Missouri.

Mr. Wilkins, a Republican and a Methodist, was born in Farmington, Mo. He was graduated with honors from the University of Illinois in 1918, and later received graduate degrees in law from the University of Chicago and Lincoln University in Missouri.

He was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1921 and has practiced there since. He has served in many civic, church and fraternal organizations in Chicago.

Mr. Wilkins is married and has three sons, John Robinson, an attorney at the Justice Department; J. Ernest, jr., a nuclear scientist of White Plains, N. Y., and Julian Byrd, a lawyer in Chicago. J. Ernest, jr., was graduated at the University of Chicago at 16 and received his Ph.D. at 19. His family said that at the time he was the youngest person to graduate from the university.

NEGRO NAMED ASSISTANT LABOR SECRETARY

For First Time

Negro Is Nominated To Sub-Cabinet Post

See picture below.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Eisenhower Thursday nominated J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago Negro attorney, as assistant secretary of labor in charge of international affairs, succeeding Spencer Miller, Jr., who was fired.

Wilkins, 60, a Republican, told a news conference he considers his appointment not so much a personal honor but one "to the race I represent."

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said: "This is the first time, so far as we know, that a Negro has been appointed to a cabinet or sub-cabinet post."

"I consider my appointment an eloquent answer to those who say the American government is not fair to all of its citizens," said Wilkins, who will represent this country at international labor conferences.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell praised Wilkins' recent work as vice chairman of the government contracts compliance committee, established by Eisenhower to enforce non-discrimination rules in hiring workers on government projects.

Mitchell, at the same time, disclosed that Miller, whom Wilkins is replacing, was fired.

Mitchell said he requested Miller's resignation. When asked why, Mitchell replied he merely exercised a right to select his own assistants.

Miller was named assistant secretary when former secretary Martin P. Durkin headed the department. It was reliably reported that Miller, once associated with the AFL and more recently a New Jersey state highway commissioner, had annoyed the administration by several speeches abroad.

Standing Room Only For Wilkins Swear-In

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Before a standing-room-only audience, J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago lawyer and prominent layman of the Methodist Church, took the oath of office Thursday as assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs.

Thus Mr. Wilkins became the second colored man in the history of the United States to hold a "Little Cabinet" position. The other was the late William H. Lewis of Boston, who served as an Assistant Attorney General in the administration of President William Howard Taft.

Oath From Burton

The oath was administered by Justice Harold H. Burton of the United States Supreme Court who had Mr. Wilkins to report after tice here, and Julian B. Wilkins will take over his father's law practice in Chicago.

Others present included Dr. Samuel H. Sweeney, pastor of St. Marks Episcopal church, New York City, who is the father of Mrs. Julian Wilkins, and Mrs. Effie Madden of Chicago, mother of Mrs. J. Ernest Wilkins Jr.

Also present was Maxwell M. Rabb, Cabinet Operations Officer and Associate Counsel to President Eisenhower.

Mr. Mitchell read a number of telegrams received by Mr. Wilkins, congratulating him upon his appointment.

him the long-form oath. Usually the short form is used at swearing-in ceremonies and afterwards the appointee signs the long form.

But at the ceremonies at which he administers the oath, Justice Burton insists on the long form. He even used that form in administering the oath to ex-President Herbert Hoover as chairman of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, in the presence of President Eisenhower.

Repeating after Justice Burton, Mr. Wilkins not only swore to support and defend the Constitution, but he also swore:

Denounces Communism

"I am not a Communist or a Fascist. I do not advocate, nor am I a member of any organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence or other unconstitutional means, or seeks by force or violence to deny to other persons their rights under the Constitution of the United States.

"I do further swear that I will not so advocate nor will I become a member of such an organization during the period that I am an employee of the Federal Government."

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell again praised Mr. Wilkins for the "skill that is seldom seen in government" with which Mr. Wilkins conducted the work of President Eisenhower's Government Contract Committee. He said he had been impressed by Mr. Wilkins' "knowledge, efficiency and integrity," and was very happy to recommend his appointment as Assistant Secretary of Labor to Mr. Eisenhower when the opportunity occurred.

Will Do Good Job

"I am confident that Mr. Wilkins will do an outstanding job," Mr. Mitchell said, "and will reflect credit on the country and the Department of Labor."

Mr. Wilkins, in turn, expressed his appreciation to President Eisenhower and Mr. Mitchell for his appoinment, and to Justice Burton for taking "time out of his busy life" to administer the oath.

Noting the presence of a large number of his friends, Mr. Wilkins said:

"I can only promise you one thing—that I shall faithfully, honestly and sincerely, and I hope well, perform the duties of the office to which I have been appointed, to the end that our America, our United States will take its rightful place at the head of all of the nations of the world, under the leadership of Mr. Mitchell and our great and distinguished President Eisenhower."

Mr. Wilkins introduced to the gathering the members of his family—his wife, three sons and two daughters-in-law—Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Wilkins Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Julian B. Wilkins, and John R. Wilkins.

J. Ernest Wilkins Jr., is a scientist with the Nuclear Development Associates, White Plains, New York. John R. Wilkins is a lawyer in the Department of Jus-

WASHINGTON—Three new appointments in advisory posts were made last week by the Eisenhower Administration.

One was to Detroit's John W. Roxborough II, nephew of the former manager of Joe Louis. He was appointed advisor in the personnel branch of the State Department.

Lt. George W. Lee of Memphis, insurance executive and high official of the Elks, was named to the Small business Administration as an advisor for the Southern Region. His district includes five Virgin Islands.

Also named to the Small Business Administration was David Longley of Richmond, Va., who is assistant secretary and educational director of the Virginia Mutual Life Insurance co.

He is a graduate of Dunbar High School and Howard University from which he received his LL.B. in 1938.

Negro Page Boy For High Court

WASHINGTON—The U. S. Supreme Court last week appointed the first Negro to serve as page boy. He is Charles Vernon Bush, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bush of Washington, D. C. His father is educational director of Howard University's Clarke Hall.

The youngster will report for duty as one of four page boys to the Court on the last Monday in September. He could earn up to $2,700 a year.

Young Bush's appointment was made by Court Marshal T. Perry Lippitt with the approval of Chief Justice Earl Warren. Court officials said the boy will begin high school work in September at the Capitol Page School, the first Negro ever to attend this institution.

Page boys are constantly in view behind the justices when court is in session and perform very confidential duties.

Supreme Court page boy assignments are highly coveted. Prominent lawyers attempt to pull high political strings for their sons to serve. For a teenager, it is comparable to the prestige of a young attorney when he is chosen to serve as clerk to one of the august judges.

Most pages end up as lawyers, and many in former years have become famous and wealthy, but Charles says his ambition is to attend Massachusetts Institute of Technology and become an engineer.

Charles was one of five Negro youths recommended by Assistant School Superintendent Harold A. Haynes. Teachers in the school system nominate the candidates.

Charles' school and other activities include: National Honor Society, class treasurer, Perfect Attendance Certificate for three years, spelling team (two years), honorable mention for project at annual Science Fair (1954), school library and cafeteria committees, participated in radio program, National History Week, 1954; participated in educational TV program on public schools (1952), selected by P-TA for two-week, expense-paid YMCA camp and YMCA membership for one year; stage director of school play (1953), member class basketball team, captain of class debating team, on business staff of Banneker News, co-star in class day play (1954), Washington Post-Times Herald carrier boy for two years, active member All Souls Unitarian Church School of Religion.

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP).—A Negro youngster has been named a page boy to the United States Supreme Court. He is the first of his race ever to be so honored. The fourteen-year-old boy, Charles Vernon Bush, will begin his duties as one of the court's four page boys for the term beginning Oct. 4. Charles is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bush, of Washington. His father is an educational director of Clarke Hall at Howard University here. Charles, an honor student, will attend the Capitol Page School along with the pages who serve the Senators and Representatives. He will be the first Negro ever to attend the school. The appointment, announced today, was made by Court Marshal T. Perry Lippitt and was approved by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Wilkins Makes History By Attending Cabinet Meeting

WASHINGTON—J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of Labor, made history last week when he became the first Negro to sit in on a formal cabinet meeting at the White House.

Wilkins, 60, was pinch hitting for Labor Secretary, James P. Mitchell, who was out of town on a speaking engagement. The cabinet holds weekly meetings.

While the cabinet was meeting, another caller at the White House was Dr. Frank Snowden, jr., who conferred with James P. Haggerty, the president's press secretary on some of the duties of his new position as cultural attache at the American Embassy in Rome.

The announcement of his appointment was made last week by the State Department. Haggerty told reporters the president had asked him to express his "heartiest congratulations on the appointment and his very best wishes for the work he will do for our government in Italy."

Dr. Snowden will take a leave of absence as head of the Classics department and the Summer School at Howard University where he has been teaching since 1940. He was educated in the Boston Public schools and received his Ph.D. from Harvard U.

Wilkins described the cabinet session as a "challenging experience," and praised President Eisenhower's handling of the meeting.

Wilkins, who has been in office less than six months, was selected to head a score of American government, business and labor union experts as America's delegation to the International Labor Organization meeting in Geneva, Switzerland.

A native of Farmington, Mo., and a veteran of World War I, Wilkins practiced law in Chicago for several years and served as president of the Cook County Bar Association in 1941-42.

DR. FRANK SNOWDEN, recently appointed to diplomatic post in Italy, converses with James P. Haggerty, president Eisenhower's press secretary. (See story, page 3).

New Page—New Era

From The New York Times

THE smiling 14-year-old lad whose photograph was published in this newspaper yesterday with the Supreme Court building in the background ought not to have been a historic figure. It ought to have been taken for granted that an American of any ancestry who could qualify to be one of the four page boys for the United States Supreme Court should have the chance to compete. But Charles Vernon Bush was, in fact, making history. He is the first Negro ever to be appointed to that particular post. He will also be the first of his race to attend the Capitol page school, which the pages in the Senate and House of Representatives attend.

The Court could hardly have done differently, although it did wait a long time. Young Charles in the picture could point to the inscription above the Corinthian pillars of the Supreme Court building, "Equal Justice Under Law." Equal justice under the law is slow in arriving in any country, and it has not completely arrived in our democracy.

But we are making progress. Young Charles can go to the Capitol page school because the Supreme Court has ruled against segregation in the schools on account of race. Many southern communities are now working toward an amicable solution of the real problems that will exist when the anti-segregation decision is made effective. We do make progress. We do approach closer to real democracy. One hopes that the smiling picture of Charles Vernon Bush standing in front of the Supreme Court building will be widely seen not only in this country but wherever news about America can be freely published.

Ex-Dean Named By Sec. Hobby

WASHINGTON, D. C. (SNS) — The former dean of Fayetteville N. C. State Teachers College was appointed Tuesday to a $10,000-a-year post in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, where he will serve as assistant to Roswell B. Perkins, a secretary for program analysis.

The appointee is Joseph H. Douglass, who will help analyze the department's programs and review progress reports, according to Secretary Hobby.

Geneva Confab

Wilkins Proves Able Diplomat!

34c (1) D.C.

(By Cable from Special Correspondent at Geneva, Switzerland)

GENEVA—The other day an experienced diplomat from the Middle East walked over to where J. Ernest Wilkins was sitting at the head of the U. S. delegation in the large ILO conference room of the Palais des Nations here.

"What do you think, Mr. Wilkins?" the diplomat asked. "How does this compare with the other international conferences you have attended?"

Mr. Wilkins, who is Assistant Secretary of Labor, leaned back and with a smile that wins him friends at every turn, he said: "Well now that's hard to say. The last international affair I attended on this side of the ocean was in 1918 in France. It was hardly a conference and any way I was on what you might call the working level so I really cannot answer your question." (He was a supply sergeant in the 809th Infantry.)

The diplomat was frank to say that he did not believe Mr. Wilkins and walked away.

Indeed, the ease with which the Assistant Secretary has made the transformation from a Chicago lawyer to an international statesman is a marvel to all here.

Several days ago when the conference opened, Mr. Wilkins was almost immediately confronted with a thorny situation. Russia and her satellites are back in the ILO for the first time in fifteen years. So naturally the conference members were a little uneasy about what might happen on the opening day. They did not have to wait long. Around noon time, Amazasp Avakimovich Arutyunyan, chief Russian adviser, who is renowned as a triple-threat debater in the UN, got up before the sixty-nine government delegates to the conference.

With vigorous gestures and a loud voice he complained that Russia was being deprived of her rightful place on the important selections committee. He demanded that such a great country as the USSR be given immediate recognition regardless of any rules of procedure or traditional practice.

THE FRENCH and British had already spoken against any such high speed special treatment for the Russians. So it was assumed by many that Mr. Arutyunyan was going to have the last word but as he walked from the high rostrum, Mr. Wilkins leaned over to whisper a word or two to his colleague, Assistant Attorney General Warren E. Burger. There was a nodding of heads and Mr. Wilkins rose from his seat. He walked down the aisle. This was the first US-Russian clash. There were intense neutralists in the audience who were ready to fall onto the Communist side of the fence if the US was too violent. These men represented necessary votes for the cause of the free world.

Mr. Wilkins climbed to the rostrum, the first Negro ever to lead a US delegation at a major international conference.

"In the interests of harmony, in the interest of peace," he started off in a firm clear Middle Western twang, "in the interests of the ILO, I feel that the traditional procedure of this organization should be followed in this case. Certainly a delay of twenty-four or forty-eight hours cannot be said to be a reflection on any nation here."

The Russians had demanded immediate seating on the selections committee but they were going to have to wait like any other nation. That was obvious even after Mr. Wilkins had only said a few words.

"It seems to me that in the interests of harmony and peace and unity," Mr. Wilkins went on extemporaneously, "we all should come here not with the idea of saying that ours is the greatest nation in the world, but with the idea of building this organization into the organ for peace it should be.

"Certainly there are countries here whose boundaries are not so great as others, whose material wealth is not so great, who have not got the natural resources of some, but even so they have as great an interest in this body as the greatest of us all. This equality of the ILO should never be forgotten."

The fifteen members of the Russian bloc were defeated by a solid eighty-one votes.

Wilkins climbed to the rostrum, the first Negro ever to lead a U. S. delgation at a major international conference.

"In the interest of harmony, in the interest of peace," he started off in a firm clear Middle Western twang, "in the interest of the ILO, I feel that the traditional procedure of this organization should be followed in this case. Certainly a delay of 24 or 48 hours cannot be said to be a reflection on any nation here."

"It seems to me that in the interests of harmony and peace and unity," Mr. Wilkins went on extemporaneously, "we all should come here not with the idea of saying that ours is the greatest nation in the world, but with the idea of building this organization into the organ for peace it should be.

"Certainly there are countries here whose boundaries are not so great as others, whose material wealth is not so great, who have not got the natural resources of some, but even so they have as great an interest in this body as the greatest of us all. This equality of the ILO should never be forgotten."

The 15 members of the Russian bloc were defeated by a solid 81 votes.

GOP Names Mrs. Bellamy To Key Job

WASHINGTON—Another evidence of high job opportunity in the Eisenhower Administration for Negroes was discovered by the Courier last week when it was learned that Mrs. Mae Bellamy of this city has been named one of the two private secretaries to Under-Secretary of State for Administration Charles Sulzman.

It was learned that Mrs. Bellamy has been in Mr. Sulzman's office for more than a week. Her assignment here has caused the same flurry of excitement that existed when Mrs. Lois Lippman was appointed a secretary to Eisenhower assistant Charles Willis in the White House.

According to a D.C. She succeeds James P. White, who retired. Other colored regional directors in the department are David Brown, Clarence Pendleton and Milton Larry.

Negro Turns Down Government Post

Civic Leader Won't Subject Young Son to D.C. Segregation

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.—(AP)—Paul Phillips, a Negro civic leader, rejected a high government appointment Thursday and said one reason was racial segregation in Washington.

He said he did not wish to submit his family, and especially his young son, to the necessary adjustment.

Phillips, executive secretary of the Grand Rapids Urban League, had been offered the appointment as special assistant in Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby's Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In a letter to Mrs. Hobby, Phillips said he was "humbly grateful" for the honor of being considered for the post but that there were two reasons he could not accept.

He listed first the "evident progress, though slow, being made in Grand Rapids toward the desired democratic goal of equal opportunity for all and the dignity of the individual. It is our desire to remain with the league," he said.

"The second reason," Phillips wrote the department, "is a very personal one. In our opinion it would be unfair and unwise to ask my family, and especially our 7-year-old son, to live in and attempt to adjust to the rigid pattern of racial segregation that exists in Washington."

Phillips said he believes President Eisenhower is making a sincere effort to eliminate segregation in the Capital, but "nevertheless the pattern is such it would make adjustments very difficult."

"Being adults," he continued, "my wife and I try to make some attempt at understanding and solving the problem."

"But how does one explain racial segregation to a child?"

Phillips a former Marquette University athlete, was a member of a group that toured Europe last summer at the invitation of the State Department.

SEEN AS SEGREGATION:

Business advisor office abolished

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA)—The office of colored adviser on business affairs in the Commerce Department was abolished because Commerce Department officials felt that it was a form of segregation, the House Appropriations Committee was told in secret testimony made public Thursday.

The question of what had happened to the office of adviser on colord affairs and three jobs in that office totaling $12,01[illegible] a year was brought up during hearings on the 1955 Commerce Department appropriations

Rep. John J. Rooney, top ranking Democrat on the State, Justice and Commerce Departments subcommittee, brought up the issue.

James C. Worthy, assistant secretary of commerce for administration, told the subcommittee that the office, the three jobs and their functions had been abolished.

"There has been established in the Business and Defense Services Administration a position of adviser on business affairs, which is filled by an outstanding colored person.

"It was felt that the job was better defined not as an adviser on colored business affairs but rather as an adviser on business affairs, so that he is not restricted just to that narrow range of activity.

"It was our feeling that having an office of colored affairs was a form of segregation," replied Mr. Worthy.

E. Frederic Morrow, a former employeer of the NAACP who acted as race relations director to General Eisenhower on his campaign train in 1952, was appointed to the new position.

Refuses U.S. Job; Hits D. C. Bias

CEDAR RAPIDS, Mich.—Paul I. Phillips, executive secretary of the Grand Rapids, Mich. Urban League last week spurned a $9,600 post in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare because of the "rigid pattern of segregation" which exists in Washington.

Phillips had been offered the appointment as special assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, head of the department.

In a letter to Mrs. Hobby, Phillips said he was "humbly grateful" for the honor of being considered for the post and cited two reasons why he could not accept.

He pointed out the "evident progress," though slow, being made in Grand Rapids toward the desired democratic goal of equal opportunity for all and dignity of the individual.

"The second reason," Phillips stated in his letter, "is a very personal one. In our opinion it would be unfair and unwise to ask my family, and especially our 7-year-old son, to live in and attempt to adjust to the rigid pattern of racial segregation that exists in Washington."

The Urban League aide said he believed President Eisenhower was making a sincere effort to eliminate segregation in the capital, but "nevertheless the pattern is such it would make adjustments very difficult."

The failure to end segregation and discrimination in Washington has cheated the government of the services of several top Negro leaders. Ralph Bunche, Nobel Peace prize winner and head of the United Nations Trusteeship division, turned down an appointment to the post of Undersecretary of State because of segregation in Washington. He stated at the time that he did not wish to subject his children to the unwholesome atmosphere of the capital.

Val Washington, head of the minorities division of the Republican National Committee, said Friday several other persons are being considered for the job of directing a nation-wide program to prevent juvenile delinquency, the post rejected by Phillips.

Wilkins, if confirmed, would be the second Negro to attain a post in the federal executive branch that high.

Behind The Scenes In The Shifting Of Mrs. Spaulding

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C.

THE PLAN TO SHIFT Mrs. Jane Spaulding, who succeeded Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman as assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (Mrs. Hedgeman was assistant to the Federal Security Administrator), to another job has been under way for a month or more.

Her job was due to be abolished as the result of a shake-up of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The shake-up was proposed by an efficiency engineering firm which has been making job analyses and job performance studies in all the Government agencies for the Eisenhower Administration.

MR. LAUTIER

Both the Republican National Committee and a White House aide have been in on the discussion, and Mrs. Spaulding reportedly discussed the matter with Val J. Washington, assistant to Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Thalia Thomas, his administrative assistant.

She is said to have expressed a preference for remaining in the Health, Education, and Welfare Department.

She was offered a job to head a juvenile delinquency unit in the Children's Bureau, but turned it down. The salary reportedly was $2,000 less than her current pay of $9,600.

SHE ALSO REPORTEDLY was offered membership on the War Claims Commission, which pays $14,800 a year, or with the commission at an unspecified salary.

The War Claims Commission consists of three members. The term of office of all three members expires March 31, 1955, the date fixed in the War Claims Act for winding up the affairs of the commission.

AT FIRST IT WAS REPORTED that she turned down the job with the War Claims Commission allegedly because she was asked to sign a letter of resignation implying that charges of racial prejudice made against Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, were not true.

(Note: The Health, Education, and Welfare Department made public Friday her letter of resignation. She resigned "with deep regret" to take a job in the War Claims Commission, work about which she knows nothing, and expressed her "sense of appreciation" for the privilege of having worked with Mrs. Hobby).

INCIDENTALLY, PRESIDENT Eisenhower Friday nominated Roswell B. Perkins, a New York lawyer to be Assistant Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare—a position which the confidential memo designed to bring pressure to bear to have Mrs. Spaulding retained by the Eisenhower Administration said she was available to fill by promotion.

Major and Mrs. John H. Walker of Brooklyn visited here last week. Major Walker is a returned POW. He spent thirty-four months in a Communist POW camp in Korea—most of it in solitary confinement because he was one of the "reactionaries" whom the Reds couldn't do anything with at all.

MAJOR WALKER CAME ACROSS the truce line in Korea in a truck with Major General Dean, the highest ranking American officer taken prisoner in the Korean war. He spent a week in a hospital in Tokyo and then was flown home. He has been assigned to Fort Dix (New Jersey) effective January 29.

The Rev. Richard A. G. Foster, pastor of Cooper AME Zion Church in Oakland (California) was in town last week. He is a former city councilman in New Haven (Connecticut). He has been pastoring in Oakland for two years.

MRS. RUTH MUELLER, an assistant to Mrs. Bertha Adkins, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee in charge of the women's division, had a busy weekend in Detroit.

She spoke before the Wayne County Republican Council of Women at a luncheon, attended a tea for the kickoff of the Lincoln Day program, spoke at a mass meeting Friday night, and addressed the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority's forty-first Founders' Day celebration Saturday. She went to Pontiac Saturday and Lansing Sunday.

Woman Quits Job As Aide

WASHINGTON — (ANP) -- Mrs. Jane Spaulding, Friday, resigned her office as assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in President Eisenhower's cabinet, to accept a post as research advisor on legislative policy on the War Claims Commission.

Her resignation thus climaxed the feud between her and Mrs. Hobby during which Mrs. Spaulding disagreed with her boss in connection with the racial question.

In taking her new position Mrs. Spaulding is being virutaly "kicked up-stairs" because her new job pays $10,800 a year (grade 15) in comparison to only $9,600 for her old post.

She will coordinate research projects relating to war claims in her new job.

New Post For Ike Appointee

By STANLEY ROBERTS
(Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding, one of the first Negroes appointed to a major post in the Eisenhower administration, resigned last Thursday from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to accept another Government position with the War Claims Commission.

WASHINGTON—The Courier predicts that no effort will be made to fill the post left vacant by Mrs. Jane Spaulding when she resigned to take another government position. The Eisenhower Administration is expected to emphasizing racial relations positions in favor of integrated jobs. However, the Courier predicts that the department headed by Mrs. Hobby shortly will offer a top-level post to Douglas Williams of Ann Arbor. He is expected to head up the Child Delinquency Department.

Mrs. Spaulding was an assistant to HE&W Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby, and her new assignment with War Claims is research adviser on legislative policies.

IN AN EXCHANGE of letters Thursday and Friday, Mrs. Spaulding, in resigning, wrote Mrs. Hobby that she "had been offered a position in a field of activity in which I am tremendously interested. This position, in the War Claims Commission, represents for me opportunities for advancement and for service involving increased responsibility."

Nelson A. Rockfeller, acting secretary, communicated by telephone with Mrs. Hobby, who was out of town, and in accepting the resignation, praised Mrs. Spaulding for her "contribution to the work of the department."

According to a White House spokesman, Mrs. Spaulding will do extensive overseas traveling in her new work, particularly in the Far East . . . in Japan and the Philippines.

AS IS TYPICAL in the rumor-mill that is Washington, all sorts of speculation has been advanced about Mrs. Spaulding's acceptance of the War Claims job. However, this reporter has known for months that the WCC post for her has been "in the works" at the White House. That the job came through during a period when health, education and welfare are going through an extensive reorganization lent fuel to the gossip wildfire built up by Eisenhower detractors to "prove" that Mrs. Spaulding was fired.

Neither Mrs. Spaulding's status nor salary would have been affected had she chosen to remain with the department after the reorganization. The new job she has accepted pays, in fact, a one-grade-level higher salary than her former position.

Mrs. Spaulding is from Charleston, W. Va.; was an active leader in the Citizens-for-Eisenhower movement during the last Presidential campaign; is a powerful force and fund-raiser in the National Council of Negro Women, and her influence is extensive throughout the nation in women's club work.

Top GOP Appointee Leaves Post As Aide To Mrs. Hobby

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) — What observers believed would be a "showdown" fight within the administration because of abolition of a job held by an Eisenhower-appointee failed to materialize last weekend when Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding, assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, indicated that she resigned her post because of the offer of a better position in another federal agency.

The Washington Bureau of the NAACP had contended, in a confidential memorandum, that Mrs. Spaulding was giving up her post in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare because of her refusal to sign a letter repudiating charges made by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., (Dem., N. Y.) and the NAACP that the Secretary of the Department, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, was seeking to delay integration of schools run by local school boards on Army posts.

THE NAACP memorandum also indicated that Mrs. Spaulding supported the NAACP in its claim that a grant of a million and a half dollars should not be made toward construction of a municipal hospital in Houston, Tex., unless colored physicians were allowed to practice in it.

The exchange of polite notes which marked Mrs. Spaulding's resignation from the Health, Education and Welfare Department assistant secretarial post to accept a job with the War Claims Commission, failed to support the NAACP's contention that dissension had arisen between Mrs. Spaulding and Secretary Hobby.

Sat. 1-30-54

THE NOTES GAVE no indication that Mrs. Spaulding was leaving her position because her activities had reportedly been curbed to "non-controversial" speech-making and because plans were in the making to reorganize her out of the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

Mrs. Spaulding, who worked with the co-chairman of the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee during the 1952 Presidential race, was the only Eisenhower appointee who held a position that obstensibly could have resulted in a seat in the Presidential Cabinet.

TAKES LESS NERVE-WRACKING JOB:

Mrs. Spaulding resigns post

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Jane M. Spaulding, Friday, resigned her $9,600 position as assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to accept a $10,800 per year post with the War Claims Commission here.

This action put an end to what has been regarded by capital newsmen as a feud between Mrs. Oveta C. Hobby, the secretary of health, and Mrs. Spaulding because of their conflicting attitudes toward segregation.

It was thought as early as mid-week that Mrs. Hobby was preparing to eliminate the post which Mrs. Spaulding held because she opposed the latter's militant stand on civil rights; and Congressman Adam C. Powell (Dem., N.Y.) had taken up the cudgels in Mrs. Spaulding's behalf.

Sat. 1-30-54

Powell Writes Secretary

Mr. Powell had written Mrs. Hobby, expressing disapproval of any move to demote or oust Mrs. Spaulding, and had even threatened to take the matter to the floor of Congress.

The attitudes of Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Hobby clashed over several matters, it was revealed, the one which brought the situation to a climax being Mrs. Hobby's support of a federal grant of $1,500,000 to a hospital in Houston, Texas, which bars colored physicians.

When Mrs. Spaulding strenuously opposed such a grant, Mrs. Hobby asked her to confine herself to certain special assignments rather than follow her civil service job description, and was said to be planning a departmental reorganization which would lead to Mrs. Spaulding's ouster.

Mrs. Hobby also was said to have been displeased at Mrs. Spaulding for refusing to sign a letter repudiating charges made by the NAACP and Congressman Powell that the welfare secretary had made an attempt to delay integration in schools on military posts.

MRS. JEAN M. SPAULDING

Appointed

NEW APPOINTEE TO the Senate Committee On Child Delinquency is Mrs. Maria Carl of Washington D. C. Mrs. Carl is a graduate of the Law school and is currently on leave from a fellowship with the American Political Science society.

Mrs. Spaulding Resigns

The resignation of Mrs. Jane Spaulding from her $9600 post as assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, was announced in Washington last week.

It is believed Mrs. Spaulding resigned because of conflicting ideas between she and Mrs. Hobby toward racial segregation. It is reported that Mrs. Hobby has shown tendencies to undone the practice.

If such is the case Mrs. Spaulding is to be highly commended for her integrity. There have been cases where Negro office holders, for fear of losing their jobs, have closed their eyes to the undemocratic practices of their bosses.

Economic pressures, however, can never justify such an act by a Negro holding a top flight position. And it is heartening to note that Mrs. Spaulding succeeded in getting another post, with the War Claims Commission, at a higher salary.

We hope notice will be taken, of Mrs. Spaulding's allegiance to principle, by other Negro office holders.

...OUR DISTRICT ATTORNEY':

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Bill Bryant is tough on dope and sex offenders

34 c(1)

WASHINGTON

"I don't like to send anybody to jail," said William (Bill) Bryant, assistant United States attorney, Monday.

"But," he added, "I don't like narcotics violators and sex offenders. They are the kind of individuals I try extra hard to convict."

Sat. 1-9-54

"For these people I see less excuse than for a person who has committed a 'cheap murder.'"

Fiery Individual

Mr. Bryant is the kind of prosecuting attorney one reads about or sees in the movies — a fiery tireless person who won't rest until a criminal has been convicted.

P. 8

Now 42 years old, Mr. Bryant has been prosecuting cases since February 1951 when he was assigned to Municipal Court.

He is at present assisting in presenting to the grand jury the case involving dope conspiracy charges brought against suspended Police Lt. H. H. Carper and Sgt. William L. Taylor of the narcotics squad.

Mr. Bryant feels strongly about criminals who offer drunkenness as an excuse for committing a crime.

Against Drunks

"Most drunkenness is voluntary," Mr. Bryant says. "It is hard to feel sympathetic toward a criminal who comes before me on a 'cheap' murder charge after he has gotten drunk and slapped or beaten his wife, or anybody for that matter, to death."

"When drunkenness is being used as a defense, I generally consider the whiskey or wine which they say they were drinking as an aggravation rather than a mitigation of the offense."

Mr. Bryant was transferred to the District Court grand jury section in September, 1952. He became the first prosecutor of his race in District Court when he was appointed in January, 1953.

BILL BRYANT

Handles Numerous Cases

Since becoming a Government prosecutor, Mr. Bryant estimates that he has handled anywhere from 25 to 30 cases a week in Municipal Court and approximately eight per week in District Court.

He finds it difficult to choose his "best" case, but recalls with a grin that in one case where he was as well prepared as he could possibly be, the defendants were acquitted because of insufficient evidence.

This was the case of a payroll robbery in which the victims could not positively identify the three men suspected of the crime.

He is a native of Wetumpka, Ala., and is a 1936 graduate of Howard university law school.

In 1939 and 1940, he was research assistant to Dr. Ralph J. Bunche on the survey Gunnar Myrdal made of the race in America. The work was later published as "The American Dilemma."

As a Howard student, Mr. Bryant majored in political science and government. Doctor Bunche was his instructor.

Mr. Bryant served in the special services division of the Army in Europe during World War II. In uniform from Jan. 15, 1943, to May 1947, he emerged as a colonel, and presently is a lieutenant colonel in the reserves.

He was in private practice from October 1948, until he was appointed assistant district attorney. Of Mr. Bryant's service, Leo Rover, United States attorney, said:

Regarded Highly

"I regard him as a highly competent prosecutor. I find him at all times most loyal.

"He has my complete respect and confidence, also that of every judge before whom he has appeared. I am sure everyone with whom he works shares the same feeling."

Married to the former Miss Astaire Gonzales of Washington, Mr. Bryant is the father of two children, William Jr. and Astaire.

He resides at 1903 Kenilworth no particular hobbies, doesn't like radio or television, and spends his spare time reading news magazines or detective stories, and doing chores about his home.

Mrs. Jane M. Spaulding, Friday, resigned her $9,600 position as assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to accept a $10,800 per year post with the War Claims Commission here.

In spite of the so-called feud between Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Hobby, the letter of resignation and the letter of acceptance were written in cordial terminology.

The text of the letter Mrs. Spaulding sent to Mrs. Hobby follows:

"Dear Mrs. Hobby: I have recently been offered a position in a field of activity in which I am tremendously interested. This position in the War Claims Commission represents for me opportunities for advancement and for service involving increased responsibility, and I want very much to accept it.

Expresses Regret

"It is therefore with deep regret that I hereby tender my resignation as assistant to the secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

"In tendering this resignation, I wish to express my sense of appreciation for the privilege it has been for me to work with you in pursuance of the great humanitarian goals of the department."

The text of acting secretary Nelson A. Rockefeller's letter of acceptance follows:

"Dear Mrs. Spaulding: In the secretary's absence from Washington I should like to thank you for your letter of Jan. 21 in which you advise her that you wish to resign from the department to accept another position.

Understands Desire

"Since your new job, as you say in your letter, offers opportunities for advancement, I quite understand your desire to accept.

Mrs. Jane Spaulding To New Job

Takes War Claims Post; Activities Cited As Reason

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA)—What was expected to be a showdown fight within the Eisenhower Administration over abolition of the job held by Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding as assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, ended Friday in an exchange of polite notes and a job in another agency for Mrs. Spaulding.

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare made public Friday Mrs. Spaulding's letter of resignation and a letter of acceptance signed by Nelson A. Rockefeller, acting Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Mrs. Spaulding, in her letter, said she was resigning "with deep regret" and expressed her "sense of appreciation for the privilege" she has had of working with Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The reason she gave for her resignation was the offer of another job in the War Claims Commission.

In a confidential memorandum circulated by the Washington Bureau of the N.A.A.C.P., it was charged that Mrs. Hobby had curbed Mrs. Spaulding's activities to "non-controversial" speechmaking and planned to reorganize her out of the department.

The N.A.A.C.P. said the plan to force Mrs. Spaulding's resignation was due to her refusal to sign a letter repudiating charges made by Representative Adam Clayton

MRS. JANE SPAULDING

Powell, Democrat, of New York, and the NAACP that Mrs. Hobby was seeking to delay integration of schools run by local school boards on Army posts.

Another reason given was that Mrs. Spaulding was supporting the position of the NAACP that a grant of $1,500,000 should not be made for the construction of a municipal hospital in Houston, Texas, unless colored doctors were allowed to practice in it.

Mrs. Spaulding, who worked with Mrs. Oswald Lord, co-chairman of the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee during the 1952 Presidential campaign, was appointed as assistant to Mrs. Hobby last April 14.

The text of the letter Mrs. Spaulding sent to Mrs. Hobby follows:

"Dear Mrs. Hobby: I have recently been offered a position in a field of activity in which I am tremendously interested. This position in the War Claims Commission represents for me opportunities for advancement and for service involving increased responsibility and I want very much to accept it.

"It is therefore with deep regret that I hereby tender my resignation as assistant to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

"'In tendering this resignation, I wish to express my sense of appreciation for the privilege it has been for me to work with you in pursuance of the great humanitarian goals of the department.

"With best wishes for continued success of your work, I am

"Sincerely,

"Jane Morrow Spaulding."

The text of Mr. Rockefeller's letter of acceptance follows:

"Dear Mrs. Spaulding: In the Secretary's absence from Wash-

DORSEY E. LANE, former assistant professor of law at Howard university, has been appointed to post of assistant to general counsel Morris Wolf in the Foreign Operations Administration in Washington, D. C. The agency is headed by Harold Stassen.

ington I should like to thank you for your letter of January 21 in which you advise her that you wish to resign from the Department to accept another position.

"Since your new job, as you say in your letter, offers opportunities for advancement, I quite understand your desire to accept.

"I have discussed your wishes with the Secretary by telephone and she has authorized me to accept your resignation.

"With thanks for your contribution to the work of the Department and with kind regards, I am

"Sincerely,

"Nelson A. Rockefeller."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Woman Of The Year Fired

Outstanding Negro Worker Laid Off, But GOP Went To Work Quickly To Rehire Her

BY DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON

MRS. JANE MORROW SPAULDING, recently named the outstanding Negro Woman of the Year, has been getting the royal run-around from the Eisenhower Administration and Negro leaders are quite unhappy about it.

Mrs. Spaulding was brought into government originally as a special assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary for Health, Education and Welfare. But Secretary Hobby refused to keep her distinguished Negro assistant after the latter publicly expressed a desire to see Negro doctors admitted to the staff of a Texas hospital.

This got Mrs. Hobby, a Texan, into trouble back home. So it was discreetly arranged for Mrs. Spaulding to transfer to another agency. The agency that inherited her was the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission where she settled down to a $10,000-a-year job.

After the election, however, when Negro votes were not so important, Chairman Whitney Gillilland went on a firing spree. It turned out that Mrs. Spaulding's chief backer, GOP Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, was defeated. So Mrs. Spaulding appeared to be politically expendable and was added to the list of employes getting the ax.

After this news got out, however, Gillilland was reminded that it isn't exactly political wisdom to fire the outstanding Negro Woman of the Year. Hastily he called in reporters, tried to undo the damage.

"I hope," he said, "that Mrs. Spaulding can be retained here or kept in government in a job of comparable grade. Her services are of value to the government."

Meanwhile, the White House patronage czar, Charles "Jobs for Republicans" Willis, is doing his frantic best to find Mrs. Spaulding a suitable job.

Note—Gillilland also sent out dismissal notices to 65 other employes just before Christmas. This is one-fourth of his tiny, 250-employe agency. Most of those fired are experts in processing prisoner-of-war claims, though the agency will be given the job next year of paying benefits to Americans imprisoned in Korea, for inhumane treatment suffered there.

NEGRO GROUP HEAD SCORES MRS. HOBBY

N.A.A.C.P. Director Charges Secretary Forced Her Aide Out Because of Racial Issues

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—The Eisenhower Administration was accused today of having promoted a Negro woman leader last January with the idea of dropping her later.

The charge was made by Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mr. Mitchell said that the job of Mrs. Jane M. Spaulding as assistant to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, had been abolished nearly a year ago in a departmental reorganization because of differences on racial matters between Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Hobby.

On Jan. 22, the department issued a press release giving the text of Mrs. Spaulding's resignation in which she accepted a higher-paying job with the War Claims Commission; and the reply of Nelson A. Rockefeller, who was then Acting Secretary, accepting her resignation. Her salary was increased by this move from $9,600 a year to $10,800.

Backed Eisenhower Campaign

Mr. Mitchell said that Mrs. Spaulding had accepted the promotion under Administration urging. She recently has been notified that she is being dropped from this position, effective Dec. 31, because of a reduction in force.

Mrs. Hobby, Mr. Rockefeller and Mrs. Spaulding could not be reached for statements today. Mr. Mitchell made public his correspondence in the matter.

Mrs. Spaulding was appointed as Mrs. Hobby's assistant on April 14, 1953. One of the first women Negro leaders to declare for General Eisenhower, Mrs. Spaulding, a West Virginia welfare worker, had been a key member of the women's division in the national headquarters of Citizens for Eisenhower during the 1952 campaign.

The had charge of organizing Negro voters throughout the United States for the Eisenhower ticket and also was special assistant to Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, co-chairman of Citizens for Eisenhower.

Mr. Mitchell said it was his understanding that her appointment had been pressed by Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. on recommendation of Mrs. Cheever Cowdin, New York Negro woman leader.

Mr. Mitchell asserted that in a memorandum to Negro leaders last Jan. 18 he had charged that Mrs. Spaulding's job had been reduced to "relatively simple matters" and "noncontroversial" speeches.

Charge Made Over Letter

The memorandum said the departmental reorganization had been designed to force Mrs. Spaulding's resignation for the following reasons:

"1. At the time when the N. A. A. C. P. and Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of New York City, exposed Mrs. Hobby's effort to delay integration in schools on military posts, Mrs. Spaulding was asked to send out a letter which would have had the effect of repudiating the charges made by the association and Mr. Powell. Mrs. Spaulding declined to sign the letter.

"2. Mrs. Spaulding has made several forthright speeches attacking discrimination.

"3. Mrs. Spaulding supports the N. A. A. C. P.'s position that a grant of $1,500,000 should not be made to a municipal hospital in Houston, Tex., unless that hospital agrees to permit colored doctors to have full use of its facilities. Mrs. Hobby favors the hospital."

On the first point, Mr. Mitchell said that the schools on fifteen of twenty-one military posts still were not integrated, including that of Fort Hood in Mrs. Hobby's home state of Texas.

On the last point, he said it was his understanding that Mrs. Spaulding's remarks on the proposed hospital, which chanced to concern Mrs. Hobby's home city, were made within the department and not in public speeches.

The press release issued by the department at the time of Mrs. Spaulding's appointment listed many honors that she had received. Later in 1953 she received the Woman of the Year award of the Philadelphia branch of the National Council of Negro Women.

Ala. Man First Negro On Staff Of Dixie Solon

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Representative F. Edward Herbert's appointment last week of Gilbert Porterfield of Alabama to his congressional staff for "liaison in the area of race relation" is believed to be the first time that a Southern member of Congress has appointed a Negro to his staff (except in some menial position).

The appointment is effective with the opening of the 84th Congress on January 5, Mr. Herbert said.

Porterfield, designated as a field representative, will be stationed in New Orleans.

He stated that the appointment was made "in an effort to expedite the handling of matters which concern colored people on the congressional level."

N.A.A.C.P. Official Says Administration Is Insincere

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—An official of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People said today the Eisenhower Administration had shown "a complete lack of sincerity" in its treatment of Mrs. Jane M. Spaulding, Negro woman leader.

Clarence M. Mitchell, Jr., director of the Washington bureau of the N.A.A.C.P., said there was no doubt Mrs. Spaulding was dropped as an assistant to Secretary Hobby of the Health, Education, and Welfare Department because of differences on racial matters.

Dropped in Job Cutback

Mrs. Spaulding, a resident of Charleston, W. Va., and an Eisenhower supporter and worker in 1952, was named an assistant to Mrs. Hobby, a Texan, in April, 1953.

Last January 22 the Department announced Mrs. Spaulding's resignation and her acceptance of a $10,800 job with the War Claims Commission. Recently Mrs. Spalding was notified she is being dropped December 31 because of a reduction in force.

Mitchell told a reported today that the Administration appointed Mrs. Spaulding to the W.C.C. last January with the idea of dropping her later. He said she wos offered a 90-day contract which she refused. Then, he said, she was given a position.

"The fact that she was offered this position on a 90-day contract is an indication of a complete lack of sincerity," Mitchell said.

Atmosphere Changed

When Mrs. Spaulding first went to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Mitchell said, "there was a great fanfare which was to show that the Administration had made a significant appointment to a Negro.

But, he said, within a short time Mrs. Spaulding opposed Mrs. Hobby's views on racial matters and "immediately the whole atmosphere changed."

Mrs. Spaulding in 1953 received the Woman-of-the-year award of the Philadelphia branch of the National Council of Negro Women.

Labor Post To Wilkins

Ike Picks Chicago Lawyer

By STANLEY ROBERTS
(Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—J. Ernest Wilkins, a quiet, soft-spoken Chicago lawyer, with a wealth of administrative experience, is the new Assistant Secretary of Labor in the Eisenhower administration!

Appointed last week by the President, with the approval of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, the position carries sub-cabinet rank . . . and is the highest political position ever held by a Negro. Dat. 3-13-54

It is not the first time, however, that a Negro has held sub-cabinet ranking. Back in 1911, William H. Lewis of Boston, a Harvard grid star (All-American in 1893) was named Assistant Attorney General by another Republican President, William H. Taft.

(The naming of Wilkins is substantiation of a story first carried in the Courier two weeks ago, that he would be named to the position).

Mr. Wilkins is one of three Assistant Secretaries of Labor . . . and he will be in charge of international affairs in the department. This field is considered of highest importance, and will give him diplomatic status as he travels abroad in the fulfillment of his duties.

Other assistants are (1) in charge of employment and manpower, and (2) in charge of standards and statistics.

The position, which pays $15,000 a year, will find Wilkins outranked in his department only by the Secretary himself.

In accepting the position, after the White House, through James Hagerty, had announced the appointment, Mr. Wilkins said:

"This is an honor to my race . . . not just an honor for Wilkins.

"Three-quarters of the people of the world are non-white.

"In my dealings with other peoples at international labor conferences, my own racial background will bear testimony that this Government recognizes all groups in America."

Wilkins himself is held in highest regard in political, religious, fraternal and civic circles.

Born in Farmington, Mo., he is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Illinois and a graduate of the Law School of the University of Chicago.

The new assistant secretary has practiced law in Chicago since 1921.

POLITICALLY, Mr. Wilkins has never held an elective office. When appointed to his new position, he was serving as vice chairman of the President's Committee on Government Contracts, which was set up to encourage Fair Employment Practices among Government contractors. Vice President Nixon is chairman of the committee, and the eyes of the White House fell on Wilkins when he served in the chair so ably during Nixon's absences from committee duties.

Wilkins lost the only election he ever waged. In 1950 he was the first Negro to run on the GOP ticket for the Circuit Court of Cook County.

Wilkins, a member of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, was its first Grand Keeper of Records and Exchequer, and was the thirteenth Grand Polemarch. He was the fifth person to be awarded the fraternity's Laurel Wreath (1929), highest honor of the forty-four-year-old Greek letter group.

The fraternity gives an annual grant in his honor to a member of the fraternity ($1250), known as the J. Ernest Wilkins Fellowship Award.

A LIFE-LONG Methodist, Wilkins, in 1948, became the first Negro elected to the Methodist Judicial Council, the highest body of that church group. At present, he is secretary of the council.

In civic life, he is a former president of the Cook County Bar Association, a trustee of Provident Hospital and a member of Chicago's City Club.

Wilkins takes pride in his family. Married to the former Lucille B. Robinson, he couple has three sons. Julian B. is his father's law partner; J. Ernest Jr., who was graduated with a Ph. D. degree in mathematics at the age of 19, is in mathematical research for the American Optical Company; John R. works in the appellate division of the Department of Justice here.

J. ERNEST WILKINS
. . . top labor post

THAT THE appontment was made with the full approval of the Secretary was confirmed during an interview with Mr. Mitchell. Asked why he asked former Assistant Secretary Spencer Miller Jr. to resign so that Wilkins could be named, he said:

"I have a certain responsibility and I have the privilege of choosing my own assistants. I exercised that right."

It is significant to note that both Lewis and Wilkins were named by Republican Presidents. No Democratic President has ever made an appointment of this importance, although it is said that Dr. Ralph Bunche turned down a Truman offer to serve as Assistant Secretary of State because of the discrimination which then existed in the nation's capital. Since then, the capital has become a better place in which to live.

No, No, Mr. Wilkins

Selection of J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago, as assistant secretary of labor, is unquestionably a step in the right direction on the part of the Eisenhower administration, and we commend this action, but we positively refused to accept Mr. Wilkin's opinion that "my appointment is an eloquent answer to those who say the American government is not fair to all of its citizens."

Time was when American Negroes swallowed such statements with wanton gullibility, but that day is in the limbo of the past. Negroes know now that political patronage that gives some one black man a job is not the real test of the soundness of the principles for which a political party stands. The Roosevelt administration awakened as never before the black man to the fact that it is what a political party plans, and does, for the masses of citizens which is substantially profitable to the common weal.

We are not taking this position because Eisenhower and his associates presently in national control, are Republicans. We issued the same warning when President Truman named Judge William Hastie to a federal judgeship. We expressed the same view regarding the use of patronage for Negroes as we are observing now. We warned the Truman administration would ship Judge Hastie around over the nation as Exhibit No. 1 as to Democratic attitude toward the blacks in this country, when as a matter of fact we should make democratic approach to civil rights and important interpretations of the constitution by the supreme court the real test of ideal government. We finally placed more confidence and trust in Truman than we have yet vested in the Eisenhower administration, but we never permitted our vision to be clouded regarding the value of patronage, and what it means to the group to which this writer has ethnic connection.

The American Negro must studiously insist that existing government interest itself in education, health, home ownership, transportation, work opportunities and a half dozen other fundamental facilities and guarantees for all Americans regardless to race or color, and determine the value, virtue and worth of political parties in proportion as these units of our society support and promote these ends. Selecting one man to a job does not in any way prove a given political party serves these ends, and J. Ernest Wilkins knows this as well as we do. We certainly do not agree his selection proves anything other than the fact that his designation, as he says, "is an honor to the race he represents." We will have to see him in action and survey the approach he will from time to time make to difficult problems before we can decide that this high honor conferred upon him is drawing dividends for the race he represents.

We note last week in the public press President Eisenhower has again openly expressed opposition to compulsory FEPC, and it will be in relationship to Mr. Wilkins' approach to this question, as an assistant to the Secretary of Labor, that we shall in a large measure judge his fitness for the position he now holds. The Negro's annual income has jumped from four billion to fifteen billion dollars since President Roosevelt issued his first orders regarding fair employment practices in war work, and all of our contingent prosperity in home ownership and higher standards of living have been wholly contingent upon this continuation of upgrading in salaries and skilled employment. We do not want Mr. Wilkins to go into the labor unit of the cabinet and voice the belief of President Eisenhower that the Negro laborer can vest his economic security in a law resting solely in persuasion and fixed no penalties for its violation.

If the selection of J. Ernest Wilkins proves the American government is FAIR TO ALL OF ITS CITIZENS, we would no longer need Walter White, Elmer Henderson or Paul Robeson. The whites who belong to Americans for Democratic Action could immediately disband because the folk they represent, including Negroes, are among the "All" to whom Mr. Wilkins in his utter glee over his appointment, refers. Understand us now, we think Mr. Wilkins' selection for this high post is commendatory, but we want to properly evaluate what the Eisenhower administration has done, and we do not think by this action "the civil rights crop has been laid by" and that we can all take our constitutional hoes to the barn and stop grubbing up the roots of reaction. That's what Mr. Wilkins suggests in this remarkable summary of what has been accomplished through his selection to the position of assistant secretary of labor.

We think the contract compliance committee from which Attorney Wilkins has been elevated is a better springboard from which to estimate and evaluate the democratic practices of the present administration, and it appears that right now the existence of this committee, and the disclosures it has made regarding discrimination against the Negro worker, is ample evidence to warrant Attorney Wilkins knowing that the American government is not fair to all of its citizens. It is because of the intimate contact we know Mr. Wilkins has had with positive discrimination against the Negro worker, since he has been a member of the contract compliance committee we feel he is not entirely honest when he splutters out his appointment proves the American government is fair to all of its citizens.

We want to insist that the political party having the courage to support enforcement of constitutional guarantees of citizenship for the masses is the party to which the black man must ally himself. We have discovered quite recently that when we cranked one motor properly in government, there was, presto! accomplished a score of other things for which the masses dream. When the Roosevelt-Truman administrations started punching and pushing upon the right of the black man to an equal opportunity to work, and made some slight headway in that direction, overnight the Negro earning capacity jumped from four billions annually to fifteen billions, and according to Dr. George W. Snowton, jumped within a ten-year period in some sections of the country 367 per cent.

Resulting from this one revolutionary turn in Negro life, Negro women overnight jumped from their meager weekly stipends of from three to six dollars per week to $35 and $40 every seven days. Negro men leaped from their $15 and $20 unconscienable salaries to from $75 to $90 per week. This is today recognized as still not on the level of the white worker, but overnight the heads of Negro families for the first time since Appomatox, were able to make a down payment on a home, car and television set. A higher level in the wage bracket converted the black man from a renter and a sharecropper to a home owner. This in our judgment was far more important than the selection of some one black man for a high post in government, and proved conclusively the American government had not been fair to all of its citizens.

This same American Negro, because of a higher level in the salary bracket, was able to send his daughter and son to school, secure better health care, and serve his family a more balanced diet around the domestic table. Resulting almost solely from a full belly, the American Negro in a decade jumped from a population of 13,000,000 to 15,000,000. These are the dividends in which state government should be interested for white, red and black citizens, and these are the considerations all of the inhabitants of this blessed land should ponder when they decide they are going to support or not support a given political party.

There is evidence pointing to the drift of the Eisenhower administration towards intensified interest in the common weal. In proportion as Republicans exhibit intelligent approach to organized society from this angle, they will have opportunity to prove their worthiness to continue control in government. Already the Negro, who in trying economic moments, is the last hired and the first fired, is beginning to feel the first shock of the current recession. Negroes, more than any other unit of our American society, should be interested in a political party which fundamentally holds interest in basic social problems such as suggested above. They should not be intrigued by any man who suggested selfishly that someone single job he holds proves the American government is fair to all of its citizens.

In conclusion let us say this man Wilkins may be a fine man, and we assume he is, but he happened to step on one of our pet peeves when he addresses the American Negro to say his little near-cabinet job proves the Puerto Ricans, the Negroes, Indians and all other minority groups can immediately call the dog and calmly retire to their tent of tranquility. Talmadge, Jimmy Bynes, and the fact that the murderers of a black man some two years ago down in Mims, Florida, have never been apprehended, are proof positive that the American government is not fair to all of its citizens.

First Negro Is Named to Sub-Cabinet

Associated Press Wirephoto

J. Ernest Wilkins and wife after his nomination yesterday

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 4—President Eisenhower today nominated J. Ernest Wilkins of Chicago, a Negro attorney, to be Assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of international labor affairs.

Secretary of Labor, James P. Mitchell said at a news conference that the department's researches showed Mr. Wilkins was the first member of his race to hold sub-Cabinet rank. He is a Republican.

Mr. Wilkins, who is 60 years old, said that he believed the appointment honored his race more than the individual and that the fact that he was a Negro would be an aid in his work abroad in behalf of the United States Government. He remarked that three-fourths of the people of the world were not white.

He will be the Government's principal representative in the International Labor Organization, an arm of the United Nations.

Mr. Wilkins succeeds Spencer Miller Jr. of New Jersey, who resigned at the request of Mr. Mitchell. The Secretary would not disclose why he asked Mr. Miller to resign.

William H. Lewis, a Boston Negro attorney, was a "Special Assistant Attorney General" during the Administration of President Taft. The "special" in his title deprived him of sub-Cabinet rank, a Labor Department aide said.

AN EXCELLENT APPOINTMENT

President Eisenhower's nomination of J. Ernest Wilkins to be Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs is an excellent choice. Mr. Wilkins, one of the first Negroes ever to be named to a sub-Cabinet post, has a splendid reputation at the Chicago bar, to which he was admitted in 1921. He was President of the Cook County Bar Association in 1941-42.

As Vice Chairman of the President's Committee on Government Contracts, Mr. Wilkins has had to preside frequently over deliberations of this important body because of the absence of Vice President Nixon. The committee's task is to prevent racial discrimination in plants with federal contracts. In this post his qualities of tact, resourcefulness, strength of character and balanced judgment commended themselves to his colleagues. A leader in civic affairs among the people, Mr. Wilkins is a member of the board of trustees and treasurer of Providence Hospital in Chicago. He has held high office in the Methodist Church and has been on its judicial council since 1948. We wish him success in his new and important post.

Negro Attorney Named for Labor Position by Ike

WASHINGTON, March 4 (UP)—President Eisenhower today nominated J. Ernest Wilkins, a Chicago Negro attorney, to be an assistant secretary of labor.

Wilkins, if confirmed, would be the second Negro to attain a post in the federal executive branch that high.

William H. Lewis, a Boston Negro, served as an assistant attorney general from 1911 to 1913 under President William Howard Taft, a Republican and father of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Wilkins has been practicing law in Chicago since 1921 and is a past president of the Cook County Bar Assn.

Labor Panel Senators Back Negro

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Republican and Democratic members of the Senate Labor Committee today applauded President Eisenhower's nomination of a Negro to be Assistant Secretary of Labor, but stressed they would not be influenced by his race in considering confirmation.

"We're interested in his qualifications, not the color of his skin," said the committee chairman, Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.).

The nominee, 60-year-old J. Ernest Wilkins, is a Chicago attorney and a lifelong Republican. No Negro has been named to a post of comparable rank in more than 40 years—since William H. Lewis served as an Assistant Attorney General under President William Howard Taft.

Sen. Smith said his committee will hold hearings on the nomination next week.

"I am entirely in favor of the selection of a Negro where he qualifies," Sen. Smith said. He added that he knows nothing about Mr. Wilkins personally, and that he will pass independent judgment. However, he noted that "Normally, I support the President's nominations."

Sen. Paul M. Douglas (D., Ill.), a committee member, said of Mr. Wilkins: "I don't know him too well, but everything that I have heard is favorable."

"I do think," Sen. Douglas added, "that it is a very good idea to appoint a colored man to this position."

President Names Chicago Negro Assistant Secretary Of Labor

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — President Eisenhower today nominated J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago Negro attorney, as assistant secretary of labor in charge of international affairs, succeeding Spencer Miller Jr.

Wilkins, 60, a Republican, told a news conference he considered his appointment not so much a personal honor but one "to the race I represent."

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said: "This is the first time, so far as we know, that a Negro has been appointed to a Cabinet or sub-Cabinet post."

However, Justice Department records show that a Massachusetts Negro, William H. Lewis, once held a comparable position when he served as an assistant attorney general in 1911-13 under President William Howard Taft.

"I consider my appointment an eloquent answer to those who say the American government is not Wilkins, who will represent this fair to all of its citizens," said country at international labor conferences.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell praised Wilkins' recent work as vice chairman of the Gov- Committee, established by Eisenhower to enforce nondiscrimination ernment Contracts Compliance rules in hiring workers on government projects.

Mitchell, at the same time, disclosed that Miller, whom Wilkins is replacing, had been fired. Mitchell said he requested Miller's resignation. When asked why, Mitchell replied he merely exercised a right to szlect his own assistants.

Miller was named assistant secretary when former Secretary Martin P. Durkin headed the department. It was reliably reported that Miller, once associated with the AFL and more recently a New Jersey state highway commissioner, had annoyed the administration by several speeches abroad.

In a speech in the Far East Miller was reported to have said that Chinese Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek was in a position to gain a foothold on the Communist-held Chinese mainland from Formosa. The administration reportedly felt this was a foreign policy subject properly within the province of the State Department.

Wilkins said he was convinced a main objective of the Eisenhower administration is "fair play for all citizens." He was asked about the President's statement yesterday opposing a new Fair Employment Practices Commission with certain powers of compulsion. Wilkins replied: "That might well be left unanswered."

FIRST NEGRO TO SERVE IN HIGH FEDERAL POSITION — WASHINGTON, D. C. — J. Ernest Wilkins, prominent Negro lawyer from Chicago, was nominated recently by President Eisenhower to be an Assistant Secretary of Labor. Mr. Wilkins will be the first Negro to serve in a high Federal position. He will succeed Spencer Miller, Jr., who resigned, effective March 10th, to undertake a lecture tour in Europe. Mr. Wilkins, left, is shown here as he and Labor Secretary Mitchell, right, talk together following the press conference.

Senate Approves Wilkins As Ass't Labor Secretary

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The senate last week approved the nomination of J. Ernest Wilkins for assistant secretary of labor.

The vote was taken after public hearings were held on the nominee, and the Senate committee on labor had endorsed him. Interestingly enough not a single opposition was raised against this Chicago attorney.

REFUSED TO COMMENT

In the spirit of modesty, Wilkins appeared in interest of his own appointment but refused to comment on his educational background and working experience.

He told the committee that he had not had much experience in the field of international labor relations, to which he had been assigned, but he felt that his past experience in related fields would enable him to learn quickly.

Edgar G. Brown, former candidate for Congressman from Illinois, spoke in behalf of Wilkins. He stated that the newly appointed labor executive had served in World War I and had taught in France. This, said Brown, is sufficient experience with international affairs to qualify him for the position to which he has been assigned.

OPPOSITION RAISED

Elmer Henderson, director of the American Council on Human Rights, endorsed the appointment of Wilkins. He was on hand to make a statement in his behalf in case any opposition was raised. Also on the scene was Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of NAACP to speak out if the occasion arose.

Mrs. Wilkins and their son attended the hearings and seemed highly elated to discover that not a single opposition was raised against Wilkins.

In a burst of smiles, Mrs. Wilkins modestly told this reporter that "It is just a little thrilling!"

Wilkins' appointment met the wholehearted approval of Senator Everett Dirksen, Republican from Illinois, as well as the support of the Democratic Senator of his state, Paul Douglas.

The nomination is now on the Senate calendar for confirmation but no definite date has been set for action.

At Last A Negro Achieves A Sub-Cabinet Post

WHERE DR. RALPH BUNCHE, a couple of years ago, refused the highest government post ever offered to an American Negro because he declined to subject himself and family to the jim-crow rigors of the District of Columbia, another Negro — J. ERNEST WILKINS of Chicago—has accepted a comparably high federal post. The pace of our progress toward equality of citizenship is underscored by the different reactions to comparable opportunities of two men of comparably high principles.

In the brief interim between the offer of an Assistant Secretaryship of State by President TRUMAN to DR. BUNCHE and the offer by President EISENHOWER of an Assistant Secretaryship of Labor to Mr. WILKINS, marked changes took place in the capital and MR. WILKINS pointedly remarked on them.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER took office with the avowed purpose of voiding all forms of segregation and discrimination in the federal capital that it was within the scope of his authority to do. He has done considerable to fulfill that promise.

Two or three Negroes have held special Assistant Attorney General posts in the Department of Justice. WILLIAM H. LEWIS of Boston, was an Assistant Attorney General under PRESIDENT WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Attorney WILKINS is a man of undoubted ability and broad experience. He served as vice-chairman of ~~Mr.~~ EISENHOWER's Government-contracted work Anti-discrimination Commission, of which VICE-PRESIDENT RICHARD NIXON is chairman. His performance in this post was cited as recommending him to the attention of PRESIDENT EISCNHOWER and LABOR SECRETARY MITCHELL for his new position.

Wilkins Takes Oath For Post Before Record Crowd

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Before a standing-room-only audience, J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago lawyer and prominent laymen of the Methodist Church, took the oath of office Thursday as Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs.

Thus Mr. Wilkins became the second colored man in the history of the United States to hold a "Little Cabinet" position. The other was the late William H. Lewis of Boston, who served as an Assistant Attorney General in the administration of President William Howard Taft.

The oath was administered by Justice Harold H. Burton of the United States Supreme Court, who had Mr. Wilkins to repeat after him the long-form oath. Usually the short form is used at swearing-in ceremonies and afterwards the appointee signs the long form.

But at the ceremony at which he administered the oath, Justice Burton insisted on the long form. He even used that form in administering the oath to ex-President Herbert Hoover as chairman of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, in the presence of President Eisenhower.

Repeating after Justice Burton, Mr. Wilkins not only swore to support and defend the Constitution, but he also swore:

"NOT A COMMUNIST"

"I am not a Communist or a Fascist. I do not advocate, nor am I a member of any organization that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence or other unconstitutional means, or seeks by force or violence to deny to other persons their rights under the Constitution of the United States.

"I do further swear that I will not so advocate nor will I become a member of such an organization during the period that I am an employee of the Federal Government."

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell again praised Mr. Wilkins for the "skill that is seldom seen in government" with which Mr. Wilkins conducted the work of President Eisenhower's Government Contract Committee. He said he had been impressed by Mr. Wilkins' "knowledge, efficiency and integrity" and was very happy to recommend his appointment as Assistant Secretary of Labor to Mr. Eisenhower when the opportunity occurred.

"I am confident that Mr. Wilkins will do an outstanding job," Mr. Mitchell said, "and will reflect credit on the country and the Department of Labor."

WILKINS SPEAKS

Mr. Wilkins, in turn, expressed his appreciation to President Eisenhower and Mr. Mitchell for his appointment, and to Justice Burton for taking "time out of his busy life" to administer the oath.

Noting the presence of a large number of his friends, Mr. Wilkins said:

"I can only promise you one thing — that I shall faithfully, honestly and sincerely, and I hope well, perform the duties of the office to which I have been appointed, to the end that our America, our United States will take its rightful place at the head of all of the nations of the world, under the leadership of Mr. Mitchell and our great and distinguished President Eisenhower."

Mr. Wilkins introduced to the gathering the members of his family — his wife, three sons and two daughters-in-law — Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Wilkins, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Julian B. Wilkins, and John R. Wilkins.

J. Ernest Wilkins, Jr., is a scientist with the Nuclear Development Associates, White Plains, New York. John R. Wilkins is a lawyer in the Department of Justice here, and Julian B. Wilkins will take over his father's law practice in Chicago.

Others present included Dr. Samuel H. Sweeney, pastor of St. Marks Episcopal Church, New York City, who is the father of Mrs. Julian Wilkins, and Mrs. Effie Madden of Chicago, mother of Mrs. J. Ernest Wilkins, Jr.

Also present was Maxwell M. Rabb, Cabinet Operations Officer and Associate Counsel to President Eisenhower.

Mr. Mitchell read a number of telegrams received by Mr. Wilkins, congratulating him upon his appointment.

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, resident bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, wired Mr Wilkins: "Methodism stands straighter today in its pride. We all congratulate the Government and the Church."

Other telegrams included messages from Mrs. Helen Rogers Reid, publisher of the New York Herald Tribune, and John Roosevelt, son of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, both of whom served with Mr. Wilkins on the Government Contract Committee; Bishop William C. Martin, president of the Methodist Church Council of Bishops; Mrs. Katherine S. Dixon, Republican National Committewoman for Illinois, and John Minor Wisdom, Republican National Committeeman for Louisiana.

The ceremony was held in the room back of the Departmental Auditorium. About 300 persons were present. All seats were taken and a number of people were lined up against the walls.

Mr. Wilkins will have charge of the Labor Department's International activities, including participation in the International Labor Organization, and labor aspects of the Foreign Service and Technical Assistance program.

A native of Farmington, Missouri, Mr. Wilkins graduated with high honors from the University of Illinois, served overseas in World War I, and later practiced law in Chicago.

He has been active in Methodist Church affairs for many years, having been elected to its Judicial Council in 1948 and as Council Secretary in 1953.

In August, 1953, Mr. Eisenhower appointed him vice chairman of the Government Contracts Committee, of which Vice President Richard M. Nixon is chairman. This committee is charged with enforcement of the anti-discrimination clause in Government contracts.

Mr. Wilkins, 60, married Lucile B. Robinson in 1922. Their home is at 1059 Park Avenue, Chicago.

Wilkins Speaks in 3 States in One Week

KANSAS CITY, Kas. — (ANP) — J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of Labor, was strictly Johnny-on-the-spot as he spoke in Atlanta, Kansas City, Kas., and Indianapolis, Ind., last week.

Wilkins' Atlanta speech at Atlanta university's Charter day convocation reviewed his work with the International Labor organization, but his other two speeches were at Republican rallies in which he praised the Eisenhower administration for its effort to advance Negroes to first-class citizenship.

In Kansas City, Wilkins said that Lincoln, before he was elected president, said that the question the people of his era had to decide was whether or not the Negro was a man.

"Ninety-four years later," said Wilkins "Dwight D. Eisenhower, soon to become 34th President of the United States, said 'There is discrimination. This crusade is pledged to use every single item of leadership and influence it has to eliminate it. It intends to enforce the full Constitution, not part of it.'"

Wilkins said that was the President's pledge and he has lived up to it.

At the Republican rally in Indianapolis, Wilkins praised the President for his solid backing of the Government Contracts committee, "which is doing so much to stamp out discriminatory practices by employers doing work for the government."

Wilkins also praised the administration for its work in de-segregating Washington, D. C.

"We have come a long way in 90 years," he said. The gains which we have made in recent years are more than any of us or our fathers thought would be possible, and for those of us who wondered sometimes if we would be able to hold the gains the answer is now very clear. Yes, we will hold these gains and we will make even greater gains.

"And the freedom that we won 90 years ago with the leadership of Lincoln is a freedom which we will protect and extend now with the leadership of Eisenhower."

Wilkins said to do the best job for the general good of all, "we are going to need a Congress in Washington that will support President Eisenhower. We are going to have to send to Washington Republicans who will continue the great work the Eisenhower administration has so far done for the people of the United States."

He said Eisenhower "wants and needs" a Republican congress and "we must give him a Republican congress."

CHICAGO NEGRO FIRST TO MEET WITH CABINET

Washington, Aug. 18 (A) — The first Negro to attend a White House cabinet meeting in an official capacity said today it was "an interesting and challenging experience."

Talking with reporters after attending the session of President Eisenhower's official family, J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant labor secretary, said the President had all matters on the agenda "well in hand" and added:

"Obviously, cabinet members represent some of the finest men in the United States. I certainly enjoyed observing our great President and the cabinet members discuss various subjects on the agenda."

Sits In for Mitchell

Wilkins, 60, a former Chicago attorney, attended the meeting in place of Labor Secretary Mitchell, who was filling a speaking engagement in New Jersey.

White House press officers steered Wilkins thru the lobby with three other cabinet members so he could be photografed and interviewed. Most cabinet members leave by side doors and rarely are seen by the press after the weekly meetings with the President.

Wilkins was photografed with Atty. Gen. Brownell, Postmaster General Summerfield, and Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of health, education, and welfare.

Headed Cook County Bar

Shortly after taking the oath of office last March, Wilkins was selected to head a score of American government, business, and labor union experts as this nation's delegation to the international labor organization meeting at Geneva.

Wilkins, born at Farmington, Mo., attended the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois, and served as an infantry supply sergeant in France in 1918. Active in civic affairs in Chicago, he was president of the Cook County Bar association in 1941-42.

He has three sons, one a nuclear physicist and the other two lawyers, one here with the justice department and one with his father's law office in Chicago.

DETROIT, Mich. — The long-expected appointment of John W. Roxborough II, 33, to a high-ranking government post was made last week when the young attorney was sworn in as general consultant to Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles.

Handpicked because of valuable experience with the NAACP in its legal division, Roxborough will serve as race relations adviser to the State Department at a salary of $50 per day plus expenses, said a reliable source of information.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT, continued the observer, has been under NAACP fire for lagging employment and upgrading of Negro employes.

Roxborough was rejected for a position last May with the Foreign Operations Administration under Harold Stassen.

Called to Washington, D. C., following the meeting of the Republican State Convention in Grand Rapids, Mich., last week, he was sworn in to office on Tuesday, Aug. 24.

EXCEPT FOR A brief return to Detroit last week-end, he is expected to remain in Washington for the necessary orientation period. The job for the most part, however, will be a commuting one.

Unavailable for comment, Roxborough is expected to serve on a per-diem basis as a general consultant to Dulles and his division heads.

Chairman of the legal redress committee (chief attorney) of the Detroit Branch NAACP and a member of the NAACP National Legal Committee, Roxborough is also a civic leader in the American Legion, Elks, Boy Scouts and other groups.

PAROLE BOARD GETS ITS FIRST NEGRO LEADER

Ex-Chicago Lawyer New Chairman

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, Sept. 29—The federal parole board, purged of all but one of its Truman appointees today got a new chairman, Scoval Richardson, a Negro lawyer formerly of Chicago.

The new board also found itself relieved of one of its touchiest chores—receiving the parole applications of the convicted spy-perjurer, Alger Hiss.

A justice department spokesman said Hiss, the former state department official and friend of former State Secretary Acheson, is expected to be released from prison in two months—on Nov. 27.

Conditional Release Date

That is the conditional release date for Hiss, the justice department spokesman said. It is the date that Hiss, with full credit for time off for good behavior, will complete his sentence at the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Hiss, during his entire prison sentence, regularly has filed parole applications and just as regularly, the parole board has turned him down.

Atty. Gen. Brownell swore in Richardson, 52, first Negro member of the board, as its chairman at ceremonies here this morning. Richardson practiced law in Chicago in 1938 and 1939 as a member of the firm of Lawrence & Richardson. Richardson resigned as dean of Missouri's law school for Negroes last year to become a parole board member. He succeeds Dr. Paul Tappan, as chairman. Tappan resigned to take a teaching job.

2 New Members

Brownell also installed two new board members, Lewis J. Grout, chief probation officer of the federal district court in Kansas City, Mo., and John E. Henry, former warden of the Montana state prison.

The only Truman appointee remaining on the seven man board is Dr. George Killinger. Dr. Killinger was made chairman in 1948 while Congress was investigating the conditions which prompted the parole board in 1947 to release the four Capone mobsters from Chicago, an action which had been called a national disgrace.

NEGRO IS APPOINTED PAROLE BOARD CHIEF

Attorney Genral Herbert Brown-

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. today designated 52-year-old Scovel Richardson, first Negro member of the Federal Board of Parole, as board chairman for the coming year.

Mr. Richardson, who resigned as dean of the School of Law at Lincoln University, St. Louis, last year to become a board member, succeeds as chairman Dr. Paul Tappan, a native of Danbury, Conn. Dr. Tappan resigned early this month to become professor of sociology at Washington Square College of New York University and a lecturer in the university's law school.

Mr. Richardson, formerly in private law practice in Chicago, is a native of Nashville.

Mr. Brownell, at ceremonies installing Lewis J. Grout of Kansas City and John E. Henry, a native of Waverly, Ill., as new board members, announced a new policy of rotating the chairmanship annually.

Mr. Grout, formerly chief probation officer for the Federal District Court of Kansas City, and Mr. Henry, former Montana Public Service Commissioner and former waden of the Montana State Prison, were confirmed by the Senate last month.

HOWARD U. HOME ECONOMIST, Dr. Fleming Kittrell, who is with Foreign Operations Administration in Baroda, India, held organized courses at the College of Home Science at Baroda University. Dr. Kittrell is demonstrating a pressure cooker and its use to students in the university.

Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell is FOA's expert in India

BARODA, India—A few weeks ago, Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell of Howard University, walked in the academic procession at Baroda University here at ceremonies in which 17 young women receive B. S. degrees from a science degree.

This event meant a great deal to Dr. Kittrell. These were the first young women in India to receive B.S. degrees from a faculty devoted exclusively to home science of "home economics," as it is called in the United States.

They were the first to complete a four-year course at the College of Home Science at Baroda University.

DR. KITTRELL, four years earlier, had helped organize the courses at the College of Home Science and had helped teach the first class, then of 42 young women.

Now a technical specialist under the Foreign Operations Administration program in India, Dr. Kittrell, who is on leave from Howard, first went to Baroda in August 1950, under the Fulbright exchange program.

She was invited then by Dr. Leela Desai, of Baroda, who had gone to the United States to study the organization of home economics programs.

Also interested in getting Dr. Kittrell to come to India was Mrs. Hansa Mehta, vice chancellor of Baroda University, who in 1950 was a member of the United Nations Human Rights Commission.

MRS. MEHTA had long been a proponent of women's education and thought that home economics was as important in India as in the United States. Special funds were available for further expansion of women's education at Baroda and Mrs. Mehta had begun to think about a separate College of Home Science.

Various institutions in India have home economics courses but even today only Baroda has a separate college for this kind of education.

At the time Mrs. Mehta was on the U.N. Commission, her daughter was in the College of Home Economics at Cornell University at Ithaca, N.Y.

IT WAS from Cornell that Dr. Kittrell had received her master's and doctor's degrees, after graduating from Hampton Institute.

Mrs. Mehta and Dr. Desai learned about Dr. Kittrell through Cornell. And in time Dr. Desai went to Howard University to study its home economics program.

"We went around Howard," says Dr. Kittrell, "and I introduced her to several staff people who I thought might be interested in going to India.

"After we had completed the tour, however, Dr. Desai said to me, 'How would you like to come to India?' and told me about the program that was being planned at Baroda."

DR. KITTRELL wasn't sure that it was even possible for her to do such a thing, although she had been to Liberia on a U.S. State Department exchange program in 1947. There she had made a nutrition survey for the Liberian Government.

Dr. Desai approached the president of Howard University about the assignment in India. Dr. Kittrell found that she could take sabbatical leave. An official invitation from Baroda followed, then Dr. Kittrell set about applying for a Fullbright grant.

On a day in 1950, she visited those in charge of the Fulbright program, who remarked, with good omen, that the Fulbright agreement with India had just been signed.

Arriving in Baroda in August, she remained for eleven months, helping Dr. Desai and the faculty with organization of the four - year course in the proud new venture, the College of Home Science.

One of Dr. Kitttrell's contributions was a credit system, for a specific semester's work, so that a young woman, although forced to leave school after a year, or two or three years, would later be able to work toward her degree.

This system is commonplace in American education but is the exception in India, where students either complete a four-year course or fail to get credit.

AS THE COLLEGE got under way, Dr. Kittrell taught nutrition. And although she returned in 1951 to Howard, she was very much interested in the Class of '54.

Dr. Desai also was eager to have Dr. Kittrell return. Letters from Mrs. Mehta came and permission was obtained from Howard University for another tour of duty.

Dr. Kittrell arrived at Baroda in August 1953, a little late for the start of school. All 17 members of the class of '54 were at the railway station, garlands of flowers in their hands, to welcome her back to Baroda.

IN DUE TIME, Dr. Kittrell was settled on the usual two-year term of FOA technical specialists. By then she was holding seminars on food and nutrition, teaching courses in meal planning, and child feeding and giving home economics demonstrations.

She was also working with the administration at Baroda completing plans for graduation and making plans for a summer short term course of three weeks for 1954.

In her air baggage (66 pounds allowance), Dr. Kittrell brought two dozen pint mason jars, stuffed with kleenex, handkerchiefs and feminine apparel. the lids and rubber rings of home caning paraphernalia.

The FOA Technical Cooperation Mission to India later supplied two pressure cookers, and Dr. Kittrell has been showing what can be done with home canning, an art she learned first from home demonstration agents at county fairs, and from her mother in North Carolina.

Dr. Kittrell is one of nearly 2,000 FOA technicians doing work which President Eisenhower has described as our most effective counter-measure to Soviet propaganda and the best method by which to create the political and social stability essential to lasting peace.

General Richard "Dick" Jones To Be Appointed In His Place

34c (1)

MONROVIA, Liberia — (Associated Negro Press Cable) — Dr. John W. Davis, director of the U. S. Foreign Operations Mission to Liberia, has been summarily dismissed from his post, three months before the expiration of his contract. Reports here are that Brig. Gen. Richard "Dick" Jones, department store executive and a "favorite son" of important Republican politicians in Illinois will succeed to the job.

SUPERIOR JOB

News of the firing of Dr. Davis, who until he came to Liberia nearly two years ago was president of West Virginia State College, struck official circles in Liberia with dismay. Liberians i nthe main believe Dr. Davis has done a superior job in managing the three score U. S. technicians working here under FOA. They say that the whole program of technical cooperation formerly known as Point 4 has prospered and grown under his leadership.

One of the aspects of the case which has puzzled Liberians is that Dr. Davis and his staff have been engaged in working out some important matters between Liberian and American officials. It seems to people here unrealistic to pull a man away while he was engaged in top secret negotiations vital to both countries. Some Liberians feel that the US is trying to intimidate them by knocking the props out from under them.

June 8, 1954

TO RETIRE

Dr. Davis had only three months to serve under his present contract, Liberians were hoping he would be reassigned here but it is understood that he was determined to retire when his contract was finished because he had writing commitments with a publishing firm in the United States which he felt could not be delayed any longer. Nevertheless, there appeared to be no reason for cancelling his appointment before his tour of duty was completed.

Gen. "Dick" Jones who will succeed him, is not known in Liberia. His brother, George Maceo Jones, a well known architect in Chicago, has recently been appointed to a high post in the U. S. technical corps working here and is expected here soon. Officers in the American military mission stations here some of whom have soldiered with Gen. Jones when he used to command the old "8th regiment" in the Illinois National Guard, give him high rating.

Interviewed by an Associated Negro Press reporter, Dr. Davis said:

"I have enjoyed my work here immensely. I will be able to leave Liberia with a certain sense of accomplishment and achievement."

Tar Heel Working In Indochina

By KAY RAY.

The News and Observer Bureau.
1335 National Press Building.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 — A young North Carolina Negro, whose service to this country, though not in diplomatic circles or on the battlefields, may help save Indochina from the Reds, is now home to rest.

Herman O. Marshall, 36, native of Wilson, is counting the days until vacation time is over, and he returns, in December, with his wife and their three children to his job, a job he considers the most interesting in the world.

The roads and trails of remote corners of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, the former Associated States of Indochina, have been his itinerary during the last two years. His mission has been a difficult one — helping disease-plagued villagers improve their welfare by improving their health.

Though politics have been for the Tar Heel a side topic, one discussed only when raised by inquiring Indochinese minds, Marshall time and again saw the democratic principles he applied run squarely into conflict with the propaganda line of the Communists.

"It is harder to educate, as we are doing, than to propagandize as the Commies are doing. Our method teaches the individual to think through his problems and consider alternatives. The Red propaganda method teaches those who listen to do things mechanically," commented Marshall.

His presence in Indochina could be attributed to the realization of the United States that health conditions had to be improved in the Indochinese states before they could hope for much econimic improvement. Because of this, the Foreign Operations Administration included health education as part of its public health and sanitation program. Marshall has been and will continue to be a health consultant to the United States government and to the Indochinese when he returns to the field.

Another North Carolinian started the health education program in Indochina in 1951. He was John Baker, now director of health education for the State of North Carolina, who in 1951 and 1952 as a U. S. Public Health Service officer was loaned to the U. S. aid mission in Indochina for two years to get the program underway.

Its objectives are to teach the people the value of preventive medicine, preventive sanitation and personal hygiene.

Urgent Program.

Urgency of the program is clearly apparent. The Geneva agreement gives a cease-fire period of two years, during which each side, Communist and non-Communist, will be permitted to build up its part of Vienam preparatory to the holding of national elections to determine whether the country shall be all-free or all-Communist, the North Carolinian points out.

It is this effort he looks forward to joining upon his return in December. He believes that through public health education, free Vietnam can bring to its people the most telling evidences of the benefits which will stem from a free and independent, non-Communist form of government.

"The idea of prevention of disease was rather new to these people," Marshall continued. "They only had one doctor, of a sort, for every 150,000 people as compared with one doctor for each approximately 800 people in the United States. But even with so few doctors, they still did little to prevent diseases and tried to treat them when they occurred, which was most frequently."

The North Carolinian's job was to undertake the public health measures that were needed. Such measures were carried out by the Indochinese health officials in cooperation with the FOA's public health officers, he said.

But before they could achieve very much, it was necessary for Marshall's program — preparing the people for the health measures—to have its effect.

"We tried to get across to the people," he said, "what there was to do, how to do it, and why it should be done. It was folly for our public health people to send crews in to spray a village unless we had a chance to explain to the villagers what the DDT was for, how it worked and why they should agree to having their houses sprayed."

"A new sanitary well could be installed," he went on, "but unless the villagers knew what makes a well unsanitary, what diseases arise from an unsanitary water supply and how, they aren't apt to know how to keep their new well in a sanitary condition. That's the importance of health education in countries lige these."

Back-Breaking Task.

Marshall's task in the Far Eastern countries, more than 11,000 miles from the native North Carolina, has been a back-breaking one.

To begin with, FAO had scheduled a staff of fourt health educators for its mission but was never able to obtain more than two at a time, so Marshall had to carry a double load. He worked throughout the three countries over an area more than one thousand miles from north to south and almost as far from east to west. He had to travel by plane over those sections which were controlled by the Communist Viet Minh, who are now taking over all of the country north of the 17th Parallel under terms of France's agreement last summer at Geneva.

The Tar Heel feels that his job is only partly finished.

"I won't feel it is done until enough Vietnamese are trained and qualified to carry on by themselves in an effective program of health education," he said, adding that the Vienam now plans to organize a department of health education in its ministry of health.

Marshall concentrated on the training of Vietnamese in increasing numbers to carry on as health educators.

The FOA plan was to work first with the native health departments, giving advice and educating the officials to the new concept of prevention. After that came the training of selected villagers to become full-time health education workers. In each village, community health committees were established so that the village could work on their own health problems.

Were Skeptical.

"The national medical people were at first skeptical," said Marshall. "They doubted that their village people could be changed, but were willing to try the plan. So we went to work. First, we imbued just a few members of the health department in our precepts. Then we set up demonstrations in rural areas. We designed posters, booklets and pamphlets and later adapted films to get across the new ideas. The public health program, supported by FOA, followed up with work on DDT spraying, trachoma control, established first aid stations and equipped them and trained first-aiders, installed sanitary wells, dug put privies and launched malaria control programs.

"The people saw that their government was trying to improve their lot, and it was something to rally around. It gave them a feeling that their government really cared something about them. The improvement of their health conditions, safe drinking water, reduction of malaria, relief from complications of trachoma and other improvements had a telling effect on them, psychologically as well as physically."

As evidence, Marshall cited efforts of the Communists to keep the villagers away from the first aid stations by telling them the American machines would make them sterile. The Communists kidnapped some of the first aid attendants, broke into first aid stations, stole the supplies, and smashed the sanitary pumps—evidence enough that the American effort was having an anti-Communist effect upon the people.

Nourishing a dream to become a doctor, Marshall worked his way through St. Augustine's College in Raleigh. However, immediately following his graduation in 1941, he was drafted into the army. Subsequently he served as chief pharmacist for an army hospital in Liberia from 1941 to 1945.

He later entered Columbia University in New York City and earned there a master's degree in health education. He has completed two years' work in Columbia's graduate school toward his doctorate in health education.

His wife is the former Catherine Powell of Raleigh, who is a graduate of Shaw University and holds a master's degree in dietetics from New York University. They have three children. Lorena, 4; Catherine, 3, and Herman Jr., 1, who was born in Indochina.

The Marshalls are now guests of his sister, Mrs. Louise Perry, in Wilson.

11 Specialists From Tuskegee To Spend Three Years On Project In Indonesia

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — Dr. L. H. Foster, Tuskegee Institute's president, signed a contract last week linking the institute with the Ministry of Education of the Republic of Indonesia for the next three years in a program of technical cooperation sponsored by the Foreign Operations Administration (FOA).

The contract negotiated by the Indonesian government with Tuskegee provides for 11 highly qualified technicians plus a staff director, all under Tuskegee institute's sponsorship, to be sent out to Djakarta to help develop a system of practical technical education which will supply skilled and supervisory personnel for the industrial development of Indonesia.

This program will be operated through Tuskegee institute's School of Mechanical Industries headed by Dean T. W. Jones. Dr. Kithro McEnge, professor and head, department of industrial education, will work directly with the program as Home Office Coordinator. He will make one or more visits to Indonesia to observe field operations during the period of the project.

Other institute personnel included in the project are :William W. Bearden, critic shop teacher of the laboratory school at Southern university, Baton Rouge, La.

Silas R. Kennedy, who has been working as instructor in the division of agricultural engineering, School of Agriculture at Tuskegee Institute, who will serve as Automobile equipment specialist;

Lawrence B. Hastings, a life-long resident of Tuskegee who is utility engineer at the Veterans Administration hospital and has served as superintendent and foreman of a number of construction projects both for the government and for the Institute, will serve as woodworking equipment specialist.

The FOA office in Washington reports that this is the second three-year contract negotiated in recent weeks by Indonesia under FOA's expanding program with college and university participation.

Currently in operation are 40 contracts sponsored by FOA with 30 different colleges involving service in 20 countries of Asia, Africa, Europe, and Latin America.

The other contract involves the University of California in a three-year $692,000 contract of cooperation with Indonesia in developing and strengthening the medical education and teacher program of its medical school. Ten American medical faculty members are being sent to Indonesia under that project.

Serving as chief advisor in Indonesia will be Edgar P. Westmoreland, a director in the Department of Vocational Education of the District of Columbia public school system. Westmoreland, who is being engaged as director by Tuskegee for the Indonesian program, has previously taken special assignments for the Alabama college. During the war period, he was called upon by Tuskegee to assist in expanding its vocational training facilities.

The Tuskegee staff in Djakarta in addition to the director will consist of four specialists in the fields of automobile mechanics, machine woodworking, machine shop equipment, and diesel mechanics, and seven teachers in the following fields wood working, electricity, wood shipbuilding, automobile mechanics, diesel engines, machine shop, and industrial science.

The Ministry of Education of Indonesia will designate an Indonesian counterpart for each of the specialists and teachers, who will continue the activity after the American specialist has returned home.

Westmoreland and several members of the field party expect to leave for Djarkarta by air this month. The rest of the party is expected to follow within several weeks.

Indonesia, a nation of 80 million people and a total land area half as large as the United States, became an independent republic in December 1949. The new republic's industrialization program requires more skilled technicians and supervisory personnel than its educational facilities can train. Many of the present technicians and people in supervisory positions in industry who are carrying on the industrialization program are now Indonesians. Particularly do the Indonesians want training on newer-type machinery.

40 COLLEGES JOIN U.S. TECHNICAL AID TO 26 COUNTRIES

Specialists Going Overseas Under Contract to Assist in Development Programs

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—The Foreign Operations Administration has signed contracts with forty universities in this country for technical assistance in twenty-six foreign lands. These contracts account for about $15,000,000 of the administration's $100,000,000 budget for technical assistance, with the aim to provide fifteen per cent of the 1,800 technicians serving overseas as of Friday.

By the middle of next year officials hope to have made eighty to 100 contracts under which universities will supply 80 per cent of the technicians needed abroad.

This development has begun to transform the nature of United States technical assistance. When Harold E. Stassen took charge of the foreign aid office under the Eisenhower Administration, a dozen short-term university contracts had already been made. The most notable was that linking Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College with Ethiopia.

Maryland U. in Plan

Confronted by difficulties in recruiting specialists for overseas duty, Mr. Stassen began to draw more and more on the faculties of United States universities, especially land-grant colleges. Because technical assignments are time-consuming, he introduced three-year contracts. The first of these, a $900,000 contract under which the University of Maryland will assist in the economic and social development of British Guiana, was signed in June.

Since then a new network of contracts has been formed. According to the system's advocate's, the aim is to create relationships between United States and foreign institutions that will survive after the Foreign Operations Administration is abolished.

The largest of the contracts, one for $4,029,830, has been awarded to the American University of Lebanon, which offers instruction in agriculture, public administration, science and public health to students from the Arab Middle East.

Two other institutions serving large regions outside the territorial limits of the United States are being assisted in maintaining programs — the University of Puerto Rico, for Latin America, and the University of Hawaii, for the Far East.

The smallest contract — $17,000 — is with Harvard for specialized advice in health and nutrition in Peru.

IN A COUNTRY where 28 different languages are spoken and only two of them written, his job is no easy one, he told the AFRO.

His principal target now, he explained, is to establish a radio network which would blanket the African republic. The spoken word, he feels, has its advantages over newspapers, because of the high rate of illiteracy.

The tremendous progress which has been made by the Liberian people in recent years, is one of the miracles of the last decade, he said.

MR. DAVIS, after reporting to Washington, will return here to join his wife. They plan a cross country tour by motor, which will carry them as far West as Chicago and as far South as Atlanta.

Mr. Davis is a graduate of Morehouse College, Atlanta and obtained a master's degree in journalism from Columbia University.

President Clement Takes The Oath

This state and city made history on Monday, January 5th., when President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University was sworn in as a member of the City Board of Education, of the City of Atlanta. Surrounded with due realization of the great epoch enacted, and such becoming fanfare that such an occasion might naturally be expected to bring, he solemnly took the oath along with the other eight members to be sworn in as the educational fathers of a progressive and growing city.

It will be recalled that President Clement made the race in the primary last Spring and was duly elected in the November election. This should be a boon to our political spirit that is at last being rewarded in a worthwhile compensation.

That is as it should be. With the great mass of colored children in the elementary and high schools of the city, surely there is some one among their group qualified to serve as a spokesman for them. We are happy that many of our white friends who voted for him, fully realized this fact and as the days go by, may there be other such additions to other functions of city government where we do not have such representation.

President Clement is an able and experienced educator; he has specialized in this field and has traveled abroad in the enlargement of his possibilities and vision in the field of education. Therefore he will not only be a valuable asset to his own people but to the city at large in its requirement of technical and efficient supervision of its educational facilities.

In recognition of him and his sterling worth, there has already been named for his mother, Emma Clarissa Clement one of our new and modern elementary schools on the populous westside.

Let those who are proud of President Clement and who would rise to give him a broad hand, remit such in their renewed energies in going out for registrants who must not only be ready to defend him, but to gain recruits in other spheres of city and state government as the opportunity presents itself.

Walden, Amos Sworn In At Executive Committee Session

Two more Negroes became official members of Atlanta's official governmental body last night when the 16 elected City Executive Committee members were sworn in.

The Executive Committee, with Austin T. Walden and Miles G. Amos, serving as members, held its first official meeting at 7 p. m. in City Hall after being duly sworn in by Superior Court Judge George Whitman.

Both men had secured posts on the committee in last May's city primary when they were elected to office. Walden had gained office without the necessity of votes, because he was unopposed on the ballot. Amos defeated another Negro candidate, Roderick B. Harris, to gain the seat from the Third Ward.

Before administering the oath to the body. Judge Whitman referred to Lincoln's Gettysburg address made during the Civil War, and announced the committee should "be true in our governmental processes in dedicating ourselves to the cause of freedom and liberty."

A small gathering, consisting mainly of Negro Atlantans, watched the installing of officers, before the committee got down to business Both Dr. Amos and Atty. Walden sat at the round table of the executive committee chambers as official members.

Their installation followed by a matter of days the installing of Dr. Rufus E. Clement as a member of the Board of Education, bringing the total of Negro members of the city governmental family to three.

This completed the campaign that started more than a year ago in voters' leagues to get Negro members on official bodies.

MIXED CROWD VIEWS START OF 4-YR. TERM

BY GEORGE COLEMAN

Nine people — all of them chosen by the Atlanta public to guide the destinies of its children for the next four years — gathered around a traditional round table yesterday in City Hall with right hands raised in solemn promise of democratic loyalty

A flurry of fine pens, signing an anti-Communist pledge, prepared by the city attorney, and administered by Mayor Williams Hartsfield, while School Superintendent Ira Jarrell looked on approvingly and a history making fight by Dr. Rufus E. Clement to become the first Negro to win a citywide election was complete.

Such was the setting at approximately 3 p. m. Monday in the Board Room of the Board of Education, in the midst of flowers of congratulations, the blinding flashes of cameras, and the applause of a mixed audience who came to see the new Board of Education installed.

DR. CLEMENT TAKES PLACE

Dr. Clement, stalwart president of Atlanta University took his place at the round table where school decisions have been rendered for years with a smile of happiness on his face, while his wife, Mrs. Rufus Clement sat nearby and watched proudly.

Several Negro leaders were present to witness the climax of what had at first been a bleak hope of a Negro winning a city wide election. C. A. Scott, Editor of the Atlanta Daily World, joined J. H. Calhoun, NAACP leader at the opening of festivities. Later, Miss Grace Hamilton, Urban League leader, C. R. Yates, Dr. L. D. Reddick, Atty. J. E. Salter, the Rev. T. J. Flanagan and Col. A. T. Walden, elected executive committeeman, joined the audience.

The installation of officers went over smoothly, without a hitch, even when the new board president Devereaux F. McClatchey, summed up many of the problems facing the group with an announcement that the awaited school segregation decision by the U. S. Supreme Court will be "vital to this board," and that "I'm sure we will have some problem to work out when it does."

"TIGHTER" BUDGET

The meeting was like this: Mayor Hartsfield jovially welcomed the new committee with a declaration that this year's budget "will be tighter." Asserting that "we are going to have to tell the people we cannot run a city without revenue."

His first recommendation to the board was to get out the city budget law and read it.

"I'm going to read it and memorize it myself," he declared.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Miss Jarrell, in her stead, lost no time in holding an election of board officers, and McClatchey, nominated as "a friend of the children of the City of Atlanta," was unanimously elected president.

J. Austin Dilbeck, a veteran of the board, was elected vice president; Albert Matthews, vice president of the First National Bank, was named treasurer, and Dr. Harris McManus, pastor of the First National Bank, was named treasurer, and Dr. Harris McManus, pastor of the First Christian Church, was elected Chaplain.

There were other newly elected board members installed during the meeting, including one woman. Mrs. Clifford Ragsdale, Frank Page and Neal Baldwin were also installed into office.

Two retiring board members, who lost their seats after nearly twenty years of office were lauded for their work. D. M. Therrell and J. M. Landers were cited for aiding the advance of education in city schools.

McClatchey, while thanking the mayor for his support of the board quickly told the audience that the city still needed many new additions and appropriations, and nanounce the bond issue would be pressed.

Guests were introduced, and then it was over. The new board members, including the first Negro ever to hold such a post, were now officially members of the city government for the next four years, here in the deep south where progress is such a greatly desird horizon.

1st of Race on Job

An Atlanta Negro has qualified and apparently will be elected without opposition to serve on the City of Atlanta's employe group insurance board of trustees—the first Negro to hold such a post.

A. J. Lewis, principal of Slater School, is one of four school employes who qualified for the four positions open to persons from the school system. City officials said Wednesday Lewis is in effect elected since the deadline for qualifying for an election to be held Friday has passed. The board administers group insurance for city employes.

WE ARE STILL FAR FROM THE GOAL

Many southern people boast that they know how to treat the Negro and will do a better job of dealing with him than the northerner. This comes from those who believe that the Negro "should stay in his place."

This advice might apply to individuals but certainly not the race as a whole.

Last week, a prominent Negro contractor in Georgia decided to run for the City council in his home town. However, before making his announcement he consulted some of the so-called powers that be whether the step should be taken. He got the go ahead sign and announced his candidacy.

Others thought differently and who but a couple of policemen took him, along with his brother, for a ride. Only by quick thinking and hard fighting were they able to save their hides.

It sounds ridiculous that in the "free world" (and the term is used advisedly) a citizen must get the consent of another citizen to run for office although the constitution of that and other states give him a legal right to do so.

In other words, the law says one thing; the code of ethics another. And these ethics are mob rule. Its the kind of thing which has raised its head in Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia: disrespect for law and order.

The human race is moving forward and the Negro, being a part of the human race, is on the move. He like his white friends, is not satisified with second class citizenship and all the inqualities and injustices that go with it. So that in all activities he expects and should take his place in the movement for a beter life for all.

There are some who object to this line of reasoning and they are those who want to "keep the Negro in his place."

Georgia Contractor In Election Has 'Night of Terror'

Ocilla, Ga.—A Negro contractor said Oct. 13 his short-lived candadacy for city councilman resulted in a "night of terror" for his family.

Ernest Davis said he entered the council race Oct. 11, after consulting white officials and voters who told him they had no objections.

Police Uniform

He said two men in a police car, one of whom was dressed in a policeman's uniform, visited his home shortly after mindnight Monday and ordered him and his brother, Curtis Davis, to get into the car.

Davis said they got into the back seat and "the man in uniform told me things had gone as far as they could go. He said he was going to kill me if he went to hell for it."

The uniformed man pulled out a pistol and fired into the back seat, Davis said, "the bullet going between me and my brother."

"My brother jumped out of the car," the contractor sad, "and ran across a field. The driver of the car scuffled with the uniformed man for the pistol, and told me to get out and go into the house."

He reported the automobile "kept going back and forth in front of the house all night and my family and I spent a night of terror."

Wednesday he withdrew from the election race.

T. M. Alexander Named To New FHA Post As Fee Appraiser

Atlanta real estate man, T. M. Alexander, has been appointed to a Federal Housing Administration post, John F. Thigpen, state FHA director disclosed.

Mr. Aelxander, co-owner of the Alexander-Calloway Realty Co., has specially been appointed the first fee appraiser for the FHA in this area.

The office was created after response to President Eisenhower's housing program became so large that FHA feld offices were unable to handle the volume of applications being filed.

The FHA then planned to use fee appraisers who are engaged in private business to help break the mounting backlog of home buyers' applicatons for mortgage insurance being filed under the new housing law.

A Negro was chosen to help the minority housing program to forward and thus Alexander became the Negro appointee in the newly created post.

Mr. Thigpen stated, "Then Federal Housing Administration in appointing Mr. Alexander feels that his wide experience in appraising property and his knoweldge of mortgage financng in this area qualifies him to render a service to the Housing Administration and the people."

A. L. Thompson, Racial Relations Officer, commented that this appointment is a step forward in this area and in keeping with its progressive policy. He also added that Mr. Alexander had been very helpful to this area, unofficially, by advising with them from time to time on local housing housing problems and "bottlenecks" in insured mortgage financing.

Mr. Alexander is in the real estate and insurance business and is president of his firm. He is also Vice President of Southeastern Fidelty Fire Insurance Company, President of the Empire Real Estate Board, member of the Executive Committee and Chairman of the Appraisal Committee of Mutual Federal Savings and Loan Assocation of which he served as secretary for a number of years. He is also well-known for his many civic and educational interests in the Atlanta community, serving as Chairman of the Board of the YMCA and as Trustee of Morehouse and Atlanta University. He also serves on the Mayor's Housing Committee.

Failure to Include One Negro in Filling Court Vacancies Is 'Noticeable'

New York.—President Dwight D. Eisenhower has been urged to give "careful and sympathetic consideration" to qualified Negroes in making future appointments to the federal courts.

Acting on instructions of the Board of Directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman, and Walter White, executive secretary, wrote to the president on April 13 expressing the NAACP's "keen regret that none of several eminently qualified Negro attorneys were included in the nominations announced on April 7 to fill vacancies on the federal bench."

Appointments

The letter, addressed jointly to the President and Attorney General Herbert Brownell, reiterated the NAACP policy against "askiog for political or other appointments for individuals."

Nevertheless, the Association spokesmen told President Eisenhower and the Attorney General, the NAACP has consistently maintained that race should not be "a deterrent to the nomination of qualified persons to important posts."

The failure to include a single Negro appointee, the letter said, was "particularly noticeable and regrettable in view of the precedents established by Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman in the appointment of qualified Negroes to the federal bench, such as Judge William H. Hastie to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Irvin Mollison of the U.S. Customs Court, and Judge Herman E. Moore as District Judge for the Virgin Islands."

Copies of the letter were sent also to Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee and to Republican governors.

U. S. Advisory Posts For Four

WASHINGTON—The White House announced this week the appointment of four persons in advisory posts.

Named to the national board of field advisers to the Small Business Administration were: Horace Suddeth of Cincinnati and W. D. Morrison, jr., of Detroit.

The administration is an independent agency primarily concerned with loans to small business.

Suddeth is the owner of the Mance hotel in Cincinnati and president of the National Negro Business league.

Morrison is a real estate broker and a former member of the Wayne county board of supervisors. He is founder and past president of the National Association of Real Estate Brokers.

Rufus Kuykendall, an Indianapolis attorney, was appointed a member of the National Commission on UNESCO United Nations, scientific cultural organization, by the State department.

Sherman Dana Scruggs, president of Lincoln university, Jefferson City, Mo., was named a member of the board of foreign scholarships of the State department.

Kuykendall who has organized young Republican clubs throughout Indiana is an Indiana university graduate and a member of several boards of national organizations. He is an assistant city attorney in Indianapolis.

Three Named To Federal Posts

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Three more Negroes last week were appointed to positions with the federal government, the GOP national committee announced.

They are Lt. George W. Lee, of Memphis, Mallory C. Walker, Portland, and David E. Longley, Richmond.

Lee and Longly were named to the National Board of Field advisors to the Small Business administration and Walker was appointed immigration and naturalization examiner in the Portland office.

Lee is a long-standing Memphis Republican and member of the Elks. A graduate of Alcorn A and I College, Mississippi, he has served as vice president of Mississippi Life Insurance Co., district manager, Atlanta Life Insurance Co., and now is director, Universal Life Insurance Co.

He also is a veteran of World War I.

A graduate of the Northwestern College of law, Walker is a former social worker. He is a member of the Young Republican Club of Northwestern College of law. He was assistant chairman of the Oregon State Young Republican organization.

He is married and has a daughter.

A prominent businessman of Richmond, Longley was educated at Virginia Union University. He is a veteran insurance man, having served with the Virginia Benefit Mutual Life Insurance Co., as district manager, auditor, field supervisor and assistant secretary-educational director and member of the board of trustes.

An Episcopalian, he is married and has two children.

Ike Forgets Negroes In Naming Judges

New York.—President Dwight D. Eisenhower has been urged to give "careful and sympathetic consideration" to qualified Negroes in making future appointments to the federal courts.

Ike Appointees To Be Honored

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Some fifty appointees of the Eisenhower Administration will be honored by the Virginia White Spool Club at a luncheon to be held at the National Airport Terrace dining room on Oct. 9.

Among speakers for the occasion will be Archibald J. Carey Jr., former alternate delegate to the United Nations; Maxwell M. Rabb, associate counsel to President Eisenhower; Carmel Carrington Marr, area adviser to UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge; Bertha S. Adkins, assistant to GOP Chairman Leonard Hall, and other Republican notables.

The fifty honorees, nine of whom have foreign assignments, are from twenty-one states and the District of Columbia, and represent every section of the country.

Appointments range from a delegate to the UN, a cabinet member and Governor of the Virgin Islands, to a page boy at the U. S. Supreme Court. Eight of the appointees are women, three of whom are lawyers.

MR. AND MRS. Lemuel E. Graves and their daughter, Theora Jean, paid A & T college a visit last week following their recent return from France. Graves, a former newspaperman, is on leave from his position as chief of the editorial section, Paris Office, of the U. S. Information Service. While in Greensboro, (N. C.), they were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Corbett.

An Incentive To Do Our Best

In the same week, Dr. Ralph J. Bunche was elevated to the second highest post in the United Nations organization, J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of labor, attended a Cabinet meeting as a department head, making history for his race, and Dr. Frank M. Snowden Jr. of Howard university was appointed cultural attache in Rome for the United States Information Agency.

Opportunities are opening up so fast for Negroes who are prepared that young people need not hesitate to go into any field of endeavor which interests them. There was a time when ambitious students were discouraged from specializing in certain areas because "there is no chance for a Negro to get a job in that field." That day is fast fading away. Our problem today is to get enough young folks ready to step into place as new opportunities are opened up.

Young Negroes of exceptional ability have tended to go into the fields of medicine, law and teaching rather than into business, engineering and architecture because the opportunities were greater. Young folks of average ability have been content to learn just enough "to get by."

Because of the limited opportunities in the business and industrial world, some young men and women have even considered it a waste of time to become proficient in their chosen work. "Why should I bother about learning to be a machinist when I won't get a chance to be more than a laborer?" Because of this attitude, our schools have turned out thousands of slip-shod workers. Negro businesses, seeking good typists, bookkeepers and clerks, have had a hard time finding applicants who could measure up to even the minimum standards.

In this new day, "getting by" is not enough. Those who cannot muster up enough energy and ambition to do their best will be by-passed as the door to opportunity swings open to those willing to prepare.

It matters not what field a young man or woman enters today. He can find a place if he is well qualified. Our advice to young people is, first of all, to go into a line of work which he likes and then to become the best possible worker in that line. A man does a better job when he enjoys what he is doing. School counsellors with their aptitude tests can help youngsters find out what type of work they are best suited for. Getting on the right track is half the battle won.

For the first time since Reconstruction Days, three Negroes will occupy seats in Congress.

The victory of Charles C. Diggs Jr., in Michigan's Thirteenth District on the Democratic ticket in last week's election means that the Detroit politico will join Representatives Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) and William Dawson (D., Ill.) as members of the House of Representatives.

The hectic voting provided several other highlights.

In Arkansas, Independent Fred W. Martin became the first Negro in modern political history to occupy a seat in City Council when he defeated his two white opponents.

In New York, Democrat Bessie Buchanan became the first Negro woman to ever hold office in the New York State Assembly. Maryland now has her first Negro member of the State Legislature.

In Pennsylvania, six Negroes were elected to the State Legislature.

Diggs,

Most Negroes In D. C. Since Reconstruction

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — More Negroes will sit in the Congress of the United States than at any other time since Reconstruction days.

The landslide election of Charles C. Diggs for congressman from Michigan's 13th district (in Detroit) means three Negroes will go to Capitol hill this year.

Diggs, first Negro ever to be elected to Congress in Michigan's history, plowed under his Republican opponent, Landon King, by a four to one vote margin.

His father is a former state senator and Diggs also served in the state legislature in Michigan.

The other two Negro representatives to Congress, Adam Clayton Powell of New York's 16th district and William L. Dawson of Illinois' First district also won by whopping majorities.

Powell polled 42,614 votes as contrasted to his 66-year-old Negro opponent, Harold Burton's 8,744.

Dawson beat his opponent, Genoa Washington, Chicago Southside hotel owner, 67,407 to 22,087.

CHICAGO, NEW YORK LEAD WITH NUMBER OF NEGROES

Chicago and New York led the nation with the number of Negro candidates who took office.

Fred (Duke) Slater (D.) was re-elected as judge of Chicago's municipal court. George Barnes (D.) was also elected to the court.

In the state senate race, Fred J. Smith (D. 3rd) was elected to succeed C. C. Wimbish. Rep. Corneal Davis (D.) was re-elected to the state house of representatives from the First district, while James Y. Carter won in the Third.

Democrats Charles M. Skyles and Kenneth Wilson were re-elected from the Fifth district. Republicans William H. Robinson and Ernest A. Greene won, bringing the Negroes who will go to Springfield to seven.

NEGROES PROFIT IN DEMOCRATIC SWEEP

In New York, Negro Democrats running for office in the boroughs of Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn were swept into office in one of the worst Republican defeats the state's history. In one of quiestest campaigns in Harlem in years, Democratic candidates swamped Republican hopefuls.

From the 21st district race for state senator, Democrat James Watson beat John A. Ross, 42,932 to 13,780. For the assembly from the 11th district, James C. Thomas (D.) whipped Albun Martin 12,166 to 2,525.

The first Negro woman to hold office in the state assembly is Democrat Bessie Buchanan who polled 21,575 to her opponent Lucille Pickett's 5,737 votes.

Other results showed Kenneth Phipps (D.) polled 2,415 votes while his opponent Walter Gumbs picked up only 243. Over in the Bronx, Republican James Webb registered 2,345 but 16,772 voted for his opponent, Walter Gladdin. In the Sixth district, Joe B. Williams' 3,159 failed to stop Bertram Baker who tallied 9,562 votes.

NEGROES IN 'FIRST' AROUND NATION

While New York and Chicago elected a large number of Negroes to public office, Negroes were also setting unprecedented records around the country.

A bathhouse attendant was elected to the Hot Springs (Ark.) city council to become the first Negro to sit on the council in modern political history.

Fred W. Martin best out two white candidates to win the council seat from the predominately Negro Second ward.

Unofficial returns gave Martin 2,334 votes, incumbent alderman O. O. Miles, 2,559 and Ralph Wright 2,284. Another Negro aldermanic candidate, Raymond Tweedle, lost in the Fifth ward by more than 2 to 1 to Councilman Lonnie Freeman.

Another first was in Baltimore, Md., Truly Hatchett, a real estate salesman, became the first Negro to be elected to the Maryland legislature in the state's history as he ran fifth, polling 11,447 votes, from the Fourth district to the House of Delegates.

A negro independent, Calvin Douglas, garnered only 345 votes in the Fourth district state senatorial race.

BOWERS RE-ELECTED IN OHIO

In Ohio, Democrat Frederick Bowers was re-elected to the Ohio House of Representatives for the third time. Bowers ran in Marion county where Dayton is located. A 42-year-old attorney, William N. Thomas, was defeated in Toledo on his second try for state representative to the assembly.

The first Negro ever to receive Republican nomination for any office in Lucas county, he finished eighth in a field of 10 seeking five seats from the county to the house of representatives.

His defeat was attributed by observers to the fact that he failed to pile up solid votes in predominantly Negro wards which normally vote Democratic.

ST. LOUIS DEMO COMMITTEEMAN RE-ELECTED

In St. Louis, Jordan W. Chambers, Democratic committeeman and boss of the powerful 19th ward, was re-elected constable of the Third district over Republican Leonard Brown, 11,675 to 3,337. John W. Harvey, Democratic candidate for magistrate of the same district defeated Ellis S. Outlaw.

In Kansas City, Kas., Cordell D. Meeks was re-elected Second district county commissioner in a Democratic sweep which brought success to the entire ticket.

Meeks won by 800 votes over his opponent, James Cox, in a district almost equally divided between white and Negro voters. Both Meeks and Cox are Negroes.

The race between the two was the main attraction in an otherwise dull campaign.

In the only other race involving Negro candidates, Democrat Dr. Eldrew Browne had apparently won over Republican incumbent Myles C. Stevens in the Eighth district representative race for a seat in the Kansas legislature.

A recount was due as Browne was leading by less than 100 votes, with counting still going on late last week.

Stevens was author of the Fiar Employment Practices bill which passed in the last legislative session.

NEGROES WIN ON COAST

Continuing on the victory trail with Negro candidates, in Los Angeles, Augustine Hawkins was elected to the city assembly. A Democrat, he was unopposed for his seat as no Republican candidate ran in the district.

Another Negro candidate's outcome was still in doubt. Lucious Lomax Jr., publisher, Los Angeles Tribune, was trailing Republican white incumbent, G. Delbert Morris, 10,112 votes to 12,815 with 150 out of 249 precincts reporting in a race for the state assembly.

the state house a distant fourth in a four-man race for three positions. He tallied only 9,515 votes while the third ranking white candidate picked up 19,245.

Elsewhere in Kentucky, a Hopkinsville attorney was losing against several white candidates in his bid for membership on the city board of education.

NEGROES FAIL IN BOSTON

In two other large cities where Negroes are concentrated, colored candidates failed to win major of-bid for a chair in the house of representatives.

The lone Negro candidate in Tulsa, Okla., C. L. Johnson, lost in a bid for justice of the peace. Johnson, running as a Republican, failed to get a majority of Negro votes, as he lost in the over-all balloting 29,571 to 22,778. Colored voters gave him only 1,060 to 1,439 for his white opponent. His bid was designated on the official ballot.

In Louisville, Ky., Rev. Daniel J. Hughlett, candidate for the same ticket, was defeated in his Louisville board of education, ran

NEGROES MAKE GOOD SHOWINGS ELSEWHERE

Elsewhere around the nation, Negro candidates, although in general making good showings, failed to win.

In Indianapolis, a Negro, for the first time ran for the judgeship of superior court and ran a close second to his Republican opponent. He is Mercer Mance, former juvenile court referee here. Another Negro, Atty. P. L. Harden, on the same ticket, was defeated in his fices. Negro candidates for state office from Boston failed to secure enough votes from wards nine and 12 to secure election.

Atty. Laurence H. Banks from ward nine and Atty. Harry Elam from ward 12, running on the Republican ticket, failed to capitalize on the re-election of Republican Gov. Christian A. Herter.

Banks was beat by 2,055 votes although he was the only Negro candidate for the office of state representative in the heavily populated, predominately Negro ward.

Elam was defeated in a curious campaign in which Jewish merchants who openly supported him were in turn boycotted by their customers. One merchant was almost put out of business.

In Philadelphia, the Negro candidate for Congress, W. Beverly Carter, was defeated by Earl Chudoff.

However, five Negroes were returned to the state assembly. All Democrats, they are: Susie Monroe, Samuel Floyd Granville, E. Jones, J. Thompson Pettigrew and Earah A. Anderson.

Political observers here commented that although the results were in many instances disappointing, the election and running of Negroes in certain sections of the South and border states was heartening.

GENERAL

RUFUS KUYKENDALL, HORACE SUDDUTH, W. D. MORISON, D. S. SCRUGGS
. . . the Eisenhower Administration's most recent appointments

GOP Continuing Race Appointments

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

By STANLEY ROBERTS
(Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Unprecedented recognition of qualified and prominent Negroes continues to be a major part of the Eisenhower administration.

This fact was again demonstrated this week when four important names were added to the ever-increasing Government family.

Sat. 5-1-54

Rufus Kuykendall of Indianapolis, Ind., was named to the National Committee of UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization); Dana Sherman Scruggs of Jefferson City, Mo., was placed on the Board of Foreign Scholarships; Horace Sudduth of Cincinnati, and William D. Morison were named to the National Board of Field Advisors of the Small Business Administration.

P. 1

The background of the men involved provides a key as to why they were selected.

General

HERE IS A THUMBNAIL sketch of each of the new appointees:

RUFUS KUYKENDALL—Indiana University Law School graduate; investigator public health service; assistant prosecuting attorney, Marion County, Ind., for six years; public defender, Criminal Court, Division 1, Indianapolis, Ind.; and, named first assistant city attorney, department of law, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 1, 1952.

DANA SHERMAN SCRUGGS—President of Lincoln University (Mo.); Ph. D., 1935, from University of Kansas; vice president Missouri Council for UNESCO and the Missouri Association for Adult Education; has been a consultant to many of the nation's important educational commissions; author of several published books in his field.

* * *

WILLIAM D. MORISON JR.—Detroit, Mich. real estate man since 1936; educated at Swift Memorial College; Hampton Institute, Virginia Union University, and the University of Michigan.

* * *

HORACE SUDDUTH—Regarded by many as Cincinnati's "No. 1" Negro citizen; president of the National Negro Business League; president of the Industrial Savings and Loan Company; president, for twenty-seven years, of the Ninth Street YMCA in Cincinnati; and, for sixteen years, president of the New Orphan Asylum for Colored Children.

It is highly significant that Mr. Sudduth and Mr. Morrison have been placed in the very important small business administration agency.

Negro Business consists mostly of small businesses.

THE APPOINTMENT of Mr. Sudduth is logical because of the fact that the veteran realtist from Cincinnati is president and spearhead of the organization which presently speaks for and represents our only cohesive group concerned mainly with the promotion and integration of minorities into the business world—namely, the National Business League.

In the appointments of Mr. Kuykendall and Mr. Scruggs, the government has finally recognized the need for use of the abilities of Negro representatives in the State Department, which too long has ignored their value.

Mr. Scruggs will be in a position to press for favorable consideration and approval of the application of qualified Negro students who, in turn, can and will demonstrate American democracy in action.

MR. KUYKENDALL as a member of the National Committee of UNESCO should render valuable service.

It is not without important internatonal coincidence that the Eisenhower Administration adds a Negro to the commission during the same week that Russia finally recognized UNESCO and appointed its representative to the organization.

Mr. Kuykendall was an organizer of young Republican clubs throughout the state of Indiana in 1930, served as an assistant to the state chairman during the 1936 and 1946 campaigns.

He was a delegate to the State Republican Convention and served as a member of the state platform committee in 1950.

Quite A Contrast

For every Negro appointed to a government post, the Eisenhower Administration laid off another 200 in Washington, D. C., alone.

Republicans boast about Negroes appointed to federal jobs, about 50 in number, in an attempt to get Negro votes. They fail to mention that since the GOP took over in Washington over 10,000 Negro government employees lost their jobs in the nation's capital under GOP economy firings.

WASHINGTON — The White House announced this week the appointments of three new persons to Federal posts.

George Maceo Jones of Chicago was named Architectural Engineer [illegible] He will work jointly with the Foreign Operations Administration and the State Department. His salary will be $15,000.

Jones attended Atlanta university and took his Ph. D. in civil engineering at the University of Michigan. He studied special architecture at Armour Institute. He has had his own office in Chicago for 12 years and has worked on two housing projects. For two years, he was development director to the Housing Authority of Cook County. He is a member of the City Planning Advisory board of the Chicago Planning Commission. In his new post, he will serve as architectural advisor to the government of Liberia.

Ulysses Plummer of Portland, Oregon has been named assistant counsel for the Bonneville Dam in Oregon. He is a practicing lawyer in Portland.

Mallory C. Walker of Portland was appointed a Naturalization Examiner with the Immigration Service for the West Coast with headquarters in Seattle, Washington.

will not change his plans, he added.

The blast completely wrecked the vestibule of the two-story building, blowing out windows and bulging the walls. Windows were broken in nearby buildings also. The whole neighborhood was shaken.

Deputy Detective Chief William Tuohy described the blast as the worst residential bombing he has over torn. It was believed the bomb was made of dynamite. It was powerful enough to have killed anyone not protected by the walls of the building.

The former owner of the building, Leroy Lawson, had moved from the first floor three weeks ago after hoodlums had thrown burning, oil soaked rags into the vestibule. The Lawson family now lives in Grand Junction, Mich.

Hawthorne said he does not know how soon he will be able to start repairs on the building. The Hawthornes now rent a four room apartment.

N. Y. Democrats Make Own Survey, Find Negroes Hold Few Top Posts

NEW YORK (ANP) — Probing the political appointments of the new administration, a group of Democrats has come up with the interesting information that available to "deserving" politices are 400 jobs that pay from $6,000 to $15,000 per annum. And of that number, only a dozen Negroes have been "blessed" with jobs in this category, and only one has reached the top salary.

Of course these jobs are allocated by borough and by office—that is so many belong to each of the five borough presidents, Manhattan, Kings, Queens, Bronx and Richmond (Staten Island) the remainder being at the joint disposal of the mayor and other political big wigs.

This startling revelation has caused a stir among the colored supporters of the admininstration. They feel they have been and still are being gyped in the matter of dishing out jobs.

When Billy Rowe was named 7th deputy police commissioner and Fred Weaver appointments, under the $10,000 category, led the faithful to sniff the situation more closely. That's when some of the smarter boys came up with the startling revelation that for the solid support given the Democrats by Harlem the voters had to be content with the crumbs from the table while other club house politices sopped up the gravy.

Mayor Wagner is aware of the situation although when his first official announcements of appointments were released only one Harlemite was included, Anna Arnold Hedgeman—who in the flurry of excitement was announced as an assistant to the mayor.

Such a post would carry a nice fat salary, almost douuble that now paid Mrs. Hedgeman who was the one person who could interest Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the Wagner campaign. What Mrs. Hedgeman's duties are have never been clearly defined, but as yet, she is not an assistant to the Mayor. Right now, the faithful want to know what happened to the bulk of the 400 jobs—some of which are right here ein Harlem.

Dawson To Head House Committee Under Democrats

Congressman William L. Dawson of Illinois, will be among the 18 Democrats who will take over in January as chairman of the House committees that will handle President Eisenhower's legislative program in the new 83rd Congress.

Congressman Dawson will head the Committee on Government Operations which he has been chairman of before. All Republican chairmen in the House were automatically relieved of their jobs when Tuesday's election returns gave the Democrats a 232 to 203 margin victory.

Negroes picked up another U. S. Representative with the sweeping victory of Charles Diggs, Junior, of Detroit, Michigan's Thirteenth District. He will join Congressman Dawson and A. Clayton Powell of New York, incumbents.

Opportunity for a fourth U. S. spot was lost when W. Beverly Carter, Jr., seeking election from Philadelphia's Fourth District, was nosed out by the Democratic incumbent, Earl Chudoff, a long time proponent of FEP legislation.

Philadelphia did, however, send five Negroes to the State Assembly, all Democrats. They were Susie Monroe, Samuel Floyd, Granville E. Jones, J. Thompson Pettigrew, incumbent and Sarah A. Anderson.

St. Louis sent three Negro Representatives back to the State Assembly in the person of Leroy Tyus from the Tenth District, John W. Green from the Seventeenth, both incumbents, and James P. Troupe, Sr., an organizer for the CIO Steelworkers Union, in the Eleventh. All three are Democrats. The Eleventh District was formerly represented by a Negro, Walter V. Lay, who resigned his post earlier this year.

In St. Louis, Negroes picked up two additional posts with the establishing of the additional magistrate districts.

W. S. Duigiud won the magistrate post in the Tenth District with Frederick N. Weathers the constable post over their Republican opponents.

In the Third District, John W. Harvey captured the magistrate seat together with the incumbent, Jordan W. Chambers.

Dawson Star At Demo's N. O. Confab

By O. C. W. TAYLOR

NEW ORLEANS — Cong. William L. Dawson took the spotlight here last week when the National Democratic Committee kayoed Jim Crow and held a successful integrated meeting here.

It was at the Illinois representative's insistence that the convention headquarters were changed from the Jim Crow Roosevelt hotel to International House.

The structure was built expressly for the purpose of entertaining the darker folk from Central and South America who come to New Orleans on business for their firms and governments.

They come from non Jim Crow countries and upon their treatment in America often depends the continuance or discontinuance of trade with the United States.

Congressman Dawson insisted upon the banquet being held at a place where there was no Jim Crow and they selected Loyola university, a Catholic institution which has already integrated to a great extent.

An $11 a plate dinner was served cold due to lack of cooking facilities at Loyola, but nobody registered a complaint.

Television pictures featured the brown-skinned Congressman at the head table during the banquet, which was addressed by Adlai Stevenson, 1952 Democratic candidate for president.

During the week Dawson conferred with leading Louisiana Negro citizens. He sat in and assisted to organize a registration drive and taped a broadcast for the Negro Forum over station WNOE.

The distinguished legislator was the house guest of President and Mrs. Albert W. Dent of Dillard university.

Cong. Dawson Fights Pay Raise For Federal Judges

World
Fri. 12-18-53

WASHINGTON — (INS) — A congressman's voice was the only one raised in dissent yesterday when labor leaders, lawyers and businessmen urged more pay for Federal Judges and Lawmakers.

Birmingham Ala.

The Congressman, Rep. William L. Dawson, (Demo., Ill.) appeared with the others at a public hearing by the National Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries.

P. 1

The 18-member commission is considering recommendations on possible pay increases for members of Congress and the federal bench.

Dawson declared: "The people did not send us here to make a social impression on others through an obstentatious display of wealth and possessions."

The Congressman, who said he had "some outside sources" of income, maintained that the nation's "taxpayers couldn't afford to give us a salary raise at this time."

However, former Federal Judge Evan Howell, of Springfield, Ill., told the Commission he quit his $17,500 a year judicial post several months ago because he couldn't rear five children and maintain a jurist's standard of living on that pay.

He said he had even more trouble during the seven years he served as a Congressman at $15,000 annually, $2,500 of which is marked off for expenses.

Dawson's committee repudiates Wimbish

CHICAGO (ANP) — The Cook county Democratic central committee, led by Congressman William Dawson, last week refused to endorse State Sen. Christopher C. Wimbish in his bid for reelection from the Third district.

Up until the past year, Mr Wimbish worked closely with Mr Dawson in running the powerful Southside political machine. The split came, it was said, when it was indicated that Wimbish was seeking to become Dawson's successor

Dawson Crushes Ill. State Senator

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — Congressman William L. Dawson, powerful member of Cook County's Democratic central committee, took the last step in crush State Sen. Christopher C. Wimbish's current political career Wednesday when he had the central committee refuse Wimbish endorsement for reelection from the 3rd district. A running feud has existed between the two for the past year or two.

Chicago Ill.

Wimbish, formerly a close lieutenant of Dawson, functioned as part of the latter's south side political machine for a number of years. A capable lawyer, with an affable personality, he developed a following of his own as 3rd ward committeeman. Some of Dawson's friends thought Sen. Wimbish was getting ambitious to become Dawson's successor.

Systematically checking and choking Wimbish's political maneuvers, the congressman drove the last spike Wednesday when he refused endorsement for the state senator's return to the post where he has spearheaded for several sessions unsuccessful efforts to secure passage of an FEPC bill. Grown wealthy with a good law practice, Wimbish followers say he will retire from politics for the present.

Name Euclid Taylor As Superior Court Master In Chancery Here

Defender
Chicago Ill.

Lt. Col. Euclid Louis Taylor, one of the city's outstanding criminal lawyers, has been named master in chancery of the Superior court.

He was sworn in during simple ceremonies Wednesday afternoon by Judge James J. McDermott, chief Justice of the Superior court, while a courtroom filled with admiring friends and associates looked on.

Sat. 3-20-54

Short speeches were made by the chief justice and Judge Holmgren. The latter said that appointing Col. Taylor as master in chancery was one of the greatest pleasures of his lifetime.

There was a short response by Taylor, who told of the great masters in chancery who had gone on before and made history. "I may not add to their great record, but I promise you I shall take nothing away from it" he said.

Among several scores seen at the ceremonies were Ald. Archibald J. Carey, John H. Sengstacke, editor and publisher of the Chicago Defender; Attorney C. Francis Stradford, Attorney Zebrick T. Braden, Circuit Court Judge Wendell E. Green, William Davis, retired policeman; David Walker, Genca S. Washington, GOP candidate for Congress in the First District, and Committeeman J. Horace Gardner who recommended Taylor for the position.

The appointment marks another highlight in Taylor's colorful legal career which began 25 years ago when he was named assistant state's attorney. During those years he became an extradition expert and caused international attention when he prepared the legal papers for return of the late Samuel Insull, midwest tycoon who fled from the country after the crash of his great multi-million dollar utilities empire.

Later he became one of the founders of the law firm of Prescott, Burroughs and Taylor. The years that followed saw him develop into a successful defense attorney with a record well over 150 straight victories.

During the years, however, he never lost interest in Republican politics and in 1952 he was elected delegate-at-large from Illinois to the national Republican convention.

In addition Col. Taylor is an expert horseman and has held a commission in Illinois state troop units for 15 years.

When asked about his new appointment by a Chicago Defender reporter, he said: "I am deeply grateful to my Republican committeeman, J. Horace Gardner (20th ward) for recommending me for the position. I am also happy that this appointment will not cause me to give up or curtail my general practice of law at the same office, 188 W. Randolph st."

Vivian Tives Is Boss Of Proiect

By GEORGE DANIELS

The appointment of Mrs. Vivian Watson Tives as manager of the 422, unit Wentworth Gardens project, marked the first time in Chicago that a Negro woman had been placed in complete charge of a Chicago Housing Authority development.

Her parents gave outstanding public service years before her and her four sisters and one brother are giving theirs in large doses, now.

Mrs. Tives was born in Chicago some years ago. The exact number of years is known only to her, her close friends and family.

She was graduated from Chicago's Hyde Park high school and then won her degree at Virginia Union university. She has done graduate study at the famed Illinois Institute of Technology, university of Chicago, in public administration and accounting.

She began her social work career with the Chicago and Cook County departments of welfare, married T. Theodore Tives, a government worker, and entered the housing field early in 1943.

During these eventful years, Mrs. Tives served at the Altgeld Gardens homes as a tenant selector and was later made supervisor of tenant selection at the Ida B. Wells homes. In 1947 she became resident manager of the Racine Court development.

Then, in March, of this year, the three CHA developments — Racine Courts, Trumbull Park Homes (where race riots have been occuring for the past nine months) and the Lowden Homes — were combined and Mrs. Tives' office was shifted to Trumbull Park.

Her father was the late Dr. S. E. J. Watson who pastored Chicago's Pilgrim Baptist church for many years. Her mother presently heads the religious education department at Tennessee State University — a position she has held for the past 17 years.

Mrs. Tives is one of six children and seems to have followed closely in their footsteps. Here's the record for proof:

BOMBAY, India (ANP)—Carl T. Rowan, journalist selected by the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce as one of the outstanding young men of 1953, has been touring India in an effort to dispel false notions about racial prejudice in the United States.

Author of best-seller, "South of Freedom," Rowan is staff writer (education section) of the Minneapolis Tribune. He points out that racial discrimination—in which India is greatly interested—still exists in one form or another in some parts of the United States.

"BUT," HE NOTES, "no people ever moved farther along the road of freedom in 10 years than did the colored American. Only in a free society where a minority can cry out for its rights, can any social progress be made."

Rowan is being accompanied on the tour by Sammy Lee, two-time winner of Olympic gold medals. A Korean, Lee is a skilled doctor and holds the rank of major in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Scribe's India Tour Seen As Boost To U.S.

WASHINGTON — A tremendous assist to democracy has been credited to newsman Carl T. Rowan as a result of his recent State Department-sponsored visit to India. Not pleased, however, about Minneapolis man's three- month tour is the Communist press of that nation. Rowan's India jaunt was sponsored by the State Department's leader exchange program. He lectured throughout the country about the Negro in the United States.

Communists particularly disliked Rowan's pointing up of the democratic progress the Negro is experiencing in America. The pro-Communist Blitz news magazine in Bombay headlined an article. "Rowans babble while Negroes burn." The publication called the writer a "propaganda peddler" a "one of the State Departments trained Negro parrots."

To get back at Rowan for talking about discrimination in India, the magazine ran a spread about the Chicago Trumbull Park riots.

To Visit India As U. S. Specialist

CARL T. ROWAN

Minneapolis, Minn. — Announcement was made in the Minneapolis Spokesman here recently of the U. S. State Department's selection of Carl T. Rowan, Minneapolis newspaperman and author for a three months visit to India as a specialist with the International Exchange Service. He is scheduled to leave the U. S. on July 1.

The Minneapolis Tribune will grant Mr. Rowan a three month's leave of absence for loan to the State Department. His duties in India will be to visit newspapers, schools and Indian institutions to interpret the standards and practices of the American Press.

This will include description on the American methods of newspaper gathering, selection of material and other phases of news and editorial practices.

Following his three months tour of service for the government, Mr. Rowan is expected to spend three months visiting eight other Asiatic countries for the Star and Tribune papers. First hand stories of what he observes there will be printed in the Tribune.

A tentative plan calls for him to tour Pakistan, Egypt, Iran, Burma, Malaya, the Phillipines, Indo-China and Hong-Kong.

Mr. Rowan will return to the U. S. around Christmas time.

The government assignment will halt not only Rowan's newspaper writing for a three month period, but will stop his U. S. platform appearances for the time being. Rowan is in great demand for speeches all over America.

It is expected, however, that the Tribune writer will be in greater demand for speaking engagements after six months in the seething Far East.

Tuskegee Educator Joins U. S. Team Helping Advise Indonesian Republic

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — E. P. Westmoreland, formerly with the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, has been named chief advisor of technical training to the Indonesian Ministry of Education.

His services were obtained for Indonesia by Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. The Institute recently contracted with the Indonesian government to render advisory, technical and procurement services in promotion of an Indonesian system of technical training.

This is believed to be the first time a Negro institution has sent a specialist to a foreign country in a similar capacity, although Negroes have assisted the U. S. Foreign Operations Administration in its activities abroad.

Indonesia, which has a population of more than 80 million, is undertaking an intensive industrialization program. Its present economy is about 75 per cent agrarian. Main export products are rubber, tin, spices, tea and copra.

The southeast Asian country, which obtained its independence from the Dutch in 1949 and set up a republic, is the sixth largest in the world. It consists of more than 3,000 islands, although nearly 80 per cent of the population live on two of the main islands, Java and Sumatra.

The people of Indonesia, which stretches along the Equator South of the Asiatic mainland and North of Australia, are mostly of Malayan origin. About ninety percent of the population is of the Moslem faith.

'Miss America' of Sumatra Is Former Howard Teacher

Myrtle Thorne Called 'One-Woman' Agency For The Islands

The Island of Sumatra in far-off Indonesia has its own "Miss America."

She is Miss Myrtle Thorne, 32-year-old public affairs officer for the United States Information Agency, described by Director Theodore C. Streibert as a "one-woman" agency.

A former English instructor at Howard University, Miss Thorne has been spreading the story of what America stands for in the Sumatran jungle for the past two years.

"She is fast becoming a legend," said Mr. Streibert, in a recent speech at the National Press Club on his return from an inspection tour of information posts in Southeast Asia.

Miss Thorne, who is colored and a graduate of Howard and Smith College, entered the Foreign Service in 1951 and was assigned to Djakarta, Indonesia. An assignment is Medan, Sumatra, her present post, followed.

Fluent in French and Spanish, Miss Thorne determined to learn the Indonesian language. She went out of her way to meet Indonesians and soon became an integral part of their community, agency officials here explained.

Today, they report, she is known on the islands as "Miss America." As far as the Sumatrans are concerned, she is the United States Information Agency and the United States combined, they say.

As public affairs officer, Miss Thorne runs the agency's library, film and cultural programs to demonstrate to the Sumatrans what kind of a country America really is and what its people stand for in their relations with the rest of the world.

MISS MYRTLE THORNE.

Stories of her junkets to remote places to distribute American literature have won her the admiration of her colleagues. She recently received the highest personnel evaluation conferred upon Foreign Service employes —"outstanding."

Miss Thorne's local address is 1115 Fairmont street N.W.

"What my father really means is if there's a job to be done or a fight to be fought, everyone works together as a team."

After this one, Moran remarked:

"I wonder if we got the right Jones for the job."

Chicagoan Gets John Davis' Job

By ETHEL L. PAYNE
Defender Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Brig. Gen. Richard M. Jones of Chicago was sworn in as the new director of U. S. Operations in Liberia.

He succeeds John W. Davis, who is returning to the United States after two months as head of the program

Jones will leave in mid-September for his new post and is now undergoing orientation in the Foreign Operations Administration. He was accompanied to Washington for the swearing in ceremony by his wife and son, Richard, jr., 8.

Present at the ceremony were Harry M. Englestein, owner of the South Center Department store building and for many years General Jones' boss; Val J. Washington, director of minorities of the Republican National Committee; Joseph Ray, assistant to the Administrator of Housing and Home Finance, Albert Cole; William E. Moran, chief of the Africa officer for Liberia and West Africa and Dr. D. A. Fitzgerald, deputy director for operations.

Jones, for five years advertising and business manager of the Chicago Defender, was notified two weeks ago of his appointment.

STORE EXECUTIVE

Recently retired from the Illinois National Guard, General Jones was vice president in charge of public relations at South Center department store in Chicago. He is also a member of the boards of Victory Mutual Life Insurance company and Illinois Federal Savings and Loan Associations and the Community Conservation Board of Chicago.

As director of the JOM program, Jones will head a 65 member staff and be in full charge of technical cooperation with Liberia as well as administering the funds made available for the program by the United States.

Officials of the FOA said Jones was picked after Dr. Davis indicated that he did not wish to serve another period and it was vitally important to have the best person as soon as possible for the post.

Jones' long military career was a major factor in his selection. He will consult with Dr. Davis before leaving for Liberia with his family.

Loses Top U. S. Post In Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia—(ANP Cable)—Dr. John W. Davis, director of the U. S. Foreign Operations Mission to Liberia, has been summarily dismissed from his post, three months before the expiration of his contract.

Reports here are that Richard (Dick) Jones, department store executive of Chicago, will succeed to the job.

News of the firing of Dr Davis, who until he came to Liberia nearly two years ago was president of West Virginia State College, struck official circles in Liberia with dismay. Liberians in the main believe Dr. Davis has done a superior job in managing the three score U. S. technicians working here under FOA.

One of the aspects of the case which has puzzled Liberians is that Dr. Davis and his staff have been engaged in working out some important matters between Liberian and American officials.

Dr. Davis had only three months to serve under his present contract. Liberians were hoping he would be reassigned here but it is understood that he was determined to retire when his contract was finished because he had commitments with a publishing firm in the United States which he felt could not be delayed any longer.

"Dick" Jones' brother, George Maceo Jones, a well-known architect in Chicago, has recently been appointed to a high post in the U. S. technical corps working here and is expected here soon.

Interviewed by an Associated Negro Press reporter, Dr. Davis said:

"I have enjoyed my work here immensely. I will be able to leave Liberia with a certain sense of accomplishment and achievement.

"The Liberian people have been lovely to me and the members of my family. They have rallied to my efforts here. The net result of my work has been the strengthening of the bonds of friendship and understanding between the Governments of Liberia and the United States of America."

Mrs. Davis and their daughter, Dash, leave Liberia next week and en route home will visit Lisbon, Madrid, Rome, Geneva, Zurich, Paris and London. Arriving in America about Sept. 20, Mrs. Davis will go to Englewood, N. J., to get their home ready for family use while Dash will proceed to Oberlin College for her senior year.

CHICAGO (ANP) — "Dick" Jones, prominent Chicagoan whom reports from Liberia say will be named as the next director for the U. S. Foreign Operations Mission to Liberia, declined comment when an Associated Negro Press reporter inquired whether he would accept the post.

Jones said he had no official notice regarding the appointment to a post of any kind. He said he would keep silent until he had some definite indication that he was to be offered an appointment.

Jones is a leading figure in Chicago. He is a vice president of the South Center Department Store, an organization with an interracial staff.

The general served with distinction in both world wars and after the conclusion of the last war became colonel of the 178th Infantry Regiment of the Illinois National Guard. He was retired a few months ago having reached the service age limit with the rank of brigadier general.

Jones Gets Top Post In Liberia

WASHINGTON — Richard L. (Dick) Jones, a retired brigadier general with the Illinois State National Guard, has been appointed director of United Nations Foreign Operations to Liberia, it has just been disclosed.

He will replace Dr. John W. Davis, former president of West Virginia State College.

Jones, who was born in Albany, Ga., has had a varied career. He helped to organize Louisville's First Standard Bank and served as its first cashier. He moved to Chicago in 1922 and eventually became advertising and business manager of the Chicago Defender.

In 1928 he became general superintendent and personnel director of the South Center Department Store, and advanced to the position of vice president and general manager. He has been active in the civic and business life of the community for many years.

NEGRO CIVIC LEADER REJECTS U. S. POST

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 18 (AP)—Paul Phillips, a Negro civic leader, today rejected a high Government appointment.

He cited racial segregation in Washington as one reason and said he did not wish to submit his family, and especially his young son, to the necessary adjustment.

Mr. Phillips, executive secretary of the Grand Rapids Urban League, had been offered the appointment as special assistant in Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby's Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In a letter to Mrs. Hobby, Mr. Phillips said he was "humbly grateful" for the honor of being considered for the $9,600 post. However, he added, there were two reasons why he could not accept.

He listed first the "evident progress, though slow, being made in Grand Rapids toward the desired democratic goal of equal opportunity for all and the dignity of the individual. It is our desire to remain with the league."

"The second reason," Mr. Phillips wrote, "is a very personal one. In our opinion it would be unfair and unwise to ask my family, and especially our 7-year-old son, to live in and attempt to adjust to the rigid pattern of racial segregation that exists in Washintgon."

Mr. Phillips said he believed President Eisenhower was making a sincere effort to eliminate segregation in the capital, but "nevertheless the pattern is such it would make adjustments very difficult."

Senator Ferguson said he had recommended Mr. Bass for the VA position because of his experience and ability in the field.

GRADE SCHOOL TEACHER

Mr. Bass is a member of Unity Church in Detroit, a director of the Booker T. Washington Association and serves on the membership committee of the YMCA. His wife, Mildred, is a grade school teacher in Detroit.

This is the third political plum Senator Ferguson has plucked for colored Republicans in his state. The first was appointment of Douglas Williams of Ann Arbor as a member of the Federal Hospital Council, which serves as an advisory group to the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, and the second was appointment of Charles H. Mahoney, Detroit lawyer and insurance executive, as a United States Representative to the ninth session of the United Nations General Assembly.

DETROIT GETS NEGRO JUDGE

DETROIT MAN GETS STATE DEPT. POST — John Walter Roxborough II, has been appointed as consultant to the secretary of state on administration. Judge Wade McCree becomes highest paid Fisk U. graduate

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Wade M. McCree Jr., newly appointed Circuit Judge of the Wayne County Court, Detroit, recently rose to become the highest paid graduate of Fisk University

Amid a furor of high pressure, argument and deadlock over who would succeed the late Judge Marchner of the Wayne Court, Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams announced McCree's appointment by telephone last week.

The 34 - year - old lawyer will receive an annual salary of $24,500. He has become the youngest Circuit Court Judge and the only colored jurist in Detroit at the present time.

McCREE, descendant of a long line of Fiskites, received the B.A. degree in history here in 1941. As an undergraduate, he was a member of the original Student-Faculty Council, president of the Student Council and a member of Kappa Alpha Psi and Sigma Upsilon Pi fraternities.

He was graduated summa cum laude and also received the highest departmental honors.

At Harvard University, where he studied for the law degree, the young judge was awarded a second-year scholarship on the basis of high scholastic attainment.

At the time of his appointment, Wade McCree was a member of the Michigan Workmen's Compensation Commission.

When notified of the judgeship, he was at the Detroit-Leland Hotel, attending a dinner in honor of Michigan Senator Diggs, Democratic nominee for Congress in the 13th district.

McCree said, with a happy smile:

"IT WAS a complete surprise. A man elbowed his way through the crowd and told me I was wanted on the phone because I had been appointed to the Circuit Court. Whoever had called had hung up before I could answer.

"I called Lansing and the appointment was verified.

"It is not only a great honor, but a humbling experience as well. It presents an opportunity to render a great service to the community.

"I am grateful to Governor Williams and to my many friends who intereceded in my behalf; I trust that, with God's help, I will prove worthy of their confidence."

IN APPOINTING McCree to the judgeship, the governor said:

"It is important that the new judge be young and vigorous, and at the same time, enjoy the highest reputation as a citizen, as a public servant and as a lawyer."

"Wade McCree fills those qualifications . . . his loyalty to American concepts has been tested, not only in combat, but before the state senate and affirmed by an overwhelming vote of that body."

Judge McCree was born in Des Moines, Iowa. He is of the Catholic faith. During World War II, he climbed to the rank of captain from private and served two years of combat duty in Italy. The lawyer has a wife and a 7 year old daughter.

In commenting upon the accomplishments of his former student, Dr. Theodore S. Currier, well-known chairman of the history department at Fisk, asserted:

"As I said then, 'A young man with the integrity, fortitude and scholarship of McCree could qualify for the Supreme Court'!"

DETROIT — A brilliant Harvard law school graduate last week became one of the youngest and the state's first Negro to sit on the circuit court bench.

He is 34-year old Wade H. McCree who was named by Gov. G. Mennen Williams to fill out the unexpired term of the late Judge Adolph Marshner. P. 3

McCree will serve until April, 1955, when he will have to run for election to a full six-year term. Prior to his appointment McCree was a member of the Workmen's Compensation Commission.

Atty. Charles S. Brown, close friend to McCree and "generalissimo" of protocol as the new jurist busily winds up one set of affairs and launches another, puts it this way:

"Mac is a man who has no enemies. If people meet him, they like him. So between now and April one of our jobs will be to let people meet him."

Brown noted: "The judgeship is quite a post, and many people will be after it for many reasons. But if there is anyone who deserves the position it is Mac.

NEVER ANGRY

"McCree has the perfect judicial temperament. Some of the people who work with him at Workmen's Compensation were commenting on that. They were saying he never blows up or comes apart at anything that happens. He never gets angry. And they are very right."

Brown is fully able to speak with authority about McCree. The two served together as combat infantrymen with the 92nd Division in Italy during the World War II. McCree was discharged a captain.

But the young judge himself is best justification for the high regard in which friends and acquaintances hold him. A man slightly less than average height, his bearing is unassuming and free of pretension.

NAMED CIRCUIT JUDGE — Wade H. McCree Jr., Detroit attorney who was named by Gov. G. Mennen Williams to the Wayne County Circuit bench to fill a vacancy created by the death of Judge Adolph F. Marshner.

McCree said, in commentating on his appointment, "I am humbly grateful. I think it is the ambition of every lawyer to sit on the bench, and I am grateful for the opportunity."

McCree called his work with the Compensation Commission — taking testimony, making decisions, preparing cases appealed to the Supreme court — a sound preparation for the judgeship.

McCree graduated Summa Cum Laude and number one in his class at Fisk university, in 1941, where he majored in history and government. "I wrote on the Fisk Herald," McCree recalls, "and was very interested in government even then. I was president of the Student Council my last year.

A HARVARD GRAD

"Law? I would say being a lawyer was a lifelong ambition."

McCree worked most of his way through college and held scholarships at both Fisk and Harvard. He also held a teaching assistant's position at Fisk.

"I had two sisters in school at the time, "McCree said, "and the scholarship assistance meant a great deal."

McCree is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity and active in the Detroit Alumni chapter. But his range of well-wishers and friends runs the complete circle of people in every walk of life.

As Atty. Brown puts it: "The cop on the beat is Mac's friend. Everybody, Everybody who knows him. Mac is tops.

"There's no finger anyone can point at his life, personal or otherwise. He is a man you can hold up to the light and look at.

"If anyone deserves the judgeship. Mac does."

3rd. Negro goes to Congress

Tribune P. 3

Los Angeles, Calif.

Tue. 11-3-54

DETROIT — A third Negro went to the House of Representatives as a result of Tuesday's election of State Senator Charles C. Diggs, Jr., Democrat, from this city's 13th district, and the re-election of veteran Congressman William L. Dawson, of Illinois, and Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, of New York.

Diggs, a 31-year-old undertaker, whose father served in the State Senate before him, defeated Republican Landon Knight, son of the editor of the Detroit Free Press, Detroit's biggest daily.

Diggs' father was sent to the State Penitentiary for bribery during the 40's and emerged to run again for his seat in the State Senate.

When he was defeated, his son took up the cudgel and ran and was elected.

Diggs' strength in Tuesday's Congressional race came from the heavily populated Negro section of the district which was the strength of the district.

Fifth Negro to be elected to the Congress since Reconstruction — first was Oscar DePriest, of Chicago, and the second was Arthur W. Mitchell, also of Chicago. Diggs weighs 200 pounds and was graduated from Fisk university. He served in the Air Force in World War II. In the primary, Diggs beat out the incumbent Democratic for the nomination. In his first race for public office, Detroit's Common Council, he placed 10th in the election of 9 members.

In a victory statement, Diggs said that his election 'is a great victory for the Democratic party, and "it also settles the deeper issue — the racial issue."

He said his major interest is housing. "I intend to work for an expanded housing program. I am also opposed to present discriminatory immigration laws," he said.

The defeat was Republican Knight's second try for Congress

MINNESOTA

Fine Example of Brotherhood

Billy Williams, "Assistant Governor" of Minnesota, has his desk just outside the Governor's private office.

Minnesota's Governor Anderson receives documents from "Assistant Governor" Billy Williams.

'Assistant Governor' of Minnesota

Billy Williams Has Been Capitol Official for Over Half a Century

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Billy Williams, 72-year-old public servant, is a man of many talents, the most prominent of which is his role as the "assistant governor" of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. Williams has been working in the Governor's office much longer than the present state capitol building has been in existence.

In fact, Billy, as he is known to uncounted Minnesotans, was helping to transfer records for Governor-Elect John A. Johnson while workmen were hammering on the skeleton of the present building back in 1904.

ABOUT SIX years ago, Williams had thought about retiring from the post of executive office aide but has since changed his mind. He has been such a fixture in his job that the practice of formally appointing him to his job has been dispensed with and, to this day, no one has had the temerity to challenge Billy's right to the job.

Williams has served four-teen of the twenty-eight governors of the State of Minnesota, which was admitted to the union in 1858. These figures include all of Minnesota's governors since 1904.

During this span of five decades, Williams, in his career as "guardian of the Governor's inner office," has advised, aided, turned aside, or shaken hands with close to 325,000 individuals.

HE HAS SERVED under Farmer-Laborites, Democrats and Republicans alike. Williams was installed in the post as a result of his ability on the baseball diamond. He had met Governor Johnson back in the 1890s when the former was playing ball in a Southern Minnesota league.

His ability as a ballplayer, coupled with his gentle manner, impressed Johnson, and the two men became fast friends.

When Johnson was elected to the governorship, he had Billy organize the state's files, which were being shifted from the old capitol at Tenth and Exchange Streets to the new steel vaults in the building under construction up on the "hill."

But, working in the capitol building was nothing new for Mr. Williams. He had served as a messenger for Governor John Lind during 1899 and 1900, returned to school and dropped from the state payroll during the GOP regime of Governor Van Sant and returned to the capitol when Johnson was elected.

A. O. EBERHART, a Republican who moved up from the lieutenant governorship in 1909, when Johnson died in office, assured Billy that he was to be retained as executive aide.

Among the governors Billy has served are Theodore Christianson, curently a State Supreme Court justice; C. Elmer Anderson, the present chief executive; Luther Youngdahl, Harold Stassen, Edward Thye, Hjalmar Peterson, Elmer Benson, Floyd B. Olson, Winfield Scott Hammond, J. A. A. Burnquist and J. A. O. Preuss.

He was also there under the administrations of Burnquist, Eberhart and Lind.

An example of how high Billy rates in the esteem of politicos in both parties was afforded on Jan. 5, 1915, when a man walked into the Governor's office, looked around at the office workers who merely glanced at him and continued to work.

THE "STRANGER" saw Billy, then walked over and said, "I'm certainly glad to see you. You are the only one here I know, Billy."

The "visitor" was the newly elected Governor Hammond, a Republican, who had arrived early that day for his inaugural. Billy then knew that his job was safe, despite the change in administration.

Billy's favorite pastimes are watching sports and fishing. He claims as his top exploit to have hooked thirty-nine crappies weighing fifty-one pounds at South Center Lake near Lindstrom twelve years ago.

He has preserved a bat that he used as a semi-pro baseball player.

Williams lives at 520 North Western Avenue with a niece, Mrs. Ida Hanna. His boyhood home was at 160 West Ninth Street, the site of Minnehaha Hall.

Mr. Williams tells Supreme Court Justice Theodore Christianson Jr. to keep his eye on the ball as he re-enacts a batting lesson he gave the justice more than twenty-five years ago when Judge Christianson's father was Governor.

Political Afterthought

Mayor Leo P. Carlin's appointment of Herbert E. Crawford, visual aids instructor for the Board of Education, as his executive-secretary at $5,600 a year to fill a vacancy, was dictated by political expediency.

The first election in Newark on May 11 to select a so-called "strong" mayor and nine councilmen, five from the wards and four from at-large, will not only be a "rat race," but will also be one of the bitterest in the city's history.

The fact that, as of this week, more than 100 candidates have filed petitions, speaks for itself.

This is an old, familiar pattern. When a city adopts a new charter, nearly two-thirds of the incumbent municipal officials decide to become candidates for office in the new government; and an assortment of good and capable citizens on the one hand and a group of opportunists on the other join in the parade.

Mayor Carlin is among the few experienced, capable mayoralty candidates in the May derby. But, he will have to do much more than hand out a $5,600 a year secretarial post to one of their qualified representatives to convince the majority of colored voters that he is deserving of their confidence and support.

Mayor Carlin has not given the majority of Newark's 76,000 colored citizens any satisfactory evidence that he is an uncompromising foe of class prejudice and racial discrimination.

Afro American

He has had many opportunities to put himself on record concerning prejudice and racial discrimination while he was a member of the Board of Education; during his tenure as Director of the Department of Public Works under the City Commission form of government; since his re-election last May; and during his short reign as Mayor.

Colored voters in Newark have grown in intelligence and vision. They are no longer going to vote for a public official just because he gives ONE member of the race a $5,000 or $10,000 job—especially when such an appointment is made ONLY a few weeks before the public official comes before the electorate for re-elction.

And they resent the practice of treating them as political afterthoughts. Sat. - 3-6-54

We are more concerned with social and employment security, with better health and recreational services and facilities, and with greater democratic practices by the Board of Education and Police Department that make life better for the masses, than we are about token jobs and good-will gestures to a few of their friends by public officials.

The mayoralty race will be a struggle down to the wire between Mayor Carlin and that other able public servant, Commissioner Pearce R. Franklin.

We hope that Mayor Carlin's new executive secretary, Mr. Crawford, and his other colored advisers will convince him that he can swing into his column on Election Day a considerable number of colored voters with a forthright pre-election statement on such major issues as:

1. His willingness, if elected, to issue a directive to the Catholic-dominated Board of Education to stop telling the taxpayers that there are no qualified colored teachers available for appointment as principals and vice-principals, and revise the discriminatory examination policy and grading procedures to end once and for all a lily-white administrative personnel.

2. His willingness to appoint a colored person to the Housing Authority, which has been lily-white since former Commissioner Stephen J. Moran failed to re-appoint the Rev. Dr. William P. Hayes to the Authority, despite his long and brilliant tenure thereon.

3. His willingness to shake up the personnel of the Mayor's Commission on Group Relations, which has been so cautious in its efforts not to offend anyone that it no longer commands the respect of people with character and integrity.

Candidates for public office who are not willing to discuss the so-called race problem or the paramount democratic issue of civil rights, and take a stand on them, are not entitled to serious consideration by those who are the victims of discrimination, segregation and bigotry in Newark.

Asbury Park may mix city council

ASBURY PARK — There's a strong possibility that this liberal resort city will become the second in the state with a colored councilman in 1954.

Councilman Joseph R. Ely submitted a letter of resignation to City Manager J. Oliver Armstrong on Dec. 21.

Prominent civic and interracial leaders have suggested to Mayor George A. Smock 2nd, and the City Council that Dr. E. A. Robinson, treasurer of the Housing Authority be appointed to fill the vacancy.

Mayor Liberal

Major Smock enjoys the respect and confidence of the colored electorate who gave him strong support in his successful re-election bid last May.

The mayor has demonstrated his gratitude for such support from colored voters during his administration by appointing several colored persons to top departmental positions.

Mr. Ely, a prominent funeral director, was appointed to the City Council in 1944, and was re-elected last May with Mayor Smock on the United Citizens' League ticket.

Councilmanic Trend

John T. Wright, a young taxi service operator, became the first colored candidate to be elected to the city council in Englewood in November, 1952.

Colored citizens in Newark, through the NAACP and allied civic groups, are formulating plans to try and elect their first colored councilman next May when the City Commission government is terminated.

NEWARK

Political history was made here this week, when, for the first time, a colored person was sworn in as a member of the Essex County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

The new member is James A. Curtis, 44, an attorney and former Republican Assemblyman who lives at 325 N. 11th st., with his wife and three children.

Mr. Curtis was elected unanimously last Thursday by the eight other members of the board to fill the unexpired term of Jacob S. Glickenhaus, who resigned to become a District court judge.

AFRO Editorial Near Scoop

The precedent-setting action came a day after the New Jersey AFRO-AMERICAN hit the newsstands in Essex county carrying a front-page editorial titled, "An Essex Freeholder."

After praising Essex county as "one of the best governed of New Jersey's 21 counties," and paying tribute to "the high calibre of men who have served as freeholders," the editorial said in part:

"Despite this governmental efficiency, however, we feel that the democratic process in Essex county can be greatly strengthened by breaking away from tradition to end the lily-white personnel of the Board of Freeholders.

"In the last 30 years, colored people in Essex county have watched with uneasiness the political process by which representatives of other racial and religious minority groups have been elevated to the county judiciary, the Board of Education, the prosecutor's office, the sheriff's office, and various major boards and agencies and departments of the county government . . .

Curtis Top Choice

"As taxpayers, the more than 100,000 colored people in Essex have a vital stake in the composition of the Board of Freeholders. And their business and professional status cannot be brushed aside as insignificant. Also, in no other county do colored people in the state show better cultural advancements than in Essex.

"These are considerations that should compel the Essex County Clean Government to give serious consideration to the endorsement of a highly qualified colored person for election to the board of Freeholders, and to issue the party edict that will insure his election.

"Among some of the people we feel can meet the qualifications to serve as Freeholders are:

"J. A. Curtis, a former Assemblyman and a member of the American Bar Association; Mrs. Mary Burch, a member of the Newark Board of Education, a former school teacher, and a member of the Board of Governors of the State Republican Women's Assembly."

SLATED FOR TOP JOB — Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, vivacious and talented vice-chairman of the New Jersey Democratic State Committee, has been endorsed for a top administrative appointment by Governor-elect Robert B. Meyner. She was state associate organizer of the Meyner-for-Governor Clubs, and is the wife of Dr. J. Minor Sullivan 3rd, 200 Spring st., Trenton. Mrs. Sullivan was recently appointed to the Executive Hospital Association Committee at the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute at Skillman Village.

Governor-elect Meyner ready to reward minority Democrats

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES

TRENTON — Five colored Democrats in Essex and Mercer counties are in line for some precedent-making appointments by Governor-elect Robert B. Meyner, the New Jersey AFRO-AMERICAN learned here last week in discussions with party leaders and workers.

The majority of colored voters in the state supported the top Democratic candidates, Adlai Stevenson (then governor of Illinois) for President, and Archibald S. Alexander, national Democratic committeeman, for the U. S. Senate in the 1952 Presidential campaign.

In the state gubernatorial election last November, the majority of colored voters again supported the Democratic standard-bearer, Mr. Meyner, whose surprise victory over Paul L. Troast, Republican, increased his party's national prestige.

To Keep Campaign Pledges

Mr. Meyner pledged in his campaign speeches to appoint qualified colored persons to top administrative and policy-making positions.

The colored party leaders and workers most responsible for the strong support the Governor-elect received from their districts are insisting that the campaign pledges be kept.

From what I learned here last week, both the Governor-elect and his top advisers are set to fulfill the pledges—but the number of top and secondary appointments colored people will receive depends largely upon a united patronage front by their party leaders.

Appointments Stated

As of Saturday, the Democratic high command, I learned, had reached unanimous agreement that the following five persons should be rewarded with jobs of importance:

Arthur Chapin, Montclair, civil rights director for the State CIO.

Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, Trenton, wife of Dr. J. Minor Sullivan, 3rd vice-chairwoman, Democratic State Committee.

Roger M. Yancey, Newark, former Assistant U. S. Attorney, and former assistant corporation counsel for the City of Newark.

Dr. J. Minor Sullivan, 3rd, medical inspector for Mercer county.

Frank Tucker, Montclair, insurance executive.

Chapin Top Choice

Chapin may be assigned to one of three posts: as an administrative assistant to the Governor, as an assistant in the Labor and Industries Department, or in the Division Against Discrimination.

Mrs. Sullivan may receive an administrative job in the Meyer administration similar to that to which Mrs. Anne A. Hedgeman was appointed by Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City.

Mrs. Sullivan Endorsed

She has the endorsement of the Mercer County Democratic Organization and the State Democratic Committee. She was state associate organizer, Meyner-for-governor clubs, during the election.

Mrs. Sullivan was recently appointed to the Executive Hospital Association Committee at the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute at Skillman Village. Mrs. Thorn Lord is president of the Association.

Attorney Yancey is almost certain to be appointed as an assistant attorney general. His former boss, former U.S. District Attorney Grover Richman, was appointed attorney general by the governor-elect.

Dr. Sullivan's Choice

Dr. Sullivan, who with his wife, built a strong colored Democratic organization in Mercer county that piled up many election victories, can have his choice of an appointment either with the State Health Department or the Department of Institutions and Agencies.

Mr. Tucker is eligible for appointment to the Banking and Insurance Department, the Division of State Police or the Division of the Real Estate Commission.

They were married in 1941. Their children are: James A. Jr., 11; Ardele Susan, 10; and John Fletcher, 4.

Salary $8,000

The position pays $8,000 per year, but it does not require Mr. Curtis to discontinue his law practice.

News of his election was hailed throughout the county and state by Republicans and Democrats alike.

Congratulatory messages from members of the legal profession, loyal party stalwarts and civic and interracial leaders were sent to George H. Becker, chairman of the Essex Republican Clean Government, who recommended Curtis's election.

Ware's Hands Stronger

It strengthens the position of Toussaint Ware, chairman of the Third Ward (now the Central Ward) Republican Committee, who gave Curtis strong support.

The appointment or election of a colored Freeholder has long been one of the major objectives of the Third Ward Republican Committee.

In Democratic circles, however, it was felt that the decision of the Essex Republicans to integrate the Board of Freeholders was dictated primarily by political expediency.

Colored Democratic leaders point out that, the overwhelming support given by the majority of colored voters in Newark and Essex county to the Democratic Party candidates in the 1952 Presidential election, and the 1953 gubernatorial election, forced Mr. Becker to do something constructive for colored Republicans.

They reason that Governor Meyner's decision to give some top appointments to colored Democrats made it imperative for the Republicans to guard against further defection by colored voters in the coming Congressional electon next November.

Curtis Well Trained

Mr. Curtis is a native of South Boston, Va., and received his early education in the East Orange public schools and Barringer high school, Newark.

He graduated from Amherst College in 1933 and from Rutgers University Law School in 1940.

He was admitted to the bar in 1942, became a counsellor in 1946, and was admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court in 1950.

Mr. Curtis served in the Assembly from 1948 to 1951, and was a leader in the historic fight for stronger statutes to halt racial discrimination in the state.

Civic Leader

He is a former president of the Newark NAACP Branch a former member of the board of directors of the Urban League of Essex County, and is a member of 13th Avenue Presbyterian church.

He formerly served as an extension worker at the New Jersey Manual Traming School at Bordentown.

Mrs. Curtis is the former Miss Catherine Fletcher of Princeton.

Educator denounces jim-crow practices

Delegates to Kappa convention hear Chicago university head

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

CHICAGO (ANP) — Dr. Lawrence A. Kimpton, chancellor of the University of Chicago, said in an address opening the 43rd annual Kappa Alpha Psi convention last week, that his university is against racial segregation "in any form."

The meeting highlighted the beginning of the Kappa grand chapter confab, which also included a social evening at Parkway ballroom and business sessions at the KAM temple.

Nearly 1,000 Kappas and their guests jammed Mandel hall on the University campus to hear Dr. Kimpton lash out at segregation. He said jim crowism is "not only illegal, but bankrupt and foolish."

First Negro Judge In Brooklyn, N. Y. Sworn In Chicago Defender

Brooklyn, New York, January 5, 1954

Lewis S. Flagg, leading Negro lawyer in Brooklyn, New York, and one of Brooklyn's outstanding AME laymen, was today sworn in as the first Negro Judge in Brooklyn.

P. 1

Judge Flagg won the nomination in the Democratic primary. This was unusual because he defeated a white judge who was appointed to serve up to the election. Although he won the nomination by only 128 votes, he was elected by a 15,000 plurality, receiving more votes than all his opponents, and twice as many as his nearest opponent. Attorney Flagg was born in Maryland, the son of Rev. Dr. L. S. Flagg, once pastor of Bethel AME Church, Baltimore. He graduated in law from Howard University Law School, and has practiced most of his time in New York. He is a loyal churchman, and represented the Bishops in the famous Sims case. His term is for ten years. His son, Lewis S. Flagg III, is also a lawyer and one of the New York City assistant district attorneys.

Brooklyn Pays Tribute To First Negro Judge

Atlanta

BROOKLYN — (ANP) — More than 1,500 persons of all races and creeds last week jammed the St. George hotel to pay tribute to Brooklyn's first Negro judge, Municipal court Justice Lewis F. Flagg, Jr.

The occasion was a banquet sponsored by the Civic League, the group that sponsored Flagg's candidacy for judge despite the opposition of organized political machines.

FDERAL JUDGE VACANCIES

Guest speaker for the occasion was Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York. Rep. Powell revealed that he had telegraphed President Eisenhower asking that he appoint a Negro to one of four federal judge vacancies in southern New York. He said this area has never had a Negro judge.

He praised Judge Flagg and the Civic League. He also said citizens of all races must work together for more Negro judges, congressmen, state legislators and city councilmen.

Of the new judge Powell said:

QUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY

"The democracy we profess means equality of opportunity. The man we honor at dinner tonight activated meaning to the equality for which America must be responsible if she is to maintain her place of influence in world leadership."

Abe Starks, city council president and also honorary chairman of the dinner, revealed that he and Councilman Earl Brown are sponsoring a council ordinance calling for a new committee on civil rights to replace the mayor's unity commission and the Puerto Rican Council.

Negroes of World Hail Hulan E. Jack

Letters Deluge Borough Chief

By GABRIEL PRESSMAN,
Staff Writer.

With joy, hope and prayer, Negroes throughout the world have hailed the election of Hulan E. Jack as Borough President of Manhattan.

Letters have come streaming in to Mr. Jack's Municipal Building office from places like Port-Au-Prince, Barcelona, Hamburg, Kansas City, Tucson and San Francisco. All the messages stress one theme: the inspiration of Mr. Jack's election to the highest elective office ever held by a Negro in New York City.

A Typical Letter.

Typical was the Negro editor who wrote from Port-Au-Prince, Haiti:

"I feel proud and honored . . . the great distinction you have been the object of extends itself not only to U.S. Negroes, but also to Negroes the world over, and more especially to us Negroes of Haiti who, for the past century and a half, have been striving so that those prominent men of our race should be acknowledged the place they deserve."

From Amsterdam, Holland, an American student wrote: "Europeans have time and again ridiculed the United States over the Negro situation saying: 'How can America have a democracy when the Negro is treated as he is?' If every European knew about you, I'm sure they'd have a better opinion of us."

Message From Cuba.

A "spontaneous homage" came in a letter from Barcelona, Spain. From Havana, Cuba, a lady sent a message of "pride and happiness." From Boston: "You are a credit to your race." From a Negro private on duty in the Pacific area: "I trust that the people of Manhattan are aware of the fact that you will not only be a public servant for one race of people but for all people."

A prominent Negro civil servant in this city declared: "You are a living example that here in the United States, the heroes of Horatio Alger are still our leading citizens."

And, summing up the universal feeling, the National Council of Negro Women in Washington said: "You have elevated millions of Negroes and filled them with pride in your accomplishments."

Many non-Negroes sent heartfelt messages too. Oswald D. Heck, Speaker of the State Assembly where Mr. Jack served 12 years, expressed deep sorrow that Mr. Jack had left the Legislature. He praised the Borough President for his "devotion to duty."

HULAN JACK.

'Example to Mankind.'

Sitting in his 20th floor office today, Mr. Jack voiced his happiness at being able to tell his story in a Voice of America broadcast that went out in 80-odd languages. "The people of the darker races, no matter where they are, have always looked to our democratic institutions for liberation from economic and political enslavement," he said.

"The Communists have used civil rights propaganda to pervert issues. The United States is not perfect, but it is moving steadily in the right direction to end discrimination. In electing a Negro to this office, America has again proved a great example to all mankind."

Hulan Jack, Mrs. Hedgeman get top jobs

By JAMES L. HICKS

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Harlem planted its foot firmly in the door of big time politics last week as Hulan Jack was sworn in to the $25,000 a year post as president of the borough of Manhattan and Mrs. Anna A. Hedgeman was named as assistant to Mayor Robert F. Wagner, at a reported salary of $15,000.

Mr. Jack's election, and Mrs. Hedgeman's appointment, with more lesser appointments certain to follow, gave Harlem the highest positions of influence colored people have ever held in any major city in America and forecast a new era of politics for them in New York City—a key factor in any national election.

Sworn In Thursday

Mr. Jack was sworn in Thursday by Supreme Court Justice Di Falco. Mrs. Hedgeman was sworn in Friday in ceremonies at City Hall.

Although the position attained by Mr. Jack is the highest and most powerful municipal position ever to be reached by a colored man in America, it was the appointment of Mrs. Hedgeman as assistant to the mayor, which immediately became the talk of the town as New Yorkers celebrated the first day of the New Year.

Political observers in Harlem were virtually unanimous in agreeing that the appointment of Mrs. Hedgeman by Mayor Wagner was a master stroke for Wagner from the standpoint of Harlem sentiment and as Harlemites celebrated the New Year at the Gothamettes' annual dance, the by word among dancers was that "Bob Wagner got off to a good start."

There was more than met the eye behind that statement and Harlemites knew the full story.

Speculation Rife

For weeks since the election of Mr. Wagner and the Democratic ticket there had been all kinds of speculation as to whom the new mayor would appoint, who would lose their jobs and where certain political figures would end up in the new scheme of things.

The man in the street who had supported the Wagner ticket was almost in unanimous agreement that Wagner was deeply indebted to Mrs. Hedgeman and felt that she deserved one of the top positions on the basis of her strenuous work as his assistant campaign chairman.

On the other hand there was the ever recurring rumor that none of the political leaders in Harlem were backing Mrs. Hedgeman for any job and that as a result she would be left out when the gravy train passed around.

Mrs. Hedgeman further complicated this already complicated situation by letting it be known that she would not accept any job already held by a colored person as she did not feel that such an arrangement represented any progress in the whole scheme of things.

She then tossed her hat into the ring for the position of Commissioner of Welfare, a post never held by any colored person.

Wins Admiration

Her courage in refusing to take a job from any other colored person, and her daring in "asking for something big" as Harlemites put it, won for her the admiration and backing of those few who were not already on her side.

By the time the day of political judgment rolled around Harlem was standing squarely behind Mrs. Hedgeman waiting to judge Mr. Wagner by whatever moves he made with regards to her.

When he offered her a top spot as assistant to the mayor everyone on all sides was pleased.

There were those who also found encouragement in the fact that Mr. Wagner did not fire, on his first day in office, any of the Harlemites who were carryovers from the administration of former Mayor Impellitteri.

Rowe Not Mentioned

In the raft of new appointments which he announced at City Hall Friday he made no reference to the positions now held by Deputy Commissioner of Housing Fred Weaver and deputy police commissioner William Rowe, both appointed by the former mayor.

Supporters of these two men (and there are many in Harlem) felt that this could indicate that the new mayor plans to keep them in their positions and find other jobs for his loyal supporters.

If Mr. Wagner does follow such a move it will serve to strengthen the hand even more in Harlem for there is a growing feeling here that nothing is gained when one colored man is simply replaced by another.

In its new political status the watchword in Harlem is "More jobs where we've never had jobs before."

Mr. Wagner rightfully refrained from any indication as to the fate also of Mrs. Ruth W. Whaley, secretary to the powerful board of estimate.

Mrs. Whaley's position in that spot depends on whether she is re-elected to that spot by the members who make up the board of estimate.

Done Job Well

There is common agreement that she has performed her job well and while it is certain that members of the board will be looking to the new mayor as to what direction they should move, it is felt that Mrs. Whaley enjoys the favor of the new mayor despite the fact that she did not support him.

The big question mark as Mr. Wagner took office was the fate of Mrs. Thelma B. Boozer, who served under him as a special assistant while he held the presidency of the borough of Manhattan.

Mr. Jack could retain Mrs. Boozer in her old position as his assistant, but many felt that Mr. Wagner would take her with him from the office of borough president and place her in his realm.

He gave no indication of such a move when he announced the appointments on Friday, however.

Fire Weaver, N. Y. City Housing Aide

By ARNOLD DE MILLE

NEW YORK — Frederick D. Weaver, great grandson of the late Frederick Douglass was fired from his $8,500 a year post as deputy housing commissioner last week without official notice.

The dropping of Weaver, who was appointed to the post in 1950 by Former Mayor Vincent Impellitteri to replace Raymond Jones, the first Negro to hold the job, was expected. But the manner in which it came was a surprise.

While it was reported that Weaver was advised by his chief, Housing and Building Commissioner Bernard J. Gillroy, several weeks ago that he would be replaced, no date or time was mentioned.

Before leaving for home Thursday, Feb. 11, Weaver checked with a city hall aide, but was advised that the date when he would be requested to leave was still undecided.

However, when he returned to work Monday morning, Feb. 15 (Friday was a holiday), he not only found that he had been fired, but also that a new deputy commissioner had been sworn in and that the staff was celebrating the new replacement, Mrs. Bernice Rogers, a former assistant corporation counsel was fired by the same mayor who hired Weaver.

JACK IS INDUCTED AS BOROUGH HEAD

First Negro in Post Pledges Civic Betterment Program —Swears in Some Aides

More than 500 political and personal well-wishers jammed the twentieth-floor Municipal Building offices of the Borough President of Manhattan yesterday to see Hulan E. Jack sworn in as the first Negro to head the borough.

Hundreds of those attending listened to the proceedings from crowded corridors and anterooms reached by loudspeaker from the induction office.

In an 1,800-word inaugural address, Mr. Jack pledged a broad program of civic betterment for Manhatan, including an attack on slums, an effort to work out a comprehensive traffic control plan, support for the work of local school boards and an intensive drive to keep the streets clean.

As the ceremony opened, the city's incoming Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr., who is retiring as Borough President of Manhattan, turned over his office to Mr. Jack "with my best wishes."

The oath of office was administered by State Supreme Court Justice Samuel Di Falco, a friend of long-standing of the new Borough President. The oath followed an invocation by Msgr. Cornelius F. Drew of St. Charles Roman Catholic Church, 211 West 141st Street.

With his wife Almira and son Edwin at his side, Mr. Jack gratefully acknowledged the democratic processes of government by which, he said, he had reached "the highest elective office ever attained by a Negro in the history of our United States."

At the end of the ceremony, the new Borough President swore in several reappointed assistants in his office and one new appointee. High on the list of those reappointed was George W. Thompson, to the $9,500-a-year post of assistant commissioner of borough works.

The new appointee was Stanley B. Rose, who became assistant to the Borough President. The positions of Commissioner of Borough Works at $15,000, executive manager and stenographer to the Borough President were left open.

In his address, Mr. Jack announced that representatives of business, labor and industry would be asked to form a permanent advisory committee to suggest improvements and solutions to problems impeding the borough's growth.

Traffic Study Planned

A research committee will be proposed by Mr. Jack to conduct "an intensive and concentrated" study of the traffic problem in an effort to work out an over-all plan for traffic control. The state and Federal Governments were called upon by the new borough head to increase their contribution to public housing in a drive to wipe out slums.

Mr. Jack called for a program of community participation, with interested citizens forming "clean-up committees" in all neighborhoods. He said he planned to continue the Community Planning Boards formed under the guidance of Mr. Wagner as Borough President to foster community betterment and projects.

The new borough head, retiring from the Legislature after thirteen years, received a watch from Assemblyman Louis Cioffe, who made the presentation on behalf of his colleagues in the Assembly.

Another inaugural yesterday was that of Supreme Court Justice-elect Owen McGivern, who was sworn in by Presiding Justice David W. Peck of the Appellate Division. The ceremony, a private one, took place in Justice Peck's chambers in the Appellate Division Courthouse, Twenty-fifth Street and Madison Avenue.

J. Paul Carey of 812 Park Avenue was appointed a director of the Fire Department's Honor Emergency Fund yesterday by Fire Commissioner Jacob Grumet.

$15,000 Water Post to Ford

NEW YORK—Arthur C. Ford, who was consulting engineer in the office of Manhattan Borough President at $9,600 was scheduled to be sworn in Monday or Tuesday as Commissioner of Water Supply at $15,000 annually.

This marks the first full commissionership granted a Negro in this city. The appointment was hailed by a group of civic organizations, such as the YMCA, YWCA, Urban League, and NAACP, who termed Mr. Ford one of the city's most able and competent engineers. Mr. Ford is a resident of Queens.

Mrs. Thelma B. Boozer, formerly director of Community Relations in the office of the borough president of Manhattan, was sworn in last week as civil defense aide in the New York City office of civil defense at 500 Park Avenue.

MRS. BOOZER'S salary is $8,000 annually. Meanwhile, there was some definition of the responsibilities of Mrs. Ann Arnold Hedgeman who was sworn in Jan. 1 as assistant to the Mayor at $8,000.

It was reported that she will act as liasion between the Mayor and the Department's of Welfare and Health, the United Nations and the New York City Public Library.

There was still some question about where Mrs. Hedgeman's office would be located.

She has just recently been assigned a desk but a full office had not yet been provided for her.

Hang On To Posts

New York—(CNS) The ouster of a couple of top Negroes who held positions under the former Mayor Vincent Impellitteri has not been forthcoming as was expected once the new Democratic mayor, Robert F. Wagner, took office. Deputy Housing Commissioner Frederick S. Weaver, a right hand man to former Mayor Impellitteri has not yet been asked to resign. The Howard University Law graduate is hoping that the mayor reappoints him to his post.

Seventh Deputy Police Commissioner William Rowe is hoping he, too, can stay one. Though very close to the previous mayor, Rowe has one point in his favor. The new Police Commissioner Adams has announced no present plans for any immediate changes.

Mrs. Thelma Berlack-Boozer who had worked in Wagner's office while he was Borough President of Manhattan as secretary of community relations, was asked to give up her

Woman Sworn In As Mayor's Aide

NEW YORK, (GLOBAL- -- Mrs Anna Arnold Hedgeman. former Assistant to the Federal Security Administrator, was sworn in last week as assistant to the newly-elected Mayor of New York City. Robert F. Wagner. The ceremony took place at City Hall on New Year's Day. Mrs Hedgeman is the first Negro to hold such a position in the city administration.

Mrs. Hedgeman's community activity in New York dates back more than 25 years when she joined the staff of the Harlem Branch Y W. C A. and became widely known for her effective work with youth groups, and with industrial, business, and professional women

She joined the staff of the Home Relief Bureau in 1934, and soon became Assistant to its Administrator.

Mrs Hedgeman gained national prominence through her work as Executive Secretary of the National Council for a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Comission, and under her guidance, the gcouncil attracted nation-wide attention and made FEPC a national issue within a period of two years.

In 1949 she became Assistant to Oscar Ewing. then Administrator of the Federal Security Agency in Washington, D. C. and it was during her period of service with this quest of the State Department to India to study youth welfare and education programs for the administration

Big Job— Ann Arnold Hedgeman, former assistant to Oscar Ewing, was sworn in Friday morning as assistant to the Mayor of the City of New York.

New York Gets First Dept. Chief

MR. FORD

MRS. BOOZER

NEW YORK — New York City got its first full Negro commissioner last week when Mayor Robert Wagner appointed Arthur C. Ford as the commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

Ford has been New York's first Negro consulting engineer in the office of the Borough of Manhattan since 1950. He was also appointed to that post by Wagner when he was the Borough president.

The appointment of Ford followed two others made within the past two weeks by the Mayor. Mrs. Thelma Berlack Boozer was named a civil defense aide in the city's office of Civil Defense, and district leader Antonio Rasmus was appointed secretary to the Commissioner of the Board of Elections.

On Jan. 1 the Mayor appointed Mrs. Ann Arnold Hedgeman as one of his assistants, the first Negro appointed to that office.

Ford's new post pays $15,000 yearly, Mrs. Boozer's pays $8,000 and Rasmus gets $4,380.

Ford, 60, has been on civil service status since 1924, when he joined the city's Board of Transportation. He is a native of Washington, graduated from the Montana State School of Engineering and was with the U. S. Ordinance Engineering Bureau during World War I, and later with the Watertown Arsenal, Watertown, Mass. When he joined the New York Board of Transportation he worked as a structual steel draftsman, and later served in the department as a designer.

During the 30 years he was with the city, Ford worked as a civil engineer with the Sanitation Department and the Department of Public Works, having been one of the engineers on most of the city's important water works and sewerage plants.

During War II, he served as a major with the New York National Guard, Engineering Corps.

Mrs. Boozer's appointment came as no surprise. She served as director of community activities in the borough president's office under Wagner. She will be assigned to the Manhattan Office of Recruit- and Public Information.

Swear in N.Y. commissioner

A. C. Ford first to hold position

NEW YORK — Mayor Robert Wagner was scheduled Monday to swear in 62-year-old engineer Arthur C. Ford to the $15,000 position of commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity for the City of New York, thereby making him the first colored man ever to hold a full commissioner's post in the city government.

Mr. Ford, a career man in New York City government, is currently a $9,500 consultant engineer in the office of the president in the Borough of Manhattan, a position he has held for the last four years.

Born in Helena, Mont., in 1892, Mr. Ford was graduated from Helena high in 1911, and received a B.S. from the Montana State university school of engineering in 1916.

MIT Graduate Work

After doing graduate work at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he came to New York in 1925 and accepted a post with the city government in the board of transportation. While in that post he helped to design the Eighth Avenue Subway line.

He is married to the former Lydia Bowser of Boston, and is a brother of Mrs. Carlotta Nichols, who is well known in Harlem circles. The Fords live at 409 Edgecomb ave.

The appointment of Mr. Forde created another first for Mayor Wagner and further strengthened his hand in lining up the Harlem community solidly behind his new administration.

Earlier Appointments

One of Mayor Wagner's early appointments was that of Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman as assistant to the mayor, the first time a colored person has held such a position.

Last week, he followed this with the elevation of Mrs. Thelma Boozer to an $8,000 post as a civil defense aid, and now comes the appointment of Mr. Ford, also gratifying to Harlem.

No One Removed

Mayor Wagner has not removed any of the colored persons holding high positions in city government under the previous administration, although there are predictions that the ax may fall on some any day.

Mr. Ford's new position, one of the most responsible in city government, carrys with it the 24-hour services of a chauffeur and a Cadillac car, in addition to the $15,000 salary.

Newburgh Names A New Secretary

NEWBURGH, N. Y.—A 21-year-old Negro girl has been named "confidential secretary" to Newburgh's City Manager, Donald H. Blatt.

Mr. Blatt announced that the appointment of Hilda G. Best became effective on Monday, March 1. Miss Best, purportedly the first Negro to hold a position in Newburgh's City Hall, is the daughter of the Rev. James L. Best.

Miss Best's office will be located next to that of the city manager and, Mr. Blatt said, will not be classified under civil service because of its confidential nature.

Miss Best finished twenty-seventh in the 1950 graduating class of Newburgh Free Academy in 1950. Last August she completed a two-year course in Business Administration at Providence, R. I.'s Bryant College.

No salary scale has been set for the position which was filled formerly by the late Mrs. Jean Frew. However, Miss Best's will start at the stenographer's minimum of $2700 per annum.

CIVIC APPEAL MADE TO PRIDE OF NEGRO

Mrs. Hedgeman, Mayor's Aide, Urges Resurgence of Will to Strengthen Democracy

New York's Negroes can testify to the worth of democracy by making their "proud, beautiful and valuable" section of the city "representative of itself," Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman, an assistant to Mayor Wagner, declared yesterday.

Speaking at a Women's Day service of the Rendall Memorial Church (Presbyterian) at 59 West 137th Street, Mrs. Hedgeman, a former consultant to the city's Department of Welfare and once assistant to former Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, called American Negroes "the most significant group of people in the world."

"We understand the world's cry for freedom and equality of opportunity, which it is difficult for other Americans to comprehend fully," she said.

"We can say democracy is good, even though we haven't had it completely ourselves. We have watched others enjoying it, and we have edged in too. American democracy couldn't be as good as it is without our constant pressure."

But Negroes and their ideas have been rejected so often "that we have rejected ourselves, and our cities show the result," the Mayor's assistant asserted.

A Contrast in City Life

On her first visit to New York in 1929, she recalled, "there were trees on Seventh Avenue and most of the city was beautiful." Now, she said, sections are littered.

"We are drenched with jump and jive music—even our spirituals are being prostituted," she went on. "Negro women in a generation concerned with gadgets are urging their men to bring them more material goods.

"And children, not knowing of the Negro's traditional struggle for self-respect, run around caught by the city's so-called glamour.

"I say there are not enough Christians, and we are selling ourselves short."

Mrs. Hedgeman urged the congregation to "catch the full impact of the simple, direct, honest and holy life of Jesus" and examine their families and their community.

"All the talent and all the beauty are here to make this the kind of city that would be an inspiration to the world," she declared.

Mrs. Hedgeman further urged her audience to use its political rights to bring about the kind of city, state, nation and international situation it wanted.

"We should be determined that the world wil lnot be run by men who do not understand that people who live in mud huts will be looking for a way out," she said, "and we hope that way will be democracy."

"To assure that it will be," she concluded, "the best way is by example. Begin in your apartment, in your block, on your street to set an example that will go out to the rest of the world. The world must find itself before it destroys itself, and there is no time to lose."

Granger Hails Appointment

NEW YORK—The recent appointment of E. Vincent Suitt, director of industrial relations, Buffalo Urban League, to a three-year term on Alcoa Foundation's Scholarship Selection Board, was hailed last week by Lester B. Granger, National Urban League executive director, as "another step forward in the development of industry's ever-increasing policy of promoting democratic practices."

Pick Edith Alexander For Mayor's Council

By ARNOLD DE MILLE

NEW YORK — Mrs. Edith M. Alexander, executive director of the Mayor's Committee on Unity, was appointed last week as associate executive director of the Mayor's Advisory Council.

In accepting the new post, Mrs. Alexander had to resign as head of the Mayor's Committee on Unity. She has headed the committee since 1949 and was an associate director since 1944.

Mrs. Alexander is the wife of Clifford A. Alexander, manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's Riverton Houses in Harlem, and the mother of Clifford, jr., who was recently elected president of the Harvard university student council.

She is a member of the National Council of Women of the United States, board of directors of the National Urban League and the Girl Scout Council of Greater New York; secretary of the National Women's Forum, and a member of the Women's City Club of New York and the Social Service Committee of Harlem hospital.

Mrs. Alexander took over her new post April 1.

WALTER E. LOGAN has been appointed director of Town House, New York City annex of Children's village. The village is a residential treatment school for emotionally disturbed and delinquent boys in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.

NEW YORK—A Federal grand jury, last week, issued subpoenas to two close friends of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (Dem., N.Y.) to appear at the Foley Sq. courthouse to answer questions about income tax returns they have filed in recent years.

The men who were probed are Acey Lennon, confidential aide to the congressman, and Joseph Ford, former Tammany district leader

They were questioned, it was revealed, concerning tax returns they made out for other people as well as for those they filed themselves.

MR. FORD, an accountant who left Mr. Powell in 1951, after several years of completing tax forms for hundreds of members of Abyssinian Baptist Church, of which Mr. Powell is the pastor, was questioned specifically concerning dual forms made out by a Powell aide and other persons.

It was also reported that Mrs. Hattie D. Freeman, secretary of Abyssinian, has also made several appearances before the federal grand jury.

Ford, who had served as her accountant, was questioned last week on Mrs. Freeman's returns, it was stated. Officers of the church, questioned by the AFRO, had no comment on the grand jury action.

Ann Hedgeman Gets Raise as Assistant To N. Y. Mayor

New York.—(CNS)—Ann Arnold Hedgeman, assistant to Mayor Robert F. Wagner, was voted a $2,000 a year raise in pay by the Board of Estimate last week.

Mrs. Hedgeman's $8,250 has for a long time been considered on the inadequate side for the post she's holding down.

As the Asst. to Mayor Wagner, her hectic job is as liaison coordinator with the Department of Welfare, libraries, museums, Lnited Nations and water pollution, in addition to meeting with the many individuals and their problems which flow into City Hall. She sits with Mayor Wagner and his cabinet on deciding policy and program development for New York.

With her salary now at $10,250, Mrs. Hedgeman will have additional duties in "race relations." A long time New Dealer, Mrs. Hedgeman was assistant to Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administration under President Truman, prior to her present appointment.

Navy consultant on racial issue quits

SAG HARBOR, N. Y., July 26—(AP)—Lester Granger has resigned as a special consultant to the Navy on racial problems because, he says, he felt Navy leaders lacked "a sufficient sense of urgency" regarding race issues.

Granger said last night his resignation, submitted June 19, was "good-natured" and both he and the National Urban League, of which he is executive director, would remain "ready to assist" the Navy.

Granger, a Negro, said the Navy has taken some important steps in removing racial segregation. But in recent months, he added, "These steps were not at a sufficient pace or extent to justify the services of a special consultant."

SINCE HE TOOK the consultant post last September, Granger said at his Summer home, he had put in only three days' work and had not been consulted at all since last Winter.

He said he resigned because he did not want to feel "in any way held responsible for practices and policies when I was not being consulted."

Granger said Negroes do have opportunities in the Navy's various branches but three-fourths of all Negroes in the Navy are in the steward's branch.

HARRIMAN DEFERS DECISION TO SEEK RISE IN INCOME TAX

He Is Undecided on Solution to Issues of Higher Costs —Goes to Albany Today

INAUGURATION TOMORROW

10 More Appointments Made to State Offices—Dewey Winds Up His Regime

By CHARLES GRUTZNER

Governor-elect Averell Harriman has not decided as yet whether to ask the Legislature to increase the state income tax to meet mandatory rises in government costs.

Mr. Harriman said yesterday he was "not prepared to say now" how he expected to meet the fiscal problem he will inherit tomorrow when he is inaugurated as New York's first Democratic Governor in twelve years.

He and Mrs. Harriman will leave today at 11 A. M. from their town home, 16 East Eighty-first Street, to drive to Albany.

Governor Dewey vacated the Executive Mansion in Albany yesterday and cleaned out his desk in the Capitol. Then he drove to this city to close the offices the state has maintained for him in the Roosevelt Hotel.

10 Appointments Made

Mr. Harriman meanwhile announced ten additional appointments to positions in his Administration. The selections several of which had been forecast in published accounts, are:

George M. Bragalini as Commissioner of Taxation and Finance.

J. Irwin Shapiro as Commissioner of Investigation.

Joseph P. McMurray as Commissioner of Housing.

Dr. Robert C. Weaver as Deputy Commissioner of Housing.

Charles Abrams as State Rent Administrator.

Michael H. Prendergast as Director of Safety.

Milton D. Stewart as administrative assistant to the Counsel to the Governor. (The appointment of Daniel Gutman, President Justice of the New York City Municipal Court, as Counsel to the Governor had been announced earlier.)

Leo Brown and Alfred J. Callahan as assistant counsel to the Governor.

Bernard J. Ruggieri as confidential law assistant in the office of the Counsel to the Governor.

First Liberals Named

Mr. Harriman, elected as the candidate of the Democratic and Liberal parties, said that Mr. Abrams and Mr. Brown were the first Liberal party members he had chosen "so far" for state posts. He added that there would be other Liberals among the appointments he would make next week.

All of Mr. Harriman's other choices have been Democrats. Mr. Prendergast is Rockland County Democratic chairman.

Mr. Harriman's disclosure that he was undecided on the state income tax was his first comment since several newspaper accounts reported variously that an increase was possible, likely, or unlikely. Asked at his 270 Park Avenue headquarters about published reports that he had made campaign promises not to seek an income tax increase, Mr. Harriman replied:

"What I said was that if we continued to expand our economy, revenues from existing taxes would increase and we could avoid new taxation.

But, said Mr. Harriman, information gathered so far by Prof. Paul H. Appleby, who has been designated for Budget Director, indicates "that we will not have enough money from existing taxes to meet increased expenses."

Mr. Harriman said that Professor Appleby's studies were based on 1954 receipts from taxes.

"But in 1954 our economy was moving sideways, not forward," Mr. Harriman commented.

Postponement Indicated

Although he did not spell it out, the Governor-elect left an inference that the possibility or hope of an expanded economy in the new year might put off for a year or indefinitely—the necessity of increasing the personal income tax.

Mr. Harriman commented that the Republican policy committee, at its meeting here Tuesday, had "recognized the fiscal problem" and decided that some sort of tax increase was "in order." Mr. Harriman said he had pointed out earlier that more money would have to come from taxes to meet additional government costs authorized by the Legislature.

The Governor-elect said he would try, with Professor Appleby's help, to make cuts in the budget wherever economies could be effected without curtailing essential services.

Mr. Harriman took lightly reports that Republican legislative leaders had felt slighted that he had not consulted them on his legislative program. He said he would be surprised if the Republicans' reported remarks "were made in seriousness."

Pointing out that he was not yet Governor, Mr. Harriman said he did not think it was his place to ask Republican legislators to "come from their home towns during Christmas week" to confer with him. He said that after his inauguration he would ask the Republican leadership to consult with him "on matters of mutual concern."

"I will consult with them as frequently as they wish," he added.

In announcing his choice of Mr. McMurray as Commissioner of Housing and Mr. Abrams as State Rent Administrator, Mr. Harriman said they also would serve on a committee, with one or more others, to study housing condtions and housing programs in the state and recommend a long-range program.

Mr. Harriman said his message to the Legislature would point up the need of a housing program for middle-income as well as low-income families. He said he would suggest immediate steps to be taken while a long-range program was being mapped. He added:

"Provision for publicly aided housing has been part of the State Constitution since 1938, when slums were the primary concern. Since then we have had the crises of war housing, of housing for returning veterans and now of a continuing shortage — particularly for low-income families. Tenement fires have dramatized the need for action. No policy or program exists for meeting the needs of middle-income families. We are still struggling with our housing problems in the framework of sixteen-year-old legislation.

"Rent control serves its purpose by preventing exploitation, but it does not offer a long-range solution. We have got to re-examine all aspects of the housing problem in terms of 1955."

Sketches of Appointees

Mr. Prendergast, who was floor leader for the Harriman forces at the Democratic State Convention, has been Rockland County leader since 1950. He has been associated since 1945 with the National Catholic Welfare Conference and is an executive of its War Relief Services with offices at 451 Madison Avenue. He is a former policeman, newspaper reporter and county director of probation.

Mr. Stewart, a resident of Fresh Meadows, Queens, has been Mr. Harriman's executive assistant for the last year. He has held several Federal positions, including that of staff member of the Bureau of the Budget. He was administrative assistant to Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. in the Eighty-first Congress. Mr. Stewart was associated briefly with the management counseling firm of Nejelski & Co.

Mr. Brown, a resident of Jamaica, Queens, has been a lawyer for twenty-six years and is a former assistant Corporation Counsel.

Mr. Weaver, who lives in Manhattan, is on the staff of the John Hay Whitney Foundation as director of opportunity fellowships. He is an authority on the placement and training of Negroes. He served the Federal Government for eleven years before and during World War II. He was adviser on Negro affairs to the Department of the Interior, and was a special assistant in the Federal Housing Authority. During the war he was in charge of training and employment of Negroes in war industries.

Mr. Callahan, vice chairman of the law committee of the Bronx Democratic organization, during the last two legislative sessions was research assistant to the Senate Minority Leader.

Mr. Ruggieri, a Brooklyn attorney, formerly was a law research assistant to Federal Judge Matthew T. Abruzzo and confidential aide to Supreme Court Justice Charles N. Cohen.

HARRIMAN PLACES 4 IN STATE POSTS; WOMAN IS NAMED

Dr. Persia Campbell, G. A. Mooney, C. W. Halloran and H. B. Evans Are Picked

By RICHARD AMPER

Governor-elect Averell Harriman announced yesterday the appointment of four more members of his official family.

They were:

Dr. Persia Campbell, economics professor at Queens College, for the newly created post of Consumer Counsel to the Governor. She is the first woman appointed to Mr. Harriman's Cabinet.

George A. Mooney, assistant to the business and financial editor of The New York Times, as Superintendent of Banks.

Charles W. Halloran, Buffalo Fire Commissioner and former head of the Buffalo Federation of Labor, as deputy industrial commissioner.

Herbert B. Evans, New York lawyer and Democratic worker, as confidential law assistant in the office of the counsel to the Governor. He is the first Negro to be named to the executive family.

Attorney General-elect Jacob K. Javits, the only Republican in the incoming Democratic administration, announced the appointment of Assistant Attorney General Henry S. Manley, as acting Solicitor General.

$145,000 in Lost Patronage

Mr. Harriman made his announcement at his headquarters, 270 Park Avenue, at a press conference during which he expressed "surprise" over the freezing of twenty-eight Dewey Administration appointees into civil service tenure.

Over the opposition of the Democratic member of the Civil Service Commission, the two Republican members granted civil service tenure to the twenty-eight last Tuesday, depriving Democrats of patronage jobs paying $145,000 a year.

"If these people should have been placed in civil service, then it should have been months ago," Mr. Harriman said.

He said the commission's action was subject to Governor Dewey's approval and that he would be "equally surprised" if Mr. Dewey approved.

"These jobs pay $13,000 on down to people in the Governor's own office," Mr. Harriman said. For Mr. Dewey to freeze them "just before retiring seems surprising to me." Such action, he added, would not be "reversible."

Mr. Harriman described the job assigned to Dr. Campbell as a "very important one." He had announced previously his intention to create such a post to provide his administration with advice on consumer problems. Dr. Campbell will have a "suitable staff," he said, but its size and her salary have not been determined.

Dr. Campbell is a widow and mother of two sons and lives at 137-27 Geranium Avenue Flushing, Queens.

Born in Australia in 1898, she became a United States citizen in 1936. She has long advocated consumers' interests as an advisor to the city and Federal Governments. She now is a member of the Consumers Subcommittee of the Mayors Advisory Committee.

She served during the last war on the Consumers Advisory Committee of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, is a former chairman of the National Conference on the Food and Agriculture Organization and advisor to the United States Interagency Committee on the F. A. O. She is the author of books on consumer problems and has served on the Queens College faculty since 1940.

Specialist on Banking

Mr. Mooney, who will assume the job of watchdog of banking institutions, is 43 years old and a specialist on banking and international finance. Among his backers for the appointment was Thomas Shanahan, president of the Federation Bank and Trust Company and a leading fund-raiser for the Democrats.

A native of New York, he was educated in public and parochial schools. He was graduated from Jamaica High School and Fordham University. He started to work for The New York Times as an office boy in 1926, served on the publisher's secretarial staff and on the Times staff in London. He was assigned to the business news department in 1941 and became assistant business news editor in 1943.

He lives with his wife and three children at 187 Puritan Avenue, Forest Hills. His post as banking superintendent pays $18,500 a year plus a $3,000 expense account.

Mr. Halloran, 48, who is to be deputy industrial commissioner at a salary of $15,000 a year, was widely urged by labor groups as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor at the last Democratic state convention. He is a member of the executive board of the Buffalo Federation of Labor and editor and publisher of The Buffalo Federation of Labor News.

He has served as fire commissioner since January, 1953, and will resign to take the deputy industrial commissionership under Dr. Isador Lubin, who has been named commissioner.

Born in Buffalo, the son of a railroad worker, Mr. Halloran became a fireman in 1927. As head of the Buffalo Federation of Labor from 1950 to 1953, he helped fight against Communist influence in labor unions. A member of the Uniformed Firemen's Association, Local 282, he won the annual national award of the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists in 1951.

Mr. Harriman said Mr. Halloran's headquarters would be Albany.

Mr. Evans, 35, is a member of the law firm of Weaver, Waters, Evans & Wright in New York, and he is secretary of the New Era Democratic Club in the Eleventh Assembly District. He was graduated cum laude in 1950, the second highest ranking student in his class at St. John's University law school. He lives at 54 West 120th Street. His salary has not been determined.

Mr. Harriman attended a night session of Small Claims Court in the Criminal Courts Building, 100 Centre Street, and suggested that putting some state offices on a night shift might be worth considering. The Governor-elect appeared in the court room to "pay my respects" to Daniel Gutman of Brooklyn, President Justice of the Municipal Court and his appointee as counsel to the Governor, and to observe the night session briefly.

Justice Gutman said he wanted to "mark my leaving" the bench by attending one more of the night sessions, which he established last September. Mr. Harriman said that there "are many state functions serving the public which perhaps might hold night sessions."

At his press conference Mr. Harriman repeated his complaint that he would be confronted with a budget that allowed "very little elbow room" and charged anew that programs approved by the previous Legislatures were responsible for his problem in trying to balance the budget.

He said he would confer today with Paul H. Appleby, his Budget Director, on results of attempts Mr. Harriman had ordered to pare requests for funds of various state departments.

Pending Mr. Appleby's report, Mr. Harriman declined to comment on the fiscal problem and how he might meet it. He revealed that he would have an office in New York in the State Office Building.

HARRIMAN APPOINTMENTS: Governor-elect Averell Harriman chats with two additions to his administration. They are George A. Mooney, right, Superintendent of Banks, and Herbert B. Evans, confidential law assistant in the office of the counsel to the Governor.

FULL COMMISSIONER — Arthur C. Ford (center) is sworn in as Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity in New York City, by Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr. while Borough President Hulan Jack looks on. Ford's appointment to the $15,000 a year post marks the first time a full commissionership post has been given a colored appointee in NYC.

City Water Post Goes To a Negro Engineer

By PAUL CROWELL

Mayor Wagner announced yesterday the appointment of Arthur C. Ford, a Negro, as Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity to succeed Dominick F. Paduano, a holdover from the administration of former Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri.

The Mayor announced also the designation of Joseph P. Spagna, a lawyer, as Commissioner of Purchase to succeed John Splain, who held the office under former Mayors Impellitteri and William O'Dwyer.

Mr. Ford, who is 62 years old and lives at 176-03 Croydon Road, Jamaica Estates, Queens, has been a consulting engineer in the office of the Borough President of Manhattan since 1950. His appointment was described as nonpolitical and as based solely upon his qualifiactions as ob- y the Mayor when he hattan Borough Presi-

Spagna, who is 50 years lives at 1842 East Fourth t, Brooklyn, has held public e in the Federal service. Like Fo he is a Democrat, but appointment was also characterized as nonpolitical.

Both of the latest additions to the Mayor's official family will succeed men whose original appointments were credited to James A. Roe, Democratic leader of Queens County, who supported former Mayor Impellitteri last September in his primary contest with Mr. Wagner for the Democratic nomination for Mayor.

Roe's Lack of Standing

Since taking over at City Hall, the Mayor has ignored Mr. Roe in patronage matters. A few hours before announcing the appointments of Mr. Ford and Mr. pagan, the Mayor told reporters that he considered Mr. Roe "to all intents and purposes", the Democratic leader of Queens, but hedged when asked if he would recognize Mr. Roe in patronage matters.

"I'm too busy getting my office organized to give much attention to politics," he said.

It is no secret in political circles, however, that Mr. Roe, for the present at least, is in bad standing at City Hall. The Mayor, Controller Lawrence E. Gerosa and City Council President Abe Stark are scheduled to attend tonight a dinner at the Commodore Hotel at which the Mayor will install the new officers of the James A. Phillips Democratic Club.

Mr. Phillips successfully fought the Roe organization last fall in winning the Democratic nomination for Queens Borough President from John Clancy, who was Mr. Roe's choice.

Although the Mayor had told reporters that his attendance at the Phillips dinner would have no political significance, his statement was accepted in political circles as a tongue-in-cheek utterance.

Commending of DeSapio

The Mayor was asked whether he would support Carmine G. DeSapio, leader of Tammany Hall, for membership on the Democratic National Committee.

"I have no vote in the Democratic State Committee, but I think that Mr. DeSapio would be an excellent choice for membership on the Democratic National Committee," he replied.

The Democratic State Committee will choose a member of the national organization at a meeting on Feb. 13. Mr. DeSapio has announced that he is not seeking the post but would be "honored" to serve if chosen.

The Mayor's appointment of Mr. Ford to the $15,000 post of Commissioner of Water Supply Gas and Electricity makes the new official the first of his race to hold a top level administrative job as head of an important city department.

The late Ferdinand Q. Morton, for years chairman of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, was a Negro as is Thomas B. Dyett, now serving on the same agency, but their appointments were to a semi-autonomous board for fixed terms and they did not serve at the pleasure of the appointing Mayor.

Backgrounds of Appointees

A native of Washington, Mr. Ford was educated in Montana, where his family moved when he was an infant. He holds an Engineering degree from Montana State College. From 1920 to 1924 he was a mechanical draftsman in the service of the Army. From 1924 to 1933 he was a structural steel draftsman with the city's Board of Transportation.

Later Mr. Ford became a civil engineer in the Department of Public Works and Sanitation. In 1950 he was named to the $9,100 post of consulting engineer in the office of the Borough President of Manhattan.

Mr. Ford is married. He is a member of several engineering sociaties and is Manhattan Borough Chief in the office of civil defense in the public works emergency division.

Mr. Spagna is married and has four children. He is a graduate of the city's public school system and the Fordham University Law School. He was admitted to practice in 1927 and since 1935 has held various posts with the Federal Government. As a member of the public works division of the Department of the Interior he helped prepare legislation under which cities and towns could apply for Federal grants for public works projects.

Mr. Ford will be sworn in at City Hall today at 11 A. M. and Mr. Spagna at 4:30 P. M.

City Water Post Goes To a Negro Engineer

By PAUL CROWELL

Mayor Wagner announced yesterday the appointment of Arthur C. Ford, a Negro, as Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity to succeed Dominick F. Paduano, a holdover from the administration of former Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri.

The Mayor announced also the designation of Joseph P. Spagna, a lawyer, as Commissioner of Purchase to succeed John Splain, who held the office under former Mayors Impellitteri and William O'Dwyer.

Mr. Ford, who is 62 years old and lives at 176-03 Croydon Road, Jamaica Estates, Queens, has been a consulting engineer in the office of the Borough President of Manhattan since 1950. His appointment was described as nonpolitical and as based solely upon his qualifiactions as observed by the Mayor when he was Manhattan Borough President.

Mr. Spagna, who is 50 years old and lives at 1842 East Fourth Street, Brooklyn, has held public office in the Federal service. Like Mr. Ford, he is a Democrat, but his appointment was also characterized as nonpolitical.

Both of the latest additions to the Mayor's official family will succeed men whose original appointments were credited to James A. Roe, Democratic leader of Queens County, who supported former Mayor Impellitteri last September in his primary contest with Mr. Wagner for the Democratic nomination for Mayor.

Roe's Lack of Standing

Since taking over at City Hall, the Mayor has ignored Mr. Roe in patronage matters. A few hours before announcing the appointments of Mr. Ford and Mr. pagan, the Mayor told reporters that he considered Mr. Roe "to all intents and purposes" the Democratic leader of Queens, but hedged when asked if he would recognize Mr. Roe in patronage matters.

"I'm too busy getting my office organized to give much attention to politics," he said.

It is no secret in political circles, however, that Mr. Roe, for the present at least, is in bad standing at City Hall. The Mayor, Controller Lawrence E. Gerosa and City Council President Abe Stark are scheduled to attend tonight a dinner at the Commodore Hotel at which the Mayor will install the new officers of the James A. Phillips Democratic Club.

Mr. Phillips successfully fought the Roe organization last fall in winning the Democratic nomination for Queens Borough President from John Clancy, who was Mr. Roe's choice.

Although the Mayor had told reporters that his attendance at the Phillips dinner would have no political significance, his statement was accepted in political circles as a tongue-in-cheek utterance.

Commending of DeSapio

The Mayor was asked whether he would support Carmine G. DeSapio, leader of Tammany Hall, for membership on the Democratic National Committee.

"I have no vote in the Democratic State Committee, but I think that Mr. DeSapio would be an excellent choice for membership on the Democratic National Committee," he replied.

The Democratic State Committee will choose a member of the national organization at a meeting on Feb. 13. Mr. DeSapio has announced that he is not seeking the post but would be "honored" to serve if chosen.

The Mayor's appointment of Mr. Ford to the $15,000 post of Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity makes the new official the first of his race to hold a top level administrative job as head of an important city department.

The late Ferdinand Q. Morton, for years chairman of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, was a Negro as is Thomas B. Dyett, now serving on the same agency, but their appointments were to a semi-autonomous board for fixed terms and they did not serve at the pleasure of the appointing Mayor.

Backgrounds of Appointees

A native of Washington, Mr. Ford was educated in Montana, where his family moved when he was an infant. He holds an Engineering degree from Montana State College. From 1920 to 1924 he was a mechanical draftsman in the service of the Army. From 1924 to 1933 he was a structural steel draftsman with the city's Board of Transportation.

Later Mr. Ford became a civil engineer in the Department of Public Works and Sanitation. In 1950 he was named to the $9,100 post of consulting engineer in the office of the Borough President of Manhattan.

Mr. Ford is married. He is a member of several engineering sociaties and is Manhattan Borough Chief in the office of civil defense in the public works emergency division.

Mr. Spagna is married and has four children. He is a graduate of the city's public school system and the Fordham University Law School. He was admitted to practice in 1927 and since 1935 has held various posts with the Federal Government. As a member of the public works division of the Department of the Interior he helped prepare legislation under which cities and towns could apply for Federal grants for public works projects.

Mr. Ford will be sworn in at City Hall today at 11 A. M. and Mr. Spagna at 4:30 P. M.

Hulan E. Jack's election as borough president inspires people everywhere

NEW YORK—Our people are proud over the election of Hulan E. Jack as borough president of Manhattan.

This is shown in letters which have streamed into his office from places like Port-Au-Prince, Barcelona, Hamburg, Kansas City, Tucson and San Francisco.

All these messages praise Mr. Jack's elevation to the highest elective post ever held by a colored person in New York.

Editor Writes

An editor from Port-Au-Prince wrote:

"I feel proud and honored . . . the great distinction you have been the object of extends itself . . to us . . of Haiti who, for the past century and a half, have been striving so that those prominent men of our race should be acknowledged the place they deserve."

From Amsterdam, Holland, an American student wrote:

"Europeans have time and again ridiculed the United States over the colored situation saying: 'How can America have a democracy when the colored citizen is treated as he is?' "

A Better Opinion

"If every European knew about you, I'm sure they'd have a better opinion of us."

A private on duty in the Pacific area expressed the hope that "the people of Manhattan are aware of the fact that you will not only be a public servant for one race of people but for all people."

A prominent civil service worker in this city declared: "You are a living example that here in the United States, the heroes of Horatio Alger are still our leading citizens."

Univesal Feeling

The National Council of Negro Women in Washington D.C., summed up the universal feeling with this statement:

"You have elevated millions of colored people and filled them with pride in your accomplishments."

Oswald D. Heck, speaker of the state assembly in which Mr. Jack served for 12 years, praised him for his "devotion to duty."

Happy About It

In his 20th-floor office last week Mr. Jack said that he was happy he was able to tell his story in a Voice of America broadcast that went out in 80-odd languages.

"The people of the darker races, no matter where they are," he continued, "have always looked to our democratic institutions for liberation from economic and political enslavement."

Terming his election "a great example to all mankind," Mr. Jack concluded that the United States "is moving steadily in the right direction to end discrimination."

PRESIDENT JACK

Kenneth Phipps succeeds H. Jack

NEW YORK (NNPA) — Kenneth M. Phipps, 37-year-old lawyer, was the winner of a special election held Tuesday in the 14th Manhattan district to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Hulan E. Jack as Manhattan borough president.

Mr. Phipps, a Democrat, was elected to the General Assembly seat vacated by Mr. Jack. He polled 1,921 votes to 879 for George Domenech, Republican

Negro Named New York Commissioner of Water

NEW YORK. — Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr. added another name to the growing list of Negroes holding high city positions when he appointed Arthur Q. Ford as commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity for New Yorck city.

Ford, 62 years old, succeeds Dominick F. Paduano, a holdover from the administration of former Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri.

The new commissioner has been serving as a consulting engineer in the office of the borough president of Manhattan since 1950. His appointment was said by the mayor's office to be non-political and based solely upon his qualifications as observed by Mayor Wagner when he was the president of the borough of Manhattan, the job he relinquished to become mayor.

The job of Manhattan borough president is now held by a Negro, Hulan Jack.

Ford's post of commissioner of water supply carries a salary of $15,000 a year. Ford becomes the first of his race to hold a top level administrative job as head of an important city department.

The borough presidency is an elective post.

Ford's position differs from that of the late Ferdinand Q. Morton, who served for years as chairman of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, and Thomas B. Dyett, who now serves on the commission, in that both of the latter were appointed to semi-autonomous boards for fixed terms and did not serve, as will Ford, at the pleasure of the appointing mayor.

Ford is a native of Washington, but his family moved to Montana when he was an infant. He received an engineering degree from Montana State college. From 1920 to 1924, he served as a mechanical draftsman in the Army and from 1924 to 1933, he was a structural steel draftsman with the city's Board of Transportation.

Later, he became a civil engineer in the department of public works and sanitation and in 1950 was named to the $9,100 post of consulting engineer in the borough president's office.

Brooklyn Pays Tribute To First Negro Judge

BROOKLYN — (ANP) — More than 1,500 persons of all races and creeds last week jammed the St. George hotel to pay tribute to Brooklyn's first Negro judge, Municipal court Justice Lewis F. Flagg Jr.

The occasion was a banquet sponsored by the Civic League, the group that sponsored Flagg's candidacy for judge despite the opposition of organized political machines.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York. Rep. Powell revealed that he had telegraphed President Eisenhower asking that he appoint a Negro to one of four federal judge vacancies in southern New York. He said this area has never had a Negro judge.

He praised Judge Flagg and the Civic League. He also said citizens of all races must work together for more Negro judges, congressmen, state legislators and city councilmen.

Of the new judge Powell said: "The democracy we profess means equality of opportunity. The man we honor at dinner tonight activated meaning to the equality for which America must be responsible if she is to maintain her place of influence in world leadership."

Abe Stark, city council president and also honorary chairman of the dinner, revealed that he and Councilman Earl Brown are sponsoring a council ordinance calling for a new committee on civil rights to replace the mayor's unity commission and the Puerto Rican Council.

Nat B. Holder served as chairman of the dinner. Justice Hubert B. Delaney was toastmaster.

The New York Times

Mrs. Aminda Wilkins

Mrs. Aminda Wilkins, who has been in charge of the Welfare Department's program for tubercular relief clients for the last three years, was sworn in yesterday by Commissioner Henry L. McCarthy as secretary of the department.

She succeeds Mrs. Edith M. Alexander, who left to join the staff of the Mayor's Advisory Council. Mrs. Wilkins' appointment was a career promotion after twenty-one years of service in the agency.

Mrs. Wilkins, who lives at 147-15 Village Road, Jamaica, Queens, was accompanied to the ceremony at the department offices, 250 Church Street, by her husband, Roy Wilkins, administrator for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Commissioner McCarthy praised her work in tuberculosis and more recently in narcotics cases. He said the City Administration "can point with pride" to its career promotions.

CLAYTON POWELL BORROWED $3,000 FROM CITY BUILDER

Representative's Aides Got Rent Fees, F. H. A. Inquiry Hears—He Denies Wrong

By CHARLES GRUTZNER

A loan by a builder in 1952 to Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. of $3,000, no part of which has been repaid, was disclosed yesterday. The story was brought out at a public hearing of the Senate Banking Committee, investigating Federal Housing Administration scandals.

The builder is David Kent of 291 Exeter Street, Brooklyn, sponsor of the Dorie Miller interracial apartment project in Corona, Queens. He testified also that Mr. Powell's secretaries, Acy Lennon and William J. Hampton, had been made rental managers of the development. They are paid on a fee basis that brings them about $8,800 a year in addition to their Federal salaries of $6,000 and $5,000, respectively.

Representative Powell denied last night that the loan, for purchase of a sports car, or the outside employment of his secretaries involved any impropriety on his part.

Mr. Powell, a Democrat, represents the Sixteenth Congressional District, which includes most of Harlem. He said that when he learned last June that Mr. Kent was being investigated he went to Albert M. Cole, Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and asked that a complete check be made of F. H. A. files to determine whether he had ever interceded in behalf of anyone. He said that after a check he was informed that "there is no record of my having interceded for anyone in any way."

Charges Political Motive

Representative Powell charged that the Senate committee's inclusion of the Dorie Miller development, a non-profit cooperative, among a series of windfall cases, was a "Republican-sponsored drive to destroy what little nonsegregation has been started in housing."

The Senate committee hearing, which will continue here Thursday morning, heard nine other witnesses, among them Abraham Traub, a Brooklyn attorney whose clients included the developers of projects that brought them $100,000,000 in windfalls through F. H. A. guarantees of mortgages far in excess of costs. The excess sums were pocketed by the developers.

Mr. Traub resisted the efforts of the Senate committee and its chief counsel, William Simon, to learn to whom and for what purpose he paid $226,000 that he had listed in his 1950-52 income tax returns as "expenses for clients."

Pleading unfamiliarity with his office bookkeeping, he finally turned over records he had refused for the last month to give to the committee although he had permitted investigators to inspect some records in his office.

The witness gave up his fight over the records after the chairman, Senator Homer E. Capehart, Republican of Indiana, said he had just had a ruling from Washington that the committee could subpoena the records, even though only four of its fifteen members were here.

Mr. Simon said an inventory of the records given to the committee indicated that some books were missing, including those about which Mr. Traub's former bookkeeper, Nettie Levy, had testified.

His present bookkeeper, Lillian Krahan, was unable to account for the expenditure of $150,000 in cash of the $343,000 listed as "office expenses" for 1951. Pressed by Mr. Simon to remember how the $150,000 was spent, Mrs. Krahan said:

"If somebody got married and a gift was given, that went as office expenses. Or a Bar Mitzvah or some other occasion."

From the other witnesses Mr. Simon drew account after account of longshot pay-offs through obtaining excessive mortgage guarantees from F. H. A. There were stories of companies capitalized for as little as $30 getting million-dollar mortgages and pocketing windfalls of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Some of the housing was built on property owned by the wives of the developers who, instead of buying the land, signed leases under which the women will collect rentals in the tens of thousands of dollars for ninety-nine years.

The Corona Development

The Dorie Miller development differed from most of those cited yesterday in that it was not a windfall case. The non-profit cooperative was financed with an F. H. A.-guaranteed mortgage.

Mr. Kent admitted, however, that he would continue to own the land after the cooperative apartment owners finished paying off the mortgage. He said he was to receive an annual rent of $4,120 for ninety-nine years.

The interracial project has 300 apartments on a tract at Grand Central and Northern Boulevard. It was named the Dorie Miller, a Navy steward who died while firing a machine gun at Pearl Harbor—the first Negro hero of World War II.

As Mr. Kent tol dthe story, Representative Powell, who was greatly interested in the opportunity for more mixed housing for his constituents, permitted use of his office at 132 West 138th Street for signing up prospective tenants by his secretaries. The witness said Mr. Powell received no payment for use of his office, but the secretaries got the usual 15 per cent commissions.

On one of Mr. Powell's frequent visits to watch the progress of construction, Mr. Kent said he admired a Jaguar sports car the Representative was driving.

The witness said Mr. Powell told him he had his eye on a sports car that was even more of a beauty—a Nash-Healey. When Mr. Powell remarked that he would need $3,000 more than he had to move up a rung on the sports car ladder, Mr. Kent gave him a check, and the Representative got the car. That was in October, 1952. Mr. Powell gave a note, payable on demand after three months.

Mr. Kent said the reason the Representative had not repaid any part of the loan was that he had not asked him. He said he expected to be repaid whenever Mr. Powell "feels flush."

The witness said the Representative was to pay 1 per cent annual interest. He shrugged this off as a mere formality and said he was not in the business of profiting from loans to his friends. Mr. Kent produced a $30 check of Mr. Powell, dated last April 3. He said it represented interest since last October, but he had no intention of cashing it.

Date of Check's Delivery

Mr. Simon questioned the witness sharply on whether the check had actually been delivered to him on April 3 or a week later.

Asserting that "one week makes all the difference," Mr. Simon said it was on April 10 that President Eisenhower had announced scandals in the F.H.A.

Mr. Kent testified that the project was managed by the L. & H. Management Company, the initials standing for the partners, Mr. Lennon and Mr. Hampston, who received 3 per cent of the rents.

"They are both on the Federal payroll?" Mr. Simon asked.

"Yes, I assume so," the witness replied.

Mr. Kent testified that Mr. Lennon was also one of three officers of the Dorie Miller Company, Inc. The others were identified as Mr. Kent's brother, Herbert Kantrowitz, president, and Samuel Morrow, secretary. Mr. Morrow is Mr. Kantrowitz' brother-in-law.

The witness was vague as to who had recommended Mr. Lennon and Mr. Hampton as project managers, but said he was certain it was not Mr. Powell.

Norman Tishman, a realty operator of 445 Park Avenue, admitted that two wholly owned subsidiaries of the Tishman Realty Company had garnered a windfall of $1,744,654 on twin developments at Eighty-fourth Street and Dry Harbor Road, Rego Park, Queens. He said also the developers would continue receiving $31,120 a year for land rent for ninety-nine years.

Gilbert Tilles, developer of Knightsbridge Gardens in Great Neck, L. I., told of a $239,303 windfall. Questioning of Samuel J. Roth of 865 West End Avenue, showed large windfalls on projects in East Paterson, N. J., and on Marine Terrace, Gregory Apartments and Elizabeth Apartments, all in Astoria, Queens.

Louis Mintz of 5566 Kings Highway, Brooklyn, testified that he had put up $300 of a total $1,000 capitalization of the Kingsway Development Inc., at Kings Highway from East 95th to East 96th Street, Brooklyn, and had provided the land at a cost of $44,000. He said the developers got a Government-guaranteed mortgage of $1,253,800 and made a windfall of $172,000.

Benjamin Neisloss of Forest Hills, Queens, testified that he, a brother and a friend put up $10 each to capitalize a corporation that built the 444-unit Brookside

Gardens development in Somerville, N. J., on a $3,018,500 mortgage and reaped a $525,616 profit. He told of similar shoestring ventures in this city and at Hillside, N. J.

POWELL DEFENDS HIMSELF

Denies Any Wrongdoing in Loan From Builder—Assails Inquiry

Times

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. denied yesterday any impropriety in borrowing $3,000 from the builder of an interracial project and asserted that he had received a clean bill of health from Federal Housing officials.

9-28-54

Mr. Powell, pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, readily acknowledged that he had accepted the loan from David Kent. He said it was a personal matter that "had nothing to do with the F. H. A.

The Harlem Representative described himself as a good friend of Mr. Kent and said the builder had solicited his help a year ago in getting tenants for the Dorie

Miller project, the first non-segregated housing in the city.

In June, Mr. Powell said, he had learned from Thurman Lee, president of the Drydock Savings Bank that Mr. Kent was going to be investigated by the Capehart Committee. Then he said:

"I went to Albert M. Cole, head of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and asked him straight in advance to check his files to see if in any way, directly or indirectly, by phone, mail or in person, I had at any time contacted any F. H. A. official on the national, state or local level on behalf of Mr. Kent or any other builder.

Mr. Cole assured me that I was correct and that there was no record in any way of my having interceded with the F. H. A. for anyone."

Defends Loan From Kent

Mr. Powell emphasized that the loan from Mr. Kent was duly secured by an interest-bearing note, "payable upon demand and upon which I have paid interest." He said he had never been asked for repayment but expected to clear up his debt "very shortly."

The Representative also acknowledged that he still had the Jaguar car mentioned at yesterday's hearing, as well as the Nash-Healy sports roadster he bought with a part of the loan from his builder friend.

Mr. Powell denied any knowledge of how his secretaries, Acy Lennon and William J. Hampton, came to be selected to manage the housing project.

"I not only had nothing to do with this but did not know of it until after the management agreement with the F. H. A. had been drawn," he added.

The cooperative housing development was opened Dec. 3, 1953.

Mr. Powell said Mr. Lennon received about $6,000 and Mr. Hampton $5,000 a year in Federal funds as members of his staff.

Mr. Powell coupled his defense of the loan with a bitter attack on the Capehart committee and asserted they should "spend more time investigating 'Jim Crowism' in public housing." He also said someone should ask Senator Homer E. Capehart "what money he has loaned, what money he has borrowed and under what conditions."

The entire episode was a "Republican-sponsored drive to destory what little non-segregation has been started in housing," he added.

The Representative said he applauded Mr. Kent for his courage in starting the Dorie Miller project. Mr. Powell proudly noted that he had "preached about it from his pulpit" and that Representative Jacob K. Javits and Mayor Wagner, when the latter was Manhattan Borough President, had worked with him to arouse interest in the development.

Powell Admits Taking Loan From Builder

34

NEW YORK--(INS)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. of New York, Tuesday admitted receiving a loan of $3,000 from the builder of an interracial apartment housing development in Queens, but asserted it had "nothing to do" with the Federal Housing Administration.

Wednesday 9-29-54

David Kent of Brooklyn, a sponsor of the 200-unit Dorie Miller Cooperative Apartment Project in Corona, Queens, told the Senate Banking Committee, which is investigating FHA scandals, that he made the "friendly loan" ot Powell so he could buy a new car, a sports model.

Powell Reports On European Tour

CONGRESSMAN ADAM CLAYTON POWELL of New York meets the press in his Washington office following his return from a two month tour of defense installations in Germany and France. Powell, who denied reports that he was switching from the Democratic to the Republican party, described troop morale in France, both Negro and white, as "shockingly low" and s there was a wave of anti-Negro sentiment among the Fren being fomented by the Communists. Immediately following th meeting Powell left for New York reportedly to heal the breac in the party caused by rumors of his switch to the GOP.

1922 Immigrant Who Began With Broom Holds Top Negro Elective Post in U. S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (NANA).—In 1922 Hulan E. Jack, 16 and colored, came from the West Indies to New York with his father, a bishop of the African Orthodox Catholic Church. Bishop Jack told his son America was the land of opportunity.

Young Hulan went to work in the Peerless Box Factory of New York City with a broom. He worked all day and went to night school at New York University.

"I just applied myself," he explained the other day. "I did nothing spectacular."

Apparently he did pretty well. He became vice president of the box factory and was graduated from New York University in business administration.

Now Holds Top Post.

Today Mr. Jack is Manhattan Borough president of New York City, the top elective post any Negro has attained in the United States.

Of the votes cast for him, 83 per cent were non-Negro. Only 17 per cent were Negro.

He said his own three-point success formula consisted of unswerving application to his work at the Peerless Paper Box Factory, of which he became vice president; night courses at high school and New York University from which he was graduated in business administration, and confidence that America was indeed the "land of opportunity."

Mr. Jack became active in politics about 25 years ago. As a young worker in the Democratic Party, he demonstrated the qualities of persistence and ability that served him in acquiring an education and business advancement. He served seven consecutive terms as assemblyman from the 17th district, roughly containing Harlem in New York City, before taking his present office.

Views on Freedom.

Early in his political career Mr. Jack learned that "no man is free unless all men are free."

freedoms, as in Russia," he explained, "increases world tension, and prevents people from living as neighbors. Freedom is thus weakened for all mankind."

In fighting discrimination, he fights for all who are oppressed, regardless of race or creed.

"I am not a Negro's Negro," Jack says firmly. "I learned from life that any one to be truly free must fight discrimination where and when it arises. He must not allow himself to become the victim of his own segregation."

"If a person is willing to work hard and equip himself for a particular position he will be accepted, no matter what minority group he belongs to," Mr. Jack said with conviction.

His Working Day.

"You can't sit around feeling sorry for yourself. If there is a wall in front of you, don't try to knock it down, find a way around it," he advises.

Mr. Jack usually works 12 hours a day, and this extends often to the week ends. A typical schedule begins with inspecting a new school, meeting with a mercnants' association, attending a reception for the Giants at City Hall.

In the afternoon appointments with the Community Planning Board are followed by individual appointments. He concludes the day with an address at the Union Baptist Church, in Montclair, N. J., which is celebrating its 65th year.

"I apply myself," Borough President Jack repeated. "I do nothing spectacular."

Despite Party Differences

Ike's 'Bias-Busting' Acts Lauded By Cong. Powell

PLEASANTVILLE, N. Y.—Adam Clayton Powell Jr., whom New York Democrats elected to a fourth term in the U. S. Congress early this month, heaped laurels on President Eisenhower and the Republican party in a magazine article released this week.

"Without political trumpeting, President Eisenhower has quietly started a revolution which, I firmly believe, means an era of greater promise for Negro citizens," declares Representative Powell writing in the October Reader's Digest.

DR. POWELL, also minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in New York, the largest Baptist church in the world, also writes: "Like many Negroes, I feared Eisenhower's election meant a setback in the struggle for fairer treatment and equal opportunities for our people. I was wrong."

He states that the example set by the President began in the White House when he installed Mrs. Lois Lippman as the first Negro secretary—not for reasons of politics but because Mrs. Lippman's capabilities were known. No Negroes had previously been employed in the White House except as messenger or janitor.

SIMILARLY, no political capital was made of the President's appointment of 47 Negroes to important posts, 27 of which had always been held by whites. Eisenhower's naming of J. Ernest Wilkins as Assistant Secretary of Labor marked the first "Little Cabinet" status for a Negro since the Taft administration. Scovel Richardson became the first Negro in the post of Federal Parole Commissioner.

President Eisenhower has kept his campaign promise to work against segregation in the District of Columbia, Rep. Powell says. Segregation has been ended in Washington's restaurants and bars, including those in hotels, and some hotels follow "a more liberal policy" in the rental of rooms. Jim Crowism has been wiped out in the city's recreational areas and big movie houses. In 21 of 23 departments of the District government, Negroes are employed, the articles declares.

THE DISTRICT'S public-housing agency has ordered that the 4000 dwellings to be constructed with federal aid be made available to low-income families without discrimination as to race, it further says.

Under President Eisenhower's administration, segregation in the Armed Forces has been almost eliminated. Not a single all-Negro unit exists in the Army today, though many were still intact when President Eisenhower took office. At southern Naval bases, signs reading "White Only" and "Colored" have been removed in cafeterias and rest rooms. In 21 naval plants employing 70,000 white and Negroes, segregation is only a memory, Rep. Powell declares, adding. Negroes are now treated at previously all-white hospitals of the Veterans Administration, and that 47 VA hospitals the practice of separating the races at snack bars, in libraries and recreation rooms has vanished.

Though a Democrat, Rep. Powell declares his conviction that Eisenhower is proving to be "a President of all the people."

RECORDS SHOW NEGROES GAINED JOBS UNDER KERR; LOST JOBS WITH TURNER

OKLAHOMA CITY—An examination of the record of Senator Robert S. Kerr, incumbent candidate for re-election to the U. S. Senate on the Democratic ticket, is singularly revealing. The record examined is that Sen. Kerr when he served as governor of the state of Oklahoma. For comparative analysis, the record of Roy J. Turner, who opposes Kerr in his bid for re-election, is also examined.

The records show that Kerr created positions for Negroes when he was governor, while Negroes lost positions in direct ratio under Turner's administration as governor.

Under Kerr as Governor

Specifically, this is what the records show for Kerr's administration:

Negro teachers got salary increases to double nearly the previous amounts and were paid same as white teachers.

Negro high school inspector was appointed with a secretary and offices in the State Capitol.

Negroes were named to the school lunch program — one, a Negro state supervisor, who covered the state at large on a 12-month salary.

Negroes were appointed to general relief — what is now known as emergency relief.

Three Negroes were assigned to the state health department to travel at large.

One Negro beauty shop inspector was appointed at large over the state.

One Negro was assigned to work out of the governor's office as a special investigator.

The wing of the University hospital for Negroes was built and manned with Negro doctors, nurses secretaries and other personnel.

Money was provided for Langston university, which led to its being accredited by North Central association.

Positions Lost Under Turner

Conversely, under the Turner administration, the record shows that:

One Negro school lunch supervisor was demoted to just an employee, not a supervisor on a ten-month salary.

One Negro was assigned to general relief with limited travel.

One Negro in state health department, travel at large.

Negro investigator's offices abolished completely.

Employment lost: from general relief from the haelth department, from free school lunch program, from the governor's offices; total losses — six positions.

Judge Dorothy Young Names New Juvenile Officer, Pledges Help to 'Kids in Trouble'

Thur. 11-18-54

The appointment of Coleridge T. Gross, 37 year old native of Lima, Okla., to the position of juvenile probation counselor, effective December 1, was announced at last week's Hungry Club Forum luncheon by Judge Dorothy Young of the Tulsa county juvenile court.

Judge Young made the announcement during a question period which followed her talk on the subject, "The New Juvenile Court program in Tulsa."

Gross, who is well known in North Tulsa, is married and the father of one son, aged two years old. A resident of Chicago, and social caseworker there since 1947, he was graduated from Douglass high school at Wewoka in 1935. He was graduated in 1940 from Langston Univ., where he received the BA degree with a minor in psychology.

From 1947 to 1953 he was a caseworker with the Chicago Welfare Department in Chicago. Since 1953 he was been a caseworker with Cook County Department of Public Welfare, Chicago, Ill. He holds membership in the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Registered Social Workers of Illinois.

Coleridge T. Gross

Judge Young, who termed the juvinile court "a tribunal of individualized justice," said that her prime goal is "to recognize each child as an individual," and give him the kind of consideration that his individual case calls for.

As a case in point she cited the treatment of little Bennie, the nine year-old who shot and killed a 17-year-old playmate of his brother last summer. Although it was the recommendation of the counselor handling the boy's case that he be sent to the boys' training School at Boley, Judge Young was "not convinced that he should go there." She is still not convinced thatthe Boley institution is the place for thenine-year-old boy. As a consequence, Bennie is still a ward of the Tulsa county juvenile court under psychiatric study.

He shall remain in that category, according to Judge Young until such time as "a wholesome and happy home influence can be found for this child to enable him to grow into a normal happy adulthood and forget his intolerable home stituation."

She stated that she frankly did not known what disposition will be made of the little boy's case. The kindly-disposed, but firm, judge stated that her chief concern anent little Bennie, the [illegible] undoing of the [illegible] former life and whatever damage might have been done by daily newspaper reporters and others who talked with him immediately after the shooting last summer.

"As far as I am concerned," said comely and youthful-appearing judge, who is herself a grandmother, "there are no Negro and no white children in my court. They are all just children needing care."

Judge Young explained how her program of desegregation of the four homes for juvenile deliquents in Tulsa County came about resulting in the placement of Negro boys at the Mohawk Boys home and Negro Girls at the Mohawk Girls home and the closing down of the former all-Negro detention homes. The Supreme Court decision gave impetus to a moral decision that Judge Young had been weighing for some time. "I tried to do it intelligengly and quietly," she stated.

She said she felt that she had done the right thing, several weeks later whenshe queried some of the white children about their reaction to the transferof Negro children to the Mohawk home and got the reply, "Why, gosh, Judge, they're just like we are."

To date, according to Judge Young, 11 Negro boys have been processed through the Mohawk Boys' home, and five Negro girls have stayed at the Mohawk Girls' home. She described how happily swam, played and lived together.

In reply to a question of her policy of desegregation, which has not been followed by any immediate indications of integration, the judge appeared reluctant to make any statement as to her reasons for accepting the resignations of the persons who were employed in the Negro homes when her Desegregation program went into effect.

She said, in effect, however, that she has a program of integration in mind and that she will put it in effect when the time and the budget warrant it.

She silenced one segment of her questioners with the statement, "I won't let anyone mishandle children under my superivision."

"No one can keep children out of the home until 2 or 3 a.m. and then lie to me."

Anent the overall problem of juvenile delinquency in Tulsa county Judge Young presented an encouraging picture. Tulsa county has recorded a slight decrease in delinquency on the part of juveniles, she said, and there are no gang problems, notwithstanding some recent reports to the contrary from other sections of the city.

Hastie urged for post on U.S. Supreme Court

Afro American p. 22

Baltimore

WASHINGTON

The name of Judge William H. Hastie, Monday, was suggested to President Eisenhower for serious consideration for the post left vacant on the Supreme Court bench by the death, last week, of Justice Robert H. Jackson.

Judge Hastie's name was "put in the hopper" by Chief Judge William Denman of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals of San Francisco.

Judge Hastie, 50, is a member of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court bench of Philadelphia. Graduate of the Harvard Law School, and former dean of the law school at Howard University, he was a federal judge in the Virgin Islands and later, governor of the Islands.

IN NOMINATING Judge Hastie, Judge Denman had this to say of him:

"This suggestion is without depreciation of other judges who will receive consideration by the President. Nor is it for the political effect on the colored vote of the Northern states.

"It is to help eliminate the sense of racial inferiority which their prior slavery continues, in many of the colored people.

"This is by showing that, given the same college and professional education as that of Judge Hastie and of Ralph Bunche, awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, the colored race produces men of the same distinction as the other races."

Denman said that Judge Hastie, when he was here two years ago sitting temporarily on the Ninth Circuit bench, showed himself to be "a perfectly charming man of the world. He could talk on any subject and proved to be a man of outstanding ability."

IN SELECTING members of the court, Presidents have given consideration to religious faiths and denominational adherence as well as geography and political philosophy.

Jews, Catholics and Protestants, Democrats and Republicans have been appointed to the court. But never in the 165-year history of the high tribunal has serious consideration been given to the availability of a colored lawyer.

Negro Gaining Ground In Field Of Politics

Tribune Sat. 10-30-54

Philadelphia Pa.

The rise of Negroes in politics during the past 70 years has been a gradual one with its birth pangs first felt in the Seventh Ward. The Seventh in earlier days, was the center of all racial activity through out the city.

These feeble beginnings, which were felt prior to 1884, began to gain impetus from that date with the establishment of The TRIBUNE as a voice of the people and the Citizen's Republican Club as a center of t hought and activity.

Christopher J. Perry, Sr., publisher and editor of the Philadelphia Tribune, was the first Negro in the city to be appointed a deputy sheriff. Included among many who have held the post since are Adolphus Lewis, LaBarre Potts, Max Scott and Jeff Jamison.

FIRST SELECT COUNCILMAN

The Tribune publisher also had the distinction of being the first Negro to sit as a member of the Select Council. Nathan Nutter was another. Included among the membership of the Common Council were such political stalwarts of yesteryear as Al Jones, George Wilson and Richard Cooper.

With the establishment of City Council and the abolishment of Common and Select Councils Negroes were eliminated from membership until the late James H. Irvin. He was followed by Woodie Armstrong. Raymond Pace Alexander, a lawyer, has the distinction of being the first Negro member under the new City Charter.

DEPUTY CORONERS

Since George A. Jeter first broke the ice in 1929 to become the first Negro to be named a deputy coroner, Negroes have been appointed to the post in every succeeding administration. Listed among his successors are William Upshur, William Byrd, George Trent, Spencer Price, Alfred Simpkins and Benjamin Walker.

STATE REPRESENTATIVES

Harry Bass was the pioneer in the State Legislature. Since his incumbency there have followed Andrew F. Stevens, Jr., John C. Asbury, William H. Fuller, Samuel B. Hart, Edwin F. Thompson, Hobson R. Reynolds, J. T. Pettigrew, Dennie W. Hoggard, Marshall L. Shepard, Crystal Byrd Fausett and Granville Jones, Susie Monroe, Samuel Floyd, and E. Washington Rhodes.

One of the first Negroes in the city to become a school director was John W. Jones. He is a forerunner of Dr. John P. Turner, who was both the first school physician and the first police surgeon.

Amos Scott, hotel and saloon keeper, first broke the ice by being elected to the minor judiciary in the early 1920's. Eight others, who either were elected or appointed to the post, are Edward W. Henry, Joseph H. Rainey, Jr., Hobson R. Reynolds, Ralph Knox, William Byrd, Hannah Byrd, Amos Harris and William Page.

Rev. Marshall L. Shepard, pastor of Mt. Olivet Baptist Church at 42nd and Wallace sts., and former Recorder of Deeds for the District of Columbia, holds the unique distinction of being the first Negro to be elected to a row office in the city. He ran for the office of Recorder of Deeds for the city and won. Since then the office has been abolished as an elective one with the adoption of the new charter. Dr. Shepard is now known as Commissioner of Records.

Another clergyman, Dr. E. Luther Cunningham, pastor of St. Paul's Baptist Church, at 10th and Wallace st., is the first Negro on the powerful Civil Service Commission. He was appointed to the post under the present Democratic administration. Another key spot is held by Charles Baker, who is deputy commissioner of City Property.

During these turbulent but formative years, James H. Duckrey, who was chief dispatcher for the Pennsylvania Railroad, was a candidate for Mayor. Rev. John E. Philpot also ran for mayor. On several occasions John C. Asbury, G. Edward Dickerson and E. Washington Rhodes were candidates for judgeships without success. Herbert E. Millen is the first to gain the coveted distinction, being appointed to the Municipal Court bench by Gov. James H. Duff and then elected to a full term. Theodore O. Spaulding, the second appointee to the Municipal Court, was named by the present governor, John S. Fine.

Negroes during the past 70 years have spread out of the Ward in all sections of the city to become district committeemen and ward leaders. From a strictly one party group they have developed into import cogs in the city's political party machinery.

Defender Article Reveals How Executive Machinery Began Moving Color Bars

Washington, D. C.—The Chicago Defender, longtime supporter of former Democrat Administrations, declared April 3, that "the admittedly low stock of the Negro has risen to a new high and the potentialities are even greater" after President Eisenhower's first 15 months in office.

One of the nation's leading Negro newspapers, the Chicago Defender places great emphasis on "the unprecedented move for cleaning up the Capital and for making so many Negro political appointments" under the President.

Frank Analysis

These actions the Defender says in a full-page frank analysis written by Ethel Payne, its Washington correspondent, spring mainly from the President's "deep seated moral and spiritual convictions".

Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall Apr. 3 commented thus on the Defender story:

"We have said repeatedly we will go to the nation this fall on performance of the Eisenhower Administration. I am delighted that its record in the field of human rights has begun to attract deserved attention—because this is the heart and soul of the President's whole philosophy. His thesis, and ours, will continue to be simply, 'What is good for all Americans, everywhere.'"

Color Bars Move

In its article, the Defender described how, "suddenly the executive machinery began moving in high gear and to the delighted astonishment of all but the reactionaries, color bars began tumbling in rapid succession."

The Defender lists these "outstanding appointments" of Negroes to posts in the Eisenhower Administration.

Louis B. Toomer, Savannah, Ga., registrar of the Treasury.

SUMATRA

Howard University graduate fights Communist claims in Sumatra

Afro American p. 6

34 c (1)

WASHINGTON

On Labor Day the tape measure will reign supreme at Atlantic City where Miss America for 1954 will be selected from the 100-odd beauties on hand.

However, on the island of Sumatra, some 10,000 miles away, "Miss America" has already been chosen, and by an overwhelming vote. She is 32-years-old Myrtle Thorne, a graduate of Howard University.

A Hot Cold War

Throughout southeast Asia a battle is being waged which, at times, waxes even hotter than the current shooting war.

There are no raids or bombings and no day-to-day casualty lists; however, it is war in every sense of the word, and the fate of the world could hang in the balance. This is the battle for men's minds.

On Sumatra the opponents in this battle of ideologies are Miss Thorne, a U.S. public affairs officer, on the one hand, and a hand - picked group of 200 Communist propagandists, on the other.

Miss Thorne, who is a native of Charleston, S.C., joined the staff of the U.S. Information Agency in 1951, following six years as an instructor in English at Howard. She had received her degree at the Washington school in 1943 and a Master's in English at Smith College the following year.

First Assignment

Her first assignment was in Djakarta, Indonesia. Early in 1953 she was transferred to her present post at Medan, becoming the sole U.S. information representative on Sumatra.

Here, it would be her responsibility to refute the derogatory propaganda about the United States being spread by Sumatran Communists.

The situation seemed hopeless. The odds against her were 200-1 and physical conditions on the island were even worse. Sumatra is bisected by the Equator. The temperatures run from 80 upward, and the rainy season, which lasts for eight months is responsible for a humidity which hovers around 80 per cent.

MISS MYRTLE THORNE

Language A Problem

Language also proved to be a problem. Miss Thorne spoke French and Spanish fluently, but her knowledge of Indonesian was limited to "hello" and "goodbye."

Miss Thorne's most formidable obstacle, however, was the Communist propagandist. The Communist campaign in southeast Asia is well organized and highly financed. In many sections it supports banks, newspapers, motion picture theaters, and the like. None of these institutions was at Miss Thorne's disposal.

Another weapon which the Communists used effectively was the small loan. The Bank of China makes these loans available to the natives under conditions which are not exactly financial.

The borrower, for example, has to agree to send his children to Communist - controlled schools, to subscribe to Communist publications, and to support pro - Communist organizations.

Remote Villages Known

Even the most remote villages in this area are known to the Kremlin. In the rural sections one of the favorite techniques of the native Communists is to set up "information" stations on roads leading to the market. Armed with blackboards, textbooks, and other propaganda materials, the "instructors" would stop the market - bound villagers and conduct a short course depicting the beauties of Communism and the evils of American Imperialism.

It was a rugged foe that Miss Thorne was facing, but she was not one to give up without a fight. The same type of determination which had won for her the valedictory at Charleston's Avery Institute in 1939, the presidency of Alpha Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority in 1942, and mention in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities the following year was to help make her what U.S. Information Director Theodore C. Streibert calls "a lengend" in Sumatra today.

Seemingly, it was a thankless task that Miss Thorne set out upon in 1951. To win over the 12 million natives of Sumatra, she first had to get to them — up the mountain, through the jungles, over the mud-strewn roads.

None of these obstacles proved insurmountable for Miss Thorne. It wasn't long before she became a familiar figure in even the most remote sections of the island, carrying the story of America.

Not the America depicted by the Communists, but the real America. And, unlike the Communists, she carried documentary evidence in the form of films, books, and pamphlets which backed up her claims.

A Hard Struggle

It was a long, hard struggle for the Howard Alumna. The climate seemed unbearable; there was the ever - present threat of malaria; and the Communists worked even more feverishly. However, slowly, but surely, the natives were being won over.

The story of "Miss America," as she had come to be known by the Sumatrans, spread throughout the island, and before long Miss Thorne was in demand. The natives wanted to know more about America, its government, its people, and its technology.

They fired the questions and "Miss America" retaliated with the answers. In a matter of months there were residents of the Sumatran jungles who knew more about the United States than many native - born Americans.

Remarkable Success

Miss Thorne's success has been remarkable. She has won over all but the hard - core Communists in every area she has visited. Families welcome her into their homes, and on the town streets, the country roads, and the jungle paths she is greeted with the Indonesian equivalent of "Hello Miss America."

The once highly - effective Communist propaganda offensive on Sumatra has been slowed down tremendously, but it has not stopped. The battle is not over and no one is more aware of this than Miss Thorne.

As the Communists step up the attack with their volley of beautiful theories, "M i s s America" continues to counter attack with her flurry of cold, hard facts.

"MISS AMERICA" on the island of Sumatra where she is public affairs officer for the U. S. Information agency is Miss Myrtle Thorne, a 1943 graduate of the college of liberal arts at Howard university. The lone U. S, representative on the Indonesian island of 12 million people is a native of Charleston, S. C. She has been with the agency staff since 1952.

New Housing Feud Flares

A. Maceo Smith in Liquor Ad, Ray Asks Him to Resign Post

BY STANLEY ROBERTS
(Washington News Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Once more the internal housing feuds have erupted into the open. This time it's Smith vs. Ray.

A. Maceo Smith of Dallas, Tex., racial relations adviser of the Federal Housing Administration in that region, has been asked by Government officials to resign from his job, according to reports received by this correspondent.

Some officials in the housing agencies including Joseph Ray, chief of the Racial Relations Service in the Housing and Home Finance Agency, feel that Mr. Smith can no longer command the respect and cooperation of Negro leadership after permitting his name recently to be used in the endorsement of a liquor product.

MACEO SMITH'S picture was used a few weeks ago by a prominent liquor distilling company in Negro publications throughout the country as part of a national advertising and promotion campaign.

Called here to Washington by the FHA Commissioner, Mr. Smith has indicated to friends that he has no intention of resigning from his civil service job because of the alleged charge.

After conferring with Government officials last week he went back to Texas, and it therefore seems that another knock-down drag-out fight is in the making in the controversial housing racial relations set-up.

JOSEPH RAY, a Republican appointee from Louisville, Ky., is reported to have been disturbed when the advertisement was called to his attention and took the matter to the FHA officials who, it is said, at first were not too disturbed, but later decided to call Mr. Smith to Washington to discuss the situation.

It is the opinion of some housing officials that the first plan was to ask Mr. Smith to refrain in the future from this kind of publicity, particularly since the FHA has already enough scandal on its hands, tracking down the millions of dollars in windfall profits.

However, instead of a reprimand, Mr. Smith was told it would probably be best that he resign.

IT HAS been callously bruited about Washington that some Republican politicians are trying to get rid of Maceo Smith, a well-known Democrat.

However, the high command of the GOP National Committee and the White House deny this, but they added that they felt that no Government official, regardless of his stature should jeopardize his effectiveness in his community and in the service of the present administration by endorsing controversial advertisements such as is the case in the liquor industry.

Dean Appointed

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas — Mr. C. L. Wilson, dean of the school of engineering, has been appointed as a member of the Education and Junior Engineers Committee of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

JUDGE CHARLYE FARRIS
. . . 25-year old Howard law graduate makes history in Texas

Howard Portia presides as first judge in Texas

WICHITA FALLS, Texas—Attractive Miss Charlye Farris, 25, made history here last week when she served as county judge during the absence of the regular county judge. Guy H. McNeely, who was called out of town.

Miss Farris is a graduate of Prairie View State College, Texas, and of the Howard University Law School, Washington. She was chosen by the County Bar Association to act as judge, the first person of her race—either male or female—ever to serve as a judge in Texas.

"I was thrilled when the County Bar Association told me about it," Miss Farris told reporters. "I didn't think I had enough experience to handle the job."

Appointment Popular

On Tuesday, her first day on the bench, she handled only two cases, but she talked to 30 or 40 persons in her office, most of them well-wishers.

Her judicial duties consisted of setting bond of $500 for a man charged with assault and issuing a marriage license to an Airman 3rd class from Sheppard Air Force Base near Wichita Falls.

The airman was only 19 years of age and the signature of one of his parents was required for him to be given the license. Both of his parents were dead, however, and a judge's permission was necessary.

"I was very happy to issue him the license," Miss Farris said.

Engaged To Washingtonian

The young "Portia" amitteed that she is engaged to an Army civilian employee in Washington, but she refused to divulge his name. She has been practicing law only since last February.

She lives with her mother, father, grandparents and young brother, James Randolph, 7.

She told reporters that all her family was thrilled at the news with the exception of James. She said he told her:

"Who wants to be a judge? I can be a judge anytime I want to. I want to be a cowboy."

Miss Farris said she wasn't greatly worried about the reaction of white persons about her presiding over the court.

"Some of the lawyers told me I might be the target of embarrassing remarks, but they said not to worry and just take it in stride," she asserted.

LIBERTY — Emile Fontenot became the first Negro to be elected to the Democratic Executive Committee here when he received 153 votes to 15 for Charles M. Elliott last week-end.

Mr. Fontenot's name was written in on the ballot by Ames which carries a predominant Negro Vote and Mr. Elliott was scratched.

News Sources said that Mr. Fontenot has been acting in that capacity for quite some time but that the position was officially held by another person. The new Committee member's name reportedly was entered on the ballot at the request of Negroes in that area.

TEXAS

Maceo Smith Asked To Quit FHA Post Because Of Ad

WASHINGTON — It was reported this week that A. Maceo Smith, national race relations director for the Federal Housing Administration at Dallas, Texas and national president of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, has been asked by Norman P. Mason, FHA commissioner to resign his post which he has held since 1947.

Smith, who has been in government service since 1938 was ordered to Washington last week and given as reason for incurring displeasure the fact that he had posed for a "Man of Distinction" series for Lord Calvert whiskey.

Although there are no written policies against such practice, Mason is alleged to have told Smith that he had received numerous complaints, mostly from church people who were offended by the ad.

It was said that the matter was brought to the attention of Commissioner Mason by Joseph Ray, special assistant to Albert M. Cole, administrator of housing and home finance.

The political implications are that Ray has sought for some time to unseat Smith in order to have him replaced with a Republican appointee.

Ray is said to have made a remark soon after his appointment to his present position that Smith would be the first one he would get. It is known that Smith used the money he received from the ad as a donation to the NAACP defense fund.

A source close to the Administration said that a representative from FHA went to GOP head quarters to get the advise of Val J. Washington, director of minorities on the matter.

Washington is reported to have said that he knew of no set rule against such practice, but he himself had always frowned upon the practice.

An alleged inquiry is also reported to have come from the White House. Smith said he knew of no reason for any action and that in conference with Mason he was given only the ad incident and told to "think it over."

He said he did not know what action he would take to fight the charge as it was a complete surprise and he did not know what the outcome would be.

Prior to his FHA appointment, Smith was employed in the public housing administration. He was the first Negro to be named as a racial relations director.

34c(1)

The legislators expressed belief in a conference with the governor Monday there are qualified islanders who should be given preference.

Legislative spokesmen said Alexander's insistence on filling cabinet jobs with individuals from the Nnijobs with indivi dual sfrom the United States reduced persons born in the Virgin Islands to second class citizenship.

Denial.

Alexander's request for an appropriation to cover transportation costs for the heads of five departments—education, public works, public safety, industry and agriculture—was temporarily denied.

The legislators and the governor agreed to hold over the appointments for two weeks to give the legislature an opportunity to submit a list of Virgin Islanders for Alexander's consideration.

Islands' Governor 'Well-equipped'

Alexander Takes Analytical Mind Into Charlotte Amalie

By STANLEY ROBERTS

(Second in a Series)

34c(1)

WASHINGTON—If mathematical precision can be considered as a prime requisite for a successful administrator then Archie Alexander's appointment as Governor of the Virgin Islands by the Eisenhower Administration can be considered as excellent.

There is nothing in the background of this Iowa-born civil engineer to indicate that he won't take to the Virgin Islands an analytical and appraising mind.

Although it's admittedly a big step from a farm near Des Moines in the heart of the nation's corn belt to the Governor's Mansion in Charlotte Amalie, very few of Mr. Alexander's predecessors in the post have been as well-equipped as he for the responsibility.

MR. ALEXANDER will be taking over the running of a land area of some 132 square miles whose population, according to the 1950 census, is tagged at 26,665. The Virgins' population is around 80 per cent Negro and exists on the tourist trade and such exports as rum, bay rum, hides, molasses, lime juice, sugar, bay oil and livestock.

Approximately fifty islands make up the most easterly U. S. territory, but the three largest are inhabited.

Thus, the Governor of the Virgin Islands must have an agricultural background to go along with his other talents and Mr. Alexander more than fills the bil in this respect.

MR. ALEXANDER is a native of Iowa, having been born in Ottumwa on May 14, 1888.

He attended a country school and later moved to a farm near Des Moines, where he finished elementary and high school.

After a year of preliminary work at Des Moines University, he entered the University of Iowa in 1908, and was graduated with a degree in civil engineering in 1912.

He did further study in engineering at the University of London.

Sat-3-13-54

HE WAS FIRST employed as a designing engineer with the Marsh Engineering Company in 1912.

In 1914 he resigned his position and established his own general contracting firm, known as A. A. Alexander, Inc., which continued until 1929, when a partnership was formed with Repass.

The most outstanding works include railroad bridges for the Rock Island Railroad in the western division of Iowa and Missouri, power house for the University of Iowa, and the $4 million Whitehurst Freeway, and other bridges in the nation's capital.

IN 1947, at Iowa's Centennial celebration, Mr. Alexander was awarded a certificate of merit, being named as one of the first 100 citizens of merit from over 30,000 alumni of the University of Iowa.

He has received many other distinguished awards and citations: In 1925 he received an honorary degree in civil engineering from the State University of Iowa; in 1928, the Spingarn Medal as the second most successful Negro in business; in 1946, an honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Engineer from Howard University.

He is past president of the National Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, past president of the Des Moines Branch of the NAACP president of the American Caribbean Contractors Association; president of the Cedar Hill Construction Corporation; secretary-treasurer of the Douglas Glen Gardens Corporation.

HE IS a member of the board of the Supreme Liberty Life Insurance Company, Chicago, Ill.; a member of the board of trustees at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., and at Howard University. He is also a member of the Howard University Engineering College.

* * *

ALEXANDER has been a lifelong Republican and for several years has been assistant to the Iowa State Republican Committee chairman.

He is an Episcopalian and is married to the former Audrey Linzy of Denver, Col.

He makes his home in Des Moines and lives at 1829 S Street, N. W., while here with his close friend, Perry W. Howard, Republican National Committeeman from Mississippi.

Alexander faced with cut in Virgin Islands revenue

WASHINGTON (N N P A) — Archie A. Alexander, who will take the oath of office as governor of the Virgin Islands this month, will have less revenues to run the Virgin Islands Government than the present governor, Morris Castor.

The House Appropriations Committee recommended Thursday in the Interior Department appropriation bill for the fiscal year, beginning July 1, a total of $700,000, which is $118,000 less than the budget requests.

Of the $700,000 appropriation recommended, $300,000 is for the expenses of the Virgin Islands Government and $400,000 is for grants to the municipalities of St. Croix and St. Thomas.

Office Funds Cut

The item for expenses of the governor's office was cut by $18,000 and the budget estimate for grants to municipalities was cut by $100,000.

The committee, in its report, said these reductions will be offset by increased revenues of estimated at the time of the hearings on Virgin Island appropriations for the current fiscal year.

Committee Reasoning

The committee said it saw no reason why a surplus in the local revenues should not be applied to expenditures for which direct appropriations were requested.

Governor de Castro testified, however, that, there would be no surplus because the needs of the islands are so great that the legislature will budget any revenue increases for needed improvements in hospital and school operation, needed personnel and increases in salaries.

Alexander, (right) who on April 9 will become the governor of the Virgin Islands, was the Founders' Day speaker at the Kansas Technical institute at Topeka, Kas., Sunday, March 21. He is shown here being greeted by Dr. Robert Cotton (left), president of K.T.I., who met him at the Kansas City Municipal airport Sunday morning. Mr. Alexander, a noted civil engineer, arrived in Kansas City aboard a Braniff airplane from Des Moines, his home, where he is busily preparing to move to the Islands. The Iowan was named to the high post by President Eisenhower and his appointment has been confirmed by the U. S. Senate. Alexander faced with cut in Virgin Islands revenue

WASHINGTON (N N P A) — Archie A. Alexander, who will take the oath of office as governor of the Virgin Islands this month, will face less revenues to run the Virgin Islands Government than the present governor, Mr. Castor.

Prominent Engineer Who Spent Years Building Says New Post 'A Challenge'

A. A. Alexander was in Des Moines Monday when the news broke officially that he had been nominated by President Eisenhower as governor of the Virgin Islands.

Messages of congratulations have been flooding his office in the Securities building and his home at 2200 Chautauqua Parkway. Among his telegrams were one from Morris F. DeCasto, the present governor of the Virgin Islands, who assured "continued cooperation," and another from Leon A. Dawson of the St. Thomas Republican club.

St. Thomas is the seat of the government in the Virgin Islands, which has an estimated population of 50,000.

Mr. Alexander said he plans to go to the Virgin Islands about April 15 for a preliminary conference with Mr. DeCastro, whose resignation was accepted, effective upon Mr. Alexander's qualifications for the post. Mr. DeCastro, a white native of the Islands, succeeded William H. Hastie in 1949, after he became judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia.

President of Alexander & Repass, a Washington, D. C.-Des Moines interracial contracting company, which has built bridges, trafficways and apartment house projects in the nation's capitol and in other parts of the country, Mr. Alexander revealed in an interview that he will continue his business connection.

'A Challenge'

Mr. Alexander said he looked upon the Virgin Islands governorship as a "challenge". He has made several business trips to the Islands and spent some vacation time there with his wife, but never thought of being elected governor.

Salary quoted for the governorship is about $16,000 a year.

Mr. Alexander revealed that he has "always had an interest in the welfare of the peoples of darker countries." In 1934 he was the engineer member of a mission sent by late President Roosevelt to Haiti.

Mr. Alexander, 65, is a native of

A. A. ALEXANDER

Ottumwa, Ia., a graduate of the engineering college at the State University of Iowa and a tackle on the Iowa football teams of 1910-12.

Widely known for his engineering talents, Alexander for years has been a lecturer at Howard university, Washington, and a trustee of Tuskegee institute Alabama.

Award Winner

When the first Harmon Awards were granted in 1926 to American Negro men and women for distinguished achievement, Mr. Alexander received the second of two awards in the field of industry and business. He was awarded the degree of Doctor of engineering from Howard University in 1947. At the commencement exercises of the State University of Iowa in June, 1947, he was among some hundred alumni who were honored for distinguished service in their fields.

Mr. Alexander has been an active Republican in state and national campaigns and a substantial contributor to the finances of the party for many years. He has served as an assistant to the state chairman of Iowa.

Mr. Alexander was president of the Negro Community Center board when the Gardner Cowles foundation gave $100,000 for the building of a new center, the Willkie House. He has headed the board of management of Crocker Branch YMCA, chaired the Des Moines Interracial Commission, led the Des Moines branch NAACP.

An Episcolalian, he is a former grand polemarch of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity.

Three other Iowans were appointed by former presidents to posts outside the United States.

Clark To Liberia

Alexander G. Clark, of Muscatine, Ia., considered the most prominent Negro in Iowa from Civil war days almost to the close of the century, served as one of the vice presidents of the Republican State convention, was a delegate in 1872 to the national convention and an alternate in 1876.

In 1873 President U. S. Grant apponted him consul at Aux-Cayes, Haiti, a position he refused because of the meager stipend. In 1890 when President Harrison appointed Clark minister resident and consul general to Liberia, Africa, he accepted, taking over his office on Nov. 25, 1890.

He was a graduate of the University of Iowa, receiving his LL. B degree in 1884.

Woodson to Virgin Islands

George H. Woodson, prominent Des Moines attorney until his death in 1933, was appointed in 1926 by President Calvin Coolige as chairman of an all-Negro commission to investigate and report on the economic conditions in the Virgin Islands.

The late Attorney Woodson, born of slave parents in Wytheville, Va., received his Bacheor of Arts degree in Petersburg, Va., and his LLB. degree from the law college of Howard university, Washington, D. C. While living in Monroe County, Ia., he was nominated by the Republicans as candidate for state representative.

Wright To Honduras

Herbert R. Wright of Marshalltown, Ia., who was graduated in the same law class of the State University of Iowa with the late S. Joe Brown, was appointed in 1903 by President Theodore Roosevelt as U.S. consul at Utilla, Honduras. Then following this service he served as consul at Puerto Cabello, Venzuela until 1918, serving under three administrations, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson. He practiced law until his death in 1931 in Des Moines.

Who Is Archie Alexander, New Governor of the Virgin Islands?

Archibald Alexander (inset) of Des Moines, Iowa, newly appointed Governor of the Virgin Islands, is one of the nation's greatest builders.

By STANLEY ROBERTS

WASHINGTON—Archie Alexander, may his kind increase, dwells in the realm of men known as—do'ers. He doesn't talk much . . . he listens a lot. He told me once: "A man can't learn anything when he's talking."

So if you're looking for a vain man of words and a vague projector of ideas and futile dreams—stop right here!

But! . . . if you want a bridge built across a stream at a point where most engineers long since have said it's well nigh impossible . . . if you want a dam constructed to harness up an undisciplined, contrary river . . . or if, maybe, your community needs a powerhouse to supply vital electricity for increased industrial growth . . . then call up Archie Alexander . . . any old time—day or night—at LUdlow 2-0088 in D. C., or at the main headquarters of Alexander and Repass in Des Moines, Iowa.

FOR GOOD MEASURE, Archie Alexander will also stake out your city with the proper railroad entrances and exits . . . he'll put you up an airport . . . smooth out your paving and grading . . . put in some filtration and salvage plants and modern sewage disposal units . . . and if you can't satisfy that restless energy of his he will construct two or three modern housing projects for you during his "leisure" hours and, just like that he's on his way to new cities to build and rebuild.

All for a price, however. Because "A. A." is a builder at his peak — a man with the know-how of his trade, and American do'er, an integrated Negro in big business activity and a financial Republi of long year's standing.

All this and more they told President Eisenhower.

* * *

IKE INVITED him to dinner at the White House a few months back.

Ike is sending him . . . a few weeks hence . . . to the Virgin Islands to conduct Uncle Sam's business as Governor.

Reluctantly, Archie will put down building U. S. bridges, etc., but the Virgin Islanders had better fast begin importing steam shovels, cranes and other tools of the trade because wherever "A. A." goes there's going to be some construction going on.

And it's a well-known secret that if you like Ike, that's what Ike likes.

If you're ever in Washington, D. C., and feel the need for having a bridge built, then it's a safe bet that you couldn't do better than to end up in the K Street offices of Alexander and Repass. You'd find the men with the "know-how" and you'd be among friends.

THE NATIVES and tourists of our capitol city turned out recently to see a ribbon cut at the entry to the Whitehurst Freeway and by so doing to pay tribute to an Iowa boy, A. A. Alexander.

Archie Alexander received his bachelor's degree in engineering on the Iowa campus in the spring of 1912 and later returned for a civil engineering degree.

Partner M. A. Repass (he's white) and Alexander have been friends since college days and partners since 1929 when they joined forces to undertake a job at Grand Rapids, Mich.

In the words of Mr. Repass . . . "Thus establishing a relationship so satisfactory that we have continued together ever since."

IOWA UNIVERSITY year book says: "You don't have to be an 'old grad' to hearken to the strains of 'Alexander's Ragtime Band,' but if you are among the old grads then those strains must recall the Alexander of '09, '10 and '11—the Ottumwa boy who fought a share of Hawkeye gridiron battles and squirmed uneasily to Irving Berlin's melody played strictly for him by the university band.

"You old grads probably remember Repass, too, for he also was a member of those teams."

Alexander worked in Des Moines for two years before going into business for himself.

He built a number of bridges for the highway commission, and in Iowa City was builder of the College Street viaduct and the University heating plant.

REPASS, IN THE meantime, went to work for a Minneapolis construction firm, later became an instructor in the university's department of mechanics and hydraulics, and still later went back to bridge building—this time for a company working out of Billings, Mont. "In 1924," he says, "largely on the advice of classmate Alexander, "I started contracting with my brother in Iowa and on my own."

"In 1929," Repass continues, "we were interested in a building job in Grand Rapids, Mich., and entered our bids.

"It was a large contract, and in order to bid for it we combined the resources of the two firms. Of course, our getting together in the first place was the result of the friendship which began during our days on the campus."

IN JUNE of 1948 they had completed together the Riggs road underpass and they were also the contractors on the reworking of the Rock Island Railroad's Golden State Limited route.

Said Mr. Repass recently: "We suspect the interest in our firm is due largely to the fact that it is a partnership of a colored and a white man."

Iowa alumni put it another way.

They say: "We do agree that the nature of the partnership is of considerable interest . . . proving as it does, a point many refuse to believe.

"Still to us the story first is a sort of twin-billed Horatio Alger, not particularly new, but losing none of its pleasantness in repeating."

How about that as an expression of Brotherhood at its finest?

'Economic Salvation'

Alexander Hails V. I. Organic Act

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 10-30-54 P. 5

By JOSEPH U. HINSHAW

WASHINGTON—(INS)—Gov. Archie Alexander of the Virgin Islands said Saturday that the Organic Act approved by Congress last year for the territory "is the economic salvation of the island."

Alexander, a native of Des Moines, Iowa, was appointed Governor of the islands by President Eisenhower six months ago, and has had the task of drawing up plans for the complete reorganization of the government to conform with the organic legislation approved by Congress this year.

The Republican appointee said he had already worked out plans for the consolidation of the various Government departments into eight, the heads of which will form his cabinet.

UNDER THE Organic Act, the Legislature of the island has been reduced from sixteen to eleven members, and the new Legislature, to be elected Nov. 2, will have to approved his reorganization plans.

Alexander also said that he will recommend the consolidation of the ninety-four boards and commissions presently existing for the islands' population of 35,000 into twenty-two.

The Organic Act is designed to eliminate the need for the islands to go to Congress every year in search of deficiency appropriations. For each dollar of local revenue raised, the Federal Government will match it with another.

This will give the territory a budget of approximately $4 million a year, which in the view of the Governor will be enough to run the Government adequately and allow $1 million for a public works program.

ALEXANDER SAID he intends to push a program of vocational education in order to train the islanders for better paying jobs and positions.

A strong educational program, Alexander said, is one of the greatest needs of the islands. Last year, $95 per capita was spent, an amount less than half that spent by the poorest state in the Union.

The Governor said he is also interested in making a greater effort to promote tourism to the islands. He said it dropped off to 106,000 persons last year, but he hopes it will increase against this year.

Despite the smallness of his domain, Governor Alexander said he is kept extremely busy as the Governor is regarded as a sort of "Father Confessor" for whom no problem is too small.

Alexander Reception—U. S. Government officials, foreign dignitaries and Virgin Islands officeholders circulate through the Government House at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, during a reception which followed the inauguration of Archibald Alexander as Governor of the Virgin Islands.

The Pipeline

By Stanley Roberts

Archie Greeted in V. I.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Reports reaching here from the Virgin Islands indicate that the inauguration ceremonies installing Iowa's Archie Alexander as Governor last month were most inspiring . . . as was the reception at Government House in St. Thomas immediately afterwards.

From his personal White House staff, President Ike sent aides Maxwell Raab, Homer Gruenther and Commander Beach, his Naval aide. Secretary of Interior and Mrs. Douglas McKay were also on hand. Mrs. Alexander was received by the islanders with great warmth.

Others participating in the eventful day were Assistant Secretary of Interior Felix E. Wormser, outgoing Governor and Mrs. Morris de Castro, Charles K. Claunch, Government Secretary of the Virgin Islands; Dr. and Mrs. David C. Canegata, administrator of St. Croix; Williams Bailey, St. Thomas attorney and island Republican leader; Lieut. Col. Joseph A. Christmas; island Republican leaders Robert Fox and Mrs. Betty Williams, St. Croix; Will Bailey, William Greer and Roy Gordon, all of St. Thomas; Mrs. Harriet Hawkins and Mrs. Colleen Jones, sisters of the new Governor, were there from Chicago, and Administrator George Simmons of St. John was also on hand.

Hundreds of prominent islanders and U. S. friends of Governor Alexander paid their respects at the reception. Bands and floats were much in evidence during the gala inaugural parade. School children's marching units were colorful and noisy, and snappy police and guard units strutted their stuff. Crowds at the harbor of Charlotte Amalie were enormous to meet Alexander . . . dancing and joviality at the formal inaugural ball . . . the cutting of the tremendous inaugural cake by the Governor and his wife was another highlight . . . the immaculately clad Catholic sisters in Christiansted waved greetings to the Governor's party as he passed their convent . . . the sensational playing of the youthful band on native, all-steel instruments was enormously enjoyed. All in all, the Republicans put on a great show for a great guy.

VIRGIN ISLANDS

Governor of All

When Archie Alexander, a lifelong Republican, landed one day last week in pastel-painted Charlotte Amalie, the sign on the hangar that says "Harry S. Truman Airport" was tactfully shrouded by a big welcome banner. Next day Alexander, a Negro contractor from Des Moines, climbed up on the back seat of a crimson Chevrolet convertible and headed a brass-band parade up the Kronprindsensgade (Crown Prince Street) and down the Dronningensgade (Queen Street). At the Emancipation Garden where the Danes* freed their slaves in 1848, he was sworn in as the first Republican governor of the Virgin Islands (pop. 26,665, of whom 91% are of Negro or mixed blood).

In his inaugural address, Alexander promised to be "governor of all and every segment of the population . . . Prejudice is born in ignorance and dispelled by knowledge." He got it on the record early that "we've room on these islands for but one flag, the American flag, and this excludes the Red flag." He pledged himself to work for a bigger tourist trade ("but an economy based on the tourist trade alone is not a stable one"), to aid schools, to help end the islands' water shortage.

Governor Alexander, now 65, was born in Ottumwa, Iowa. The son of a janitor, he worked his way through the University of Iowa, was a three-letter football tackle, graduated in engineering in 1912. He formed his own contracting business two years later and is now head of prosperous Alexander & Repass, builders (among many projects) of Washington's K Street Freeway along the Potomac.

Alexander replaces Morris de Castro, a white islander who has served the island government for 35 years, as acting governor at various times during the 40s and as governor since 1950. Island Republicans are happy with Alexander, an early Ike supporter. Said one woman member of the Republican reception committee, shoving chairs around in preparation for the post-inauguration reception at Government House: "I've waited 20 years to rearrange this furniture."

Alexander Thanks Ike For Top Island Post

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Archie A. Alexander called at the White House Friday to thank President Eisenhower for his appointment as governor of the Virgin Islands.

Mr. Alexander was accompanied by Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay and Val J. Washington, an assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee.

The oath of office will be administered to Mr. Alexander in Charlotte Amalie on Friday, April 9. Mr. Alexander flew to the Virgin Islands Wednesday evening.

The reason for holding the oath-ceremony in the Virgin Islands, Mr. Alexander explained to reporters, is that as soon as he takes the oath he becomes the Governor and if he were not in Charlotte Amalie, the Government Secretary for the Virgin Islands would become the Acting Governor.

"We thought that would not be too good," said Mr. Alexander.

The Government Secretary is Daniel W. Ambrose Jr., a Democrat, of West Virginia. Mr. Ambrose is being replaced by Charles Kenneth Claunch, who has been working at the White House since 1929.

President Eisenhower announced on March 26 that Mr. Claunch Assistant Usher, had been appointed Government Secretary for the Virgin Islands. The position is equivalent to Lieutenant Governor of a state. Mr. Claunch is accompanying Mr. Alexander to the Virgin Islands and will assume his new duties immediately after Mr. Alexander is sworn in.

Mr. Alexander said President Eienhower had given him formal greetings to the people of the Virgin Islands.

About 18 or 20 persons, including Senators and officials of the Interior Department, are expected to attend the oath-ceremony in Charlotte Amalie.

Mr. Alexander will be accompanied by his wife, his executive assistant, George Hamilton, a lawyer from Los Angeles, and his wife; two sisters, Mrs. Colleen Jones and Mrs. Harriet Hawkins, both of Chicago, and a friend, Everett Clay, of Des Moines.

TO POST IN VIRGIN ISLANDS.—Elliott H. Gray, shown above, instructor in mechanical engineering at the Tennessee State university in Nashville, has been appointed manager of the Virgin Islands' airport at St. Thomas, The appointment was announced by Governor Archie Alexander of the Islands.

Gray, who is also presently in charge of the Aero Repair Shop at Tennessee State will take leave of absence from the university to assume his managerial duties. He was awarded his multi-engine pilot's license and flight instructor's license by the Capitol Airways Aeronautics school in 1949 and 1950, respectively.

Beginning his aeronautics training at the Roosevelt School of Aeronautics and continuing during his tour of duty in the U. S. Air Force as first lieutenant, Gray received his unlimited single engine pilot's license in 1945.

With an inordinate sense of business acumen coupled with his formalized knowledge, Gray has had over 10 years of experience as owner and manager of several business enterprises, including restaurants, hotels, nightclubs, and farms.

He will be joined in St. Thomas later by his wife, the former Catherine Burrell of New Orleans, and their two daughters, Leslie, age 6 and Osbeth, age 1.

Archie Alexander Named V. I. Governor

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA) — President Eisenhower Monday sent to the senate the nomination of Archie A. Alexander, 66, of Des Moines, Iowa, and Washington, to be governor of the Virgin Islands.

Mr. Alexander, who was a dinner guest of Mr. Eisenhower at the White House several months ago, is a civil engineer. After graduating from the public schools of Des Moines, he entered the University of Iowa in 1908 and received the bachelor of science degree in 1912 and the civil engineering degree in 1925.

While a student at the University of Iowa, he played football for three years and was an All-Western end.

From 1912 to 1915 Mr. Alexander was associated with the Marsh Engineering Company, in Des Moines. In 1925 he entered business for himself, and in 1929 he formed the partnership of Alexander and Repass, construction company.

During his professional career, Mr. Alexander has constructed bridges and all types of engineering work. One of his large municipal projects was the construction of a sewage plant in Grand Rapids, Michigan, in 1931, at a cost of $1,200,000. He also constructed sewage plants in Waukeegan, North Chicago, and Lake Forest, Illinois, at a cost of $1,000,000.

Mr. Alexander also engaged in extensive railroad relocation work for the Chicago and Northwestern, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and the Milwaukee railroads.

His firm, Alexander and Repass, has handled various construction jobs in the Washington, D. C., area, including the construction for the Federal Government of the Tidal Basin bridge at a contract price of $1,100,000. He also built for the District of Columbia government the Whitehurst Freeway, a driveway connecting Washington with northern Virginia, at a cost of about $4,000,000.

Another federal government job handled by Mr. Alexander was the construction of the Tuskegee Army Air Force base at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, at a cost of $500,000. He had the flying field ready in three months. The entire job took six months.

He also built a bridge for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad between Baltimore and Washington.

At the centennial of the State of Iowa in 1946, the University of Iowa chose its hundred outstanding graduates, and Mr. Alexander was not only one of those cited by the university but he led the voting.

Virgin Is. Post to Alexander

By STANLEY ROBERTS
(Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — Archibald Alexander of Des Moines, Iowa will be named Governor of the Virgin Islands this week by President Eisenhower, the Courier learned from high sources in the administration.

This newspaper has predicted all along that Alexander would emerge as Ike's choice of the thirty-two applicants in the field.

Mr. Alexander is an honor graduate of the engineering department of the University of Iowa. He and his partner, Bryant White, have headquarters in Des Moines. Mr. Alexander has built some of the largest bridges and roads in the and troughout the United States.

HE BUILT the bridge across the Tidal Basin here. Earlier, Mr. Alexander's most famous job was the building of the "free way." This beautiful highway serves as a gateway to the South and tourists and travelers who use the new Chesapeake Bay Bridge save precious hours by avoiding congested traffic of Baltimore and Washington when traveling south.

Recently, Mr. Alexander was honored by his alma mater, the University of Iowa, which bestowed an honorary doctorate degree upon him. A few weeks back, Mr. Alexander was among a small group invited to one of a series of Eisenhower's stag dinners. It was at this dinner that Mr. Alexander made such a favorable impression upon the President.

The engineer has just completed building a 150-unit housing project on the old Frederick Douglass estate. He has promised to turn this project over, free of debt, in a few years to the "committee for the preservation of the Frederick Douglass home."

He is now also completing a bridge across the East River at at cost of one million dollars. Mr. Alexander has been a large contributor to the Republican party over a period of years and his political supporters include Senator Hickenlooper, Congressman Cunningham, Val J. Washington and Atty. Perry Howard of the Republican National Committee.

VIRGIN ISLANDS HAVE 1ST G. O. P. GOVERNOR

Special to The New York Times.

ST. THOMAS, V. I., April 9—Archie A. Alexander, a building contractor of Des Moines, Iowa, became today the first Republican Governor of the Virgin Islands since the establishment of civil government here in 1931.

Thousands of spectators filled Emancipation Garden to watch him take the oath of office, following a colorful inaugural parade. The oath was administered by Federal Judge Herman Moore.

Mr. Alexander pledged to be "Governor of all and every segment of the population." He warned that "an economy based on tourist trade alone" was not a stable one and said that "the people should take the greatest possible advantages of the island's natural attributes."

"Prejudice is born in ignorance and dispelled by knowledge," he said. "Due to the recent Puerto Rican nationalist uprising in Washington, we've room on these islands but for one flag—the American flag, and this excludes the Red flag."

Congressional, White House and Department of the Interior officials, headed by the Secretary of the Interior, Douglas McKay, attended the ceremonies.

Negro Political "Interne" Studies Under Roosevelt

P. 2 Wored
Birmingham Ala.

BY ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON —(ANP) — Mrs. Marie Smith Carl, a congressional intern, accompanied Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt (D., N. Y.) to the Senate Labor sub-committee hearing, Wednesday, to witness his testimony favoring legislation for a fair employment practices bill.

Mrs. Carl is doing her political internship on a fellowship, granted by the American Political Science Association. This 10-month congressional study was originated for the purpose of giving political scientists an opportunity to watch congress at work. By providing first-hand knowledge, it is expected that these teachers will be better prepared to do a more effective job in the field of political science.

This is the first year that an internship of this kind has been sponsored by this organization, and Mrs. Carl is one of the two women and the only Negro among the six persons chosen for the Association's fellowships.

The study began in September and Mrs. Carl was assigned to the subcommittee of the Senate judiciary committee in October to study juvenile delinquency. Around the first of this month she was transferred to Congressman Roosevelt's office where she has been helping the congressman's administrative assistant. Much of her work in this office has been in the field of research.

Mrs. Carl is a native of St. Augustine, Fla., and received her A. B. degree at Clark College in Atlanta, her M. A. at the University of Michigan, and her law degree from Yale.

She maintains residence in Houston, Texas, where her husband, Earl L. Carl is professor of law in Texas Southern university. The Carls have a six-month old daughter, Nina Earlene.

Mrs. Carl taught mathematics at West Palm Beach, Fla., and has also worked with the Women's Division of the Detroit Police Department.

She has no definite plans on what she will do immediately following the completion of her congressional internship in June, but she hopes to take the bar examination in the District of Columbia while here, and to ultimately return to the teaching profession.

American States Rights Assn.—

Group to organize, back segregation, combat 'isms'

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

A new statewide organization to combat efforts to break down segregation and "indoctrinate school children with socialism, communism and race integration" will be formed here Thursday.

It is the American States' Rights Assn., Inc., which already has 55 "Alabama leaders" ready to become its directors and several hundred others as members.

William H. Hoover and Olin H. Horton, Birmingham business men and prime movers in setting up the association, said its organization would be completed at a meeting set for 11 a.m. Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce Bldg. A president elected and incorporation papers filed that day.

News 2-15-54

"WE'RE NOT GOING to engage actively in any political campaigns," said Hoover, who heads a large insurance company here.

"But we're going to do a lot of research to inform the people on what is going on, particularly with regard to groups trying to break down segregation."

Horton, who has been busy for weeks in preparing the launching of the association, said plans are eventually to make it Southwide in scope.

A letter recently sent out announcing Thursday's meeting stated the group's "objects and purposes" were to "promote and defend the basic principles of States' Rights" and to "develop economic, social and civic programs for the betterment of the several states."

IT WAS STRESSED that "under the objectives of the association, it is proposed:

"1—For the first time to offer firm resistence to those organizations and individuals who have enjoyed 'free wheeling' in their assaults on our segregation laws and customs.

"2—To offer determined resistance to those organizations and forces who are seeking to indictrinate our school children with socialism, communism and race integration, through school textbooks for the avowed purpose of conditioning the children for citizenship in a world government.

"3—To make it known in positive terms what we expect from our officials from municipalities up to our representatives in Washington, to support the president's program of returning obligations to the states, along with tax sources to support them; and to insist on the return to the states of complete control of state-owned institutions, such as schools and colleges; our election machinery, zoning and segregation."

Among those whose names were signed to the letter were Hoover, Horton, Hugh Morrow, J. Kirkman Jackson, J. J. Scarborough, W. W. Walker, O. W. Fraser, Mrs. Frank M. Jeffries, Mrs. E. D. Montgomery and Mrs. Henry B. Gray Jr.

Race Solution Must Be Grounded In Justice

Birmingham

To the Editor:

Recently The News carried two stories on the organization of the American States Rights Association, Inc. It was stated that the purpose of the organization was to carry out research and "inform the people on what is going on, particularly with regard to groups trying to break down segregation."

Birmingham

The organization of citizens' groups to study civic problems and to publicize their results is certainly a commendable action and one to be encouraged. By such free inquiry and expression our democracy is strengthened at its grass roots.

However, in the past democracy has suffered when "patriotic" groups have thrown out a blanket condemnation in the general direction of some evil with the result that many innocent bystanders were defamed.

Bab 12/1/54

We Alabamians hope and trust that the American States Rights Association will enter into its program with the firm convictions that it will adhere to unbiased objective research dealing with the whole truth in this matter rather than a part of it; that it will treat other groups and persons working in this area as fairly and honestly as it knows how, and that it will seek after a solution to our race problem that is in harmony with the highest justice for all.

We must recognize the fact that we do have a race problem, that we are on the verge of an inevitable transition of some sort whether we like it or not, and in order to pass through it as smoothly as possible all of us must sanely seek together that solution grounded in justice.

As a concrete step toward facing our situation, let us realize that rarely in history has any one group ever held the entire truth in its hands. Therefore, we should encourage the American States Rights Association to invite open free discussion throughout the state on the problem with other groups who have expressed concern over segregation such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Charges hurled from a distance at one another would never accomplish anything but to inflame the public. Honest seeking of understanding by everyone involved is the first step to real progress.

May we therefore seek guidance from one another and—more important—from God.

Pastor, Methodist Church, Rockford, Ala.

Part of the function of the Committee on Segregation will be to check the records of individuals advocating breakdown of segregation by any means, including the use of Negro policemen.

Horton asked for and received permission to grant the committee authority to:

"Examine the prior record of such individuals and organizations sponsoring such proposals (as FEPC and Negro police) and to publish such findings through every possible medium including the speakers' bureau of the American States' Rights Assn."

MRS. ANNIE LEE MOSS: 'NEVER BEEN ANYTHING BUT A CHRISTIAN AND A DEMOCRAT'

'I Hold No Vengeance'

Mrs. Moss Confused, But Feels No Anger

34d

By Eve Edstrom
Post Reporter

In the living room of Mrs. Annie Lee Moss' home yesterday there was only one book—the Bible—and in her heart there were only thoughts of charity for the junior Republican Senator from Wisconsin. Post P.1

"People should pray for Senator McCarthy," she said. "He should not be held up to ridicule and scorn. I hold no vengeance in my heart. It's a bad thing to hold—bad for your soul. All this should be left in God's hands as it will be." Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Moss, though, still is bewildered by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's charges that she was a card-carrying Communist Party member.

"I've worked like a dog for my good name and to make life pleasant for others," she said. "I've held Christmas dances and plays to buy gifts for disabled veterans and baskets of food for the needy. June 14-54

"I've taken boys from the Industrial Home School to the movies and to church and I've got a letter from the Fourth Precinct that says I've helped to prevent juvenile delinquency.

"I've worked with them all—the YWCA, the Syphax Recreation Center, the Boy Scouts, the Phelps P-TA and the Friendship Baptist Church—and we were always talking and sometimes laughing and never speaking of communism.

"But those are good things and no one asks about them. They just ask about things you don't know about and then someone says you're not loyal and that hurts, hurts real hard."

The 49-year-old woman, however, has friends who have not forgotten her; friends like the former principal of her high school in Salisbury, N. C.

Letter From Principal

When McCarthy's charges against Mrs. Moss made headlines late last month, she received a letter from the school's former principal, L. H. Hall, who said:

"Just read in the news of the efforts on the part of some would-be-smart people in Washington to connect you with un-American activities — which brings you this note of confidence. Price High is proud of you . . . I trust you are well and able to save your good name."

Under oath before McCarthy's subcommittee Thursday, Mrs. Moss tried to save her good name by firmly denying all charges against her. Yet today she is jobless, having been suspended from her $3335 Signal Corps job at the Pentagon after McCarthy's accusations were made public.

The charges were based on testimony of Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, an FBI undercover agent, who said a woman by the name of Annie Lee Moss was a Communist Party member here in the 1940s. Mrs. Markward, however, could not identify Mrs. Moss in person.

In the eyes of Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), a subcommittee member, Mrs. Moss did such a good job of defending her name that when she finished her testimony, he said:

"I may be sticking my neck out, but I think you are telling the truth . . . If you are not taken back in the Army, you come around and see me. I am going to see that you get a job."

Mrs. Moss declared yesterday that she had "never been anything but a Christian and a Democrat."

Raised As Christian

"I've voted Democratic ever since I was 21 and I still do by absentee ballot in Durham, N. C. I'm proud I'm a Democrat, too, especially after what Senators McClellan and Symington did."

(Sen. John L. McClellan, along with Symington, vigorously protested the methods of McCarthy's Subcommittee counsel Roy M. Cohn for the way he conducted the Thursday hearing. Cohn said there was other evidence against her, but McClellan assailed Cohn for stating that in public without producing the "evidence.")

Although there is no material evidence in Mrs. Moss' home at 1244 Evarts st. ne., to show her political preferences, there is ample evidence of her devout belief in Christ.

There are six Bibles, a well-worn book of Christian songs innumerable pictures of Christ and framed needlework proclaiming "God Bless This Home" and giving "The Lord's Prayer."

"This doesn't look like I'm a Communist, does it?" Mrs. Moss asked as she pointed to the pictures. "I thought Communists didn't believe in the Lord.

"My mother raised us all to be good Christians."

Mrs. Moss, the second oldest of six children, was born in Chester, S. C., and went to work picking cotton at the age of 5. Her parents were tenant farmers who moved to Salisbury, N. C., when Mrs. Moss was in her teens. She did domestic work and operated a marking machine in a laundry until she married at 21. She and her husband worked for several years in tobacco companies at Durham, N. C., then moved to Washington in 1941, when Moss, now deceased, obtained a construction job at the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Loyalty Commended

"I worked in a laundry here, then got a job as a pastry cook for General Services Administration," she said. "My mother taught us all to cook. From slave days to my mother's day, the women of my family specialized in cooking. My job did not pay much, though, and I went to work for $1200 a year as an underclerk at the General Accounting Office.

"My loyalty first was questioned there and I had a hearing," Mrs. Moss said. "I was asked why I didn't have counsel. I said I didn't know why I was there, but I could answer all questions truthfully.

"I was asked if I was a Communist Party member and I said: 'What was that?'" Then I was asked if I had a Communist card and I handed the attorney my pocketbook. He took out my insurance papers, my bills and my YWCA card. I told him that was everything I had.

"Later, they wrote me a letter and told me that if everyone was as loyal an American as I was, there would be no need for such hearings. I just thought it was a case of mistaken identity and thought I wouldn't be worried about it again."

Through a reduction-in-force, Mrs. Moss lost her job. After doing odd jobs for several months, she obtained the Signal Corps job through a Civil Service examination. Again her security was questioned and again she was cleared.

Confusion of Names?

"I just think I've been confused with someone else," Mrs. Moss said. "However, through the committee's questioning, I found out that a woman I knew for a brief period is supposed to have been a member of the Communist Party here.

"My late husband and I met her before we moved into the Syphax Housing Project. I haven't seen her since then, but after that copies of the Daily Worker were mailed to our house. It's possible that she gave my name to someone, but I only knew her as a Baptist and I never talked politics with her.

"When a white man came to collect for the Daily Worker I refused to pay because I told him we had never subscribed. He raised quite a fuss but went away. He never came back and the Daily Worker stopped coming. I never read it.

"In my testimony, I was asked about a Rob Hall who is supposed to be a Communist and I said I knew a Robert Hall who is a Negro, not white like the man they asked me about. I thought the Hall I knew first brought the Daily Worker to our house, but I checked with my son and he said that wasn't so. He said I was referring to a man who brought the paper of the Jehovah's Witnesses. You see, I'm just not much for reading papers.

"But I guess lots of people read papers and have read about me. They say my only son might have to resign from his Navy job now. That really will be something. He likes to help out around the house, gives me money to help pay for it. With me not working, I don't know what we'll do. We'll just have to pray that the Lord will take care of us."

Commissioned Communists

The Senate armed services committee is going all too slowly into the maze that is fundamental to the recent continuing brawl between Sen. McCarthy and the "Army," and to wide public misunderstanding. It is being distracted by other aspects of the brawl.

The maze is the question of having Communists in the armed services—whether drafted or volunteer, whether commissioned or noncommissioned—and if not, what to do about those who have "obligations." Insofar as the draft is concerned, this is a matter of law—as yet unwritten.

It is something that will require time, principle, and prudence to thresh out satisfactorily. Yet so long as the maze exists, any critic who wants to can pop off and harangue; any citizen can be genuinely misled. The healthiest thing so far said has been, "I don't know the answer"; and believe it or not, Sen. McCarthy is among those who finally have said as much.

One corridor of the maze is the dentists-doctors draft and the commissioning of such draftees as are Communists or "questionable." The Army policy has been, it appears, not (knowingly) to commission them. One judge, it is stated, ruled a commission is mandatory. Another judge, last Sept. 2 at Alexandria, Va., ruled it is not. To clear this up in the legislation is obviously desirable. Yet that does not clear up the question of what value to the services a noncommissioned specialist of this kind would represent; or his ability even in that capacity to do something disloyal, recruit for the Reds, etc. The latter point was raised by Sen. McCarthy in at least one instance.

The "Maj. Peress case" was an Army slipup either as to proper checkup, interpretation, policy, or all three. It was admitted, perhaps belatedly, as a slipup. The slipup, coupled with Sen. McCarthy's own fogginess as to the fundamental problems, led to the uncalled-for treatment of Gen Zwicker. Had Sen. McCarthy admitted, belatedly, a slipup on his own part, all in this respect might be well. Yet the fundamental problems do remain, subject to agitation, in various ramifications. Whether the current furor subsidies or not, no matter what it produces, Congress' committees should continue to seek the appropriate solution.

Reinstated to U.S. job

Clear actor's kin of 'Red' charge

NEW YORK— Mrs. Evadney P. Canegata, sister-in-law of the late Canada Lee, is back at her government job this week after a three-month suspension for "continuing sympathetic association" with the actor.

The clerk-typist in the Immigration and Naturalization Service was reinstated only four days after a New York paper had said she was to be "fired" for associating with Mr. Lee.

At the same time, the paper revealed that Mr. Lee had sought vainly before he died May 9, 1952, in abject poverty, to clear his name of charges that he was a Communist and "Red" sympathizer.

Workers League Helps

Reinstatement of Mrs. Canegata was considered a victory for the Anti-Communists Workers Defense League which helped her prepare answers to charges that she had signed a Communist nominating list in 1940 besides associating with Mr. Lee.

Her reinstatement also lifted a shadow from the job of her husband, William H. Canegata, who had been employed in the Post Office Department here for the past 16 years.

Dismissal of his wife might have caused Mr. Canegata to face similar charges.

Mrs. Moss Reiterates Denial Of Being A Card-Carrying Red

BY LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, suspended employee of the Army Signal Corps, Monday reiterated her denial that she ever was a card-carrying or any other kind of member of the Communist party.

Answering the Army's latest charges, upon which she was suspended from her job August 4, Mrs. Moss, who won nation-wide sympathy when she tangled with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Republican, of Wisconsin, said:

LAW-ABIDING

"I know nothing of any government except the American way of life and the American Government. I am a conscientious member of the Friendship Baptist Church and have attempted to conduct myself as a Christian and law-abiding citizen. Mind as I began, I am not a Communist, have never been a Communist, and have no communistic leanings or sympathies."

Her answer, drafted by her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, and signed by her, was the fifth reply she has made to charges that she has been a member of the Communist party in the District of Columbia.

The only new charge against her, contained in a list of seven specifications which the Army forwarded to Mrs. Moss on August 4, consists of a report that she had been given a Communist party membership book No. 37269 for 1943.

HEIGHT OF WRANGLE

Mrs. Moss was called to testify suddenly by Senator McCarthy before the Senate Permanent Investigating Committee, of which he is chairman, at the heighth of his wrangle with Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens.

At a hearing last February 24, McCarthy stated flatly that Mrs. Moss was a Communist and was handling top-secret code messages for the Army Signal Corps. Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, FBI informant, said the name of Annie Lee Moss had been on the Communist party rolls but she was unable to identify Mrs. Moss by sight.

When Mrs. Moss sought to testify in her own behalf, McCarthy shut her up by saying she looked too ill and he did not want to send her to jail for perjury.

Later, the Army disclosed that Mrs. Moss simply handled punched code tape, had never entered a code room and could not supply an enemy with worthwhile information.

Mrs. Moss finally got a hearing before McCarthy's committee on March 11. She denied that she had ever been a Communist, said she knew nothing about communism and might have been confused with several other persons with the same name.

HEARING ROOM

McCarthy walked out of the hearing room after Mrs. Moss had been testifying for a few minutes. He said he had another engagement. Senators John L. McClellan of Arkansas and Stuart Symington of Missouri, both Democrats — amid frequent applause from the spectators, denounced hearsay and concealed evidence.

Senator Symington said he believed her and that he would get her a job if the Armf did not reinstate her.

Mrs. Moss had been supended when McCarthy made his charges against her but was given her job back because the Army had no specific charges and was not ready to hear her case.

NEW DETAILS

In general, the latest charges against Mrs. Moss are not new but one or two new details have been added, such as the book number.

Her answer was addressed to John C. Council, Jr., chairman of the Security Screening Board, Department of the Army.

Just how she became involved in a loyalty investigation, Mrs. Moss said, has never been known to her. Nor does she understand the reason for such an investigation any better now, in her fifth formal reply to charges, than she did when she was first called upon to answer them.

In her answer she set out the Army's charges and followed each one with her reply to it.

Charge No. 1: "Reportedly, prior to November, 1942, you joined the Communist party, District of Columbia, and were assigned to the Northeast Club."

Answer: "Neither prior to November, 1942, nor at any other time have I knowingly joined the Communist party and know nothing of any purported assignment to the Northeast Club.

Mrs. Moss said she used the words "knowingly" and "purported assignment" because the entire investigation seemed to hear "to stem from something or some things that some other person or persons have done involving my name."

NORTHEAST CLUB

So that her answer may not be misunderstood, she stated that "no one has ever solicited my membership in the Communist party. I have never personally joined same, nor have I authorized anyone to do so for me, nor have I ever been to or attended any meeting of the so-called 'Northeast Club,' and had never heard of any such club until the first loyalty hearing when I was asked as to my membership in such club, which I then denied and which denial I here reiterate."

Charge No. 2: "You are reported to have been given Communist party membership book No. 37269 for 1943; also, reportedly, you were assigned to the Frederick Douglass Branch, and on December 1, 1943 your membership was transferred to the Communist party, District of Columbia."

Answer: "If the first part of this question is taken to mean that I was physically given any Communist party membership book No. 37269 for 1943, or for any other time, or with any other number for 1943, or for any other time, I emphatically deny same.

MEMBERSHIP BOOK

"If the first part of the question is taken to mean that any such Communist party membership book was assigned to me, I assert that same was without any knowledge or authority on my part."

Mrs. Moss requested a hearing before the Security Screening Board, at which the author or authors of the information concerning her having been given a party membership book be produced.

Answering the second part of charge No. 2 as to being assigned to the Frederick Douglass Branch and her membership being transferred to the District of Columbia Communist party, she repeated her denial of membership in the Communist party and asserted that there was no membership to be assigned or transferred.

She also denied any knowledge or authorization of assignment or transfer of any alleged membership in the party at any time. She said she had never knowingly attended any meeting of the Frederick Douglass Club or the Communist party.

She added that she used the word "knowingly" to avoid the possibility that she had attended some meeting now said to have been a Communist meeting. She declared, however, that she had no knowledge of any such meeting and that she had never at any time been approached or solicited to join the Communist party or any of its branches, that she herself did not join and never authorized anyone to do so for her.

SUMMER OF 1944

Charge No. 3: "Allegedly, you reported to the Communist party, District of Columbia on 28 March 1944, and were entered on the membership rolls of the Communist Political Association in the summer of 1944."

Emphatically denied.

Charge No. 4: "Reportedly, consistent with Communist party policy, your name was dropped from the membership rolls of the Communist Political Association in 1945 whne you became a Federal employee."

Answer: "I deny the implication of the charge that my name was dropped from the membership rolls of the Communist Political Association in 1945 and repeat that repeat that my name could never have properly been on the rolls of the Communist party or the Communist Political Association."

DAILY WORKER

Charge 5: "During the period from 1942 through 1945, you are alleged to have attended meetings of the Communist party and the Communist Political Association, to have subscribed to the Communist publication, the 'Daily Worker', and to have been in contact with Communist party leaders and members."

Answer: "(a) I have never knowingly attended any meetings of the Communist party or the Communist Political Association."

"(b) I have never subscribed to the 'Daily Worker.' " She explained that without her request and without her subscription, for a period of time, the Daily Worker was delivered to her home.

When a man called to collect for the paper, she said, she told him that neither she nor anyone in her home had subscribed for it and that she was not going to pay for it.

She said she suggested to the man that he might come back and see her husband the next day, but the man never returned and the Daily Worker was never received after that.

TWO WEEKS

"(c) . . . I knowingly have had no contact with any Communist party leaders and do not know and have had no contact with Communist party members."

Mrs. Moss said she had heard at loyalty hearings a woman and her husband, at whose home she, her husband and their son stayed for about two weeks, were Communists or Communist sympathizers.

"I can only state that during the period which we remained in the home there was no showing of Communism, nor did we have any such contact as would have occasioned our knowing of communistic leanings if they had any. Neither of these persons ever spoke to me about communism.

"The home set-up was such that we seldom came in contact with each other. I attended only one meeting with the lady that was a church affair, given by the ushers of a church in the community where the home was. Since the time that I left the home in 1943, I have not seen or had any contact with the lady or her husband."

BREAK WITH PARTY

(Mrs. Markward testified that an active member of the Communist party was Hattie Griffin, at whose home Communist meetings were held. When she appeared before the McCarthy committee, Mrs. Moss denied knowing that Mrs. Griffin was a Communist or that she was holding Communist meetings in her home.)

Charge No. 6: "It is reliably reported that in the period from approximately 1942 to 1949 you were not expelled by the Communist party or the Communist Political Association and did not break with the party."

Answer: "I have no knowledge with regard to alleged expulsion or non-expulsion. I reiterate that I have never been a member of the Communist party or the Communist Political Association, and there would seem to be no reasonable theory of the necessity of expulsion of a membership that never actually existed.

"In the same vein I call attention to the lack of necessity on my part of breaking with the Communist party or Communist Political Association when I never had any membership in or contact with the party or association."

Charge No. 7: "The official records of the Department of the Army reflect that you have stated tha you have never been a member of the Communist party or any Communist organization; that you had not subscribed to the 'Daily Worker,' and that you had never been discharged from any employment. Your statements are in conflict with information received by this Department, as outlined above and as reflected by a reliable report disclosing that you were discharged from employment with the Government Services, Inc. Washington, D. C., on 13 November 1944."

Answer: "It is to me inexplainable that there could be any alleged 'reliable' report that I was discharged from employment with the Government Services, Inc...

"The facts are with respect to the termination of my services with Government Services, Inc., that shortly prior to November 13, 1944, I voluntarily gave up my job. I received a telegram from a supervisor of Government Services, Inc., Mrs. Burns, asking me to return to duty. I returned and continued to work until November 13, 1944.

"I again voluntarily gave up this employmen because it was too strenuous for me as I had to be to work at 6 a. m.

"Because of the fact that I had voluntarily given up this employment, I had difficulty in obtaining my pay. I was also required to wait sixty days before being recertified for employment because of the fact that I had voluntarily given up this job."

The personnel director of Government Services, which operates cafeterias in Government building, A. MacGregor Ayer, told reporters there was nothing in his files to indicate Mrs. Moss was fired in 1944. He said there was a letter making clear she "voluntarily resigned."

Mrs. Moss is a middle-aged woman. Her salary at the time she was suspended from her Army Signal Corps job was $3,335 a year as a supply clerk.

Williston case raises question of rights of Federal workers

Afro American Baltimore, Md

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The case of Mrs. Carol C. Williston, suspended director of medical social service at Freedmen's Hospital, again raises the question of what rights are to be accorded to persons whose suitability for continued federal employment is in question.

Mrs. Williston is presently on trial before a security board of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which has jurisdiction over Freedmen's Hospital.

Sat. 11-27-54

Her trial is perhaps the most crucial event in her life. If the board should find her unsuitable for further employment, her career of 20 years as a medical social worker will be ruined and she will be branded for life as a person unworthy of trust or confidence.

* * *

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to understand how the government can wreck a person's reputation without giving that person the rudiments of a fair trial.

The most serious charge against Mrs. Williston is that she is the wife of Dr. Thomas A. Williston.

Dr. Williston was reported to have been a member of the Communist party. In fact, Mrs. Williston, in answering the charges against her, said that upon questioning her husband about this allegation, that he told her he had given the FBI a statement concerning his membership in the Communist party.

ASSOCIATION WITH an individual found to have belonged to a subversive organization weighs heavily against the accused. This is the technique known as guilt by asssociation. In Mrs. Williston's case it would be guilty by marriage.

Mrs. Williston has answered all of the charges against her fully. Such prominent persons in the community as Dr. Montague Cobb, Dr. Howard Payne, Dr. Charles Prudhomme, and the Rev. Dillard Brown have testified that her character and reputation are excellent and that they have complete confidence in her loyalty.

But the very nature of security proceedings under presidential orders is such that accused federal employees are denied rights which are guaranteed to the vilest criminal.

TECHNICALLY, SHE is not entitled to be confronted with the witness against her since a security hearing is not a criminal trial. But she is on trial for her reputation, her job and her professional standing.

If the board finds that she is unfit for further government employment and its finding is approved by the secretary of health, education, and welfare, she will be branded for life as a person unworthy of trust or confidence.

There is a justifiable deep concern about the possible presence in government employment of persons disloyal to it. The government has every right to take strong measures to get rid of such persons.

* * *

BUT THERE IS also the question of the protection of the rights of individuals. When the government levels its great powers against an individual, it should hold to the standards not only of due process of law in the constitutional sense, but of conduct and procedure prescribed for federal courts.

The case against Miss Dorothy Bailey illustrates how far the government has moved away from constitutional stands.

Miss Bailey was charged with being a Communist and with being active in a Communist front organization. The Loyalty Board' finding against Miss Bailey appears to have rested, in part, on her supposed association with such organizations and on secret unsworn hearsay statements communicated to the board by anonymous informers.

"I DO NOT SEE how the constitutionality of this dragnet system of loyalty trials, which have been entrusted to the adminiment, can be sustained," said Justice William O. Douglas in commenting upon the Bailey case.

"Every government employee must take an oath of loyalty. If he swears falsely, he commits perjury and can be tried in court. In such a trial he gets the full protection of the Bill of Rights, including trial by jury and the presumption of innocence.

"I am inclined to the view that when a disloyalty charge is substituted for perjury and an administrative board substituted for the court 'the spirit and the letter of the Bill of Rights' are offended."

Davis suit attacks federal prison JC

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The United States District Court here was asked Monday to order the attorney general and the director of the Prison Bureau to end racial segregation in federal prisons.

Bal. 12-25-54

Benamin J. Davis Jr., an inmate of the Federal Penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind., filed a petition for a writ of mandamus. Named as defendants in his suit are Attorney General Herbert J. Brownell Jr. and James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons of the Justice Department.

Baltimore

Mr. Davis is a former New York City councilman and was one of the top 11 Communist who were convicted of conspiracy to teach and advocate the forcible overthrow of the Federal Government.

Convicted in 1949 and sentenced to five years in prison, with time off for good behavior, Mr. Davis is due to be freed in March.

THE TERRE HAUTE penitentiary is one of six institutions of its class operated by the Bureau of Prisons. It contains about 1,200 prisoners, about 250 of whom are colored.

In a class suit brought on behalf of himself and other colored prisoners similarly situated, Mr. Davis charges that colored prisoners are segregated from other prisoners in the dormitories, mess halls and at entertainment.

He asks the court to order Mr. Brownell and Mr. Bennett to:

END THE PRACTICE of segregating and classifying prisoners by race or color; end racial segregation in the mess halls and places of entertainment in Federal prisons;

End the practice of providing separate sleeping quarters for colored prisoners, and make available to colored prisoners, without discrimination, all benefits and privileges which are extended to white prisoners for meritorious conduct and exemplary work.

Mr. Davis alleged in his complaint that colored prisoners are confined in cells or dormitories which are located in a section of the penitentiary reserved for colored inmates exclusively.

* * *

SUCH SEGREGATION of colored prisoners, he charged, is a violation of their rights under the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment and of their right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment.

Mr. Davis declares that it is the duty of the attorney general and the director of prisons to abolish racial segregation and discrimination in Federal prisons.

Under the law, he said, attorney general should be required to "promulate rules" governing the prisons in accordance with the Federal Constitution and to "classify the inmates . . . and provide for their proper government."

What Spurs McCarthy -- Pride Or Prejudice?

Voting Record Key To Senator's Race Views

34 d

By ETHEL L. PAYNE
(Defender Washington Correspondent)

If Annie Lee Moss had never lived in the northeast section of Washington, she might never have been caught in the crossfire of a bitter feud between Sen. Joseph McCarthy on a St. George slaying the communists mission and the whole army of the United States.

Last Spring the attention of the whole nation was focused on the hearings by McCarthy's un-American activities committee. Radio microphones, television cameras and regiments of newsmen carried the proceedings to every city, town and hamlet in the nation.

Then appeared Annie Lee Moss, a smallish, gray haired, mild mannered Negro woman who had been working as a code clerk in the signal corps division in the Pentagon.

And facing her, belligerently, it seemed was Sen. McCarthy. Discarding the niceties usually accorded a woman on the witness stand, he subjected her to a brutal cross questioning, the net result of which was to evoke a strong sympathy for her.

Many who recalled reports that the senator came from a town in which Negroes did not or were not permitted to live, immediately gave rise to charges that Mrs. Moss was more the victim of racial prejudice than of Joe McCarthy anti-Communist zeal.

One of the most voluable gentlemen ever to sit in the upper chamber of congress, he was strangely silent though he must have been aware of the rumors.

With the revival of the Annie Lee Moss case, the question of how McCarthy stands on the race question is being raised again.

As it is Annie Lee Moss has staked her reputation as a devout church-going Christian and model citizen denying under oath that she has ever been a member of the Communist party against the insistence of Sen. McCarthy that he has positive proof that she was for several years an active dues-paying, card-carrying member.

If the evidence is made to stand up, Annie Lee Moss faces the serious crime of perjury with maximum imprisonment and fine. If Joe McCarthy is proved wrong in his contentions, he faces loss of face, a fate more horrible for him than ex-communication.

The jittery Army, its nerves worn thin by the ordeal of the Army-McCarthy hearings, recently got panicky and thinking that some of the classified material on Mrs. Moss had fallen into the hands of its arch enemy, released new charges to the press purporting to show the exact number o the membership card of Mrs. Moss in the Communist party and suspended her for the second time from her job in the Pentagon.

For a period of about two weeks in 1943 while she was waiting to get into new quarters, Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, her husband, and child lived with Mrs. Hattie Griffin in the 600 block of Second st., N. E.

Hattie Griffin was later named as a member of the Communist party and it was charged that meetings were held in her home which Mrs. Moss attended.

Mrs. Moss has denied that there were any meetings held while she lived there. She was employed at this time as a cafeteria worker at the Pentagon.

Annie Lee Moss, whose husband died shortly after they had moved, quit her job in the cafeteria in 1944 because she was ill and emotionally upset and the doctor had advised her to get a less strenuous job. The records show that she resigned without any blemish on her record.

She went through a required waiting period and then made application for another civil service post. She was later assigned to the Signal Corps division in the Pentagon as a code clerk.

In 1948, she was subjected to a full field investigation under the loyalty program for Federal employees and was pronounced clear.

Sen. Joseph McCarthy said the Army was coddling known Communists in key sensitive posts and triumphantly produced Annie Lee Moss.

THREE MOSSES

Mrs. Mary Markward, who brought the charges, said that she could not identify Mrs. Moss in person. Added confusion was thrown into the case when it was discovered that there were three Annie Lee Mosses in the Washington telephone directory. One, however, used the first name of Anna instead of Annie.

She denied under oath before the House Un-American Activities committee all of the charges, but when she and her lawyer and her son went before the McCarthy committee, the senator cruelly told her. "If you get up here and say you are not a Communist, you'll be lying and I don't want to send a sick woman to jail" (she was suffering from a severe cold).

This action of condemning an accused person before she could testify in her own defense or face her accusers shocked and outraged the sense of decency of even staunch admirers of Joe McCarthy.

What it did was to create sympathy for Mrs. Moss as an underdog and a victim of circumstances. The press took up her case demanding editorially that she be given the right of any American to a fair hearing with a chance to defend herself.

Later Sen. Symington said "Mrs. Moss I may be sticking my neck out, but I think you've been telling the truth. If the Army won't take you back, you come around to see me and I'll get you a job," the case was locked up for her.

However, Joe wasn't through. Annie Lee Moss went back to the Pentagon not to the same position, but still in the Signal Corps.

WON'T GIVE UP

Joe emitted growls in his heavy monotone that he wasn't through with the Moss case. He had positive proof that she was guilty and in his own good time he would produce it, but meanwhile, the Army McCarthy hearings got under way and pushed the Moss case temporarily into the background while Joe and the Army went on TV trial before the public.

These remarks lead the average person to think that Sen. McCarthy was a rabid Negrophobe like some of his colleagues from the South.

However, an examination of his voting record in Congress does not bear this out. He not only voted for clotore on FEPC bills, but on other major pieces of civil rights legislation, he has been "right."

Mrs. Moss Among Charges Dropped For McCarthy

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — A charge that Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Republican of Wisconsin, had "strongly implied" that Mrs. Annie Lee Moss was a Communist without giving her a chance to testify was one of twenty-three allegations dropped by special Senate Committee Monday in its report on censure charges against McCarthy.

The committee said it had thrown out this charge because Mrs. Moss is presently undergoing a confidential security investigation.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

The charge against McCarthy was made by Senator J. Williams Fulbright, Democrat, of Arkansas, who alleged that in public hearings before the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, of which McCarthy was chairman, strongly implied that Mrs. Moss was known to be a member of the Communist party and that if she testified, she would perjure herself, before he had given her an opportunity to testify in her own behalf.

The Army Security Screening Board recently completed its hearings in the case of Mrs. Moss, a middle-aged woman and special target of McCarthy during his row with Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens.

The hearing was on seven charges outlined by the Army two months ago in suspending Mrs. Moss from her job as a $3,335-a-year clerk in the Signal Corps Supply Center.

This was the second hearing given Mrs. Moss, who denied all of the charges, including a new one that she had been given "Communist party membership book number 37269 for 1943."

The Army first suspended her last February 25 on substantially the same charges. The House Un-American Activities Committee made a thorough investigation of the Moss case at that time, heard Mrs. Moss deny all allegations against her in a closed session, and made no accusations against her.

The Army made its own lengthy investigation and restored Mrs. Moss to her job with back pay, but not to the job she had previously held of feeding coded tape into a machine. Instead, she was put in the supply room.

The findings of the Army Security Screening Board are now before a board of review. What the findings are has not yet been disclosed.

Accuser Fails To Identify Annie Lee Moss As A Red

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss faced her accuser, a former FBI undercover agent, and testified under oath for the third time last week that she had never been a Communist, she had never subscribed to the Daily Worker, and she was a loyal American citizen.

The agent, Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, who had named Mrs. Moss as a former card-carrying Communist, again failed to identify her.

Under cross examination last Monday by Mrs. Moss' attorney, George E. C. Hayes, Mrs. Markward's testimony was described to the Defender as being hazy and uncertain.

The hearings were held in strictest secrecy before a panel composed of representatives of the Army, the Air Force and the Navy.

The Army has charged that Mrs. Moss, a former Signal Corps clerk at the Pentagon, carried a membership card in the Communist party. In addition, she is said to have worked for the political arm of the party and to have paid dues.

Mrs. Markward testified that she had seen the name, Annie Lee Moss, on the party membership rolls and had collected dues. Under cross examination last Monday by Atty. Hayes, the former undercover agent was vague in her testimony. It is known that there are several persons living in Washington by the name of Annie Lee Moss and the defense is contending that this is a case of mistaken identity.

One Annie Lee Moss formerly worked as a chairwoman at the Pentagon. The Army would make no statement, but following the close of the two-day hearings, Mrs. Moss appeared with her attorney, confident and smiling. A verdict is expected within a week.

Mrs. Moss was suspended from her job for the second time three weeks ago. The hearings were the result of a request by her that she be granted a trial and the right to face her accusers.

Several character witnesses appeared for Mrs. Moss. Among them were Rev. Benjamin F. Whiting, pastor of Friendship Baptist church, where Mrs. Moss is a member; Rev. Daniel Tutt, a former minister, who said he had known her for 25 years and had buried close relatives, including her husband and mother; and the former manager of the housing project where she lived in the Northeast section.

MRS. ANNIE LEE MOSS, with her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, manages a faint smile during a recess in the hearings last week of charges that she was once a card-carrying Communist.

COMMUNISTS

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

34 d

WASHINGTON

THE manner in which the Communist Party attempted to use the American Negro, but was rebuffed in turn by the Negro, is the subject of an important confidential report now being prepared by the House committee on Un-American Activities.

"The fact that the Communist Party has experienced so little success in attracting the American Negro to its cause can only reflect favorably on these Americans," states the committee in its preliminary findings.

Going back over the past 25 years, the House Un-American Activities Committee gives in detail various efforts of Moscow to win over the Negro and even set up a "buffer state" south of the Mason and Dixon Line calculated to split the Unite States into two parts.

Instead of winning converts among American Negroes, however, the congressional committee states, the Negro discovered that the Communists deserted him generally, and "even attempted to destroy Negro gains" in employment opportunities when those gains conflicted with the Stalin-Hitler pact.

"The committee cannot stress too strongly that this program (of winning over the Negro) was formulated by the executive committee of the Communist Internationale and not by the American Negro," the report states. "No group member or element of the American Negro in the United States did then or now advocate such a course of action as called for in the Communist line.

"At one time," states the Un-American Activities Committee, "the Communists theorized that American Negroes throughout some 100-odd counties extending from Virginia to the Delta comprised a national minority, and a majority of the population throughout that area." Therefore, the Communist party was directed to "organize the Negroes in that area along the line of a "revolution program" to ally themselves with the workers . . . and to be considered a buffer state . . . under Soviet leadership."

The Communist penetration plan, however, was a miserable failure.

Ex-Communists Testify

The Un-American Activities Committee based its conclusions on the testimony of various Negro ex-Communists. Piecing together their amazing testimony, it is clear that the Negroes' experience with communism has been one of false hopes, machiavellian betrayals, and tragic disappointments.

"Communist leaders," states the committee, "have exploited this demand of Negro liberation when it served their purpose and abandoned it when it was expedient to do so."

"If things are running all right," testified Louis Rosser, another ex-Communist, "the Communist party makes partial demands for the Negroes. If things are going rough and they think the Soviet Union is in danger, the Communist party raises the slogan of rebellion."

Rosser claimed that Negro Communists eventually saw through the Communist scheme of a Negro state as an attempt to "segregate the Negroes once the revolution is had."

Testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee told how the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had defended Negro rights during the war while the Communists refused to support the protests of Negroes being forced to unload ammunition under hazardous conditions at Port Chicago, Calif. There had already been an explosion at this port and courts-martial were threatened. But Communist Leader William Schneiderman dismissed Negro protests by saying:

"What is more important, loading these ships standing in the harbor for the Soviet Union or these 50 men over there who are going to jail?"

"In 1932 the Communist party gathered together a group of reputable young Negro intellectuals and persuaded them to visit the Soviet Union," states the Un-American Activities Committee. "The purpose of this visit was ostensibly to make a motion picture in Russia. The theme was to represent a distorted Russian of Negro life in America, and the movie was to be exhibited in Africa and Asia. Rosser pointed out that this excursion to Russia failed to convert these young American Negroes.

"Instead, some of those who saw Russia as it really is, are among the foremost anti-Communists in America."

SIX OF THE eleven top Reds who bolted in 1951 have been hauled in. Most recent arrests made in the case of the "Missing Eleven" were those of Robert G. Thompson and Sidney Steinberg, who, last December, were apprehended in a rented cabin, 8,000 feet up in a sparsely settled community near Yosemite National Park.

When arrested, Thompson and Steinberg possessed forged credentials and had altered their appearances in an effort to escape apprehension.

FBI Dragnet Still Out

Richmonder Sought Among Top Fugitive Communists

Special to Journal and Guide

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Two of the nation's "most wanted" Communists are Negroes.

They are Henry Winston, an Alabaman by birth, and New Yorker by adoption, and James Edward Jackson, a Richmond, Va. man. Both are among the five remaining fugitive members of what was once the "inner circle" of the Communist Party in America.

WINSTON AND Jackson have been eluding Federal Bureau of Investigation efforts to effect their arrest since early 1951 when the FBI staged its first major crackdown on Reds in the nation. Along with 13 top echelon Reds they were arrested and with nine others released on bail. The entire eleven jumped bail and disappeared.

In the 1951 crackdown, former New York City Alderman Benjamin Davis Jr., was caught. Davis, denied bail and a chance to make a getaway with the eleven, is still serving a prison term after being found guilty of advocating the overthrow of the U. S. government by violence.

Red Bid to Lure Negroes Rejected

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP) — A House un-American activities committee staff report said Tuesday Communists have had "little success" in one of their principal targets, the infiltration and control of the Negro population in the United States.

The staff study, due to be published this week if it wins expected committee approval, dealt with committee inquiries over the past 15 years into Communist activities towards Negroes.

"The fact that the Communist has experienced so little success in attracting the American Negro to its cause," the report said, "can only reflect favorably on the loyalty and integrity of these Americans."

Actually, it said, the work of the Communists "has been one of the greatest deterrents to the cause of the American Negro."

Mrs. Moss Back on Job

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss returned to her Pentagon job with the Army Signal Corps today while a loyalty board continued its review of charges that she was a Communist. The Washington woman was suspended a month ago after a witness before the McCarthy Senate investigations subcommittee testified that she knew Annie Lee Moss as a Communist. Subsequently Mrs. Moss denied the charge under oath before the some committee, and said several other women by the same name live in Washington. Last week the Army announced that she would be returned to her job pending the outcome of the loyalty board's findings. She returned to work today in the signal corps supply room.

Reds' Effort To Snare Negroes Held Defeated

By C. P. TRUSSELL

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—A congressional investigative staff reported today that American Negroes have defeated Moscow plans to capture the minority group for the Communists.

To win perhaps a majority of this country's 15 million Negroes, the staff of the House Un-American Activities Committee stated, the Reds tried to win a majority of them by offering to help them to rise in revolution. Then a separate Communist-ruled state would be set up in the South.

The Negroes, the report brought out, wanted no rebellions and no separate state but held to the goal that is now emerging under law as integration.

NEGRO STATE IN SOUTH

Even while the Communist Internationale carried this "separate state" program to America, starting in 1939—over the head of the Communist party of the United States—the report stated, American Negroes began to see that they were being "betrayed" by the Reds. While the Communists appeared to be wholeheartedly fighting for the Negro, the report contended, the "Negro cause" was tossed overboard where it conflicted with the Red party line.

The report quoted testimony given through years by Negroes who had been Communists and played the Red game until they sensed "betrayal" of their race in a program to employ it as a means to an end.

"Testimony and records . . . establish beyond any doubt," the report said, "That the work of the Communist party has been one of the greatest deterrents to recognition and realization of the legitimate aspirations of the American Negro. In this, as in many fields, the efforts of the Communists have done much to negate the efforts of sincere students and workers who have tried genuinely to cope with the social and economic problems in this field . . .

NEGROES RESIST

"The committee (which gave its full approval to the staff findings) can only conclude that the vast majority of Americans of the Negro race have consistently resisted the blandishments and treacherous promises offered them by the Communist conspirators. The committee hopes that this detailed exposure of the true Communist aims and tactics in relation to the Negro people will serve even further to reduce the extremely limited and temporary Negro support which the Communists have obtained by subterfuge."

ATTY. GEN. HERBERT BROWNELL REPORTS TO THE NATION ON THE FIGHT AGAINST COMMUNISM

Tougher Laws Asked

FBI and Courts Deal Reds Body Blow, Brownell Says

Herald Miami, Fla. Sat. 4-10-54

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell declared Friday night the FBI and the courts already have dealt body blows to Communists on the home front, and he outlined a program to destroy "this threat to our nation's safety."

In a nationwide TV-radio report to the nation on the "fight against communism," he called for such things as:

Laws to weed potential spies or saboteurs out of defense plants; to "eliminate Communist control of any industrial organization or labor union in vital sections of the economy," and provide the death penalty for peacetime espionage.

Nowhere in his speech did Brownell mention Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy or his Red-hunting activities. Whether one aim of the speech was to take the ball away from the controversial Wisconsin Republican was not stated.

But Brownell told his far-flung audience:

"The FBI, the Department of Justice and the courts are your agents in dealing with this Communist conspiracy. All are vigilant in their readiness to meet any move or emergency which the Communist party in America might precipitate."

Picturing American Communist leaders as jittery over the drive against them, Brownell said that when they learned he was to make a speech they "became very concrened."

"In various sections of the the country," he continued, "the underground leaders scattered and have tried to completely disappear for a few days to see what happens."

Paying high tribute to the FBI for ferreting out inner secrets of the Communists, he said that weeks before Moscow disclosed to the world last year that Josef Stalin was ill, the United States government knew it and knew also that Georgi Malenkov would succeed him in the Kremlin.

The attorney general asserted the information was given to him by the FBI in early February, 1953. It was not until March 4 that the Soviet government announced that its dictator was under the care of physicians. Stalin died on March 5.

Brownell told this story by way of reassuring the American public that those charged with United States internal security know a great deal more about the Communists than the Communists think they know.

The attorney general prefaced his Stalin-Malenkov anecdote by saying that "for security reasons I cannot tell you about the great counter-espionage work the FBI is doing today."

Both the Justice Department and the FBI turned aside reporters' inquiries as to how an internal agency like the FBI would know what was happening in the Kremlin, but the implication throughout Brownell's speech was that it came from undercover informants who penetrated the inner circles of the Communist party in this country.

His address was a follow-up to President Eisenhower's telecast of last Monday night. The President discussed "fears and apprehensions" of Americans concerning the Communist threat, the national economy, and the possibility of further wars. Eisenhower said at the time that he was leaving it to his attorney general to detail the work of the FBI in protecting the home-front against enemies.

The Brownell speech was in two parts. One described the steps that have been and are being taken to carry out "the policy of the administration, within the framework of our Constitution and our laws, to strike the Communists at every opportunity—to hit them where it hurts most."

He concluded with the set of recommendations for new laws designed "to destroy by legal, orderly processes the Communist party in this country."

Brownell asserted that infiltration of the Communist party by FBI agents provided a major weapon in anticipating and combating Communist moves.

"The success of the FBI in this regard," he said, "has been so outstanding that the Communist party in this country doesn't know which of its Communist members to trust. I assure you that makes their conspiracy a very hazardous occupation."

RED LIQUIDATION EFFORT?

FBI undercoverman nearly loses life

By LEE BARROW

RICHMOND

Did the Communists try to liquidate Emanuel R. Richardson, FBI undercover agent, to keep him from testifing before the House Un-American Activities subcommittee in Albany?

This is the question being asked here, since it was disclosed that Mr. Richardson, while posing as a Communist for the FBI, came within inches of losing his life in February, when he was stabbed in the side by an unidentified man.

The stabbing occurred while Mr. Richardson was driving a cab for the Manhattan Cab. Co., here.

He Doubts Connection

The short, stocky Richmonder told the AFRO that he doubted if the attack had "any connections with his undercover activities.

Richardson said:

"The Communists didn't know about my double life then. The guy just didn't want to pay his fare.

"After I called the police, he started a fight. I was getting the best of him when another cab came up and distracted my attention. He knifed me and ran."

The other cab driver rushed the injured Mr. Richardson to St. Phillip Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Became Red Leader

On Thursday, Mr. Richardson told a House un-American activities sub-committee meeting at Albany, N.Y., that he joined the Communist party in April, 1951, while studying law at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Rising through the ranks quickly he said, he became co-ordinator of all Marxist groups in the Ithaca area. Later he was promoted to chairman of the party's central committee for Ithaca and Trumansburg in upstate New York, he declared.

Discloses FBI Connections

Sitting in the quiet of his own home, Mr. Richardson told why he decided to become an undercover agent:

"They (the Communists) kept after me to join their group. They seemed to think that because I was the only colored person in the law school, they could use me. "I hate for anyone to try to use me.

"I wrote the FBI and they sent some agents to see me. At their suggestion, I joined the party.

Assuages Suspicion

"Once the Reds became suspicious that I was betraying them, but I was able to assuage their doubts. I guess they just couldn't believe that a colored person could put something over on them."

ROSS RICHARDSON

Mr. Richardson left Cornell last June. He began driving for Manhattan Cab Co., on June 19 and worked for the company until two weeks ago, when he quit to bone up for next June's Virginia State bar examination.

Kept Secret From Friends

Fellow cab driver Nicholas Pierce described him as a "Likeable fellow. You never would have guessed he was an undercover agent," Pierce added, "he never let it slip."

Single and not engaged, Emanuel Richardson is the youngest of eight children.

The "ex-Communist for the FBI" lives with his mother, Mrs. Lelia Richardson, at 2921 Midlothian Pike. He hopes to practice law "somewhere in Virginia."

Asked if he feared vengeance, Mr. Richardson replied: "I know the Communists were shocked and hurt by my testimony, but I doubt if they'll try to get even with me."

Mr. Richardson first named the members before a secret session of the un-American Activities subcommittee on March 22 in Washington. The public hearing in Albany was held by Representative Scherer (Rep., Ohio).

FERDINAND SMITH SPREADS TERROR IN KINGSTON WHEN HE DEFIES "NO MARCHING" ORDERS

Communists Threaten to Do Bodily Harm to Jamaica's Chief Minister Bustamente

REVOLUTIONARY SPIRIT FLARES IN STREETS

(By Wilbert E. Hemming)

KINGSTON, Jamaica — (ANP) — Communist Ferdinand Smith, nearly threw the city of Kingston into a turmoil when his unemployed Workers' Council, defied police no-marching orders and started to demonstrate through various points of the metropolis.

Shortly afterwards, armed police foiled the march and arrested four of Smith's henchmen, Jamaica's Chief Minsters Alexander Bustamante cried out that his car was stopped on North Street highway by a group of communist sympathizers, who threatened to get rid of him.

At about 8:30 p.m. Bustamante reported his car was signalled to a stop.

"Then two men came up to the car and said," reported Bustamante, 'It is you that prevented us from marching today.' We are going to get rid of you.' I asked them when. No reply came. Then one of the men said, 'We are going to keep public meetings right at your doorstep.' One of the men later said, 'We have a plan to get rid of you.'"

Defiantly, Bustamante spoke out loudly: "For the benefit of those who want to get rid of me, my address is 24 Tucker avenue near Mountain View avenue, and my cars are well known to them. But they should make sure that any attack made on my life is successful—by the first dagger or shot—otherwise I will be confronting them."

Smith formed the Jamaica Unemployed Workers' Council because he could gain large following by in Jamaica being sadly paralyzed with unemployment. The JUWC had given several days' notice of its proposal to demonstrate through the city and upset business and traffic if possible. But hardly anybody in the Government took any serious notice of the threat even though night mass meetings spoke about it. So complacent was constituted authority that the police actually issued to the JUWC, a permit to march.

Realizing that it was a communist organization to which it issued the permit, the police department quickly cancelled it. But the JUWC followers were in ugly need; they tactfully changed their itinerary and split up into groups. When they started to march, police had to halt the procession by threatening to knock out the leaders with tear gas.

McCarthy Resigns Self to Lynching

Washington, Nev. 7 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy [R., Wis.] voiced doubt today that leaders of his own party will vote to censure him when the senate returns tomorrow for an extraordinary session to take up the charges against him.

He renewed his prediction, however, that the censure move will carry, saying his opponents have "plenty of votes" lined up. But, denouncing the whole proceeding as "a lynching party," he declared:

"I don't think the Republican leadership is going to go along with this." He added, however, he has no "commitment" to this effect from G. O. P. Senate Leader Knowland [Cal.] or other Republicans.

Too Late on Red Issue

The Wisconsin senator gave his views in a televised interview on the eve of the senate's resuming its 1954 session to consider a special committee recommendation that he be censured on three counts of conduct unbecoming a senator.

He said he would make public his financial affairs only if somebody produced "any evidence of wrong doing on my part," and if at the same time all other senators bare their finances, too.

"There'll be no rule that applies to McCarthy only," he said.

McCarthy said he thought the Republicans would have done better in last week's election if they had hit hard earlier on the communist issue—or, as he put it, on "the infiltration of Communists" into government under Democratic administrations.

Won't Reveal Informants

He said, speaking of President Eisenhower, he was "rather surprised to find our good President for the most part avoiding" this issue in the campaign, tho he said Vice President Nixon in the final weeks of campaigining "did a good job" of stressing the communist question.

For his own part, McCarthy said he will not turn over the names of any of his confidential informants to the Democrats when they take over the chairmanship of senate committees—including his permanent investigations subcommittee—next January.

McCarthy said with a laugh that he doesn't propose to "strip the files."

America's Hidden Heroes, No. 4—

U. S. Reds Hit Back At FBI's Undercover Aaents

BY DOUGLAS LARSEN
For The Post-Herald

WASHINGTON—A handful of U. S. citizens who joined the Communist Party in various cities to report on its activities to the FBI have made a vital contribution to breaking the back of the party's treasonous activities in America, according to FBI Directir J. Edgar Hoover.

These persons have received numerous national awards for outstanding patriotism and have been acclaimed widely as heroes.

At the same time, Hoover warns that the Communist menace in the U. S. is far from ended. Proof of the truth of this warning is the shocking effectiveness with which the party has been able to strike back at the FBI's former undercover workers.

The party's motive is two-fold: Revenge, and the need to discredit the credibility of the group against possible future testimony they might give.

One of the most unfortunate victims is William G. Cummings, a Toledo Negro who is considered one of the most effective witnesses of the group against the party by the Justice Department. He infiltrated the party to its top echelon in Ohio, traveled all over the country in party work and became intimately acquainted with the top Reds in the U. S. and their activities.

Facts Stand Up

His testimony in more than a half-dozen Smith Act trials around the country has been of great help in sending many of the top Commies to jail. Not one shred of the information he has supplied has been proved wrong, Justice attorneys claim, and his facts have stood up under the withering cross-examination of Communist attorneys.

Yet today Bill Cummings is beset by numerous personal and financial woes, due exclusively he contends, to Communist Party retaliation.

He has been dropped from his regular job as a skilled machine operator and barely is able to keep his large family eating and clothed, thanks to part-time consultant work the Department of Justice has given him.

A great many of the Negroes in the neighborhood he lives in have been turned against him, his family and the handful of friends who have remained loyal to him, through whispered hate campaigns.

In a stinging pronouncement he publicly was thrown out of the church in which he had been a faithful member for many years. Just after his undercover role was revealed, the city council tried to give him a public commendation for his contribution to the security of America. But it was killed by a bitter attack on his character which got widest circulation in Toledo.

Has Received Awards

He has received awards from a Toledo business group and the Toledo Municipal League, however.

Cummings, a giant of a man who looks amazingly young for his 43 years, is astonishingly good-natured about his plight. "Just gotta roll with the punches," he says. "I've made an awful lot of good friends through this work, and that's worth plenty," he adds.

He's most upset about his 18-year-old son, William Jr., who is attending Ohio State University. He is an outstanding athlete who made the freshman football team last Fall and is a sure bet for the varsity. Cummings is having a desperate time keeping the boy in school and feels some left-wing influence somewhere is keeping him from getting the financial help afforded most college athletes of his son's caliber.

Cummings insists his being out of his regular job has nothing to do with any left-wing influence, however. "I'm temporarily laid off because of business conditions and my lack of seniority in the union."

For his work for the FBI on the West Coast, Norman Lloyd Hamlin received "The Book of Golden Deeds" award from San Diego Exchange Club. Hamlin says of Communist retaliation:

"CP leaders work through their dupes who are many times well-to-do persons in the various communities. These are whispering campaigns and propaganda drives more successful than any direct physical violence could be."

Career Given Up

Marlene Kowall, now trying to begin life anew on the West Coast after giving up a promising modeling and dancing career to join the party in New York, is finding the going very difficult. Her work for the government was revealed only recently.

"I never had any doubt about the trouble I was in for," she says. "While I was in the party I heard them boast many times that they could prevent party enemies from rising to better positions in all organizations, from show business to the teaching fields."

Louis Budenz, the well-known ex-Communist who has done so much to help build a legal case against the Communist Party, doesn't fit the category of the others in this survey, but he is subject to the same smear campaigns. He says:

"The insidious aspect of this attack is the way they get seemingly respectable, non-Communists to carry the burden of attack against you."

WILLIAM G. CUMMINGS and family read a letter from son in Japan. "I jus gotta roll with the punches," he says.

The Witch Trial At New Orleans,

By Columnist Allen Rankin
Alabama Journal

Incredible is the word for the so-called "Communist hearings" in New Orleans last week.

Incredible is the word for this witch-trial and inquisition inflicted on three Montgomery (and incidentally, American) citizens in the name of "democracy."

Last week we saw the amazing spectacle of a U. S. Senator, James Eastland, of Mississippi, allowed to try by inconveniencing, brow-beating, and humiliating Alabama and it citizens in the name of "communism."

To his Senate Internal Security subcommittee, "investigating communism," Eastland summoned three Montgomerians: Aubrey Williams, publisher; Clifford J. Durr, former Federal Communications Commissioner, and his wife, Virginia Foster Durr.

Eastland admitted to a newsman: "I don't think either of the Durrs or Williams are Communists."

Yet these people were summoned to New Orleans for a tragifarce which purported to be a Senate probe into "alleged Communist influence in the Southern Conference Education Fund."

They were accused and insulted and browbeaten.

Undoubtedly many ignorant and unthinking people were made to suspect that these three Montgomerians were the more "Communistic" because they were called to this hearing and attempts were made to place them in an unfavorable spotlight. Certainly they were not more "Communistic" for this reason.

"We repeated: Senator Eastland himself admits that he doesn't think any of the Durrs are Communists.

PROFESSIONAL ACCUSER

Yet Mrs. Durr was allowed to be internationally insulted by an unsavory professional accuser, Paul Crouch, a self-admitted ex-commie who openly boasts that he was a top Communist for 17 years devoted to the overthrow of the U. S. government by force and violence.

This was the kind of man who was allowed to "testify" against and flagrantly insult a Montgomery lady and free-speaking American, as yet proved guilty of nothing, but voicing her beliefs.

This was the kind of man Cliff Durr, his patience and nerves hounded ragged, flung himself upon while shouting: "You son of a bitch, talk about my wife like that and I'll kill you."

No one can editorially condone this kind of violence. But one can understand how it can become the natural result of indignation and rage against such obviously unAmerican persecution as that inflicted on the Durrs at the New Orleans "trial."

Cliff Durr suffered a "heart condition" as the result of his furious outburst. He had to be taken off to the hospital. If he had died of a heart attack, methods as unfair and un-democratic as those used by the high lord executioners of the Spanish Inquisition would have killed him. To the extent that Mr. Durr is now hurt hunting and citizen-baiting a true "investigation of communism in any sense?"

It is not.

The U. S. Constitution provides a very effective system of law courts for the trial of any U. S. citizen dangerous to his fellows or his country. The Smith Act further authorizes the trial of any suspected Communist in our established law courts.

Why, then are citizens allowed to be embarrassed and humiliated in extra-legal "courts" that function mainly for the political glory or vainglory of such demagogues as Senator Eastland?

Eastland and McCarthy are not "trying" their "victims" for communism. They are trying them for the same thing the Spanish Inquisition tried them for—heresay—for disagreeing with them.

It is no news to recall that the U. S. Constitution guarantees freedom of thought and expression. Lamentable, we have of late developed a band of witch-hunters who, nonetheless, are allowed to "try" and harrass their fellow Americans to place themselves, the accusers, in the political spotlight.

We believe and hope that demagogues who try to capitalize on such persecution as this are on the way out.

Nine reporters who covered the New Orleans "trials" informally voted that the trials themselves were a greater threat to our American system than anyone who was or could be on trial under such circumstances.

Did they have a right to "try" these judges? As much right as these "judges" had to try those before them.

Fortunately, the U. S. courts so far have consistently "acquitted" all Americans accused simply of speaking their own opinions. The local courts do not convict Americans for heresy. This is the startling privilege only of political demagogues.

Ben Davis' Friends Plan Tribute To Him In New York

New York—Mrs. Modjesca Simpkins, South Carolina civic and political leader will be one of the principal speakers next June 29 (Tues.) in a public tribute to former City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, it was announced this week by the Ben Davis "Freedom Committee." The committee is composed of friends and neighbors of Mr. Davis.

Mrs. Simpkins, who recently became the editor of the Columbia Lighthouse and Informer, a weekly paper, will join Paul Robeson in honoring Mr. Davis with whose family she has been a friend since he was a child in Atlanta. The South Carolina leader is making the trip to New York solely for the purpose of participating in the tribute.

Spokesmen for the committee said that the June 29 tribute to Mr. Davis will be the first step to win his freedom. Davis is now serving the third year of a five-year federal prison term in Terre Haute, Indiana as one of the first 11 victims jailed under the Smith Act. Mr. Davis' father Benj. J. Davis was for years the Republican National Committee man in Georgia, where Ben Davis received his early education.

He was twice elected from Harlem to the City Council where he functioned for six years as one of the two Communist members of that body. He was arrested and indicted in 1948 while serving his second term in office.

In addition to Mr. Robeson and Mrs. Simpkins, The Rev. Edward D. McGowan will also participate in the tribute. Miss Beulah Richardson will read a poem about Ben Davis written by her for the occasion.

The tribute will be held at the United Mutual Auditorium, 310 Lenox Avenue, New York City.

Mrs. Moss denies seeing Red book

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, suspended again by the Army, emphatically denied to the AFRO Friday that she has ever seen a Communist membership book bearing her name.

It was this book which her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, contends is the only new "information" which the Army has said caused her second suspension.

The new charges, filed by the Army's Security Screening Board, alleged that Mrs. Moss was "reported to have been given Communist Party membership book No. 37,269 for 1943."

MR. HAYES, who made public the new charges, said he and his client would "welcome" wide open hearings on charges first made by Senator McCarthy that she was a security risk.

Mrs. Moss, following her first suspension, last February 25, swore before McCarthy's subcommittee that she had never been a Communist.

Under the rules of her second suspension, Mrs. Moss has been given 30 days to answer the charges during a security board hearing.

—o O o—

THE MOSS case was revived by McCarthy's friend, Sen. Herman Welker (Rep., Idaho) during the Senate debate over the proposed censure of the junior Senator from Wisconsin.

Welker spoke after Majority Leader William F. Knowland had offered a motion to appoint a bipartisan committee to investigate the improper conduct of Senator McCarthy.

—o O o—

THE MOTION offered by Senator Knowland, with strong bipartisan backing, was adopted by a vote of 75 to 12.

A committee of three Republicans and three Democrats, chosen by Vice President Richard M. Nixon, was instructed to report back to the Senate before adjournment of the present session of congress

Members of the committee are Senators Arthur V. Watkins, Utah; Frank Carson, Kansas, and Francis Case, South Dakota, all Republicans; Edwin C. Johnson, Colorado; John C. Stennis, Mississippi, and Samuel J. Ervin Jr., North Carolina, Democrats. Vice President Nixon will serve as the seventh member.

Under the Knowland motion, the committee will consider not only the resolution of Senator Flanders, calling for censure of Senator McCarthy, but also specific charges introduced as amendments by Sens. J. William Fulbright (Dem., Ark.,) and Wayne Morse (Ind., Ore.)

—o O o—

THE SPECIFICATION concerning Mrs. Moss, a Department of the Army employee, is contained in the Fubright specifications, which, along with Senator Morse's specifications, were introduced to support Senator Flanders' contention that Senator McCarthy's conduct has been "unbecoming" to the Senate and tends to bring it into "disrepute."

Since the committee is authorized to hold hearings, the whole Moss case may be publicly aired again.

THE FULBRIGHT specifications concerning Mrs. Moss charge that Senator McCarthy, chairman of the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee, "strongly implied" before the committee that Mrs. Moss "was known to be a member of the Communist Party and that if she testified she would perjure herself, before he (McCarthy) had given her an opportunity to testify in her own behalf."

—o O o—

DEFENDING McCARTHY against this charge, Senator Welker said he did not see how the Wisconsin senator could be censured for his questioning of Mrs. Moss since she had been positively identified by Mrs. Mary S. Markward, who joined the Communist Party of the District of Columbia as an undercover informant for the FBI, and since another Annie Lee Moss had never lived in the northeast section and was not similar in physical makeup or height.

Sen. John F. Kennedy (Dem., Mass.), whose brother, Robert F. Kennedy, is chief counsel for the Democratic members of the McCarthy committee, shared Senator Welker's opinion on the censuring of Senator McCarthy on the Moss specification Senator Kennedy, however, corrected Senator Welker's statement that Mrs. Markward had personally identified Mrs. Moss.

Senator Welker said Mrs. Mos was the subject of a full field investigation by the FBI in 1948 under the federal employees loyalty program.

Mrs. Moss began work with the Army Signal Corps at the Pentagon Dec. 18, 1950. She worked in the communications agency. She was a teletype operator and her job was to receive or transmit messages in code or clear text.

—o O o—

SHE WAS SUSPENDED from her job last Feb. 25, after Senator McCarthy had begun his investigation of subversion and espionage in the Army Signal Corps. After she appeared before the McCarthy Committee and denied that she had ever been a Communist, she was restored to her job but given a less sensitive assignment.

Senator Welker said in the debate that Mrs. Moss was suspended because of information the Army received that she was "an active member of the Communist Party in the District of Columbia from 1943 to 1948" and had been assigned at different times to the northeast branch and the Frederick Douglass branch of that party and had subscribed to the Daily Worker in 1945.

—o O o—

THE ARMY also had information, Senator Welker said, that she was a member of the Communist Political Association here in 1944 and 1945.

He added that she was restored to her job after a loyalty hearing in which "no witnesses were called to corroborate or substantiate the derogatory information against her."

Senator Welker apparently obtained his information second-handed. He said he was informed it came from the House Un-American Activities Committee.

—o O o—

"I HAVE ALL the sympathy in the world for any person who gets sucked into the Communist conspiracy," he said. "I hope and pray that whatever the end result is, Annie Lee Moss will be repentant, and that she will be a loyal and good American citizen from this time forward."

Senator Welker praised Mrs. Markward highly. He said the ex-FBI informant had testified that she had received dues from "one Annie Lee Moss," and that he did not believe Mrs. Markward "would lie for any person or persons."

The Idaho senator pointed out that in the telephone book—again he was informed—there are two persons by the same name—one Annie and the other Anna Lee Moss.

—o O o—

HE SAID AN investigation of "Anna Lee Moss" had shown that she had never had a job such as the one described by the Civil Service Commission as having been held by Mrs. Moss.

"Anna Lee Moss," he continued, had never been investigated by the FBI or had a loyalty hearing.

Senator Welker said he was informed that Mrs. Moss was born in Chester, S.C., Aug. 9, 1905, that she lived at 525½ Second St., NE, in 1943, and that for a short time she lived in the 600 block of Second St., NE, at the home of Hattie Griffin, who had been identified as a Communist Party member by Mrs. Markward.

Mrs. Moss testified, he said, that she was employed as a cafeteria worker in the Pentagon from 1942 to 1944.

—o O o—

WHEN MRS. Moss appeared before the McCarthy committee last March 11, Senator McCarthy told her at the outset that she was not there because she was considered important in the QUESTIONED BY Roy Cohn, who recently resigned as chief counsel of the McCarthy committee while under fire for attempting to use undue influence with the Army in behalf of David Schine, a committee employee drafted into the Army, Mrs. Moss denied that she had ever been a member of the Northeast Club of the Communist Party, or had ever seen a Communist card.

She also denied that she had ever attended any Communist meeting or had subscribed to the Daily Worker.

In examining her about Bob Hall, who was a correspondent here for the Daily Worker, both she and Mr. Cohn became thoroughly confused. Mr. Hall, the Daily Worker correspondent, is white. Mrs. Moss was talking about a Robert Hall, a cafeteria workers' union official, who is even worked for a short long time and had even began work for the Elite Laundry for counting Office period of time. She began to that, she had been a Communist and was a cafeteria worker at the General Accounting Office at the General Accounting Office in 1945. Prior to that, she had been assigned to the Army, Mrs. Moss was asked, she had been a cafeteria worker, how receive messages from you were suddenly shifted from the code room to the handled coded messages than to transmit or receive them. She also denied that she had ever been in the code room in her life.

She denied that she had ever been a correspondent for the Daily Worker, Mr. Cohn became confused. Mr. Hall, the Daily Worker correspondent, is white. Mrs. Moss was talking about a Robert Hall, a cafeteria workers' union official, who is colored.

"Did you know that Mr. Hall was a Communist?" Sen. Karl Mundt (Rep., S.D.), who presided over the Army-McCarthy-Stevens hearings, asked.

— o O o —

"NO, SIR," replied Mrs. Moss. "I never had heard of communism until 1948."

BORN IN CHESTER, S.C., Mrs. Moss moved to Salisbury, N.C., where she lived until she was "a good-sized girl." She attended school in both Carolinas but never finished high school.

Mrs. Moss said the only organization she had joined while living in northeast was the union after she started working in government cafeterias, Dec. 30, 1943. Union dues were deducted from her pay check, she testified.

Sen. John L. McClellan (Dem., Ark.), had Mrs. Moss describe her duties with the Army Signal Corps.

"WHILE I AM opposed to any Communist being in government, it has not been established to my satisfaction that this woman is a Communist," declared Senator McClellan.

The Arkansas senator commented that he noted that Mrs. Moss' salary was only $3,300 a year, "which is a very low salary, I think, for any responsible position."

— o O o —

SHE TESTIFIED that there was no way in the world for her to know the contents of the messages she handled and that her job was merely a mechanical process of getting them moving to their proper destination.

She said she got her job with the Army as the result of a Civil Service examination and got the job on the basis of her qualifications and Civil Service status.

"Did you ever hear of Karl Marx," Sen. Stuart Symington (Dem., Mo.),asked.

"WHO IS THAT?" Mrs. Moss asked.

"I will pass the question," remarked Senator Symington.

Senator Symington later told Mrs. Moss that he had been listening to her testify and he believed she was telling the truth.

"If Mrs. Annie Lee Moss is called to testify before the special Senate Committee, we will be prepared," George E. C. Hayes, her attorney.

9 Red Leaders Convicted; Smith Act Total Now at 81

By The United Press

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13.—Nine regional Communist party leaders were found guilty in Federal District Court today of conspiring to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the United States government.

A jury of seven women and five men, deliberating nine hours, convicted the defendants of violating the Smith act of 1940. The verdict was reached after a fifty-one-day trial, longest ever held in the United States District Court here.

All nine defendants face individual penalties of five years imprisonment and/or $10,000 fine.

The nine convictions brought to eighty-one the total throughout the nation of conviction under the Smith act.

There was no display of emotion when the verdict was announced nor when each juror was polled individually on each defendant and the word "guilty" was uttered 108 times. After court was dismissed, the defendants sat in a group and smiled for photographers, but refused to talk to newsmen.

Defense attorneys Thomas D. McBride and Joseph Lord moved for a directed verdict of acquittal or a new trial. Judge J. Cullen Ganey said he would consider both motions at arguments on Sept. 2. He has the power to set aside the jury's verdict.

The jurors began deliberating at 2 p. m. yesterday and at 9:30 p. m. were locked up for the night in a hotel adjoining the Federal Building. United States Marshals imposed a news blackout so the jurors would not learn of the Senate's vote yesterday to outlaw the Communist party.

Deliberations resumed at 9 a. m. today and the verdict was reached at 11:45 a. m. There was a forty-five minute delay in announcement of the verdict to enable an ill defendant, Walter Lowenfels, fifty-six, to travel from home to the courtroom.

Besides Lowenfels, former Pennsylvania editor of "The Daily Worker," the defendants were Joseph Kuzma, forty-one, whom the Federal Bureau of Investigation described as trade union secretary for the party in eastern Pennsylvania; Sherman Labovitz, twenty-nine; Thomas Nabried, fifty-one; Benjamin Weiss, thirty-nine; Irvin Katz, thirty-five; Robert Klonsky, thirty-five; David Davis, forty-six, and Samuel Gobeloff, forty-four.

Kuzma and Klonsky have been free in $20,000 bail each, while the others have been free in $10,000 bail each. When the verdict was announced, United States Attorney W. Wilson White asked Judge Ganey to set higher bail and to impose sentence immediately. He denied both requests.

Charge 'Frame-up'

Immediately after the verdict was announced, the Pennsylvania Civil Rights Congress charged the trial was a "frame-up" engineered by the Department of Justice, "whose galaxy of paid stool pigeons wove the lies around which the frame-up was built."

In a prepared press release handed out in the courtroom corridor, the organization charged Judge Ganey was "a biased judge who violated the very rules of criminal procedure that govern his court."

Judge Ganey, in his charge to the jury, said the trial was of great importance to the defendants and to the nation "because the charge made against the defendants strikes directly at the heart and vitals of sovereignty as well as the orderly process of change provided within the Constitution of the United States."

All nine men, leaders of the party in eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware, were arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation last summer.

The Line Has Vanished

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, the Pentagon clerk, who for the fifth time was forced to undergo a security "trial" recently, is still under suspension.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, queried by newsmen, commented, "We ought to make up our minds about that poor woman."

We think Mr. Wilson's observation is one of the prime understatements of the year.

Five times was Mrs. Moss put through the ordeal and stigma of suspected disloyalty. Four times have the Communist-hunting bloodhounds, including Senator McCarthy, been forced to back down.

Only one witness was called at the last hearing. She was Mrs. Mary S. Markward, the ex-FBI undercover agent, who previously had testified that she could not identify Mrs. Moss as the woman by that name seen at a Communist meeting.

Mrs. Moss has never pleaded the Fifth Amendment. Nor has she ever given evasive answers to the hundreds of questions propounded by congressional investigators.

She has stoutly and consistently denied under oath that she is now or ever has been a member of the Communist party.

With thousands of agents available to dig it up if any existed, no evidence has thus far been produced by the Government to disprove the truth of her denial.

The line of demarcation between prosecution and persecution often becomes extremely thin. It appears to have completely vanished in the shameful case of Annie Lee Moss.

SPIRIT OF SOUTH SPARKS HEARING

Communism and T.V.A. Also Tangle a House Inquiry on Education Program

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 (AP)—Communism, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the martial spirit of Southerners got tangled up today in a Congressional inquiry into military education.

It started when Representative Ralph W. Gwinn, Republican of Bronxville, chairman of a House Education and Labor subcommittee, asked what the armed forces taught in the way of constitutional government to "offset" orientation letctures on communism.

Before it ended, there was a suggestion that a soldier improperly indoctrinated might shoot by mistake someone in the Tennessee Valley as a Communist.

Maj. Gen. Harlan N. Harkness, chief of the Defense Department's Office of Information and Education, testified that pamphlets had been issued to explain communism to service men and that an eight-part booklet series also was going to press.

General Describes system

Mr. Gwinn asked how General Harkness would answer service men who thought the Government should furnish housing, public power and subsidies.

The general replied that service men were taught that in Russia the government was everything and the individual nothing.

They are also reminded, he said, that in the United States the people make the decisions, while in Russia it is a "bureaucrat at tht top" who decides.

"You'd have a hard time getting me pepped up to go to war" with that explanation, Mr. Gwinn said.

He asked how General Harkness would explain that "the state is everything down in the Tennessee Valley in terms of power."

Representative Phil M. Landrum, Democrat of Georgia, asserted that "it is pretty hard to give a young man a gun and tell him to shoot a Communist if he doesn't know what a Communist is."

Smiling, Representative Gwinn said, "he might turn around and shoot someone in the Tennessee Valley."

Question of 'Will to Fight'

Representative Carl Elliott, Democrat of Alabama, asked General Harkness if he found "any less will to fight" below the Mason-Dixon Line than anywhere else.

General Harkness said he came from the South himself and had found "no less desire to fight on the part of Southerners than anyone else."

Mr. Gwinn explained he was trying to show "the danger of the Government itself becoming the source of education and information."

The subcommittee is studying the extent and cost of educational activities in various branches of Government and has produced figures showing an annual expenditure of $3,500,000,000.

General Harkness put the cost of the Defense Department's information and education program, exclusive of independent spending by the separate services, at around $6,00,000 a year. He estimated total educational costs for all the armed forces at around $30,000,000.

Use of New Immunity Law In Probe Urged by Walter

Post-Times Herald
Thur. 11-18-54

Associated Press

Representative Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.) proposed yesterday that the House Un-American Activities Committee use the new immunity law in the case of a witness who invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions.

Rep. Kit Clardy (R-Mich.), acting chairman at the time, promptly ordered Committee lawyers to lay the groundwork for use of the new statute.

The law, which was approved by President Eisenhower on August 20, provides for United States District Courts to grant immunity from prosecution for witnesses who agree to testify about subversion after originally claiming such testimony would be self-incriminating.

It will be necessary for the Committee to get a two-thirds vote of its nine members before the Attorney General will be asked to seek the immunity grant.

Washington, D.C.

Walter called for the new statute to be used in the case of James A. Coleman, who refused to tell the Committee whether he now lives in Flint, Mich., or when he went to the automotive center from Philadelphia following his discharge from military service in 1946.

Coleman was called in a hearing on Communist activity in Michigan automobile manufacturing centers.

Coleman sought to amplify his response to questions by reading a statement in which he accused the Committee of anti-Negro discrimination.

"That is a vicious falsehood," asserted Walter, who moved that the witness' statement be stricken.

Negro Revolt Given As Goal Of Commies

Republic In South Aim, Witness Says

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 3 (AP)—A former Communist who said he was trained "in the science of rebellion and civil war" testified today that the Communists plan strife leading to a Negro republic in the South.

Sun. 12-4-54

Manning Johnson of New York City, who said he served the Communists in different capacities in Buffalo, N. Y., from 1930 until 1940, was a key witness on the fifth day of Newspaperman Carl Braden's sedition trial.

Braden, his wife and four other white persons are charged with advocating sedition as the outgrowth of a dynamiting that nearly destroyed a Negro's home in a white neighborhood last June. The Bradens bought the house and transferred the deed to the Negro, Andrew Wade IV.

Johnson said the positions he held in Communist work included that of a national Negro organizer.

Asked to outline the party's program on the Negro question, he said it called for organizing Negroes in the "black belt" from the eastern shore of Maryland on a line zigzagging across the Confederate States with a wedge into Texas for the purpose of forming a Negro republic.

The republic would have its own army, police and government, he said, adding:

"All land will be seized from the white landowners together with mills, factories, railroads and made the property of the state. The state formed through the fire of rebellion will have the right to secede from the rest of the country and have its own diplomatic relations with other countries."

He said all state and local government officials would be arrested and "liquidated."

Asked what methods were taught to incite rebellion between black and white races, Johnson said:

"We were taught to stir up situations that would provoke acts of voilence."

COMMUNISTS

Claude Lightfoot in Custody

Chicago's Top 'Red' Arrested

CHICAGO—(INS)—Federal agents Saturday arrested a 44-year-old man who has admitted being the Communist party organizer of Chicago's South Side district.

The FBI identified the man as Claude Mack Lightfoot who has been charged with being a member of the Communist party.

Lightfoot, an admitted member of the Communist Party's National Committee and the educational director of the Illinois Communist party, was arrested by Federal agents this week after they learned of his whereabouts.

THE FBI said that Lightfoot had previously testified before a House of Representatives Committee on April 11, 1940, that, as of that time, he had been a Communist party member for nine years.

He also admitted being educational director of the Communist party in Illinois and state chairman of the Young Communist League.

Lightfoot attended the sixth Congress of the International Communist League in Moscow in 1935 and was named an alternate member of the World Educational Committee of the Young Communist International.

IN 1951, Lightfoot appeared before the Illinois State Legislature as chief spokesman of the Communist party for the state. At that time, he refused to answer a question on which side he would fight in the event of a war with Russia.

Records show that Lightfoot was in the Army April 10, 1942, until November, 1945. He received an honorable discharge. He was married in 1936 and divorced in 1937. He remarried in 1939.

Lightfoot will be arraigned Monday in Chicago's Federal District Court.

LIGHTFOOT WAS seized on a Federal warrant.

The warrant charged Lightfoot with membership in the Communist party, "a society, group and assembly of persons which advocated the violent overthrow of the Government of the United States."

Lightfoot assumed leadership of the Communist party in Illinois in 1949, after former leader Gilbert Green was convicted in New York of conspiracy to advocated violent overthrow of the Government, and was fined $10,000 and sentenced to five years in prison. Green reportedly fled to Guatemala.

LIGHTFOOT APPEARED before a committee of the Illinois State Legislature in 1951, where he identified himself as executive secretary of the Communist party of Illinois and a member of the National Committee of the Communist party.

MRS. ANNIE LEE MOSS
. . . stung by the controversy

Joe challenged to prove case against matron

G. Hayes, lawyer for Mrs. Moss dares Wisconsin Senator to bring up charges in hearing again

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) had a challenge, this week, to renew his Communist charges against Mrs. Annie Lee Moss—if he dares.

Although the Senator publicly accused Mrs. Moss of Communist affiliations a few months back, he walked out on the session during which she flatly denied the accusations.

He also has not since given her the opportunity to face an allegedly "corroborating" witness whose identity has been kept under wraps by the investigating sub-committee which he heads.

The challenge to the Senator from Wisconsin came in a statement by Mrs. Moss' attorney, George E. C. Hayes of Washington, when the AFRO queried Mr. Hayes about references to Mrs. Moss by Columnist Walter Winchell in a radio broadcast last Sunday night.

'We Are Ready,' Says Hayes

In the broadcast, Mr. Winchell quoted Roy Cohn, counsel for the McCarthy subcommittee, as saying that he could "prove the (Moss) case, if they'll let me." Mr. Hayes commented:

"If he has any testimony, we are prepared, waiting and ready for him to produce it."

"I am equally certain that she is not a Communist and never has been.

"I am as satisfied as a person can be, who is in a representative capacity for someone, that there is absolutely no correctness in their position claiming her to be a Communist.

"It is unfair for them to say what they are in a position to prove rather than having the hearing and attempting to prove."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Moss was back on her job at the Pentagon where was reinstated late in March after being suspended for 30 days.

McCarthy Departed

Her suspension from her job as a supply clerk in the Signal Corps came after Senator McCarthy criticized the Army for failing to fire Mrs. Moss, following Communist allegations made against her by an informer for his subcommittee.

Later, in a public sub-committee hearing, Senator McCarthy departed from the Senate hearing room as Mrs. Moss steadfastly denied any Communist affiliations.

Her testimony was so convincing that Sen. Stuart Symington (D., Mo.) told her he believed her and that if she did not get back her Army position he would help her get a job.

It was at the close of Mrs. Moss' testimony refuting the charges made against her that Mr. Cohn mentioned "corroboration" of the charges by an unnamed witness in executive session.

This brought from Sen. John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) a denunciation of the "convicting of people by rumor, hearsay and innuendo." He said that Mrs. Moss had the right to have the "corroboration" testimony produced in her presence.

Afro-American P 1 WASHINGTON

Since it had been mentioned in a public hearing, Senator McClellan added, the public has a right also to know what the alleged testimony is and to weigh its value.

Cohn's Remarks Stricken

Sen. Karl Mundt (R., N. Dak.) ordered Mr. Cohn remarks stricken from the record and stated that the subcommittee would clear with the FBI about producing the unnamed witness in public.

To date, however, no further public hearing of Mrs. Moss' case has been scheduled, according to a secretary in the offices of the sub-committee.

The secretary said on Wednesday that Mr. Cohn was out of town and could not be reached.

Reinstatement Cited

In Senator Symington's office, an aide to the Senator said that Mr. Symington had no comment. The aide added:

"Mrs. Moss" reinstatement at the pentagon speaks for itself and her conscience seems to be clear.

Senator McClellan, it was reported, in his office, had not been informed of the Winchell broadcast.

In her home at 1244 Evarts St., NE, Mrs. Moss said that she would prefer not to comment on the Winchell broadcast. Regarding her reinstatement at the Pentagon, the 49 - year - old widow reported that "everybody been very nice."

Mr. Winchell, in his broadcast Sunday night, referred to a previous Sunday broadcast on which Mr. Cohn had appeared.

The columnist stated that one of the questions which he had not been able to ask Mr. Cohn during the previous broadcast was in regard to Mrs. Moss and whether her case was one of mistaken identity.

According to Mr. Winchell, the McCarthy aide replied that there was no mistake identity in Mrs. Moss' case and that he could prove the case "if they'll let me."

Pentagon officials said on Wednesday that, although her case is still "under considera- brought against Mrs. Moss.

Says Youth Group Is a Red Front

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (UP).—Harry P. Cain, a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, found today that the Labor Youth League is run "primarily" to help the Communist party. He urged that it be compelled to register as a Communist "front" organization.

Mr. Cain, former Republican Senator from Washington, presided at hearings on the Labor Youth League, a nation-wide organization with headquarters in New York.

His recommendation that the group be compelled to register under the McCarran anti-subversive law is not final. The league may appeal it to the full five-member control board, which then must hold hearings on the case.

Mr. Cain, in a seventy-six-page proposed decision, said he has concluded the league "is operated primarily for the purpose of giving aid and support" to the Communist party.

The board previously found that the International Workers Order was a Communist front. But at the time of the board's decision the organization's exact status was complicated by legal problems arising out of New York's insurance laws.

Under the McCarran Communist-control act, an organization ruled by the board to be under the domination and control of the Communist party must register each year the names of its officers and a statement of its financial receipts and expenditures.

So far the board has ruled that the Communist party is a Communist-action group within the meaning of the law, but this decision is being contested in the courts. The Justice Department has asked that twelve organizations be labeled as fronts of the party.

The Labor Youth League was founded in May, 1949, and has branches in practically all sections of the country.

9 PHILADELPHIANS CONVICTED AS REDS

Leaders Found Guilty of Plot to Overthrow Government

Trial Ran for 71 Days

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13—Nine Philadelphia Communists were convicted in Federal Court today of conspiracy to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

The verdict was returned by a jury of seven women and five men after nearly eight hours of deliberation.

It ended the longest trial in the history of this Federal District. The trial began March 22 and consumed a total of seventy-one days—twelve days for the selection of the jury; forty-seven for the taking of testimony; seven for legal argument; three for summation by opposing counsel, and two for the jury charge and deliberation.

The nine defendants received the verdict silently as they stood expressionless before Judge J. Cullen Ganey. Later, as they left the courtroom they greeted friends and relatives with smiles and laughter. Some appeared jovial.

New Trial Asked

Thomas D. McBride, appointed by the Philadelphia Bar Association as chief defense counsel, made a motion for acquittal, or, as an alternative, a new trial.

United States Attorney W. Wilson White asked for the immediate imposition of sentence. Each of the defendants faces a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Judge Ganey deferred sentence pending argument on the motion for acquittal or a new trial. He set the argument for Sept. 2.

The defendants, called Communist leaders by the authorities, did not deny Communist party membership, but insisted that their activities were not illegal.

However, their indictment charged them with "unlawfully, wilfully and knowingly organizing and helping to organize, as the Communist party of the United States, a society, group and assembly of persons who teach and advocate the overthrow of the United States by force and violence."

81 Persons Convicted

They were convicted under the Smith Act. Since the measure was passed by Congress in 1940 a total of eighty-one persons, including today's defendants, have been found guilty under it through the country.

The defendants were Joseph Kuzma, 32 years old; Robert Klonsky, also known as Robert Kirby, 35; Sam Gobeloff, also known as Joseph Roberts, 44; Benjamin Weiss, 39; David Dubensky, also known as Dave Davis, 46; Th[illegible]s Nabried, 51; Irvin Katz, 35; Walter Lowenfels, also known as William Lerner, 56, and Sherman M. Labovitz, 29.

Judge Ganey continued the defendants in bail, $20,000 for Kuzma and $10,000 for each of the other eight.

McCarthy's Demo Aides Rap Committee Counsel

Cohn Accused Of Unfairness To Witness Who Denies Any Tie With Communists

WASHINGTON, March 11 (U.P.) — Democratic members of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's investigating subcommittee today accused subcommittee counsel Roy M. Cohn of being unfair to a witness who denied under oath McCarthy's charges she had a "Communist record."

The witness, Annie Lee Moss, was called before the subcommittee as part of McCarthy's fued with Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens. The Wisconsin Republican had said he intended to use her as an example to Stevens of how the Army "coddled" Communists.

Mrs. Moss, who appeared voluntarily without being subjenaed, testified in a firm voice that "I have not at any time been a member of the Communist Party. I have never seen a Communist card. I never subscribed to the (Communist) Daily Worker."

As the portly, 49-year-old Negro woman completed her testimony, Sen. Stuart Symington (D., Mo.) said: "I believe you're telling the truth."

Arkansan Protests

When Cohn started to say the subcommittee had substantiating testimony from an unidentified witness that Mrs. Moss was a Red in 1943, Sen. John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) protested vigorously. He charged Cohn with trying Mrs. Moss, a suspended Army Signal Corps employe, by "hearsay evidence."

McCarthy had left the hearing room by this time. Acting Chairman Karl E. Mundt (R., S. D.) ordered Cohn's remarks stricken from the record.

Symington and McClellan drew repeated and prolonged applause from the spectators when they attacked Cohn's methods.

As today's hearing opened, McCarthy told Mrs. Moss he was curious to know why she had been shifted from the Pentagon. Mrs. Markward could not identify Mrs. Moss in person.

Mrs. Moss testified that there "are three Annie Lee Mosses" in Washington.

As Mrs. Moss left the stand, Symington said "I may be sticking my neck out, but I think you are telling the truth."

"I certainly am," Mrs. Moss replied.

"If you are not taken back in by the Army, you come around and see me," Symington said. "I am going to see that you get a job."

When Cohn said the subcommittee had "corroboration" of Mrs. Markward's testimony from "another witness," McClellan protested:

"She's already lost her job. To make statements that we've got corroboration—well, she's entitled to have it presented here and let the public know about it and let her know about it. I don't like to try people by hearsay evidence."

3 Teachers Here Cited In Contempt

Refused to Testify On Red Affiliations Before Velde Group

Inquirer Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Four former witnesses before the House Un-American Activities Committee, including three Philadelphians, were cited for contempt today for refusing to testify concerning Communist affiliations.

Rep. Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.), committee chairman, said the citations were voted unanimously by the full committee membership.

DR. DUNHAM INCLUDED

Philadelphians cited were Dr. Wilbur L. Mahaney, Jr., of Trappe, Pa., a suspended teacher at West Philadelphia High School; Dr. Barrows Dunham, dismissed last September as head of the philosophy department at Temple University, and Mrs. Goldie Watson, a suspended teacher at Martha Washington Elementary School.

The fourth witness cited was Dr. Lawrence B. Arguimbau, associate professor of electrical communications at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass.

Robert L. Kunzig, chief counsel for the committee, said Dr. Mahaney was cited for his refusal to give the committee any information about fellow members in the Communist Party.

Slap him down

When the Roman populace cried for jobs and bread, the Roman emperors gave them exciting shows at the circus.

The United States Senate is running hog wild grabbing for headlines with sensational McCarthy investigations.

Senator McCarthy's deliberate and calculated smear treatment of Mrs. Annie Moss was shocking.

Seldom has there been anything like it in our history.

With millions of Americans losing their jobs, crowding the employment and relief offices, it's time the Senate slapped McCarthy down.

It should put away its sideshow investigations and get down to the serious business of trimming foreign expenditures and making it possible for the little fellows to earn a living.

If Senator McCarthy uses his influence in repeated demands for the Army to accord special treatment and promotion for his friends, the Senate should slap him now.

Else we get the impression that it is afraid because this kind of mccarthyism is resorted to by many senators other than McCarthy.

Convict Negro 'Red'

ST. LOUIS (ANP)—One Negro was among five Communists convicted here last week by a Federal jury of conspiracy to advocate the overthrow of the U. S. Government by force. The jury, deliberating two and one-half hours, found Marcus A. Murphy, 44, and four others, including one woman, guilty of the charges.

Censors scorn Moss abuse

Fail to criticize McCarthy for it

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — A charge that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep. Wis.) has "strongly implied" that Mrs. Annie Lee Moss was a Communist without giving her a chance to testify was one of 23 allegations dropped by a special Senate committee, Monday, in its report on censure charges against McCarthy.

The committee said it had thrown out this charge because Mrs. Moss is presently undergoing a confidential security investigation.

The charge against McCarthy was made by Sen. J. William Fulbright (Dem., Ark.), who alleged that in public hearings before the Senate Permanent Investigations Committee, of which McCarthy was chairman, strongly implied that Mrs. Moss was known to be a member of the Communist party.

If she testified she would perjure herself, McCarthy was accused of intimating, before he had given her an opportunity to testify in her own behalf.

—o O o—

THE ARMY Security Screening Board recently completed its hearing in the case of Mrs. Moss, a middle-aged woman and special target of McCarthy during his row with Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens.

The hearing was on seven charges outlined by the Army two months ago in suspending Mrs. Moss from her job as a $3,335-a-year clerk in the Signal Corps Supply Center. This was the second hearing given Mrs Moss, who denied all of the charges.

Annie Lee Moss Ruling Awaited

WASHINGTON — An Army security board is expected to rule in about ten days on charges against Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, 48, after closely guarded hearings which ended Friday.

The group's findings go to an Army review board which then will make recommendations to Army Secretary Robert Stevens, who will decide the case.

Mrs. Moss, a signal corps employe, has twice been suspended from her job as a possible security risk.

Signal Corps Clerk Denies She Was Red

Mrs. Moss Wins Support Of Democratic Probers

WASHINGTON, March 11 (INS)—A suspended Army Signal Corps employe told Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's subcommittee today that she had been falsely accused of being a Communist. She won dramatic support from Democratic senators.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) told Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, 48, that he believed her story and that he would get her a job if the Army refused to reinstate her.

Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark) clashed with subcommittee counsel Roy M. Cohn and charged that Mrs. Moss had been made a victim of "hearsay, rumor and innuendo."

The developments came after McCarthy, who had opened the questioning of Mrs. Moss, left the room and turned over the chair to Sen. Karl R. Mundt (R-SD).

Mrs. Moss, a Negro, denied under oath the assertion of Mrs. Mary L. Markward, former FBI counterspy, that she was a "dues-paying, card-carrying Communist."

She also denied McCarthy's charge that she had worked in an Army "code room." The Pentagon also has insisted that the senator's description of Mrs. Moss' employment was erroneous.

Spectators who jammed the hearing room applauded when McClellan asserted that evidence against Mrs. Moss should be produced for her scrutiny.

Mundt said the evidence should not be produced, because it included a sworn statement from an unidentified former Communist who, the senator said, was "in contact" with FBI agents.

Democratic members of the subcommittee assailed Cohn's statement that there was "corroborative" evidence against Mrs. Moss.

Symington declared:

"I understand there may be additional evidence on Mrs. Moss. I believe in this country a person is innocent until proved guilty.

"If there is (evidence), I would ask that the information be given to the subcommittee at the earliest opportunity.

"I think it is very important that the evidence itself be presented along with any implication of additional evidence."

"MUST BE CONFRONTED"

McClellan said: "People who are accused must be confronted by their accusers. This woman has been accused and has lost her job."

Symington told Mrs. Moss: "I may be sticking my neck out, but I think you're telling the truth. If you are not taken back by the Army, come around and see me and I'll get you a job."

Earlier, McCarthy repeated, in effect, his charge that Mrs. Moss had worked in a "code room."

The Wisconsin senator told Mrs. Moss: "You are not testifying because the subcommittee considers you important.

"We had testimony that you are a Communist and are rather curious to know how people like yourself were shifted from waitress to code room."

Mrs. Markward said she had seen Mrs. Moss' name on a list of dues-paying members of the Communist Party's northeast cell in Washington.

WAS SUSPENDED

After Mrs. Markward testified before the McCarthy group, the Army suspended Mrs. Moss pending a loyalty investigation, but said the probe had been started before the senator focused attention on the case.

Pentagon officials insisted that the woman never had access to secret information and could not possibly have deciphered the coded material handled on the machine she operated.

Mrs. Moss said she had lived in the northeast section of Washington and had been a cafeteria worker, as Mrs. Markward had testified. But she said she had "never been in the code room in my life" and merely "transmitted" messages which she assumed were classified.

Asked if she ever paid dues to the Communist Party, she said she never even knew what the dues were.

As for Mrs. Markward's contention she had been in the party in 1943, Mrs. Moss—who said she never finished high school—said she never even heard of communism until 1948 when there were congressional hearings on the subject.

Board Reviews Moss Record

WASHINGTON — A transcript of the hearings of Mrs. Annie Lee Moss before a special security board at Fort McNair last week has been forwarded to the Security Review board for study, it was learned this week.

The board's report and recommendations will then be sent to the secretary of army for final disposition. It is not expected that the final decision will be made before 30 days.

Mrs. Moss has twice been suspended from her job as coding machine operator in the signal corps, department of army, on a report that she had once been a member of the Communist party.

Because of lack of proof, Mrs. Moss was restored to her job, but was suspended again on Aug. 4, when the army reportedly had obtained more information.

Three Teachers Cited For Contempt in Probe

haney how he came to join the party.

"Well, there is nothing spectacular about it," the teacher replied. "I joined the Communist Party after I returned from Europe in 1935.

DR. MAHANEY

"The Communist Party was very liberal and had very much the same kind of sociological and political programs as the Roosevelt Administration, and so far as I could see it didn't seem to be too different."

When Kunzig asked who recruited him into the party, Mahaney said it was a friend who was now dead. He declined to name him.

"My conscience tells me to refuse to disclose the name," he continued. "In the words of Martin Luther I have to say, 'So help me God, I can do no other.'"

It was on this refusal, said Kunzig, that Mahaney was cited.

The committee first recommended contempt prosecution against Dunham immediately after he appeared before it on Feb. 27, 1953, and refused to tell anything about himself beyond his name and address. He took refuge in the 5th Amendment.

DR. DUNHAM

Dunham first refused, then reluctantly agreed to tell the probers that he was born in Mount Holly, N. J., on Oct. 10, 1905.

Kunzig said Dunham also told the committee at a closed session that he lived at 127 Bentley ave., Cynwyd, Pa. Beyond that, according to Kunzig, he refused to answer any questions "respecting his identity."

After the closed hearing, publication of a brief portion of Dunham's testimony disclosed that he balked at answering questions when asked where and when he was born.

INVOKED AMENDMENT

"I shall seek the protection of the 5th Amendment and decline to answer that question on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me," Dunham replied.

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), a member of the committee, then suggested splitting the question and asked Dunham when he was born.

"I give the same answer as before," Dunham replied.

IGNORED WARNING

Mrs. Watson appeared before the committee last Feb. 17. She not only refused to say whether she was a Communist, but even declined to invoke any Constitutional rights to protect herself, despite a warning from Rep. Gordon Scherer (R., O.) that she could be held for contempt.

MRS. GOLDIE WATSON

She flatly stated that she would not invoke the 5th Amendment with the first question that Kunzig fired at her:

"Have you been a Communist Party member?"

"I decline to answer that question as a violation of my Constitutional rights and even to bring me here to testify," she snapped.

Kunzig warned her of the consequences and then conferred with Scherer and Walter.

"I direct you to answer the question," Scherer said.

"I refuse to answer on the basis of my first statement," she replied.

After about 10 minutes of sparring between Kunzig and the witness, Scherer said, "Let the record show that the witness has been warned that she is clearly in contempt of Congress."

ADMITTED MEMBERSHIP

Arguimbau appeared before the committee in executive session, and the full text of his testimony has not been released. A partial text, however, shows he testified he was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1906, attended high school in Westfield, N. J., worked as an assistant at the Bell Laboratories and was graduated from Harvard University in 1930 with a Bachelor of Science degree in physics. He has been with MIT since 1939.

Kunzig said Arguimbau admitted membership in the Communist Party from 1937 to 1950 but refused to give any information concerning fellow-Communists.

McCarthy says Moss case smells

Hints he will reopen inquiry into Pentagon clerk's file

WASHINGTON

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) charged Tuesday that the Annie Lee Moss case "smells" to high haven' and said the Senate Permanent Investigating sub-committee, of which he is chairman, is not yet through with it.

McCarthy appeared before the Senate Rules subcommittee which is considering a code of fairplay for Senate inquiries.

The case of Mrs. Moss was brought into the hearing when Senator William E. Jenner (Rep., Ind.) committee chairman, said it was used by Senator Herbert H. Lehman (Dem., N.Y.) as an example of "unfair treatment of witnesses." He asked McCarthy for comment

MRS. MOSS is a Defense Department employee at the Pentagon, who denied before the McCarthy subcommittee testimony of Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, a housewife of Chesterbrook, Va., who joined the Communist party in Washington as an undercover informant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Mr. Markward testified that Mrs. Moss' name was on the rolls of the local Communist party but she was unable to identify Mrs. Moss personally.

Mrs. Moss, after being suspended from her job was put back to work at the Pentagon after Senator John L. McClellan, of Arkansas, and Stuart Symington, of Missouri, Democrats, said they believed her testimony that she had never joined the Communist party. A spokesman at the Pentagon said Tuesday her case is still under study.

McCARTHY's STATEMENT concerning Mrs. Moss follows:

"Annie Lee Moss was a colored lady, identified by an undercover FBI agent by name and by her job described as a Communist. The witness could not identify her by face. She denied the charge.

"I am still curious why this woman, who had no education, was promoted from a job in the cafeteria to handling coded documents.

"SOMETHING SMELLS to high heaven about it. We got only silence when we asked the Army why she got this promotion. We are not through with the Moss case."

COMMISSIONER INDUCTED

NEW YORK (ANP) — Robert J. Mangum of the Bronx was sworn in as deputy commissioner in charge of licenses last week by Police Commissioner Francis Adams. His post represented an elevation over the rank of former Commissioner William "Billy" Rowe, whom he succeeded.

MRS. MOSS OUSTED BY THE ARMY AGAIN

Pentagon Reports New Data on Case of Employe Called Communist by McCarthy

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (UP)—The Army suspended Mrs. Annie Lee Moss from her Pentagon job for the second time today pending final settlement of her security case.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy said at a session of his Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations last February that the 48-year-old Negro woman had been and might still be "an active member of the Communist party."

Mrs. Moss denied the charge under oath at a televised hearing.

The Army said today that Mrs. Moss had been given a "statement of the issues" and she might request a hearing before a security board within thirty days.

It said her case was reopened "on the basis of information which was not previously available and which has not been satisfactorily resolved by an investigation." It did not eleborate.

Senator McCarthy said the Army's action "is a good, healthy indication that they are tightening up on security regulations and Bob Stevens should be complimented." It was Mr. McCarthy's first public praise of Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens since the Army-McCarthy hearings.

F. B. I. Aide Backed Charge

Senator Stuart Symington, Democrat of Missouri, who once promised Mrs. Moss that he would see that she got a job if the Army did not reinstate her after an earlier suspension, declined to comment.

A former Federal Bureau of Investigation undercover agent, Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, testified before the subcommittee in support of Mr. McCarthy's charge. She said a Negro woman named Annie Lee Moss was a Communist "as early as 1944" and worked in the Defense Department cafeteria at the time.

Senator John L. McClellan, Democrat of Arkansas and a member of the McCarthy subcommittee, said today that "if she has any Communist leanings she should be gotten out of the Government."

Mrs. Moss was transferred in late January from her job as operator of a machine that transmitted coded messages. She was given a "non-sensitive" position in the Signal Corps Supply Section, typing record cards.

Denied She Handled Secrets

She was suspended from her $3,335-a-year post in late February. At the end of thirty days when no charges were brought against her she was permitted by law to return to work.

The Army said today she had been working "without security clearance and without access to classified information and material." It had stated previously her case was under study before Mr. McCarthy brought it up.

Mrs. Moss was in the record-card job when Senator McCarthy charged the Army had refused to dismiss a Mrs. Annie Lee Moss working in a secret Pentagon code room. The Army said its Mrs. Moss had never had access to codes or code rooms and could not have known what was contained in the coded messages she transmitted — some confidential and some not.

Mrs. Moss testified she "never was a member of the Communist party or anything else" and has "never been inside a code room in my life." She said she had not even heard of communism until several years after she was alleged to have been a party member.

Senator J. William Fulbright, Democrat of Arkansas, cited the Moss case as one of the items in his charges against Senator McCarthy. His charges are among those to be studied by a special Senate committee.

McCarthy's curiosity

Senator Joe McCarthy, in testifying before a Senate Rules subcommittee, Tuesday, dropped a not too subtle hint that he's still not through with Mrs. Annie Lee Moss.

You may remember that Joe stubbed his toe when he publicly branded Mrs. Moss a Communist only to discover later that there are several persons by that name residing in Washington and that he had libelled the wrong one.

It appears the junior Senator from Wisconsin has really never forgiven Mrs. Moss though she was not responsible for his error.

Serving notice that he intends to go further into her case, McCarthy adds that he is 'curious' to know how a former waitress got a job in the Pentagon message center.

"Something smells to high heaven about that," he unctuously declares.

With that we are in agreement but for different reasons.

In other words, Joe would make something 'subversive' out of the fact that Mrs. Moss, once a waitress, did not choose to remain one.

If that is the basis of his Communist suspicions, he's certainly in for a busy time around Washington.

Offhand we can think of dozens of men and women, who once worked as red caps, dishwashers, waiters, porters or domestics, who now are professors, scientists, teachers, doctors, lawyers and even Congressmen.

And when he gets through running FBI namechecks on all of those, he might stir his curiosity even more by investigating a number of lawyers in Washington who strangely enough earn their living by driving cabs and working at the postoffice.

All of which is further illustration of how absurd can be the unfounded charges and how ridiculous the reasoning of the wild man from Wisconsin.

Mrs. Moss Suspended Again On Basis of 'New Information

Will Have Chance For Hearing Before Security Board

By John A. Giles

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, who denied under oath last March Senator McCarthy's charge that she was a Communist, today again is under suspension from her Army job "on the basis of information which was not previously available."

The Army late yesterday announced its inquiry into the Moss case had been "reopened." It added that the new information "has not been satisfactorily resolved by an investigation."

The middle-aged colored woman, who lives at 1244 Evarts street N.E., was first suspended on February 25 after Senator McCarthy subpoenaed her before his Investigations subcommittee to answer accusations of Communist Party membership.

Mrs. Moss' appearance brought heated exchanges between subcommittee members and later, after a lengthy investigation, the Army again put her back to work. However, she was not returned to her old job of feeding undecipherable taped messages into a transmitter. Instead, she was given an unclassified position as clerk in the Signal Corps Supply Center in the Pentagon at $3,335 a year.

In Flanders Resolution.

Senator Flanders, Republican of Vermont, recently made Senator McCarthy's handling of the Moss case a part of the Senate censure resolution against him. The Wisconsin Republican replied only two days ago that he was not through with the case and repeated his charge that she was a Communist.

After announcement of the latest action, Senator McCarthy said it indicated the Army had tightened up its security program and he "complimented Army Secretary Stevens for that."

Mrs. Moss was "given a statement of the issues," the Army said, and has an opportunity to request a hearing before a security board within 30 days.

The department did not define the issues but Senator McClellan, Democrat, of Arkansas, and one of the Senators who protested the McCarthy subcommittee procedures in the Moss case, said:

"If she has any Communist leanings she should be gotten out of the Government. All I ever asked for, is that she should be confronted with her accusers."

George E. C. Hayes, Mrs. Moss' lawyer, said if the new suspension gives her a chance to be heard "we will welcome it and meet it." Mr. Hayes said he hadn't been told of any new information on Mrs. Moss.

Mrs. Markward Witness

Last spring Mrs. Mary S. Markward, a former FBI undercover agent, testified that early in 1944 she reported to the FBI on an "Annie Lee Moss." She said Mrs. Moss was on the list of card-carrying, dues-paying members of the Northeast Club of the Communist Party.

She told Senator McCarthy there was no doubt Mrs. Moss was a full-fledged Red.

But later the witness said she was not sure Mrs. Moss was the right person.

The suspended Army employe took the stand to deny flatly she had ever been a Red or even bought copies of the Daily Worker, adding she did not know it was a Communist publication.

Roy M. Cohn, former subcommittee counsel, said another witness would offer "corroboration" of Mrs. Markward's testimony. He did not name the other witness.

Senator McClellan objected, saying Mrs. Moss had already lost her job and was entitled to have the corroborative evidence presented.

Senator Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, who was presiding at the time, ordered Mr. Cohn's remark struck from the record. He said the other witness was in contact with the FBI and would have to be heard in closed session.

Senator Symington, Democrat, of Missouri, told Mrs. Moss he believed she was telling the truth and offered to help her find a job.

MRS. MOSS.

Controversial Case Returns

McCarthy "Not Through" With Annie Lee Moss

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, the Army code clerk who was brought before the McCarthy Committee last winter on charges of being a Communist is faced with the prospects of a return engagement before the Wisconsin investigator.

In testimony before the Senate Rules Committee, Tuesday, July 27, Senator McCarthy, defending his standard treatment of witnesses, mentioned the Moss case, one of his more controversial cases, as "something that smelled to high heaven."

Sat. 8-7-54

MRS. ROSS had been acussed by Mrs. Mary S. Mawkward, an undercover agent for the F. B. I., as being a dues paying card carrying Communist.

The Washington - telephone book showed that there were other Annie Lee Mosses listed, and Mrs. Moss maintained throughout her testimony that she could not have been the one Mrs. Mawkward meant. Mrs. Moss not only denied being a Communist, but also testified that she knew nothing of communism.

WHEN ASKED about Karl Marx, Mrs. Moss was reported to have said, "who's he?"

During the investigation, Mrs. Moss, a former waitress who worked up to the position of handling unclassified material, in the Pentagon, lost her job which she said was her only means of support.

* * *

IN ONE of the first evidences that all was not harmony on the Committee, Senators John McClellan, Dem., Ark. and Stuart Symington, Dem., Mo., bore down on the chief counsel Roy Cohn substituting for Senator McCarthy for his general treatment of the witness.

At the end of the hearing, Senator Symington told Mrs. Moss that if the Army didn't give her her job back to report to him and he would personally see that she got employment.

ALTHOUGH he conceded there was no evidence that Mrs. Moss had slipped information to the Communist, Senator McCarthy has made the point clear that he was not through with the Moss case.

He described her as a "rather pathetic looking Negro lady which gave the left wing press something to weep about."

THE PENTAGON announced that Mrs. Moss had returned to her job on March 29 while a loyalty board reviewed her case. Senator McCarthy made no statement as to what his action would be.

MRS. ANNIE LEE MOSS
Irked McCarthy

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss of Washington, D. C., suspended from her Government job after being branded a "Red" by Senator McCarthy, is shown as she appeared before Senate Investigation Committee with her attorney, George E. C. Hayes.—INP.

Mistaken Identity?

Never a Red, Says Mrs. Moss

WASHINGTON — The fast moving affair which would involve Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, a Pentagon employe in code relaying services for the Department of the Army, was headed either to an abrupt dead end, or a shocking episode of official and administrative laxity at press time.

The 48-year-old woman, widowed mother of a recently discharged GI veteran, who served in Korea, has convinced her counsel, Atty. George E. C. Hayes of the noted legal firm of Cobb, Howard and Hayes, that she may be a victim of "mistaken identity."

On the other hand, the hard-hitting Senator Joe McCarthy told newsmen that ex-Commie leaders have collaborated on concise and conclusive descriptions of the harassed mother.

Attorney Hayes said he would produce a doctor's certificate to the McCarthy Committee to establish the fact that his client was suffering from bronchitis. Senator McCarthy said he would rather not have her testify if she was physically incapacitated at the time.

AN UNUSUAL factor in this case as contrasted to others who have appeared before the McCarthy Committee is that Mrs. Moss has not stood behind the First or Fifth Amendments, but has calmly told the Committee that she "never was a member of the Communist party or any other organization of its type." She said, "I have never knowingly had any connection with the Communist party.

It seems that Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, now revealed as an FBI undercover agent worked closely with Negro organizations in the northeast section of Washington, 1943 to 1949. Mrs. Markward is not sure that the Annie Lee Moss, who is now testifying before the committee is the same Annie Lee Moss listed in her notes as she testified before Senator McCarthy.

Attorney Hayes told the Courier that charges against Mrs. Moss "raised the question of whether they had the right person." Hayes said that this may easily be a situation of mistaken identity. Hayes, whose law firm defended Dr. DuBois when he was cited for disloyalty in the famous Stockholm Peace Petition, said that Mrs. Moss has consistently denied to him charges that she was a member of the Communist Political Association.

He stated that in 1951 during a loyalty investigation she was suspended and then reinstated to Government service. Hayes said that if McCarthy's investigators admittedly can't identify Mrs. Moss, he could see no reason why accusers of her loyalty should appear before a Government loyalty board to testify against her.

Judge James A. Cobb of the firm of Cobb, Hayes and Howard, which is representing Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, accused as being a one-time Communist, told the Courier Wednesday:

"This Mrs. Mary S. Markwood, who worked as an FBI undercover agent from 1943 until 1949, has not identified our client although she has said that there was a Mrs. Annie Lee Moss active as a member of a Communist cell.

"Mrs. Moss has told Mr. Hayes (George E. C. Hayes, who is her attorney of record) that she is not, nor has she ever been, a Communist. Mr. Hayes believes her.

"We think it is very unfortunate that Senator McCarthy should have made certain statements, relative to bringing Mrs. Moss before a grand jury. This has the effect of intimidating our client who, we believe, is innocent of the charges made by McCarthy and by Mrs. Markwood.

"We would not deny that she may have unwittingly associated with Communists or fellow travelers during the war period. Many persons did that, but the fact that they may have had a Communist in their home, or may have gone to church with a Communist, did not make them Communists."

The Army denied that Mrs. Moss ever had access to a code or cryptographic room or to "uncoded top secret, secret, or confidential messages."

The Pentagon said in a statement that until Feb. 5 Mrs. Moss' duties were those of a "communications relay machine operator who feeds into or receives from automatic machines unintelligible code messages, both classified and unclassified."

The statement emphasized that the coded material Mrs. Moss handled "could not be understood even if it should get into the hands of unauthorized persons."

Pending Probe

Mrs. Moss Suspended

WASHINGTON (INS)—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, Pentagon employe under fire by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.), has been suspended by the Defense Department, pending an investigation.

Her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, said Mrs. Moss was notified Friday of her suspension, effective Feb. 25, the day after she appeared before McCarthy's Investigations Subcommittee.

Hayes said Mrs. Moss was informed she was under suspension "pending" adjudication" of her case, apparently, he added, without pay. Hayes stated that this was, to his knowledge, the first inkling she had that she was under investigation.

McCarthy, who heads the subcommittee, has charged that Mrs. Moss has a Communist record and was entrusted with handling top-secret documents in the Pentagon code room.

The Defense Department said she was merely a clerk, with no access to secret material. She appeared before the subcommittee Wednesday, but McCarthy postponed hearing her on the ground she was ill. Hayes said he has since informed the Senator his client is ready to testify.

Hayes declared Mrs. Moss is prepared to testify without invoking the Fifth Amendment, which permits witnesses to decline to answer questions if they feel they may be incriminated by doing so.

Senators Probe Report of Reds In the South

By the United Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 9.—The Senate internal security subcommittee has ordered 12 individuals to testify at hearings here next week into alleged communism in the South, it was disclosed today.

Aubrey Williams, of Montgomery, Ala., president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and former National Youth Administration director in the Roosevelt administration, said he was one of those under subpoena.

The investigation by the group headed by Sen. William Jenner (R., Ind.) is expected to center around activities of the Williams' organization.

James A. Dombrowski, fund executive director here, confirmed that a number of witnesses had been subpoenaed but denied that the fund was a Communist front group.

Mr. Williams, an outspoken opponent of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.), charged that the "Jenner committee will use this occasion to smear me, and, through me, the Roosevelt administration and all it stood for."

Canada Lee's Kin Reinstated

By ARNOLD DE MILLE

NEW YORK — Canada Lee's sister-in-law, who was suspended from her clerk-typist job with the Justice Department as a security risk, was reinstated last week.

Mrs. Evadney P. Canegata, who is married to the late actor's younger brother, William, a postal clerk in Harlem for some 15 years, was reinstated two weeks after the Defender carried a story of her plight.

She was suspended from her $2,950 year job with the information office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, 70 Columbus ave., New York, on Dec. 28 for her alleged association with her brother-in-law, better known as Canada Lee, and for signing a Communist Party nomination petition.

In her answer to the Justice Department's charges, Mrs. Canegata stated that she knew the actor, who was never accused by any federal agency of being a Communist or fellow traveler, only socially through family relationship. She denied having any knowledge of the petition she was charged with signing.

Trial of Nabried gets under way

PHILADELPHIA

No mention was made o Thomas Nabried, Monday, wher Paul Crouch, first governmen witness in the conspiracy tria of nine alleged Philadelphia Communists, testified.

Crouch said that for 17 years he was a Moscow-trained Communist agent.

Nabried, 51, lives in the 600 block N. Fifth st. He is the only colored person among the defendants on trial in the federal building, Ninth and Market sts. Judge J. Cullen Ganey is presiding at the U.S. District court.

FBI files link Nabried with the Communist party from about 1928. He is said to have attended the International Lenin school in Moscow in 1932-33.

He was an instructor at the Philadelphia Workers school in 1937.

Marxist-Leninist Courses

Basic courses in Marxist-Leninist education were taught there, it is declared. Nabried was organizer of the 36th ward of the Communist party in Philadelphia in 1938. From 1942 to 1944, he was city chairman and a section organizer.

The record further asserts he was section organizer of the third congressional district of the party in Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware in 1948. He was organizer of the fourth congressional in 1952, it is contended.

Nabried was born in Georgia on Nov. 1, 1902. He attended school in Augusta and in Philadelphia. He is employed as a lather.

Mrs. Moss Is Recalled To Her Job by Army

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP).—The Army today told Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, a Signal Corps employe suspended after she came under Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's fire, to return to duty Monday pending a final decision in her case.

An Army spokesman said Mrs. Moss would return to her civil service job in the Signal Corps supply section and would remain at work until the Army Loyalty Board completed its review of all the circumstances.

Mrs. Moss was called before the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee headed by McCarthy after a former woman undercover agent for the FBI testified she knew that Annie Lee Moss was a Communist, although she was unable to identify her personally.

Mrs. Moss denied under oath that she is or ever was a Communist. She said there were others with the same name in Washington, and a question was raised at the hearing as to whether she wasn't a victim of mistaken identity.

Meanwhile, the quest for a special counsel to investigate the row between the Wisconsin Republican and Army officials hit new snags tonight.

Their hopes to announce late today the name of the counsel had collapsed. Senator Karl Mundt (R., S. D.), acting chairman of the McCarthy subcommittee which will conduct the inquiry, said the search had narrowed down to three men, but there would be no announcement tonight. This may mean a delay in starting the hearings.

Meanwhile McCarthy said he would not ask the right to testify at the inquiry. He was still insisting, however, on the right to cross-examine witnesses.

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss

The Army has acted wisely in restoring Mrs. Annie Lee Moss to her code clerk's job with the Signal Corps.

The result of Senator McCarthy's reckless charge that she was a Communist, Mrs. Moss was forced for the third time to undergo the ordeal of facing a congressional investigating committee.

And for the third time, she has sworn under oath that she is not now, nor has she ever been a member of the Communist party.

Her testimony was so convincing that it made:

1. Senator McCarthy rush from the hearing to avoid facing the embarrassing fact that he had done Mrs. Moss a grievous wrong and

2. Two fellow members of McCarthy's subcommittee openly admit their belief that she had been falsely accused.

Apparently everybody now is convinced of Mrs. Moss' innocence except Senator McCarthy, who brazenly would continue using her as a pawn in his running feud with the Army.

The burden of proof, however, has now shifted to the demagogic junior senator from Wisconsin.

The magic of his "guilt by accusation" method definitely has been tarnished.

He must now either put up or shut up.

Thirty-Day Deadline for Clerk

Annie Moss Set For 5th Query

WASHINGTON—For the fifth time Mrs. Annie Lee Moss will go before a hearing board to answer charges that she was a member of the Communist party.

On Wednesday of last week the Army once again suspended Mrs. Moss from her $3,335 clerk's job and gave her thirty days in which to answer a list of seven specific charges.

The Army charges that Mrs. Moss had been given a Communist party membership Book No. 37269 for 1943.

HER ATTORNEY, George E. C. Hayes, said that this is the only part of the charges which is new or in any way different from previous charges on which Mrs. Moss has been heard twice before the Security Board—once before the un-American Activities Committee of which Congressman Velde is chairman and the McCarthy Senate Investigating Committee.

Mrs. Moss has consistently denied that she was ever a member of the party.

In regard to this new charge, Attorney Hayes told the Courier that he has the utmost confidence in his client and believes she is truthful in saying that she knows nothing about the assignment of a Communist book number and that if such allotment was made it was made without her knowledge. Attorney Hayes stated he believes "there is no actual merit in the charges."

* * *

MRS. MOSS was pushed into the national spotlight last winter when Senator McCarthy sought to use her case as evidence that the Army coddled Communists.

She was suspended from her job for thirty days at that time, but was reinstated pending further investigation.

The new charges resulted in her second suspension without pay. If she is cleared she will receive back pay. No date can be set for the new hearing until after Mrs. Moss through her attorney has filed an official reply to the seven charges.

Mrs. Moss was produced suddenly by Senator McCarthy last February at the peak of his battle with Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens.

WHEN MRS. MOSS tried to speak in her defense at the hearing, Senator McCarthy cut her off by saying she looked too sick and he wouldn't want to send her to jail for perjury.

Attorney Hayes contends that since Mrs. Moss had stated under oath in her testimony before the Velde Committee that she was not and had never been a Communist it was unfair to threaten her with perjury should she again deny the charge that she was a Communist.

He said that all he and his client asked was a fair trial which would afford the elderly Government worker a chance to meet her accusers face to face and tell her own story.

This is a position which Senator McClellan (Democratic Arkansas) appears to support.

When informed of the new charges the Senator is reported as saying "All I ever asked was that she be confronted with her accusers."

34d 1954 COMMUNISTS

An Objector Restrained and a Witness Ejected at Security Hearing

2 Ousted at Senate Hearing; Ex-Red's Story Starts Fight

By The United Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20—Clifford Durr, a former Federal official, grabbed Paul Crouch and shouted "I'll kill you" today after the former Communist testified that Mr. Durr's wife had been a pawn in a Red plot.

A tense three-day hearing by the Senate Internal Security subcommittee on alleged Communist activity in the South ended on this note after seven persons had been accused of past Communist ties.

Several were threatened with contempt action by Senator James O. Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, the only committee member present. Two persons were removed from the courtroom where the hearing was held.

Mr. Durr, a former Federal Communications Commissioner, is the husband of Virginia Durr, a sister-in-law of Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black.

He grappled with Mr. Crouch as the latter left the stand after testifying that Mrs. Durr "had full knowledge" of a conspiracy by a Communist espionage ring that allegedly had piped out secret information from the White House from 1934 to 1952.

"You dirty dog! I'll kill you for lying about my wife," Mr. Durr shouted as he grabbed the witness' arm.

Teacher Is Ejected

Attorneys and marshals dragged Mr. Durr from Mr. Crouch. White-faced and trembling, he was led from the courtroom by friends. He had attended the hearings today under the eye of a physician, and was ordered to bed after the outburst.

Mr. Crouch charged yesterday that Mr. Durr had been a Communist while acting as an attorney for Aubrey Williams, president of the Southern Conference Education Fund, which was under investigation in the hearing.

Earlier today, Myles Horton, teacher at the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., was ejected from the courtroom after he clashed with Senator Eastland.

"They're treating me like a criminal," he shouted as marshals took him out.

Mrs. Mildred White had testified yesterday that she had attended the school as a Red "to recruit party members."

The Durr-Crouch incident broke out after Mr. Crouch, once convicted of treason and sentenced to forty years, had said that Joseph Gelders, the Rev. Malcolm Dobbs, Howard Lee, Joseph Lash and Gilbert Parks had had "easy access" to the White House. He identified them as Communists.

"They got all kinds of information from Government officials from 1934 to 1942," he said. "President and Mrs. Roosevelt never had the least suspicion they were Red agents. However, Mrs. Durr had full knowledge of the conspiracy."

He was joined in his accusations by John Butler of Dallas, also a former Communist. They both said Mrs. Durr had been influenced by known Communists, but said they could not say whether she had been one herself.

Leo Sheiner of Miami, an attorney, was removed from the courtroom yesterday after he attempted to speak from the spectators' gallery. He had been named as a "top Communist in Florida" by Mr. Crouch.

Senator Eastland closed the hearing by saying that a full report would be submitted to the committee in Washington and "no judgments will be drawn here."

Mr. Crouch said earlier that his forty-year court-martial sentence by the Army in Hawaii in 1935 had been reduced to three years a few months later and he was released in less than that. He declared that he had left the Communist party in 1942 after seventeen years.

In today's testimony he said that "Justice Black had no knowledge of the work of the conspirators—but Mrs. Durr had full knowledge of the work."

It was at this point that Mr. Durr rushed at him. He had been standing near by with clenched hands, shaking his head.

Before Mr. Horton was bodily removed from the stand and forced out by marshals, he and Senator Eastland had clashed over questions concerning James Dombrowski, executive director of the educational fund.

Richard Arens, chief counsel, asked if Mr. Dombrowski, who was listed by Messrs. Crouch and Butler as a Communist, had been associated with Mr. Horton's school.

"Mr. Chairman, I would like to explain why I do not want to answer that question," Mr. Horton said.

Senator Eastland pounded the table and said: "Oh, you mean to say that you refuse to answer."

As Mr. Horton was hustled from the room after the dispute over Mrs. White's charges, he turned back at the door and shouted at Senator Eastland, "You're just putting on a show here—that's all."

Other Witnesses Heard

NEW ORLEANS, March 20 (AP)—Mr. Durr, who is from Montgomery, Ala., was a Federal Communications Commission member from 1941 to 1948. A few minutes after the outbreak, he became ill with what Touro Infirmary attendants said was a heart condition. He was wheeled from the room.

Mr. Crouch, who is from Honolulu, had previously testified that Mrs. Durr had subscribed to Communist publications and contributed to the "Communist press." He accused her yesterday of using her position as Justice Black's sister-in-law to promote Communist aims.

He also asserted that he had seen Mr. Durr at a number of New York meetings of Communist party leaders. He said that he could not name any one meeting, but that they occurred "from 1938 to 1941."

Mr. Durr also represented Mr. Horton, the witness ejected by the committee earlier.

Mr. Horton answered several questions about his school, saying it was not a Communist school and had never accepted Communist students. He declared he had founded it in 1932 to educate "rural and industrial leaders for democratic living and activities."

Our Opinions

The Truth Prevails

Last week, Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, accused by Sen. Joe McCarthy of having been a card carrying communist got a chance to defend herself before the Senate sub-committee on investigations.

In a firm voice she told the committee that she had never been a member of the Communist party, that she had never attended any meetings, and, as a matter of fact, she did not know the meaning of the word until it was explained to her in 1948.

Mrs. Moss convinced the minority members of the committee and the spectators crowded into the room that she was innocent. Despite rules and regulations, a thundering ovation greeted Sens. John McCelland and Stuart Symington when they berated Counsel Roy Cohn for trying to convict her on "hearsay".

Sen. Symington said that he believed so much in her innocence that if the Army would not take her back he would give her a job.

With that, the case against Annie Lee Moss literally fell apart. No witnesses came forth to confront her and no other evidence was produced. The only vague shred of evidence was a statement by Mrs. Mary Markwood an undercover agent for the FBI, that she had seen a name Annie Lee Moss on the list of the Communist party. Mrs. Moss testified that there are three Annie Lee Mosses living in Washington.

Conspicuously absent while Mrs. Moss was fighting for her good name and her right to walk as an upright citizen, was Sen. Joe McCarthy who blatantly declared that Mrs. Moss was of no importance as an individual. He simply wanted to use her as a tool in his fight with the Army to prove they were coddling Communists.

The action of the Senator and his counsel Roy Cohn was as criminal as shooting Annie Lee Moss in the back, even if their motives were good.

George E. C. Hayes, attorney for Mrs. Moss, has asked the Army to re-instate her. We believe that she should not only be reinstated but that drastic measures should be taken to prevent further character assassination by overzealous officials like McCarthy.

We believe further that some compensation ought to be given Mrs. Moss for the unnecessary suffering and shame she had been made to endure. She can never be fully compensated for this.

We want to commend Sens. Jackson, McClelland, and Symington for upholding the truth. In answer to the charge that this was good politics by Democrats, perhaps it was, but the Republicans would do well to do likewise.

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss

The Army has acted wisely in restoring Mrs. Annie Lee Moss to her code clerk's job with the Signal Corps.

The result of Senator McCarthy's reckless charge that she was a Communist, Mrs. Moss was forced for the third time to undergo the ordeal of facing a congressional investigating committee.

And for the third time, she has sworn under oath that she is not now, nor has she ever been a member of the Communist party.

Her testimony was so convincing that it made:

1. Senator McCarthy rush from the hearing to avoid facing the embarrassing fact that he had done Mrs. Moss a grievous wrong and,

2. Two fellow members of McCarthy's subcommittee openly admit their belief that she had been falsely accused.

Apparently everybody now is convinced of Mrs. Moss' innocence except Senator McCarthy, who brazenly would continue using her as a pawn in his running feud with the Army.

The burden of proof, however, has now shifted to the demagogic junior senator from Wisconsin.

The magic of his "guilt by accusation" method definitely has been tarnished.

He must now either put up or shut up.

NEGRO ONE OF FIVE COMMUNISTS ON TRIAL IN ST. LOUIS COURT IN GOVERNMENT OVERTHROW ISSUE

Offers Testimony Covering Proposal For Furher Living in Nation's "Black Belt"

ST. LOUIS — (ANP) — Marcus A. Murphy, the lone Negro defendant in the trial of five Communists here, last week denied from the witness stand in Federal Court that he had ever taught that the Negro could achieve "self-determination" only by bloodshed.

What he had said, Murphy declared, was that, in the American Revolution of 1776 and in the Civil War, the Negroes had turned the tide of the battle. Murphy said he taught that the Lincoln administration was facing defeat in the Civil War until it heeded the advice of the Abolitionists for utilization of the Negro people in the Union forces.

I said in my lectures, Murphy explained, that the Negro people in this country had contributed tremendously to preserve and expand democratic rights, and I said it would have been impossible for this country to advance in these great movements without having the Negro people on its side.

Acting as his own counsel in the trial before a jury in the court of United States District Judge Roy W. Harper, Murphy gave his testimony in the form of answers to questions put to him by James F. Forest, a co-defendant.

Problems Facing Negro

"I stated that Negroes want to feel they can walk the Americans streets with dignity and without being in a jim crow or Judge Lynch atmosphere—free to ride the transportation systems, eat wherever they want to when hungry, have recreational opportunities, equal wages, the right to join a union and the right to participate in making laws."

Murphy said he pointed out the Negro has been in this country for 334 years and never in that period has he ever been aligned with reactionary forces.

Declaring the Taft-Hartley Act and McCarran Act would never have been passed if there had been some Negro senators and more Negro congressmen. Murphy said this was so because the Negro has always been on the side of democratic forces and democratic legislation.

The witness said that in the early 1930's, he helped organize a trade union in Birmingham, Ala., and Sharecroppers' union in Alabama's "black belt."

Murphy said he urged white employes in a pipe company where he worked "to lay aside their prejudices" and to unite with Negroes, declaring:

"So long as white and Negro workers are divided, so long will employers be able to rob them both."

In the "black belt," which derives its name from the pronounced color of the soil, Murphy assisted poor farmers, helping them "to fight illegal seizure of their livestock by money lenders who were landlords," he said.

Other defendants are William Benter; Forest's wife, Dorothy Rose Forest and Robert Manewitz. They are charged under the Smith Act with conspiring to advocate overthrow of the Government by force and violence.

most industries and stores will not hire Negroes. Jobs on which Negroes are allowed to work will be the hardest hit by economic cutbacks. The Negro residential areas will eventually be turned into a shantytown, Barbour predicted.

The National Urban League leader warned that Los Angeles is making a mistake by thinking it has no problem . . . But the community is not balanced as long as there is segregation."

"If you're going to have a truly democratic community, you must get the maximum growth and participation of all groups. You can't shut them out today and expect them to join with you when they are your economic equals," added Barbour.

Welch Blasts McCarthy's Attack on Lawyer Friend

Thurs. 6-10-54
Atlanta Ga

By W. H. LAWRENCE

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, June 9—The Army-McCarthy hearings reached a dramatic high point today in an angry, emotion-packed exchange between Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) and Joseph N. Welch, special counsel for the Army. Irritated by Welch's cross-examination of Roy M. Cohn, McCarthy suddenly, and without warning, injected into the hearings a charge that one of Welch's Boston law associates, Frederick Fisher, had been a member of the National Lawyers Guild, which McCarthy called "the legal arm of the Communist Party."

Welch, almost in tears, sprang to Fisher's defense. Welch told McCarthy to his face:

"Until this moment, senator, I think I never really gauged your cruelty or your recklessness."

FACES FOEMAN

Looking at McCarthy across the witness table, Welch said slowly and firmly:

Constitution

"If there is a God in Heaven, this thing will do neither you nor your cause any good. I like to think of myself as a gentle man, but your forgiveness will have to come from someone else."

"Have you no sense of decency left, senator?" Welch asked.

Thurs. 6-10-54

WINS CHEERS

The crowded hearing room burst into a storm of applause for Welch as he abruptly terminated his conversation with McCarthy, refused to address any more questions to Cohn, and suggested to Sen. Mundt (R-SD), acting committee chairman, that he call another witness to the stand.

The witness was McCarthy himself.

McCarthy had interrupted Welch's cross-examination of Cohn, chief counsel for McCarthy, to fling his charges against Fisher. Welch had just drawn from Cohn the admission that Cohn and Pvt. G. David Schine, former McCarthy consultant, took two girls out to a $32.96 dinner at a New York hotel one night last January when Schine was on special leave from Ft. Dix, N.J., to attend to "business" of McCarthy's subcommittee.

DUELS MUNDT

McCarthy charged, in the face of contradictions by Sen. Mundt, that Welch had tried to get Fisher employed as "the assistant counsel for this committee" so he could be down here "looking over the secret and classified material."

Chairman Mundt asserted Welch never had recommended Fisher or anyone else for a subcommittee job. Welch explained that he had planned to have Fisher, a leader in the Young Republican League of Newton, Mass., as one of his own assistants in this case until Fisher told him that he had belonged to the Lawyers Guild Club while at Harvard Law School "and for a period of months later."

SHOCKS COHN

The violent, unexpected character of McCarthy's attack seemed to shock even his assistant Cohn, who by his facial expressions and movements made no secret of his distaste for what McCarthy was doing. McCarthy observed these reactions and commented, "I know Mr. Cohn would rather not have me go into this."

McCarthy's charge was not new. McCarthy first made the accusation in his formal charge given to the investigating subcommittee two days before the hearing started April 23.

Mundt has daily cautioned every audience to refrain from "audible expressions of approval or disapproval" of the proceedings or face expulsion from the hearing room. But the acting chairman made no effort to control or admonish the crowd that applauded Welch's retort to McCarthy.

HOT BATTLE

Atlanta

The McCarthy-Welch exchange, and another hot and heavy battle between McCarthy and Sen. Symington (D-Mo) diverted attention from the basic issues in this controversy. The Army initially charged that McCarthy and Cohn had sought, by improper means, to obtain special and preferential treatment for Pvt. Schine, who, until he was drafted, was an unpaid McCarthy consultant. McCarthy and Cohn, in turn, have charged that the Army held Schine as a "hostage" and tried to "blackmail" the committee out of investigations of the Army.

Thurs. 6-10-54

Other highlights of the day were:

1. The Senate subcommittee formally requested the adjutant general of New York to authorize a delay in the military training of Cohn, who has been ordered to report to Camp Kilmer, N.J., on Saturday for a two-week course with the New York National Guard. McCarthy had said a recess would be necessary during Cohn's training because it would be unfair to continue in his absence. Acting for the Army, Welch suggested that a delay be requested, and the subcommittee approved his proposal.

CASTS DOUBT

2. Welch's cross-examination of Cohn cast doubt on how much work Pvt. Schine did for the McCarthy subcommittee during periods he was on authorized leave from Ft. Dix to work on committee business.

3. Welch chided Cohn and McCarthy because they did not immediately notify Secretary of the Army Stevens that they had obtained an FBI report about alleged Communists at Ft. Monmouth, N.J. He brought out that while McCarthy received the report last spring, it was not brought to Stevens' attention for several months, although Cohn had testified "time was of the essence" in eliminating security risks. Welch charged McCarthy and Cohn thus withheld important information, for their own purposes, from "a new Army secretary (Stevens) known to be a Communist-hater."

WOULD TALK

4 Sen Symington offered to testify before the subcommittee, as demanded by McCarthy, if McCarthy would agree in writing to testify under oath before a special Senate committee to be named by Vice President Nixon on recommendation of Republican and Democartic leaders. Symington specified that McCarthy should agree to explain whether among other things it was proper to accept $10,000 from the Lustron Corp. for a pamphlet on housing, whether funds supplied to fight communism were diverted to McCarthy's own use, and whether McCarthy had violated state and federal tax laws and banking laws over a period of years.

5. Charging that Symington's offer demonstrated "how low an alleged man can sink," McCarthy said he would make commitment, but would sign no letter, agreeing to testify before such a committee "if the Vice President or the Senate wants to appoint a committee to investigate these smears."

INQUIRY END

When the hearings recessed today, Mundt said the Republicans would attempt at a closed-door session late tomorrow to fix a time limit for the investigation. The Army and the McCarthy side are willing to end the hearings after McCarthy and his staff director, Francis P. Carr, have testified fully and been cross-examined.

The Repqublican members and McCarthy also are seeking a final time limit. But Welch, speaking for the Army, has thus far resisted that proposal. He has said he is willing instead to accept a stated number of turns in 10-minute cross examination periods.

The Democrats, on the other hand, have been fighting against an arbitrary time limit, and have insisted that other witnesses whose testimony may be material to the controversy should not be refused the right to appear.

Welch mixed humor with cross-examination of Cohn early in the day. He made McCarthy angry when he chided "these Communist hunters" for "sitting on a document for month after month" instead of telling Stevens about charges of Reds at Ft. Monmouth.

FBI REPORT

He brought out that the altered FBI report "purloined" from the Army's files had been delivered to McCarthy last spring, but never during March, April, May, June or July did Cohn or McCarthy convey the information to Stevens.

The crowd roared with laughter as Welch added:

"I think it is really dramatic to see how these Communist hunters will sit on this document when they could have brought it to the attention of Bob Stevens in 20 minutes, and they let month after month go by without going to the head and saying, 'Sic 'em, Stevens.'"

Angrily, McCarthy said Welch was being unfair.

"That may sound funny as all get out here," McCarthy said. "It may get a laugh. He knows it is ridiculous. He is wasting time doing it. He is trying to create a false impression."

Eastland Group Postpones Show In Birmingham

'Press Of Business' To Bring Long Delay In State Red Probe

By FRED ANDERSEN
Assistant Managing Editor

Communist-hunting members of the United S ates Senate have decided not to extend their investigations into Alabama.

A high source in Washington told The Advertiser last night it is "highly doubtful" Sen. James Eastland, Mississippi Democrat, will bring his Red hunt to Birmingham late this month or early in June asoriginally planned.

The source of this information is not a member of the Internal Security subcommittee but occupies be withheld.

It was learned Eastland was dissatisfied with popular response to four stormy days of hearings in New Orleans in March during which he tried to pin a bright Red tag on the Southern Conference Educational Fund and its directors.

'Press of Senate Business'

Public reason to be given for the indefinite postponement of the Alabama hearings will be "the press of Senate business," it was stated.

Yet, hearings into alleged communist-front organizations elsewhere are scheduled for the subcommittee in the immediate future. Next on its agenda is a Texas probe of illegal entry into the United States of the so-called "wetbacks" — Mexican farm labor.

Original plans, as announced by Eastland at the close of the New Orleans hearings, called for a full-dress communist hunt in Alabama with the stage set in Birmingham late this month.

On the list of prospective witnesses for the Alabama hearings, it was learned last night, were top CIO and AFL officials and some important names in state political circles.

Three Montgomerians who were subpoeanaed to testify at the New Orleans hearing were on the list of those to be called in Birmingham.

They are Aubrey Williams, Montgomery publisher of the Southern Farm and Home magazine, and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford J. Durr.

Contempt Proceedings Pending

Contempt proceedings against all three are now pending in Washington for their refusal to answer Eastland's questions during the New Orleans probe.

Williams, it was learned, has been assured by Senate Democratic leaders he would not be cited for contempt, and was given a pledge the Durrs would likewise be absolved.

During the Roosevelt administration, Williams held several key appointive jobs. the last being administrator of the National Youth Administration.

Durr was a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Mrs. Durr was accused at New Orleans of using her family position as a sister-in-law of Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black to frther' communist goals.

Two of the government's star witnesses at the New Orleans show were to be used again in Birmingham.

One of these, Paul Crouch, is a confessed ex-communist who renounced the Kremlin several years ago. He has been a busy witness since then and was recently revealed as one of the chief accusers of Dr. Robert Oppenheimer, suspended atomic scientist.

Crouch Remembered Darr

During the New Orleans hearings, Crouch, the ex-convict who served time on Alcatraz for trying to organize a Communist cell in the U.S. Army, told Durr he remembered him for so many years "because you are different looking — like Robert Oppenheimer."

Another New Orleans witness was John Butler, who said he was a Bessemer steel worker.

Butler was to put the finger on labor leaders at the now-postponed Birmingham hearings, it was learned.

Croch was also due for a starring role. He claimed at New Orleans he used Birmingham and Alabama as headquarters for his activities in behalf of the communist cause through the Soth.

Eastland, who weiled the gavel at New Orleans, has decided against the Alabama hearings for two closely-associated reasons, it was learned:

1 — He is in a political battle for his life in a state Democratic where adverse publcity of the type he got in the press as a result of the New Orleans hearings, could hurt;

2 — The "voluminous file" on Alabama commnists and communist-front organizations has not proved to be as detailed as he hoped.

An Advertiser press table poll made at the conclsion of the New Orleans hearings gave Eastland the dubious honor of being judged "most dangerous to American ideals" of any participant in the hearings.

Drr, was hospitalized for almost a month after the hearings in the Crescent City, but has since returned to Montgomery.

He suffered a severe heart seizure after lunging at Croch after the self-tagged "professional witness" had accsed Mrs. Durr of "being nder Communist discipline and knowingly frthering the cause the party" through her kinship th Justice Black.

Goldie Watson to fight ouster

PHILADELPHIA

Dismissed on June 29 as a member of the Philadelphia school system, Mrs. Goldie E. Watson, this week, stated that she will appeal her case, if necessary, to the highest court.

Mrs. Watson has also been cited for contempt of Congress in the current Communist probe. Invoking the 1st Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, she refused to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The Philadelphia Board of Education, by a vote of 12 to 3, upheld the recommendation of Dr. Louis P. Hoyer, superintendent of schools, to oust Mrs. Watson. She was suspended in May.

At One School 23 Years

Mrs. Watson is one of 26 teachers dismissed as a result of the Congressional investigation. She has taught at the Martha Washington School, 44th and Aspen Sts., for 23 years.

The former teacher explained that her refusal to invoke the 5th Amendment was not because the founders of the country intended that it should suggest guilt on the part of persons who used it.

She said that she refused to testify because newspapers and radio have created an atmophere of suspicion and guilt in regard to all persons who use the 5th Amendment as protection.

Mrs. Watson, who was charged with being "unfit to teach," further explained her position:

Hub Of Rights

"Colored Americans will never achieve rights and privileges guaranteed by the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments if the 1st Amendment is violated. It is the hub from which all of our democratic rights flow."

Indicating that she was not surprised by the decision to dismiss her, Mrs Watson continued:

"When the board refused to permit my attorney in cross examining Dr. Hoyer to question him as to his thinking, reasons, and motives in suspending me, it became clear that I would be dismissed.

Protective Cloak

"The protective cloak thrown around Dr. Hoyer by his attorney and by the board made it impossible to approach the heart of the charge against me."

Mrs. Watson said that Dr. Hoyer characterized her as having poor judgment and lacking in civic responsibility and appreciation for American ideals. She reasoned:

"Only by character witnesses could I have proven this accusation to be false. When the board refused to hear the eminent and courageous people who were prepard to testify in my behalf all pretense that I was getting a fair hearing vanished."

Dr. Turner's Vote

When asked about the vote of Dr. John P. Turner, the only colored member of the board, Mrs. Watson said:

"I was surprised and shocked when Dr. Turner was not listed as voting in my favor. My three votes came from Walter B. Saul, president of the board; Mrs. John F. Lewis and Joseph Greenberg."

Mrs. Watson said that, at the end of her remarks to the board at the June 4 hearing Dr. Turner rose spontaneously and made the following statement:

"Mr. Chairman: I just wanted to say a word or two. Mrs. Watson belongs to a number of organizations of which I am a member - the NAACP National Urban League and others.

Organizations Tinged

"These organizations have by some people been tinged as communistic at times because of their fight against segregation and those kind of things.

"I just wanted my fellow board members to know that those organizations have been so tinged because of their honest stand against this thing that has tied our hands as colored Americans.

"And what Mrs. Watson said is absolutely true, and I want to corroborate her."

Switch Imcomprehensible

Mrs. Watson stated that Dr. Turner shook her hand at the end of the meeting.

She added that she found it impossible to understand how he could corroborate her on June 4 and vote for her dismissal on June 29.

Concluding her reference to Dr Turner, Mrs. Watson quoted:

"A wise teacher said many years ago, 'Each man has his own way to die. Many men are morally and spiritually dead long before physical death overtakes them.'"

CHARGES REDUCED TO ABSURDITY:

Southerner helps clear Red suspec

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—Two Democratic Senators, one from the Deep South, helped Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, 1244 Evarts st. nw., Thursday, to reduce to an absurdity charges of Communist affiliations made against her by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis).

The hearing into the charges was held at the insistence of George E. C. Hayes, counsel for Mrs. Moss.

The Senate Permanent Investigating Committee had previously heard testimony from Mrs. Mary L. Markward, a housewife, who joined the Communist party as an undercover agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Mrs. Markward testified that a Mrs. Moss was a dues-paying member in the Northeast Club of the party.

Tried To Prove Something

At the time Mrs. Markward gave her testimony Senator McCarthy was in the thick of his fight with Secretary of the Army, Robert T. Stevens over Army policy on the discharge of alleged communists from the Army.

McCarthy used the charge that Mrs. Moss was a Communist in an effort to prove that the Army was coddling Communists.

He charged that Mrs. Moss had been kept in a sensitive position in the Signal Corps communications setup, handling classified (top secret, secret and confidential) coded messages.

Postponed Hearing

Mrs. Moss was scheduled to testify before the committee the day that McCarthy was to have had a show-down with Stevens, but McCarthy persuaded Mrs. Moss that she was too ill to testify on that occasion.

At the end of a hour-long hearing on Thursday, Sen. John L. McClenna (Dem., Ark) stopped Roy Cohn, chief committee counsel, from spreading on the record a statement that an unidentified witness had at a secret hearing corroborated Mrs. Markward's testimony.

Cohn, himself, admitted that he did not know whether that witness was available to testify before the committee because the unnamed witness was in contact with the FBI.

Senator Wants Evidence

"We are making a statement here against this witness, who has come here and submitted to cross examination. She has already lost her job. I am not defending her," the Senator said.

"But to make these statements that we have got corroborating statements that she is a Communist — I think she is entitled to have it produced and let her and the public know about it," McClellan added.

"I move that the evidence be produced," he stated.

When Cohn said the only reason the evidence had not been produced was that the witness was in contact with the FBI, McClellan replied:

Stricken From Record

"I will tell you how I feel about it, I do not like to try people my hearsay evidence."

Sen. Karl E. Mundt (Rep., S.D.), who was presiding in the absence of McCarthy, ruled that Cohn's statement be stricken from the record and that the question be taken up in executive session of whether the committee should try to have the unnamed witness testify.

McClellan insisted that he did not think it was fair to the witness to say that the FBI has a corroborating statement. "It is not sworn testimony," said McClellan. "It is convicting people by hearsay and innuendo."

Sen. Stuart Symington (Dem., Mo.) then asked Mrs. Moss a series of questions.

"Do you know anybody named Mrs. Mark Markward?"

"No, sir, I don't."

"I think the record should show that Mrs. Markward said she has never seen Mrs. Moss at any time at any Communist meeting," said Senator Symington.

Markward Testimony

The Missouri Senator then read what apparently was a committee memorandum stating that Mrs. Markward had testified that a Mrs. Moss was registered with the Communist party in 1943 and later her name was shifted over to the Communist Political Association in 1944.

The memo also said Mrs. Markward could not recall having seen Mrs. Moss at any time at a Communist meeting, but it was her recollection that a Mrs. Moss paid her dues and was a member of the Communist party in good standing.

Under questioning by Senator Symington, Mrs. Moss denied that she had ever paid any Communist party dues to anybody and that anybody had ever asked her to join the Communist party.

"Is it not possible that there are some other people named Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, just as there are apparently other people named Robert Hall?" asked Senator Symington.

3 Other Annie Mosses

Mrs. Moss replied that there were three other Annie Lee Mosses listed in the telephone directory and that she had had trouble getting an estate license on that account.

"Are the two other Annie Lee Mosses white or colored?" asked Symington.

"I don't know," replied Mrs. Moss. "I have never seen them."

Mrs. Moss was suspended from her Signal Corps job after Mrs. Markward had testified an Annie Lee Moss was a dues-paying member of the Communist party.

"What are you doing now?" Symington asked.

"I'm not working," she replied.

"Why not?"

She said she had been suspended by the Department of the Army until the investigation of her alleged Communist affiliations was over.

"How long ago was that?" asked Symington.

"I believe it was Feb. 25."

"What reason did they give for suspending you?"

National Security

Mrs. Moss read apparently from the notice of suspension she had received, stating that her immediate suspension was deemed necessary and advisable in the interest of national security, pending adjudication of her case.

Her stumbling over the words, led McClellan to ask: "Did you read that the best you could?"

"Yes, sir, I did," she replied.

"Have you, to the best of your knowledge, ever talked with a Communist in your life" asked Symington.

"No, sir."

"Did you ever hear of Karl Marx?"

"Who is that?" she asked.

"Do you think you are a good American?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever do anything to hurt your country?"

"No, sir."

"Have you ever talked with anybody about espionage?"

Attorney Has To Explain

After Mr. Hayes explained to her what espionage was, she replied, "No sir."

"Have you ever had any information you received in your job that you passed on to anybody about these codes?"

"No sir."

"Has anybody ever asked you for that information?"

"No, sir. If they had, I would have reported it."

"What are you living on now?" asked Symington. "Have you got any savings?"

"No sir."

"When is your rent next due?"

"We're buying," Mrs. Moss replied.

"Do you need work?"

"Sure I do."

"If you don't get work pretty soon what are you going to do?"

"Go down to the Welfare."

"Have you applied for a position outside of the Army since you have been suspended?"

Ordeal Made Her Sick

"No, sir, I have been sick in bed under a doctor."

Cohn then took up the questioning, asking Mrs. Moss about a Mrs. Hattie Griffiths, with whom she lived for a period of about two weeks.

Mrs. Moss testified that during that two-week period she did not know that Mrs. Griffiths was a member of the Communist party or that she held Communist meetings in her home.

McCarthy, who was present when the hearing began but left shortly afterwards, told Mrs. Moss at the outset:

"You are not here because you are considered important in the Communist apparatus.

McCarthy Abusive

"We have testimony that you have been a Communist.

"We are rather curious to know how someone like yourself, who is known to your superiors to have a communist record, is shifted from worker in a cafeteria to the code room.

"I am today much more interested in the handling of your case by your superiors than I am in your personal activities."

"Mr. chairman," began Hayes.

"We will not hear from counsel," McCarthy told Hayes. "You know what the rule is. If you have anything to say, say it through your client."

Under questioning by Cohn, Mrs. Moss testified that she had been employed by the Department of the Army at the Pentagon, that she started work there Dec. 18, 1950.

She also said that she had worked at the Elite laundry, and had gone to work at the General Accounting Office in 1945.

Prior to that, she had been a cafeteria worker.

She testified that in 1943 she had lived in the vicinity of 525 ½ Second st., nw., and for a two-week period had lived in the 600 block of Second st., ne.

Knew No Code

Asked whether she had any connections with coded messages in her employment at the Pentagon, Mrs. Moss replied: "No more than to transmit them —receive or transmit. I have never been in the code room in my life."

"Were some of those coded messages classified?" asked Cohn.

"I assume they were," replied Mrs. Moss.

"Do you know what type of classification — whether they were secret, top secret, or confidential?" asked McCarthy.

"No, sir," Mrs. Moss replied.

"In other words, you did not know the degree of classification?" asked McCarthy.

"No, sir," Mrs. Moss replied.

"Did you ever have any messages in clear text?" asked Cohn.

Mrs. Moss said she handled messages in clear text as well as those that were coded.

After she was employed on Dec. 18, 1950, she said, she was put in training for a period of six weeks and after she got clearance in 1951 she began working on coded messages.

Cohn Gives Hearsay

Cohn told Mrs. Moss that the committee has received testimony, with which she and her counsel were familiar, that she was a member of the Northeast Club of the Communist party.

Mrs. Moss emphatically denied that she had ever been a member of the Communist party or had ever attended communist meetings. She also denied that she had ever subscribed for the Daily Worker.

McCarthy, at this point, stopped photographers from taking pictures of Mrs. Moss while she was testifying.

"Mrs. Markward, who was working for the FBI and joined the Communist party for the FBI, testified that while she never met you personally, your name was on the list of the Communist party as a dues-paying member," said McCarthy.

"Can you shed any light on that?"

Ignorant About Dues

"No, sir," Mrs. Moss replied. "I don't know what the dues were or where they were paid."

She added that she never paid any money to the Communist party or to anyone whom she thought was paying money to the Communist party and never attended any Communist meetings.

"Is it not a fact you reguarly received the Daily Worker and arranged to receive it through Rob Hall?" asked Cohn.

"Robert Hall brought that paper to where I was rooming one Sunday morning," Mrs. Moss replied.

"My son tells me that my husband told him not to bring that paper back there any more. He said he paid him for whatever was due. I never got that Communist paper any more until I moved to Southwest."

"Did you know Robert Hall?' asked McCarthy.

"No. sir, not personally."

"Did you give Rob Hall any money?" asked McCarthy.

"I was not there."

Son Denied Sales Job

She said Robert Hall had asked her son to sell papers and his father had said he could not do so. She said her husband is dead.

"You say you personally did not know Robert Hall—that you were not there when he came to your house," said McCarthy. "Did you know what business Robert Hall had with your husband aside from delivering the Daily Worker?"

"No, sir, I don't."

At this point McCarthy excused himself. He said he had another appointment. Senator Mundt took over the presiding.

"You knew the Daily Worker was a communist paper?" asked Cohn.

"No, sir, I didn't."

"When you read it, it was pretty clear it was a communist paper, was it not?" Cohn asked.

Doesn't Read Much

"I didn't read it," replied Mrs. Moss. "I don't read any newspapers very much."

"Did Robert Hall ever talk to you about the Daily Worker?" asked Cohn.

"I only saw Robert Hall around the union places.

"Is it not a fact that when you testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee you said Robert Hall talked to you about the Daily Worker and said it was a good paper?"

"No, sir, the man who came to collect said it was a good paper."

Cohn remarked that Rob Hall was one of three top Communists in the District of Columbia and that he thought it was significant that Hall had visited Mrs. Moss' home and persuaded her or someone to subscribe for the Daily Worker.

Conflict Suggested

He added that there was a conflict between Mrs. Moss's testimony before the McCarthy Committee and that she had previously given before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

"Did you know Hall was a Communist?" Mundt asked.

"No, sir," Mrs. Moss replied. "I never heard of communism until 1948 when this first (loyalty board) hearing came up and I asked them what was that."

Mrs. Moss testified that she had been born in Chester, S.C., and lived there until she was a good sized girl and then moved to Salisbury, N.C. She said she never finished high school.

She denied joining any organization in 1943 or 1944 other than the cafeteria workers' union, which she said she was compelled to join in order to continue working. Her union dues were deducted from her salary check, she said.

Different Robert Halls

A reporter sent Senator Symington a note. The Missouri Senator wanted to know whether Hall was colored.

"My assumption is that he has always been a white man," replied Cohn.

"Is the Robert Hall you know a colored man?" Symington asked Mrs. Moss.

"Yes, sir," she replied.

"Are you sure of that?"

"Yes, sir."

Asked whether he looked like a colored man or more like a white man, Mrs. Moss replied that he was a man about her complexion. She is dark brown-skinned.

Symington then remakred that a reporter said he was certain Rob Hall of the Daily Worker is a white man.

He added that if the Robert Hall she knew was colored, the Robert Hall the committee was talking about was not the man she knew and had the conversation with.

Duties Not Secret

Asked by Senator McClellan to explain her duties in the telecommunications laboratory at the Pentagon—whether it was true she was in any psoition to do any harm.

"It has not been established to my satisfaction that this woman is a Communist," the Arkansas Senator said. "I see you only get a salary of $3,300 a year, which is very little salary for any responsible position.

Mrs. Moss said her job, before being transferred to a less sensitive position, was to transmit messages and that her job had required no knowledge of the contents of messages.

Couldn't Read Messages

"Was there any way for you to know what the contents of those messages were?" McClellan asked.

"No way in the world to know," she replied.

She said she did not have time to know what the messages contained, that the routing of the messages was a simple, routine mechanical process after they were received—a matter of getting them to their proper destination.

While she was employed in the cafeteria at the Pentagon, she said, her salary was about $45 every two weeks.

She testified that she took a Civil Service examination to qualify for the job in the message center and that she had obtained it without any outside help.

We Believe Mrs. Moss, Too!

We don't know whether Mrs. Annie Lee Moss is a Communist or not. All we know is that when we heard her on Edward R. Murrow's television program last week, she sounded as if she were telling the truth when she said that she is not. Missouri's Senator Symington believed her story and promised to help her find a job if the Army does not restore her to the one which McCarthy took away from her.

We trust Senator Symington's judgement. As a member of the McCarthy committee, he was in a position to observe Mrs. Moss over a considerable period of time and to look her squarely in the eye. McCarthy oversteps the bounds of reason when he yanks innocent people off their jobs and subjects them to embarrassment and the undue mental torture which accompanies an unfavorable spotlight.

We were proud of Missouri's junior senator for the way that he handled the part of the hearing that we saw on television. He was striving to get at the truth in a quiet, dignified way. He is a credit to the state and to the nation.

Accused Mrs. Moss Reinstated by Army

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 26—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, a middle-aged woman who testified she never had heard of Karl Marx, won temporary reinstatement today in her Army job.

Mrs. Moss, named as a Communist by Mrs. Mary Stanup Markward, former undercover agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was suspended by the Signal Corps last Feb. 25 after she was called to testify before Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's investigation subcommittee.

An Army spokesman said that Mrs. Moss had ben told to report for work Monday morning in the Signal Corps supply room. She would remain on the job, the spokesman added, until the Army Loyalty Board completed its review of the circumstances in her case.

The Army action does not close the case. It was taken in compliance with the law requiring reinstatement of Civil Service employes within thirty days of their suspension unless specific charges are filed against them.

No such charges have been filed in the Moss case, the Army said, pointing out that the loyalty board has yet to complete its review. As a result, Mrs. Moss will receive back pay for the thirty-day suspension period. Her salary is $3,335 a year.

Confers at Pentagon

Mrs. Moss came to the Pentagon this morning with her lawyer, George E. C. Hayes, for a half-hour conference with Signal Corps and Army Intelligence officials.

Mr. Hayes said afterward that his client had been asked to clear up certain points raised in the hearings before the McCarthy subcommittee. He added that the Army officials appeared satisfied with her explanations.

One of the most bewildered witnesses summoned by Senator McCarthy, Mrs. Moss won the support of two Democratic members of the committee, Senators John L. McClellan of Arkansas and Stuart Symington of Missouri.

She softly, but flatly, denied under oath that she was or had been a Communist and told the committee that there were three women named Annie Lee Moss in the District of Columbia.

Annie Lee Moss case dropped from probe of Sen. McCarthy

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—The Moss specification has been dropped from the charges against Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis.), on which a Select Senate Committee was due to begin hearings Tuesday morning, Aug. 31.

The dropping of the Moss specification was revealed Tuesday when Sen. Arthur V. Watkins, (Rep., Utah), committee chairman, made public the charges against Senator McCarthy on which the committee will receive evidence, take testimony, and act as provided in the Senate order referring the resolution to censure Mr. McCarthy to the committee.

The charges, numbering 13, were culled from a total of 46 charges proposed by Sens. J. William Fulbright, (Dem., Ark.), Wayne Mores, (Ind., Ore.), and Ralph E. Flanders, (Rep., Vt.), as amendments to the Flanders resolution of censure.

— o O o —

IN OMITTING the Moss and 32 other charges, the Select Committed reserves the right to take such other testimony as it may deem advisable relating to any other matters referred to in the order of referral.

While it was possible that some of the omitted charges may be investigated, Senator Watkins said he does not expect "any great increase in the number of charges that will be finally considered, but I don't want the door closed."

The Moss charge was offered as an amendment to the Flanders resolution of censure after that a bill of particulars should be made a part of the censure resolution.

— o O o —

IT CHARGED THAT: "In public hearings before the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee, of which he was chairman, the junior senator from Wisconsin strongly implied that Mrs. Annie Lee Moss was unknown to be a member of the Communist Party and that if she testified she would perjure herself, before he had given her an opportunity to testify in her own behalf."

"I KNOW NOTHING of any government except the American way of life and the American Government. I am a conscientious member of Friendship Baptist Church and have attempted to conduct myself as a Christian and a law-abiding citizen.

"I end as I began, I am not a communist, have never been a communist, and have no communistic leanings or sympathies."

Her answer, drafted by George E. C. Hayes, her attorney, and signed by her, was the fifth reply she had made to charges that she has been a member of the Communist Party in the District of Columbia.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Moss, suspended employee of the Army Signal Corps, Monday reiterated her denial that she ever was a card-carrying or any other kind of member of the Communist Party.

Answering the Army's latest charges, upon which she was suspended from her job Aug. 4, Mrs. Moss, who won nationwide sympathy when she tangled with Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis.), said:

— o O o —

THE ONLY NEW charge against her, contained in a list the Army forwarded to Mrs. Moss on Aug. 4, consists of a report that she had been given a Communist Party membership book [illegible] for 1943.

Mrs. Moss was called to testify su[illegible] Senator McCarthy be[illegible] Senate Permanent Investig[illegible]mmittee, of which he [illegible]rman, at the climax of [illegible]le with Secretary of th[illegible] Robert T. Stevens.

At a hearing la[illegible] 24, Senator McCarthy sta[illegible]ly that Mrs. Moss was [illegible]munist and was handling to[illegible] code messages from the A[illegible]nal Corps. Mrs. Mary Stal[illegible]k-ward, FBI informant, [illegible] name of Annie Lee Mo[illegible] been on the Communist [illegible] rolls, but she was unable to i[illegible]tify Mrs. Moss by sight.

WHEN MRS. MOSS sought to testify in her own behalf, Senator McCarthy shut her up by saying she looked too ill and he did not want to send her to jail for perjury.

Later, the Army disclosed that Mrs. Moss simply handled punched code tape, had never even entered a code room and could not supply an enemy with worthwhile information.

Mrs. Moss finally got a hearing before Senator McCarthy's committee on March 11. She denied that she had ever been a communist; said she knew nothing about communism and might have been confused with several other persons with the same name.

— o O o —

SENATOR McCARTHY walked out of the hearing room after Mrs. Moss had been testifying for a few minutes. He said he had another engagement. Sens. John L. McClellan of Arkansas and Stuart Symington of Missouri, both Democrats — amid frequent applause from the spectators—denounced hearsay and concealed evidence.

Senator Symington said he believed her and that he would get her a job if the Army did not reinstate her.

Mrs. Moss had been suspended when Senator McCarthy made his charges against her, but was given her job back because the Army had no specific charges and was not ready to hear her case.

— o O o —

IN GENERAL, the latest charges against Mrs. Moss are not new, but one or two new details have been added, such as the book number.

Her answer was addressed to John G. Council Jr., chairman of the Security Screening Board, Department of the Army.

Just how she became involved in a loyalty investigation, Mrs. Moss said, has never been known to her. Nor does she understand the reason for such an investigation any better now, in her [illegible]th formal reply to charges, [illegible] she did when she was first [illegible]d upon to answer them.

— o O o —

[illegible]R ANSWER she set out th[illegible]'s charges and followed each [illegible] with her reply to it.

Cha[illegible]. 1: "Reportedly, prior [illegible]vember, 1942, you joined t[illegible]munist Party, District of [illegible]bia, and were assigned t[illegible] Northeast Club."

Answer: [illegible]ther prior to November, [illegible]or at any other time hav[illegible]owingly joined the Comm[illegible]arty and know nothing of [illegible]rported assignment to the [illegible]east Club."

— o O o —

MRS. MOS[illegible]D she used the words "kn[illegible]" and "purported assign[illegible] because the entire investi[illegible] seemed to her "to stem f[illegible]mething or some things tha[illegible] other person or persons h[illegible]e involving my name."

So that her an[illegible] may not be misunderstood, [illegible]ted that "no one has ever [illegible]ted my membership in the Communist Party.

"I have never personally joined same, nor have I authorized anyone to do so for me, nor have I ever been to or attended any meeting of the so-called 'Northeast Club,' and had never heard of any such club until the first loyalty hearing when I was asked as to my membership in such club, which I then denied and which denial I here reiterate."

— o O o —

CHARGE NO. 2: "You are reported to have been given Communist Party membership book No. 37269 for 1943: also, reportedly, you were assigned to thet Frederick Douglass Branch, and on Dec. 1, 1943, your membership was transferred to the Communist Party, District of Columbia."

Answer: "If the first part of this question is to mean that I was physically given any Communist Party membership book No. 37269 for 1943 or for any other time, or with any number for 1943, or for any other time, I emphatically deny same.

"If the first part of the question is taken to mean that any such Communist Party membership book was assigned to me I assert that same was without my knowledge or authority on my part."

— o O o —

MRS. MOSS REQUESTED a hearing before the Security Screening Board, at which the author or authors of the information concerning her having been given a party membership book be produced.

Answering the second part of charge No. 2 as to being assigned to the Frederick Douglass Branch and her membership being transferred to the District of Columbia Communist Party, she repeated her denial of membership in the Communist Party and asserted that there was no membership to be assigned or transferred.

She also denied any knowledge or authorization of assignment or transfer of any alleged membership in the party at any time. She said she had never knowingly attended any meeting of the Frederick Douglass Club or the Communist Party.

— o O o —

SHE ADDED THAT she used the word "knowingly" to avoid the possibility that she had attended some meeting now said to have been a Communist meeting.

She declared, however, that she had no knowledge of any such meeting and that she had never at any time been approached or solicited to join the Communist Party or any of its branches; and that she herself did not join and never authorized anyone to do so for her.

CHARGE NO. 3: "Allegedly, you reported to the Communist Party, District of Columbia, on March 28, 1944, and were entered on the membership rolls of the Communist Political Association in the summer of 1944."

Answer: Emphatically denied.

— o O o —

CHARGE NO. 4: "Reportedly, consistent with Communist Party policy, your name was dropped from the membership rolls of the Communist Political Association in 1945 when you became a Federal employee."

Mrs. Moss Asks Names Of Accusers

By Eve Edstrom
Staff Reporter

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss yesterday asked the Army to produce her accusers when she sought a personal hearing before a security board and filed "emphatic" denials to seven charges of Communist Party involvement.

The request of the suspended Army Signal Corps employe was contained in her notarized answer to the charge that she was "reported to have been given Communist Party Book No. 37269 for 1943."

"It is to be noted," she declared under oath, "that no time or place is given with regard to this alleged transaction; nor is there any suggestion as to the person with whom the transaction was made."

"It is my earnest desire at the time of the hearing which I am asking in this cause, that the author or authors of this information be produced in order that the error may be demonstrated and that I be given an opportunity to vindicate myself."

Mrs. Moss "emphatically" denied being given the specific Communist Party Book or any other one during 1943 or any other year. If the charge means that such a book was assigned to her, Mrs. Moss said "I assert that same was without any knowledge or authority on my part."

The membership book was listed by the Army when it reopened the Moss case early this month "on the basis of information which was not previously available" and suspended Mrs. Moss for a second time. The other charges were substantially the same as those which she has denied four times since 1948, and which made her a target of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy when he accused the Army of "coddling Communists."

Mrs. Moss had 30 days to answer the latest charges, which were presented to her August 4 by the Security Screening Board, and to request a hearing. The papers were filed yesterday by her attorney, George E. C. Hayes.

Mrs. Moss' point-by-point answer was prefaced with the overall statement that "I am not a Communist, have never been a Communist and have no Communist affiliations or sympathies."

Source Never Known

"The source of my involvement in this type of investigation has never been known to me; nor do I understand the reason for same any better now, in this my fifth formal response to such charges, than I did when I was first called upon to answer same in 1948," she said.

Her answer concluded with: "I know nothing of any government except the American way of life and the American government. I am a conscientious member of the Friendship Baptist Church and have attempted to conduct myself as a Christian and a law-abiding citizen. I end as I began. I am not a Communist; have never been a Commuist and have no communistic leanings or sympathies."

The first charge against Mrs. Moss involved her joining the District's Communist Party prior to November, 1942, and her assignment to the Northeast Club. Mrs. Moss denied "knowingly" joining the party and declared she knew nothing of the "purported assignment."

"I have used the words 'knowingly' and 'purported assignment' because this entire investigation seems to me to stem from something, or some things, that some other person or persons have done involving my name," she said.

"So that the answer may not be misunderstood, I state that no one has ever solicited my membership in the Communist Party; I have never personally joined same, nor have I authorized anyone to do so for me; nor have I ever been to or attended any meeting of the so-called Northeast Club and had never heard of any such club until the first loyalty hearing when I was asked as to my membership in such club, which I then denied and which denial I here reiterate."

A similar denial was made to a charge that she later had been assigned to the Frederick Douglass Branch and her membership transferred to the District's Communist Party.

Emphatic Denial

She "emphatically" denied a third allegation that she reported to the local Communist Party on March 28, 1944, and declared that if her name was entered on the membership rolls of the Communist Political Association, it was done without her knowledge.

A fourth charge asserted that, consistent with Communist Party policy, her name was dropped from membership rolls when she became a Federal employe.

"I am entirely without knowledge as to what is referred to as Communist Party policy," she said. ". . . I deny the implication of the charge that my name was dropped from the membership rolls . . . and repeat that my name could never have properly been on the rolls of the Communist Party or Communist Political Association."

Other charges involved attendance at additional Communist meetings, a subscription to the Daily Worker, and contact with party leaders.

She denied these charges, noting, however, that the Daily Worker had been delivered to her house but that she refused to pay for it because no one in her home had subscribed to it and the paper then ceased to be delivered.

She also observed that for two weeks she had lived with a couple who since have been identified as Communist sympathizers. But, Mrs. Moss maintained, that "neither of those persons ever spoke to me about communism" and she has had no contact with them since she left their home in 1943.

A final allegation involved a "reliable report" that Mrs. Moss had been discharged from employment with the Government Services, Inc., on November 13, 1944, although she had stated she had never been discharged when she was hired at the pentagon.

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, Signal Corps worker, restored to her job after suspension on charges made by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, was suspended again yesterday by the Army. She is shown being sworn in at the earlier hearing.

Mrs. Moss Is Suspended Second Time by Army

Herald Tribune Newspaper, New York, Thur 8-5-54

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (UP).—The Army suspended Mrs. Annie Lee Moss from her Pentagon job for the second time today pending final settlement of her security case.

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R., Wis., said at a session of his Investigations subcommittee in February that the forty-eight-year-old Mrs. Moss had been and may still be "an active member of the Communist party." Mrs. Moss denied the charge under oath at a televised hearing.

A former Federal Bureau of Investigations undercover agent, Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, testified before the subcommittee in support of Sen. McCarthy's charge. She said a Negro woman named Annie Lee Moss was a Communist "as early as 1944." and worked in the Defense Department cafeteria at the time.

The Army said today Mrs. Moss has been given a "statement of the issues" and she may request a hearing before a security hearing board within thirty days. It said her case was reopened "on the basis of information which was not previously available and which has not been satisfactorily resolved by an investigation." It did not elaborate.

McCarthy Praises Stevens

Sen. McCarthy said: "This is a good, healthy indication that they are tightening up on security regulations and Bob Stevens should be complimented." It was Sen. McCarthy's first public praise of Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens since the Army-McCarthy hearings.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D., Mo., who once promised Mrs. Moss that he would see that she got a job if the Army did not reinstate her after an earlier suspension, declined to comment.

Sen John L. McClellan, D., Ark., a member of the investigations subcommittee, said today "if she has any Communist leanings she should be gotten out of the government." Sen McClellan, who was one of several Senators who protested the subcommittee's procedures in the case, said "all I ever asked was that she be confronted with her accusers."

Mrs. Moss was transferred in late January from her job as operator of a machine which transmitted coded messages. She was given a "non-sensitive" position in the Signal Corps supply section, typing record cards.

Suspended in February

She was suspended from her $3,335-a-year post in late February. At the end of thirty days, when no charges were brought against her, she was permitted by law to return to work.

The Army said today she has been working "without security clearance and without access to classified information and material." It had stated previously her case was under study before Sen. McCarthy brought it up.

Mrs. Moss was in the record-card job when Sen. McCarthy charged the Army had refused to dismiss a Mrs. Annie Lee Moss working in a secret Pentagon code room. The Army said its Mrs. Moss had never had access to codes or code rooms and could not have known what was contained in the coded messages she transmitted—some confidential and some not.

Mrs. Moss testified she "never was a member of the Communist party or anything else" and has "never been inside a code room in my life." She said she had not even heard of communism until several years after she was alleged to have been a party member.

The Moss case came up during the Investigations subcommittee's hearings on alleged Communist infiltration of the Signal Corps. Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D., Ark., cited the Moss case as one of the items in his charges against Sen McCarthy. His charges are among those to be studied by a special Senate committee.

Cohn Under Fire as Woman Denies M'Carthy Red Charge

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 11—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, suspended Army Signal Corps employe, softly but flatly denied all Communist party activities or membership today. The crowded caucus room of the Senate Office Building, where the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation was in session, rang with repeated applause as Democratic members struck at "convicting people by rumor and hearsay and inuende."

The target of Democratic resentment was Roy Cohn, chief counsel for the subcommittee headed by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Wisconsin Republican. Mr. Cohn had countered Mrs. Moss' testimony by saying the subcommittee had still secret evidence that she was a Communist.

The Democrats, led by Senator John L. McClellan of Arkansas, demanded that he produce the evidence or refrain from public mention of it.

Senator McCarthy, in the original hearing at which the charges against Mrs. Moss were produced, had suggested she would "run the risk of indictment for perjury" when she appeared bofore the committee.

As the Moss hearing was held today, Republican members of the subcommittee were in possession of an Army report on alleged favored treatment given to Pvt. David Schine, former consultant to the submittee.

Mr. Cohn was said to have intervened with the Army on behalf of Private Schine.

The Republicans were reported determined to force the resignation of Mr. Cohn, but Senator McCarthy was apparently determined to keep him.

McCarthy Is Absent

Senator McCarthy was absent from the committee room today when the scene over Mrs. Moss' testimony took place. He had gone to his office to prepare for his radio appearance later in which he answered criticism of him and the Republican party by Adlai E. Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic Presidential nominee.

No effort was made by the presiding officer, Senator Karl E. Mundt, South Dakota Republican, to check the crowd's applause or to interfere with the Democrats in their vigorous denunciation of Mr. Cohn's tactics.

Senator Mundt ordered Mr. Cohn's remarks about undisclosed evidence stricken from the committee record. Senator McClellan declared that the "evil" of the situation was that such a statement might be stricken from the record but it could not be stricken from the press or the minds of those who heard it.

Mrs. Moss, a 49-year-old Negro wearing a black coat, frayed white gloves, and a tan hat, had leaned forward anxiously in her chair as she offered a categorical denial of every charge that had been made that she was a Communist party member and had paid dues to it between 1943 and 1945.

Symington Defends Her

When she left the stand, Senator Stuart Symington, Missouri Democrat, flushed with anger, shouted into his microphone:

"I may be sticking my neck out, but I think you're telling the truth. And if you're not taken back in your Army job, you come around and see me. I am going to see that you get a job."

Mrs. Moss was the Army employe whose case Senator McCarthy suddenly made public Feb. 23, when he was expecting a showdown with Robert T. Stevens, Secretary of the Army, on the Senator's alleged mistreatment of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, Commanding Officer of Camp Kilmer, N. J.

One day earlier Mrs. Moss also had denied all the charges in testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee of the House of Representatives. One Republican House member said the evidence was insufficient to warrant a public hearing before his group.

Although Mrs. Moss was a mechanical teletype operator in the Pentagon Communications Center, Senator McCarthy repeatedly has referred to her as a "code clerk" who received a sensitive job from Army officials who knew of her Communist record.

She said she had never been in a code room in her life and had no knowledge of the content of coded messages she handled in the Communications Center.

The witness who said Feb. 23 that Mrs. Moss had been a Communist was Mrs. Stalcup Markward, a former undercover agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the Communist party. She said she had seen Mrs. Moss' name on Communist records, but she could not identify her as a person.

Subsequently, Senator McCarthy contended that another "top functionary" of the Communist party, who had just decided to break with the party, had given him secret evidence corroborating that of Mrs. Markward.

Mr. Cohn told reporters at that time that the new witness had identified Mrs. Moss as a name rather than as a person.

When Mrs. Moss first was summoned, on Feb. 24, her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, said she was nervous and suffering from a heavy could. Senator McCarthy suggested at that time that she should not testify.

He Suggests Perjury

"We do have the sworn testimony of two witnesses who know that she had been a member of the Communist party for a long time," Senator McCarthy said on Feb. 24. "There are other informants who will testify to the same.

"I do not want to bring a woman here who is in ill health and have her run the risk of being indicted for perjury. We have too many pending cases of contempt and perjury at this time, and we are not trying to build that up."

Mr. Hayes, the attorney, drew Senator McCarthy's wrath when he challenged the Senator's manner and method.

"It disturbs me," said Mr. Hayes, "when I come before a committee that begins by telling me that 'we have already condemned her and we have all of the evidence and there is no need of your coming because whatever happens we are going to send her to the Department of Justice.'"

It was the repetition of remarks such as Senator McCarthy made that got Mr. Cohn in trouble with Senator Mundt and the Democratic committee members today. He explained he could not produce the other testimony because the unidentified witness now was in the hands of the F. B. I. and its approval must be obtained before the evidence could be produced.

DENIES COMMUNIST LINK: Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, suspended Army Signal Corps employe, as she told Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations she was not a Communist. Her denials won support of Democratic members.

McClellan Attacks Cohn

Senator McClellan, who earlier had said he was not satisfied that the evidence proved Mrs. Moss to have been a Communist, ripped into Mr. Cohn when he referred to secret testimony that he was unwilling to make public.

The Arkansas Senator, counted among the conservative Democrats, said it was unfair to bring such charges against any American citizen and then fail to back them up with evidence. The public, he said, was entitled to weigh the evidence on which Mr. Cohn based his charges.

One point at issue in Mrs. Moss' testimony today was about her knowledge of a man named "Rob Hall," identified by Mr. Cohn as The Daily Worker representative here and a top functionary of the Communist party.

She said she knew a Robert Hall, who was a Negro, in connection with a cafeteria workers' union and that many years ago he had tried to get her son to sell The Daily Worker. Her husband, now dead, would not allow the son to take on the job.

The "Rob Hall" to whom Mr. Cohn referred is a white man and is the Washington correspondent for The Daily Worker, but the Democrats on the subcommittee at first missed Mrs. Moss' reference to the Robert Hall she knew as "a colored man."

A reporter left his seat at the press table and went up to the committee table where he whispered the conflicting information to Robert Kennedy, counsel to the minority members.

The Democrats then demanded to know from Mr. Cohn whether the Mr. Hall he was referring to was white. Mr. Cohn said he did not know. At this point, another reporter passed up a note saying that he knew Mr. Hall to be white. Senator McClellan read this communication into the record, and Mr. Cohn said he would check on it.

Three Annie Mosses

There was testimony too from Mrs. Moss that there were three persons named Annie Lee Moss in the District of Columbia. Senator Henry M. Jackson, Washington Democrat, wanted to know if all of them were Negroes. Mrs. Moss said she did not know.

Mrs. Moss testified that for a period The Daily Worker came in the mail to her home, but that she had never read it, and that, when a white man came to collect for the subscription, she refused to pay. She said she did not know the name of the man "but he kicked up a fuss."

Asked if she knew The Daily Worker was a Communist publication, she said she had never even heard of communism until 1948 when Congressional committees made her aware of them.

"Do you know who Karl Marx was?" asked Senator Symington.

"Whose that?" she responded, and the crowd roared with laughter.

All three Democratic Senators joined in questions that struck at Senator McCarthy's contention that Mrs. Moss was a coding clerk in a super-secret position.

She told them, in response to questions, that her job was mechanical, and that she had no possible knowledge of the content of any coded messages that passed through her hands. The Army previously had said that even if the messages reached unauthorized hands they could not be decoded.

But Mrs. Moss testified she had never given messages to any person and would "have reported them" if anybody had made a request that she do so.

Mrs. Moss, apparently fully recovered from her cold, was eager to please the Senators as she took her place before the committee. Senator McCarthy began the questioning, but remained for only a few minutes and not for any of the action that followed.

There was no repetition by Senator McCarthy or any other Senator of the assertion that not regard her as "important in the Communist apparatus" but he was curious as to how a person with a known Communist record had been transferred from a cafeteria "to a code room." Mr. Hayes sought to speak but was silenced by a stern warning from Senator McCarthy that he would not hear from the lawyer, only from the witness.

Mr. Cohn took up the questioning, and recalled that Mrs. Markward had testified that Mrs. Moss had been a member of the Northeast Club of the Communist party in Washington. He asked if her testimony was true.

"No sir, it is not," said Mrs. Moss.

She denied in turn that she had ever been a member of the party, had attended party meetings, paid party dues, or subscribed to the Daily Worker.

After Mrs. Moss had concluded her testimony, she listened briefly to testimony by John Saunders, who gave his address as 70 East Seventh Street, New York, and who admitted membership in the Communist party from 1947 until 1949.

He said he had been "recruited" into the party while employed at Federal Telecommunications Laboratory at Nutley, N. J., and named other employes who he said were Communists with him.

He said the Communist party had assigned him the name of "J. Peters." Senator Mundt asked if he had been connected with the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers spy ring. The witness said he had not.

Democrats brought out that Mr. Saunders claimed no knowledge of sabotage, espionage, or the handing of classified documents to unauthorized persons by anyone.

Pentagon Reinstates Mrs. Moss, but Will Continue Inquiry

By John A. Giles

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, target of Senator McCarthy in his controversy with the Army, has been reinstated in her Pentagon job but a department inquiry into charges against her continued today.

The Army announced last night that she would return to work Monday after the 30-day suspension instituted when a witness before the Wisconsin Republican's Investigation subcommittee testified she knew an Annie Lee Moss who was a Communist.

Mrs. Moss strongly denied she was or ever has been a Communist or that she had even bought a copy of the Communist Daily Worker.

The Army announcement said she was "being returned to duty March 29, pending final adjudication of her case, to her position in the Signal Corps Supply Section."

Attorney's Opinion.

Her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, said today the ruling "doesn't mean that the Army can't go forward with any charges and suspend her again.

"I understand the Army will advise her of any charges that may be decided upon," he said.

But Mr. Hayes added that if no charges were proved against Mrs. Moss there was "no question" that she would receive back pay for the period of her suspension.

A special Army board was reported to have nearly completed its study of the Moss case.

Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, a former FBI undercover agent, testified before the McCarthy group that she "had known a woman by the name of Annie Lee Moss on the list of card-carrying, dues paying member of the Northeast Club," a Red organization of which she was chairman.

When Mrs. Moss appeared in the committee room, however, Mrs. Markward said she "had her face rather well wrapped up. I didn't really get a good look at her this morning. That being the case, I cannot positively swear that I know her or personally knew her. But from the general description that I have had, it is entirely possible or probable that she is the person."

Hearing in Uproar.

Committee Counsel Roy Cohn insisted at a subsequent hearing that a witness he refused to name had testified against Mrs. Moss in closed session.

The subcommittee was thrown into an uproar. Senator Symington, Democrat, of Missouri, came to the aid of Mrs. Moss and commented that if she didn't get her job back to "come to see me."

Until the inquiry Mrs. Moss was a transmitting machine operator for the Signal Corps Communications Center. Senator McCarthy called her job an "encoding, decoding" operation.

The Army said she sat at a transmitting machine. Rolls of tape with coded messages punched into them were placed where she could reach them. She fed them into the machine and pushed a button, which started the machine's operation. Some one else at the other end of the machine took the still undeciphered messages out.

But since early February—when the whole affair came up—Mrs. Moss has been assigned to an unclassified clerk-typist position outside the communications center. That is the job she will resume Monday.

WOMAN IN PROBE RETURNS TO JOB

Suspension of Mrs. Moss Ends Pending Decision

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP)—The Army Friday told Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, a signal corps employe suspended after she came under Sen. McCarthy's fire, to return to duty Monday pending a final decision in her case.

An Army spokesman said Mrs. Moss would return to her civil service job in the signal corps supply section and would remain at work until the Army loyalty board completes its review of all the circumstances.

Mrs. Moss, a middle-aged Negro, was called before the Senate investigations committee headed by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.) after a former woman undercover agent for the FBI testified she knew that an Annie Lee Moss was a Communist, although she was unable to identify her personally.

Mrs. Moss denied under oath that she is or ever was a Communist. She said there were others with the same name in Washington, and a question was raised at the hearing as to whether she wasn't a victim of mistaken identity.

Mrs. Moss was transferred to the supply section prior to her suspension on Feb. 25. Previous to that time she had worked for a while in a room with 50 other civilians, all engaged in manning or feeding tape into communications machines.

Under civil service regulations the Army was required to restore Mrs. Moss to duty after 30 days of suspension if no formal charges had been placed against her.

No such charges have been filed, defense officials said earlier, because the loyalty board had not completed its review. That review will eventually go to Army Secretary Stevens for action.

Earlier Friday Mrs. Moss went to the Pentagon with her lawyer for conferences with signal corps lawyers and representatives of the intelligence branch.

The woman's attorney told reporters that his client had been asked to clear up certain points raised in the hearings before the Senate investigations subcommittee. The attorney said that the Army officials who talked to Mrs. Moss appeared to be satisfied with her explanations.

In Defense Of Aubrey Williams

It is ironical and tragic too that Aubrey Williams, former head of the National Youth Administration, should now be charged with being a dupe of the communists. As head of the NYA which gave American youth new faith in the promises of our democracy during the darkest days of the depression, Mr. Williams probably did more to curb the growth of communism in our country than any of the current crop of investigators in the Congress can ever hope to do.

We should, of course, not be surprised that Aubrey Williams would run afoul the brand of Americanism to which the bigots and anti-Negro tories in the South and the North subscribe. Mr. Williams walks in the liberal tradition of our country which holds that freedom and equality are practical principles for our society and not solely unattainable ideals.

Mrs. Roosevelt summed the matter up neatly in her recent column in which she said: "I knew Aubrey Williams well and worked closely with him when he was head of the National Youth Administration. He also said he was not a Communist at any time and nothing I ever saw would suggest that he could have been. I am beginning to think, however, that if you have been a liberal, some people consider you a Communist.

"Americans should understand what communism really is and they should be very sure that investigating committees and courts understand the real danger of communism. It is equally important that they understand that those who hold liberal views may go a little further that some of their most conservative neighbors are still not Communists."

STEVENS BOWS TO M'CARTHY AT ADMINISTRATION BEHEST; WILL YIELD DATA ON PERESS

SHOWDOWN IS OFF

Accord Is Reported at a G. O. P. Meeting—Officers to Testify

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—The Army bowed today to the demands of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy.

Robert T. Stevens, the Secretary of the Army, reversed his previous stand and abandoned his defiance of the McCarthy investigating subcommittee. A showdown meeting set for tomorrow morning, was then canceled.

The widespread impression in Washington was that Mr. Stevens' abrupt about-face reflected a high Administration policy decision.

Secretary Stevens agreed to stop telling Army officers to ignore summonses from the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, which the Wisconsin Republican heads.

The Secretary agreed, moreover, that he would furnish to the subcommittee the names of all Army personnel involved in the promotion and the subsequent granting of an honorable discharge to Maj. Irving Peress of New York, an alleged Communist.

He agreed that all these persons would be made available as witnesses if the subcommittee wished to question them.

Accedes to Demands

What Secretary Stevens agreed to do was precisely what Senator McCarthy had demanded. It was the Army's unwillingness to do these things that led to last week's bitter fight and Secretary Stevens' decision to tell high-ranking officers to ignore summonses from the McCarthy committee.

The Army Secretary had said he would go before the committee himself to protest what he called "unwarranted abuse" of officers by Senator McCarthy.

A "Memorandum of Understanding" between the Army and Republican members of Senator McCarthy's subcommittee was announced at 2:55 P. M. after a two-hour luncheon meeting in the Capitol office of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee.

Present at the peace conference were Secretary Stevens and Senators McCarthy, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota and Charles Potter of Michigan. The two subcommittee Democrats now in Washington — Senators John L. McClellan of Arkansas and Henry M. Jackson of Washington—were not invited.

The Administration decision to drop its public fight with Senator McCarthy because of charges he had mistreated Army officers in questioning them was taken a few hours after President Eisenhower had returned to Washington from his Palm Springs, Calif., golfing vacation.

Later Senator Mundt said that the Republican members of the subcommittee had set up the meeting as a matter of "spontaneous combustion" to get Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Stevens together.

Senator Mundt also said that he was sure President Eisenhower had nothing to do with it. He was asked about reports that the President had sent word that he wished the dispute settled in private. "I'm sure not," was Mr. Mundt's reply.

Senator Mundt said he got the idea of the peace meeting when he and Secretary Stevens were sharing a speaking engagement Monday at Valley Forge. "Stevens and I talked it over then," Senator Mundt said, "and I felt it could be ironed out."

High Administration officials earlier had expressed concern over whether Secretary Stevens had picked a strong case for his scheduled showdown with Senator McCarthy. They noted that the Secretary was willing to admit that the Army had made a mistake in giving an honorable discharge to Major Peress, a dental officer stationed at Camp Kilmer, N. J., after the major had declined to answer questions as to whether he was a Communist.

Also, many Senators, including Democrats who disagree with Senator McCarthy on his methods, would uphold the right of a Senate group to subpoena officials of the Executive Department, including Army officers.

This led some Administration leaders to conclude that Secretary Stevens could not win in the Senate a fight predicated on his order to officers to disregard summonses from the McCarthy subcommittee.

Senator McCarthy obviously was ready for a showdown. Earlier today he had brought out before an open hearing new evidence designed to show that the Eisenhower Administration had not acted pormptly in getting an alleged Communist out of the Pentagon's Signal Corps Communications Center.

Employe Shifted

The employe, Mrs. Anna Lee Moss, was shifted on Feb. 5 from the Communications Center to a clerical post in the supply office while her status as a possible "security risk" was being reviewed by the Army.

Mrs. Moss has denied Communist party membership and both she and the Army declared she never had access to any decoded secret documents.

One high official, discussing the Army-McCartyd ispute, commented:

"You can't make a strong case if youh ave to start out by admitting you were wrong."

That was the situation when Senator Dirksen summoned the Republican subcommittee members and Secretary Stevens to the luncheon conference. It was held in an office bearing the number P-54 tucked away in a corridor near the Rotunda. The session was intended to be secret, but word that it was in progress spread quickly. Fully fifty reporters and camera men were on hand when the meeting ended.

The luncheon plates still were in place as the photographers swarmed all over the room, snapping the conferees.

They Shake Hands

Senator McCarthy was all smiles. Secretary Stevens sat for the most part in stony-faced silence on a green leather sofa. But he smiled and shook hands with the Wisconsin Senator at the request of the photographers.

After the picture-taking, Senator Mundt stood before a microphone to read the following "memorandum of understanding":

"At a luncheon conference today attended by Secretary of the Army Stevens and Senators McCarthy, Dirksen, Mundt and Potter, the following memorandum of understanding was agreed to:

"1. There is complete accord between the Department of the Army and the Senate Subcommittee on Investigations that communism and Communists must be rooted out of the armed services wherever and whenever found.

"2. There is complete agreement among us that the Secretary of the Army will order the Inspector General to complete the investigation which he ordered upon his return from the Far East on Feb. 3 in the Peress case as rapidly as possible; and he will give the committee the names of everyone involved in the promotion and honorable discharge of Peress; and that such individuals will be available to appear before the committee.

"3. In view of the fact that Senator [Stuart] Symington has requested that the calling of [Brig.] Gen. (Ralph W.) Zwicker be postponed until his return from Europe, the appearance of General Zwicker will be deferred. If the committee decides to call General Zwicker, Secretary Stevens stated that at that time General Zwicker will be available.

"4. In view of the foregoing memorandum of understanding, the hearings scheduled for tomorrow have been canceled."

It was Senator McCarthy's original questioning of General Zwicker, commandant at Camp Kilmer, from which Major Peress was discharged, that led Secretary Stevens to issue his order directing the general not to appear and his statement offering to testify himself.

The Army Secretary protested against "humiliating treatment" accorded the general by Senator McCarthy, who had said at one point that General Zwicker should be removed from any command and was not "fit" to wear an army uniform.

Sees No Further 'Abuse'

[At Camp Kilmer, General Zwicker declined comment on the latest developments, The United Press reported. The post public information officer issued a statement saying only that the "entire matter is now at Department of Army Level, and General Zwicker refers all questions concerning the incident to higher headquarters."]

Mr. Stevens replied "no comment" to most of the questions put to him at the Capitol, including queries as to whether he had consulted President Eisenhower before making the agreement and whether he had any assurances regarding the treatment of Army officers in the future.

When the Secretary returned to the Pentagon, however, he told reporters there that he had

"every reason to believe that Army personnel will not be abused by the committee" in the future.

Secretary Stevens was asked if he regarded the agreement with the McCarthy subcommittee as a "retreat."

"I do not consider I am a person that capitulates or retreats," he replied.

Asked if he planned to resign, the Secretary said, "No."

He would not comment on how the peace conference was arranged, or whether the initiative had been taken by the Administration or by the Republican members.

'Spontaneous Combustion'

Senator Mundt insisted the conference had resulted from "spontaneous combustion." He said Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Senator William F. Knowland of California, the Republican Floor Leader, had played no part in arranging the session.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said that the President got his first news of the agreement from a news ticker in the White House.

At an open hearing, which adjourned just before noon, Senator McCarthy continued to assert that the Army had failed to ferret out alleged Communists.

He began the hearing by announcing that at a secret session with him this morning two officials of the Communist party in Washington had decided to break with the party and to furnish to the Federal Bureau of Investigation information about other party members.

He said the two now were at the F. B. I. offices telling the story and that for this reason he had deferred calling them before the subcommittee or disclosing their names.

Senator Mundt told reporters later that it was his "impression" that the couple described by Senator McCarthy already were "undercover agents for the F. B. I.," and had been for some time. Mr. Mundt said that perhaps the Senate group had subpoened them, thinking they were bona fide Communist party members.

Reports Evidence "Confirmed"

The Justice Department said it had no comment.

Senator McCarthy made available to Republican and Democratic members on a confidential basis part of a transcript of the testimony of the two. But the chairman told the crowded hearing room that one of them had "confirmed" evidence that Mrs. Moss was a Communist party member. Senator Mundt said one of the mystery witnesses had stated he had seen Mrs. Moss' name on the Communist party membership lists.

Then the Senator summoned Mrs. Moss. She came in slowly, leaning on the arm of her attorney, George E. C. Hayes. She appeared to be suffering from a bad cold. She removed her glasses occasionally and wiped her eyes.

Mrs. Moss was trembling as she went to the witness stand and Senator McCarthy told her that she need not testify if she were ill. But, he added, he was calling her now because she had been well enough yesterday to issue "public statements."

Mr. Hayes interrupted to observe that his client spoke yesterday only with one person. He said the person had represented himself as a representative of the subcommittee and had demanded to take Mrs. Moss' picture.

Cautions Mrs. Moss

Senator McCarthy said that if the name of this newspaper man could be learned he would be cited for contempt.

Turning to the witness again, Senator McCarthy told her he had evidence that she had been a member of the Communist party for a long time, and that he would have her cited for perjury if she testified that she was not a member.

Again Mr. Hayes protested, pointing out that his client had testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee for two hours on Monday and had answered every question without "taking refuge" in any constitutional amendment.

He said his client had been made highly nervous by Senator McCarthy's threat if she denied party membership. Mrs. Moss, at all times, has denied party membership, both in her Government application forms and before the House committee.

Does Not Testify

Mrs. Moss gestured in the direction of her throat as she whispered to Mr. Hayes. Senator McCarthy told them to leave the room for a conference and to then tell him whether the witness was physically fit to testify. Mr. Hayes returned in a few minutes and said she was not fit.

The Senator said he knew that Mrs. Moss was a Communist and that he wasn't interested "in that woman as a person at all," but was interested in finding out "who in military, knowing that lady was a Communist, promoted her from waitress to coding clerk although she had no ability at all."

He also told Mr. Hayes that "you are not the typical type of Communist lawyer," and got into a dispute with Senator Jackson over the comment. The Washington Democrat asserted he did not like the implication that Mr. Hayes was a Communist.

Senator McCarthy said the Democrat had absented himself from the committee since last July and did not know the type of lawyers the subcommittee had encountered recently. In any event, Senator McCarthy said, he had not meant to say that Mr. Hayes was a Communist, and Mr. Hayes said he had not so understood the remark.

Senator McCarthy ordered Mrs. Moss to appear at 10:30 A. M. Friday unless a medical certificate was presented by a physician, saying that she was not fit to appear.

Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, a former undercover F. B. I. agent in the Communist party, was the witness who said yesterday she had seen Mrs. Moss' name on Communist membership rolls during 1943, 1944 and a part of 1945.

She was present in the hearing room today but said she could not identify Mrs. Moss. She was not certain that she ever had seen Mrs. Moss, she said, but she knew that her name, job description and address all tallied with the woman under question.

Hearing Set Tomorrow.

The subcommittee planned a hearing at the Capitol tomorrow dealing with alleged Communist activity at Fort Monmouth, N. J. The session had been scheduled for yesterday in New York. It was postponed and transferred here because a Democratic member, Senator McClellan of Arkansas, protested that he had received no notice until after 3 p.m. Friday and could not have arranged to go to New York.

Mrs. Moss testified earlier last week before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in closed session. Mr. Hayes said she will repeat under oath to the Senate subcommittee that she is not a Communist and never has been.

Mrs. Mary S. Markward, once an undercover worker for the FBI within the Communist Party in the District of Columbia, told the McCarthy subcommittee Tuesday that an Annie Lee Moss was a dues-paying Red in the early 1940s. She was unable to definitely identify the woman who worked for the Signal Corps as the same person she knew as a Communist.

Identification Claimed.

McCarthy said Mrs. Moss had been identified positively as a Red by a witness who has not yet appeared in open hearings. The Senator said Mrs. Moss was promoted from a waitress to a decoding clerk handling "top-secret messages" and he wants to know who was responsible for this, "knowing her to be a member of the Communist Party."

The Army says Mrs. Moss never handled secret codes or had access to the code room.

At a McCarthy subcommittee hearing last Wednesday, the Senator suggested she was too ill to testify and warned her of possible perjury action. Her lawyer then said, after consulting his weeping client, that he did not think she was able to testify at that time.

said Saturday that Mrs. Moss was notified Friday of her suspension, effective Feb. 25, the day after she appeared before McCarthy's investigations subcommittee.

Hayes said Mrs. Moss was informed she was under suspension "pending adjudication" of her case, apparently, he added, without pay. Hayes stated that this was, to his knowledge, the first inkling she had that she was under investigation.

McCarthy, who heads the subcommittee, has charged that Mrs. Moss has a Communist record and was entrusted with handling top-secret documents in the Pentagon code room.

The Defense Department said she was merely a clerk, with no access to secret material. She appeared before the subcommittee Wednesday, but McCarthy postponed hearing her on the ground she was ill. Hayes said he has since informed the senator his client is ready to testify.

Hayes declared Mrs. Moss is prepared to testify without invoking the fifth amendment, which permits witnesses to decline to answer questions if they feel they may be incriminated by doing so.

Mrs. Moss Suspended From Army Job Until Red Case Is Settled

Lawyer Says Woman Is Ready to Testify Before McCarthy

Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, awaiting questioning in Senator McCarthy's search for evidence of Army "coddling" of Communists, has been suspended from her job by the Army Signal Corps, her lawyer said yesterday.

The 49-year-old colored woman, who appeared before the Senate Investigations Subcommittee last Wednesday but was excused because she seemed ill, was transferred recently from the job of code clerk to work in a stock room. Attorney George E. C. Hayes said she was notified yesterday that she was suspended as of last Thursday "pending the adjudication of her case."

Pentagon officials made no comment.

Mr. Hayes said he notified the subcommittee yesterday that Mrs. Moss was prepared to testify. He was informed, he said, that he would be told early this week as to when the subcommittee wants to question her.

Mrs. Moss Suspended

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, Pentagon employe under fire by Sen. McCarthy (R) Wis., has been suspended by the Defense Department pending an investigation.

Her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, said Saturday that Mrs. Moss was notified Friday of her suspension, effective Feb. 25, the day after she appeared before McCarthy's investigations subcommittee.

Hayes said Mrs. Moss was informed she was under suspension "pending adjudication" of her case, apparently, he added, without pay. Hayes stated that this was, to his knowledge, the first inkling she had that she was under investigation.

McCarthy, who heads the subcommittee, has charged that Mrs. Moss has a Communist record and was entrusted with handling top-secret documents in the Pentagon code room.

The Defense Department said she was merely a clerk, with no access to secret material. She appeared before the subcommittee Wednesday, but McCarthy postponed hearing her on the ground she was ill. Hayes said he has since informed the senator his client is ready to testify.

Hayes declared Mrs. Moss is prepared to testify without invoking the fifth amendment, which permits witnesses to decline to answer questions if they feel they may be incriminated by doing so.

Congress Told U. S. Borders Undermanned

The Immigration and Naturalization Service told Congress that the Eisenhower budget "involves some risks in connection with admission of dangerous and undesirable aliens." The service is in charge of the border patrol in the Southwest and elsewhere.

Acting Commissioner Benjamin Habberton testified before the House Appropriations Committee that the way was open for "almost any number" of foreign agents, including Communists, to enter the U. S. undetected.

Service Swamped

The Administration cut the service budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 by $3,250,000. That followed a reduction of $1.8 million for the current year.

Habberton asserted that the service already was swamped and that the "relatively small force of officers" could not cope with "the hordes of illegal aliens flooding the Southwest."

"A progressively increasing number of illegal entries into the U. S. across the Mexican and Canadian borders cannot be other than a threat to the security of the U. S.," Habberton declared.

Easy Avenue of Entry

"In the midst of a situation where the small border patrol force is being overrun by hordes of illegal aliens, an easy avenue of entry into the country is provided for almost any number of Communists or foreign agents from Mexico, Guatemala and Dutch Guiana, and, entry into Mexico being as easy as it is, from any country in the entire world.

"This mass invasion of illegal aliens has reached proportions which are beyond control of the limited force provided to deal with it."

Four Area Residents Linked to Red Affairs

By Matt McDade
Staff Reporter

A former undercover agent and two former Communists yesterday pointed accusing fingers at four Washington area residents with whom the witnesses said they had worked here in pro-Russian activities.

One of the accused, a builder, admitted under questioning that he has constructed several large veterans' housing projects here, with Veterans Administration guarantees. But he refused to say whether the firm operated with Government loans.

Mrs. Mary S. Markward, an FBI agent for six years, and two surprise witnesses from New York and New Hampshire identified the four persons as old associates at the opening of hearings on communism in the District. The series will be conducted by a Senate Internal Security Subcommittee headed by Sen. William E. Jenner (R-Ind.).

Fifth Amendment

The four, all described as natives of Russia, turned aside almost every question of any nature, claiming their constitutional privilege under the Fifth Amendment.

The Subcommittee attempted to link the four persons to Iron Curtain embassies here.

Mrs. Peter Chapa, of 1811 Belvedere blvd., Silver Spring, proved to be such a reticent witness that she balked at telling where she was born, when she came to the United States, where she has lived and whether she knows what an embassy is.

Mrs. Chapa, a soft-spoken, dark woman, often turned and whispered to her attorney, Charles E. Ford.

"Haven't you ever resided any place?" asked Sen. Herman Welker (R-Idaho), who conducted yesterday's hearing.

"I decline to answer," said Mrs. Chapa, amicably.

Others subpenaed to appear before the Subcommittee identified themselves as Mrs. Chapa's brother, Nathan Brisker, of 4515 29th st. nw., secretary of Housing Development, Inc.; Roy Israel Peltz, an electrical contractor, of 5302 New Hampshire ave. nw., and Joseph Teitelbaum, a painter of 3338 Chauncey pl., Mt. Rainier.

Ford also represented Brisker and Teitelbaum. Peltz was represented by Joseph Forer.

Peltz was the first person called to the stand. Peltz said he was born in Odessa, Russia, came to the United States and filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen in about 1924. He said he filed a petition in 1942 or 1942 and requested a hearing but "never heard."

Embassy Queries

Subcommittee Counsel Richard Arens questioned Peltz closely about certain personnel and functions at the Polish, Czech and Russian Embassies here. Peltz refused to answer.

Referring to a man he identified as Czeslaw Gromostaj, of the Polish Embassy, Arens said, "Do you understand that if you don't know him or haven't known him, you are not entitled to claim the constitutional privilege?"

"I just feel that I want to claim the privilege because I don't want to discuss the matter," Peltz said.

Peltz at first sidestepped questions about arrests, but finally admitted he was convicted and sentenced on sedition charges in 1930 for "distributing leaflets in front of a textile plant to organize a union."

He denied ever engaging in any acts of espionage or sabotage against the Government.

Then, Earl Reno, of Marlow, N. H., was called to the stand. Reno said he broke with the Communists in 1942 and became a consultant to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in January.

Reno said he knew Peltz in 1935 and 1936 when, he, Reno, was a party organizer in Baltimore and helping to build up an independent district here. Reno said he and Peltz both attended closed meetings of the Communist Party.

Say They Knew Peltz

Mrs. Markward and Leonard Patterson, of Jamaica, N. Y., a shipyard worker and self-styled former Communist functionary, both testified they knew Peltz in party activities here.

Patterson said he knew Nathan Brisker as an organizer in the Young Communist League here in the early thirties as a "colonized" member planted in the National Guard. Patterson said Brisker was such a "good man" that he got his release from the Guard and took him to Philadelphia as an educational director.

"Brisker became a member of the National Committee at my recommendation," Patterson said.

Like the other accused persons, Brisker declined to answer any questions about Communist affiliations.

He told the subcommittee that the Silver Spring housing firm, which he said he serves as secretary, has built several large veterans' projects, giving former servicemen an opportunity to buy "very economical homes" in the vast VA program.

Silent on Loans

He refused to say whether the firm got loans from the Federal Housing Administration or Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"You mean to say you've used Government facilities to build homes and refuse to tell this committee if you're a member of the Communist Party," Jenner asked.

Mrs. Chapa refused to say whether she had even been a secretary to Communist leader William Z. Foster, used a number of aliases cited by the subcommittee, returned to Russia, or been arrested on charges of distributing Communist literature and carrying concealed weapons.

Reno testified that he worked with Mrs. Chapa, then known as Edith Brisker or Briscoe, in Pittsburgh and Baltimore.

Teitelbaum sat stolidly before the committee, peering from behind heavy glases and declining to answer almost every question. He refused to give his son's name, or say whether he was a "close associate" of a foreign doctor alleged to have injected truth serum in Cardinal Mindszenty.

Patterson said he knew Teitelbaum as one of the Communist "old-timers" here in the early thirties.

Security Charges Prove Unfounded

U. S. Clears Chauncey Spencer

Clouds Are Lifted—Chauncey E. Spencer of Dayton, shown here with his family, was recently cleared as a "security risk" after ten months of suspension from his position as employe relations adviser at Wright Patterson Field. The family group includes sons Edward and Michael; wife, Anne, and Mrs. Virginia Smith, Mrs. Spencer's mother. The Dachshund's name is Herven.

By ALBERT J. DUNMORE

DAYTON, Ohio—After waging a relentless ten-month fight against unfounded rumor, Chauncey E. Spencer was officially cleared as a possible security risk here last Monday.

The word did not come too quickly for Spencer, who had been suspended from his $6,400 position at Wright-Patterson Field as an employe-relations counselor, for being unable to find work because of the cloud of suspicion that hung over him, he was about to lose his comfortable home, car "and everything we have an equity in."

Spencer's reprieve from ten months of worry and concern about the future of himself and his family came in a letter from Beatty R. Julien, executive secretary of the Security Review Board of the Department of the Air Force.

"I am pleased to inform you that the final determination in your case is that, based on all the available information, your retention in employment is clearly consistent with the interests of national security.

"Accordingly, it has been directed that you be restored to your position and that you be paid for the period of your suspension in an amount equal to the difference between the amount you would normally have earned at the rate you were receiving on the date of suspension and your interim earnings."

ON THE surface this means that Spencer can now return to his job if he wants it and that he'll receive his back pay, less any money he earned in outside jobs during his suspension.

But to Spencer it means much more . . . an end to a whispering campaign that has been relentlessly waged against him virtually from the beginning of his employment at the field in 1941.

Many of the charges that were placed against him, bringing about his suspension pending investigation last September were an accumulation of rumors that have been growing through the years.

* * *

BUT MORE important, Spencer says he hopes most of all that his clearance will mean help for other Federal employes who may have their reputations shattered without being able to fight back.

The charges against Spencer were numerous . . . many growing out of vicious rumors and reports spread by persons he had formerly befriended. These charges ended with his suspension in September.

During his suspension he said he was able to earn only about $187. Yet he was expected to continue the upkeep of his wife, Anne, and his two sons, Edward Alexander, 11, and Michael Stephan, 8 months.

Spencer was faced with charges of being a Communist, a homosexual, a former "bootlegger," falsification of records, disclosure of confidential Government material, and the "punching of time cards for fellow-employes."

* * *

IN SPITE of evidence, which appeared conclusive, that was placed in the hands of Government officials, Spencer was able to successfully disprove each categorically.

Typical charge: "In about August, 1950, at Peekskill, N. Y., you attended a Communist party rally featuring, among others, Paul Robeson."

Spencer had been in New York City at the time of the Peekskill affair, had heard announcements of the situation and had taken the liberty to drive to the scene of the incident out of curiosity. He had recounted this experience to friends in Dayton and the matter became a part of his case.

* * *

IN ANOTHER charge it was said that Spencer had visited a Washington hotel with a white prostitute. It was proven that the only person who visited the hotel on the date cited was Spencer's wife, Anne, who had accompanied him to Washington.

These were the type of charges which had placed Spencer under suspension as a "security risk."

* * *

WITH THIS cloud over his head, Spencer was unable to obtain any other type of employment.

He was refused a job as a $31 a week janitor. The employer told him to come back when this thing is cleared up."

Oftimes, Spencer revealed, he found it difficult to purchase milk for his infant son. At times he said he felt like "giving up on the whole thing." He credits much of his dogged determination to fight the case to the finish on his wife, Anne, who continually urged him to "stick it out."

* * *

BECAUSE HE couldn't get a job, Spencer said he started to ask neighbors if he could paint their houses free of charge "just to have something to do." He painted four houses during his enforced layoff.

With this question hanging over his head, Spencer said his friends and even some of his relatives began to shy away from him' . . . "and I could even understand this," Spencer said.

"I know the onus that was placed on my own wife and sons because of the position I was in . . . and my friends had to think about their jobs and families."

Spencer has complained against "a system which allows anyone to level any sort of accusation against anyone and lead to a suspension before the facts are checked. No Federal worker can be safe under such procedures."

Spencer had been the recipient of the Exceptional Civilian Service medal in 1948 for his outstanding achievements in racial relations and for his efforts and contributions to the establishment of good-will.

* * *

A GRADUATE of the Virginia seminary and college at Lynchburg, Va., Spencer was a pioneer in the participation of Negroes in aeronautics.

In 1939 he was awarded the Gov. Dwight Green trophy for outstanding achievements in the interest of the Negro's inclusion in the Air Force. He, in cooperation with his wife, Anne, composed the "Prayer for Brotherhood," for the Courier concert given at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia in 1953.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Spencer of Lynchburg. His mother, Anne Spencer, is a noted poet . . . her works have been included in several well-known anthologies.

His sister, Alroy, is the wife of Judge Ellis Rivers of New York City.

Spencer announces that he intends to retain his position, but personally feels that much of his effectiveness as an employment counselor has been impaired by his suspension . . . "I couldn't bear to see anyone else go through what I had to experience."

McCarthy Walks Out On Mrs. Annie Moss

Seemed to sense tide against him

Widow's testimony convinces solons 'Red' tag is false

WASHINGTON

"If you trust God, he'll help you," Mrs. Annie L. Moss declared after her triumphant session before Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's subcommittee, Thursday, at which the senator walked out.

He left the public hearing 10 minutes after Mrs. Moss started her wholesale denial of the charges of Communist affiliation that had been brought against her by Senator McCarthy.

One of her statements disclosed the fact that there are at least three other persons named Annie L. Moss living in Washington.

Her testimony throughout the hearing was so convincing that Sen. Stuart Symington (D., Mo.) of the subcommittee told her that he believed her and that if she could not get back her Army job and still needed employment, she could come and see him.

Mrs. Moss has been suspended from her post as code clerk at the Pentagon since the subcommittee's previous hearing in her case two weeks ago, when she was not permitted to testify.

She told reporters after Thursday's hearing that she had recovered from an attack of bronchitis.

Speaking admiringly of her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, Mrs. Moss said he was a "wonderful person."

She also asked the AFRO to express her gratitude to the friends who had believed in and prayed for her during her ordeal.

Pastor Supported Her

One of her supporters was her pastor, the Rev. C. L. Whiting of Friendship Baptist church, who attended the hearing Thursday with Mrs. Moss' son and brother. He told the AFRO:

"I believed in her innocence all the time. She's a faithful member of my church and I prayed earnestly that she would be vindicated."

Mr. Hayes, who succeeded in obtaining a hearing for Mrs. Moss after two scheduled hearings had been postponed, said that he was happy that his client had been given the opportunity to clear herself publicly.

To Seek Re-hearing

"She's no more Communist than any of those senators," Mr. Hayes declared. "She's a perfectly loyal American citizen."

Mr. Hayes said that he would also seek a hearing at the Pentagon if Mrs. Moss is not reinstated in her job.

Senator McCarthy's exit from the subcommittee hearing came while Mrs. Moss was stating that she did not know Robert Hall, white, who has been described as a top leader of the Communist party locally.

Sen. Mundt Continues

The senator excused himself and withdrew while Mrs. Moss was continuing her testimony under questioning by Roy Cohn, a McCarthy aide.

It was later reported that Senator McCarthy left in order to prepare a statement for delivery over the radio, Thursday night. Sen. Karl Mundt (Rep., S.D.) then continued the hearing.

One of the revelations supporting Mrs. Moss' statements that she was not a Communist and did not know Communists, came in connection with the identification of the Robert Hall mentioned above.

She had admitted seeing a Robert Hall at meetings of a cafeteria union to which she belonged in the '40's, and that she was referring to this Robert Hall and not to Robert Hall, white.

This fact came in answer to a question from Robert F. Kennedy, counsel for democratic members on the subcommittee and Senator Symington after they had been alerted by a reporter at the press table about the different racial identity of the two men.

"The Robert Hall I knew," Mrs. Moss told the subcommittee, "was about my complexion."

MRS. ANNIE LEE MOSS
Tells McCarthy, 'I Am A Good American'

Moss Case Flops; Exit McCarthy

By ETHEL PAYNE
Defender Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — With dramatic intensity, the case of Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, Pentagon clerk accused of being a former card carying communist, blew up last Wednesday in the face of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

McCarthy suddenly remembered a previous appointment and left the hearing as it became apparent that the charges he made against Mrs. Moss two weeks ago were about to backfire. Committee observers were at a loss to remember any other time the senator had walked out on a hearing.

Mrs. Moss testified under oath before the Senate Permanent Sub committee on Investigations that she had never been a Communist, that she had never paid dues, that she had never seen a Communist Party card, and in fact she had never known the meaning of the word, Communism until 1944.

The case against Mrs. Moss was seriously weakened when during questioning by Sen. John McClellan (D) Ark. Sen Stuart Symington (D., Mo.) and Sen. Henry Jackson, (D. Washington) these startling facts developed.

The Robert Hall whom Roy Cohn, counsel for McCarthy had declared was the person who talked Mrs. Moss into joining the party was identified as a Negro and not the white organizer for the Communist Party in the District of Columbia. It was disclosed that there were three Annie Lee Mosses living in Washington and that Mrs. Moss had once had difficulty getting a real estate license because of the confusion in identity.

Mrs. Moss never knew the nature of the classified coded material which she transmitted because there was no time between her handling of it and the time it was handed to the clerk who decoded it.

The Hattie Griffin whom Roy Cohn said had recruited Mrs. Moss into the Northeast club, a cell of the Communist Party, was the landlady with whom Mrs. Moss lived for two weeks while she was securing another apartment.

Mrs. Moss said she had never taken her to any meeting nor were any meetings held in the house while she was there.

A Robert Hall who came to the house with copies of the Daily Worker in 1944 was unknown to Mrs. Moss because she was not in the house at the time. She said he had talked with her husband (now deceased) who had ordered him not to bring back the paper any more.

These events highlighted the hearing. Sen. McCarthy who refused to let Atty. George Hayes, counsel for Mrs. Moss, speak said at the beginning of the hearing that Mrs. Moss was not important as a member of the Communist apparatus for which he had corroborating evidence. He was interested in knowing how she had come to be transferred by the Army into the job from which she was suspended.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

Testimony reemphasized that Mrs. Mary Lee Markward, the FBI undercover agent who had fingered Mrs. Moss, admitted that she could not identify Mrs. Moss, but said she had seen the name, Annie Lee Moss on Communist Party records.

Senator McCarthy abruptly left the hearings shortly after Roy

Cohn began questioning Mrs. Moss saying that he had another committment, a very unusual procedure for the Senator who usually takes over the whole show.

The packed hearing room broke into tumultous applause when Sen. McClelland said that he was not convinced from the testimony that Mrs. Moss was a Communist and that he would not tolerate witnesses being convicted on hearsay. If there was additional evidence, he demanded that it be brought out in public hearing where Mrs. Moss could confront her accusers and defend herself. Cohn attempted to explain that the witnesses were in touch with the FBI and they could not be brought out at public hearing, but Sen. McClellan repeated that he didn't care if they were in touch with the FBI, if they couldn't be present at the public hearings then they should not be mentioned in the record. He said such procedure was unfair and Un-American. He drew more applause.

The case took a new twist when Robert Kennedy, counsel to the minority members of the committee and brother of Massachusetts Sen. John Kennedy, maneuvered Cohn into admission of confused identity over the Robert Hall, alleged organizer for the party.

Sen. Symington questioning Mrs. Moss asked her if the Robert Hall she knew were white or colored. Mrs. Moss said that the Robert Hall whom she had seen at union meetings was a Negro. Going further, Symington asked her if he could be mistaken for a white man and Mrs. Moss drew laughter, saying "Well, sir, he was a man about my complexion." (Mrs. Mooss is brown skinned.) Sen. Symington then said it was obvious that there were two different Robert Halls being referred to.

He then questioned Mrs. Moss on her present financial condition. Mrs. Moss said she was without funds and that she would have to go on relief soon. Sen. Symington then made a dramatic statement, "I may be sticking my neck out, but Mrs. Moss, I have listened carefully to your testimony this afternoon and I am convinced that you are telling the truth. I believe you are a loyal citizen. If the Army does not restore you to your job, I want you to come and see me and I will personally see that you get a job with the government" This time, the applause was deafening.

QUIZZED ON MARX

Asked if she believed in the theories of Karl Marx, Mrs. Moss replied bewilderedly, "Who is he?" The 49-year-old widow arrived at the hearing leaning on the arm of her attorney George C. Hayes and flanked by her son, Ernest. She looked much better and more confident at her appearance before the committee. She answered the questions with disarming candor and won the sympathy of many of the spectators and newsmen crowded into the room.

At one point when Sen. Symington asked her if she had ever engaged in espionage, Mrs. Moss turned to Hayes and whispered, "What does he mean?"

She told the committee that she had been forced to join the union while she was a cafeteria worker in the Pentagon, that she did not have a chance to read the application before she signed it and that dues were taken out of her check before she received it. She said this was the only organization she had ever belonged to.

Among the interested spectators in the audience intently watching the hearings were Rev. Benjamin Whiting, pastor of Friendship Baptist church in Washington to which Mrs. Moss belongs and Rev. James L. Ware, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, Birmingham, Ala., and president of the Birmingham Minister's Alliance who said he had stayed over to the hearings to lend loyal support to Mrs. Moss.

Outside the caucus room, Mrs. Moss embraced me and said fervently, "Honey, I want you to tell the world that if you just trust in God, everything will come out all right!"

Said Reverend Whiting. "I always believed in Mrs. Moss' innocence. I never felt that she was guilty and I prayed continually that she would be vindicated. Hayes said that he would request the Army immediately on the basis of the afternoon testimony to restore Mrs. Moss to her job or to grant her a hearing. He said that although the army had the right to dismiss persons about whom it had suspicion, he felt that it should now clear its name, reinstate Mrs. Moss and restore her lost pay.

Corridor opinion said "It was a great day for the Army and Mrs. Moss and the turning point in the power driving career of one, Joe McCarthy. At any rate, it was certain that last Thursday, the senator from Wisconsin took a reol beating.

Job for Mr. Brownell

Benjamin J. Davis Jr., now serving a five - year sentence in federal prison, has let it be known he plans a suit against the United States.

Convicted under the Smith Act, Mr. Davis for three years has been an inmate of the U.S. penitentiary at Terre Haute, Indiana.

His complaint is that because of his color, he and other prisoners "similarly situated" are victims of segregation and discrimination.

He feels that James V. Bennett, director of prisons of the Department of Justice, has no force of law to back the hateful racist policy he maintains in federal penal institutions.

Prisoners of color, Mr. Davis reveals, are confined to cells in sections reserved exclusively for them.

This segregated pattern plagues them in mess halls, in theatre auditoriums and in other recreational facilities.

And even more irritating is the fact that white federal prisoners are granted certain benefits and privileges that are denied federal prisoners who are not white.

This is a shocking disclosure.

We hold no brief for Mr. Davis' political convictions. But we cannot help but admire his courageous outcry against this denial of elemental justice to men in federal custody.

On several occasions we have applauded the Eisenhower Administration's bold and unequivocal stand againt segregation in federal establishments.

One of the leaders in this drive has been Attorney General Herbert Brownell.

His brief in the school segregation cases was a historic document maintaining the Constitution clearly establishes the rights of all citizens to equality.

It so happens operation of federal prisons are the responsibility of Mr. Brownell

Surely, Mr. Davis should not have to resort to a law suit to secure the equality of treatment which Mr. Brownell has so brilliantly argued is the right of every American under the law.

Her good name is dead

We have fallen upon evil times. These are the days of mccarthyism.

The good name of Annie Lee Moss was quietly put to death Tuesday. It happened in a room on the third floor of the Senate office building.

An attractive woman sat before the McCarthy subcommittee and a battery of newsreel and TV cameras and charged that Mrs. Moss at one time was a dues-paying member of the Communist party.

The woman who made the charge admitted that she did not know Annie Lee Moss. She confessed she would be unable to recognize her if she saw her.

The only evidence she had was a Communist party card which showed that someone named Annie Moss had at one time paid dues in the Communist party.

But undisturbed by such flimsy evidence Senator McCarthy immediately branded Annie Lee Moss a Communist.

In a matter of seconds the television cameras flashed it across the airwaves. The telegraph wires recorded it around the world. And the presses of the nation proclaimed it to readers on every street corner.

And the good name of Annie Lee Moss brutally was put to death without Annie Lee Moss being allowed to utter one word in defense of that name.

That is mccarthyism.

Senator McCarthy would probably be the first to deny that the good name of Annie Lee Moss was put to death prematurely.

Instead, he would point to the fact that at some future date of his own selection Mrs. Moss will be given an opportunity to "clear" her good name.

But anyone who read the headlines about Annie Lee Moss knows that what she says at some future date will never catch up with what the headlines are saying about her now.

The good name of Annie Lee Moss is dead.

It would have been so easy, so in the American tradition for Senator McCarthy to have withheld judgment on Annie Moss until he had given her an opportunity to face her accuser and speak in her own defense.

It would have been so easy, so in the America tradition, to have barred the press and cameramen from hearing the charges being made against Mrs. Moss which Mrs. Moss was not permitted to answer.

Or, better still in the American tradition, it would have been so easy to be fair and put Mrs. Moss on the witness stand and allow her to answer the charges as soon as they were made, so that the press could have had both sides of the story in their headlines.

But mccarthyism doesn't operate that way.

No one can say what Annie Lee Moss will say in her defense. It may be that she can prove Senator McCarthy is wrong. It may be that she will turn out to be the Communist McCarthy says she is.

This is no attempt to defend Annie Lee Moss.

This is a protest against the vicious bludgeoning of time-honored American tradition which holds a person is innocent until the person has been proved guilty.

Annie Lee Moss, when she does take the witness stand, is an innocent woman in the eyes of the law.

No one yet has proved her guilty of anything. She has not been given a chance, as of now, to even plead guilty.

But her good name is already dead.

Brownell Asks Laws To Help Weed Out Reds

Asserts F.B.I. and Courts Have Dealt Body Blows To Communists at Home

By The Associated Press

Washington, April 9.—Attorney General Brownell declared tonight the F.B.I. and the courts already have dealt body blows to communism on the home front, and he outlined a program to destroy "this threat to our nation's safety."

In a nationwide TV-radio report to the nation on the "Fight Against Communism," he called for laws:

To weed potential spies or saboteurs out of defense plants; to "eliminate Communist control of any industrial organization or labor union in vital sections of the economy," and to provide the death penalty for peacetime espionage.

Nowhere in the text of his speech did Brownell mention Senator McCarthy or his Red-hunting activities. Whether one aim of the speech was to take the ball away from the controversial Wisconsin Republican was not stated, but Brownell told his audience:

"The F.B.I., the Department of Justice, and the courts are your agents in dealing with this Communist conspiracy. All are vigilant in their readiness to meet any move or emergency which the Communist Party in America might precipitate."

Says They're Jittery

Picturing American Communist leaders as jittery over the drive against them, Brownell said that when they learned he was to make tonight's speech they "became very concerned."

"In various sections of the country," he continued, "the underground leaders scattered and have tried to completely disappear for a few days to see what happens."

He paid high tribute to the F.B.I. for ferreting out inner secrets of the Communists. Weeks before Moscow disclosed to the world last year that Joseph Stalin was ill, he said, the United States Government knew it and knew also that Georgi Malenkov would succeed him in the Kremlin.

The Attorney General asserted that the information was given to him by the F.B.I. in early February, 1953. It was not until March 4 that the Soviet Government announced that its dictator was under the care of physicians. Stalin died March 5.

Speech In Two Parts

Brownell told this story by way of reassuring the American public that those charged with the nation's internal security know a great deal more about the Communists than the Communists think they know.

His address was a follow-up to President Eisenhower's telecast of last Monday night. The President discussed "fears and apprehensions" of Americans. Eisenhower said at the time he was leaving it to his Attorney General to detail the work of the F.B.I. in protecting the home front against enemies.

The Brownell speech was in two parts. One described the steps that have been and are being taken to carry out "the policy of the Administration, within the framework of our Constitution and our laws, to strike the Communists at every opportunity—to hit them where it hurts most."

The second part was a set of recommendations for new laws designed "to destroy by legal, orderly processes the Communist Party in this country."

Tells of Infiltration

He reiterated what the President had said, that "although we must be constantly alert to the danger of the Communist infiltration, we should not have exaggerated fears of the danger."

Brownell asserted that infiltration of the Communist Party by F.B.I. agents had provided a major weapon in anticipating and combatting Communist moves.

"The success of the F.B.I. in this regard," he said, "has been so outstanding that the Communist Party in this country doesn't know which of its Communist members to trust. I assure you that makes their conspiracy a very hazardous occupation."

He disclosed an incident that occurred February 8, 1944, when the top Communist Party leadership held a secret meeting in New York to make important policy decisions. They chose a room in a building devoted to music studios. A group of young men, Brownell related, used another room in the building that night for "a rehearsal."

Some Were F.B.I. Men

"There can be no harm in telling you now," he said, "that some of these 'musicians' in the adjoining room were F.B.I. agents who carried recording equipment into the adjoining studio, and the F.B.I. secured a complete transcript of everything that happened at that Communist meeting."

Brownell listed these specific steps as having been taken by his own and by previous, Democratic administrations in the Justice Department to curb communism in the United States:

1. Continuing prosecutions of party leaders under the Smith Act for conspiring to teach the violent overthrow of this Government. There have been 105 indictments under this act since 1948, with 67 convictions involving prison sentences.

2. A federal-employee security program that the Attorney General said assures "that so far as humanly possible, this country is protected against further loss from Government sources of secret defense information to our enemies."

3. Proceedings before the Subversive Activities Control Board to force the registration of the Communist Party as a foreign-dominated organization, thus requiring public disclosure of its finances and membership. Similar proceedings are now pending against 12 "front organizations."

4. A continuing program of deportations of alien Communists and denaturalizations looking to deportation of naturalized Americans who are members of the party.

Lists Required New Laws

The Attorney General said these new laws to combat communism are required:

1. To allow an employer to dismiss from defense plants during a national emergency any person whose record shows he is likely to engage in sabotage or espionage.

2. To eliminate Communist control of any industrial organization or labor union in vital sections of the national economy.

3. To prevent witnesses from pleading self-incrimination as an excuse for refusing to testify. This proposed law would permit the Government to grant immunity from prosecution to particular witnesses in order to catch higher-ups.

4. To legalize the use of wire-tapped evidence.

5. To provide the death penalty for spying in peacetime.

6. To take away the citizenship of any person found guilty of advocating violent overthrow of the Government.

7. To eliminate the Statute of limitations in espionage cases.

In connection with his general program, the Attorney General announced that he had directed the filing of denaturalization proceedings against Steve Nelson, Philadelphia. Described by Brownell as "the notorious Communist leader," Nelson was recently convicted under the Smith Act.

McCarthy Target

Mrs. Moss Is Reinstated In Job Pending Inquiry

By Don Irwin

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, the Signal Corps clerk who has been suspended a month since Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R., Wis. raised the possibility that she had been a Communist, was tentatively restored to duty today.

The Pentagon announced that Mrs. Moss will return to her job in the Signal Corps supply section on Monday, pending final adjudication of her case. Mrs. Moss and her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, conferred today with John E. Fernice, chief counsel for the Signal Corps.

Mr. Moos was suspended Feb. 25. after Sen. McCarthy called her before his Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee to answer an accusation that she was once a member of the Communist party. She had earlier and again later denie dunder oath the accusation, which was based on the listing of a name identical with hers on an alleged list of party members in the Washington area.

According to the law the Federal employee may be suspended for more than thirty days unless a letter of charges is supplied him. Her reinstatement does not necessarily forclose later preferment of charges, but these would presumably have to be based on more substantial evidence than that produced so far.

There was no detailed report tonight from from the special Army board that explored Mrs. Moss's case, leaving the inference that it is still at work.

The charge against Mrs. Moss was suddenly unleased by Sen. McCarthy while he was under heavy fire, even from his own supporters, because of the manner of his questioning of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker.

As soon as the charge was made, Mrs. Moss was transferred form her job as a transmitting machine operator in the message center to a typist's post in the Signal Corps's supply room. She has been returned to the latter job.

While Sen. McCarthy described Mrs. Moss's job as "encoding and decoding" messages, both she and the Army emphasized that she dealt all the time with coded messages she could not understand. Her job was to feed punched tapes into transmitting machines.

Whether Mrs. Moss will receive pay for the time she has lost from her job will be decided when the inquiry into her case has been completed.

While the Pentagon dealt in its own way with one McCarthy charge, a committee of his colleagues worked today to find a counsel to handle the projected public inquiry into the welter of cross-charges involving the Senator and Roy M. Cohn, the subcommittee's chief counsel, on one side and Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens and John G. Adams, Army counselor, on the other.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R., S. D., who will serve as acting chairman of the subcommittee during the inquiry, told reporters this evening he and Sen. John L. McClellan, Ark., ranking Democrat, were in negotiation with three attorneys, two of whom he described as nationally known.

Sen. Mundt said he hoped they would win a commitment from one of the prospects tonight or tomorrow morning. In this event, he said, the name will be submitted to a special meeting of the subcommittee tomorrow.

He said Sen. McCarthy would not vote on the matter, but might be consulted if there is any reason he might be believed to object to an individual. For instance, Sen. Mundt said, a counsel might be closely related to an Army general.

DUPING OF NEGROES BY REDS IS CITED

Minister Says Party Recruited Them by Indicating Meetings Were Progressive Party's

By LAWRENCE E. DAVIES

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, June 16—Testimony that "well over 1,000 Negroes" belonged to the Communist party in this area at one time was given to the House Committee on Un-American Activities today. One of the alleged methods of recruitment was to make prospects believe they were attending meetings of the Progressive party.

The membership figure was offered by Mrs. Barbara Hartle, a former Communist. She said that among other jobs she held as a party functionary for twenty years was membership on the Northwest District commission dealing with the Negro question. Mrs. Hartle is a white.

The Rev. Clinton Redwell, one of those named earlier by Mrs. Hartle as a Communist party member, informed the committee he had been a Communist in 1948-49, starting with the period of Henry Wallace's candidacy for President on the Progressive party ticket. Mr. Redwell asked for and got a chance to testify after Mrs. Hartle had referred to him as a Negro minister who had prayed at Communist branch meetings.

Says He Quit Party

Saying he had been ordained in the East Texas Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, he told reporters that in 1948 he thought he was attending Progressive party meetings here. When he learned the sessions were Communist party gatherings, he said, he refused to sign a membership card but eventually did so under pressure.

Lenzie Shellman, accused by Mrs. Hartle of having been a Communist in the Machinists' union, refused to answer most questions "due to a weak Fair Employment Practices Commission in this state and being a Negro."

The witness refused to answer even a question about his employment, saying he invoked his Frst, Fourth, Fifth, Ninth, Tenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. Asked what was in the Tenth Amendment he drew laughs from committee members and the associate counsel, Robert L. Kunzig by replying:

"I refuse on the Fifth Amendment."

The Fifth Amendment says a witness may not be required to testify against himself.

Mrs. Hartle, who spent much of her time detailing "underground activities of the Communist party in the Northwest, swore that she had known John Caughlan, a Seattle attorney representing several of the witnesses at this hearing, as a Communist party member.

Mr. Caughlin, out of the hearing room, called attention to his acquittal by a jury in the Federal District Court of Judge John M. Bowen in September, 1948, of a perjury charge stemming from his denial of Communist party membership.

Sees Intimidation Effort

"I consider this to be an effort on the part of the committee to intimidate a lawyer in the representation of his clients," he said " * * * It must be obvious to all that Mrs. Hartle is using her inventive genius to trade time for names."

This was a reference to the fact that Mrs. Hartle now is serving a fiveyear sentence for conspiracy to teach the overthrow of the Government by force.

Former State Senator Thomas C. Rabbitt and Mrs. Ruth Bitterman, both called former Communists by Mrs. Hartle and both termed too ill by doctors to appear at a public hearing, were questioned at an executive session. Both invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions.

Vernon Todd Riley, formerly of Spokane, who was suspended as a Federal Department of Health, Welfare and Education laboratory technician last October, was named as a Communist by Mrs. Hartle. Representative Gordon H. Scherer, Republican of Ohio, declaring Mr. Riley had denied Communist party membership at a Chicago hearing, asked his colleagues "to consider the possibility of rfeerring the case to the Department of Justice for perjury action."

Army Security Board Hears Mrs. Moss

Associated Press Wirephoto

SUSPENDED ARMY CLERK AT HEARING: Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, twice suspended Army employe, as she left a Civil Service hearing board yesterday, where she answered questions on her loyalty. With her is lawyer George E. C. Hayes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—Mrs. Annie Lee Moss went before an Army Security Board in secret session today to defend herself against charges that twice have caused her suspension as a Signal Corps employe.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Republican of Wisconsin, said last February that the 43-year-old widow had once been and might still be "an active member of the Communist party." Mrs. Moss denied under oath that she ever was a member of the party "or anything else."

The security hearing is being held at Fort McNair. Nothing has been made public about the specific charges against Mrs. Moss, the hearing witnesses, or the make-up of the security board.

The panel's recommendation on whether she should be returned to her Pentagon job will go to an Army review board, which will make a recommendation to Secretary Robert T. Stevens, who will make the final decesion.

Mrs. Moss came to the hearing with her attorney, George E. C. Hayes, and his partner, former Judge James A. Cobb, both she and Mr. Hayes declined to make any public statements.

Communists in Unions

That a few unions on the national scene are controlled by known Communists is no secret. However, there is a story behind this condition which thus far has escaped the attention of the American public and that story is that employers are more responsible than are the unions for Communist penetration in these plants. This situation was recently brought to light with great clarity by Professor Philip Taft of Brown University in an address before the annual meeting of the Industrial Relations Research Association. Professor Taft declared that those industries which had resisted unionization for so many years, must share the blame for the Communist invasion because their employees, deprived of the experience as unionists, fell easily under the control of skilled Communist agents.

"There were not in the unorganized industries, any group leaders who could take hold and keep the newly organized out of the reach of Communist influence," said Taft. "Industry had prevented such a possibility by not allowing free unions to exist in their plants." Taft also pointed out that in those industries which were organized relatively early by bona fide trade unionists, Communist influence was quite insignificant.

Along the same line, many employers have been heard to boast of the fact that only a few of their workers actually attend union meetings. What a stupid position for an employer to take! Doesn't he realize that if union meetings attract only a handful of his workers out of a membership of several thousand, that the work of the Communists in seizing control of the local is simplified to an amazing degree. For he can rest assured that the Communist sympathizer and the professional agitator will be at that meeting even if the hundreds of good loyal American workers are not.

The intelligent employer will do all he can to insure an active local union in his plant and overflow attendance at its meetings.

This is his best insurance that the Communists will never gain a foothold in either the union's organization or in his own.

Professor Taft has done a valuable service in laying the blame for the present Communist controlled unions—where it belongs—squarely on the shoulders of the employer.

Fortunately, the actual number of Communist-controlled unions is very small when related to the total over-all union membership in this country. Most labor organizations—the UAW-AFL, in particular—have done an outstanding job in routing out and crushing all traces of Red infiltration.

If our free enterprise system is to survive, it will undoubtedly be the labor unions, not the employer groups, which will be most responsible for its continuance.

Harlem Man Found Slashed Is Identified As Ex-Communist

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—A man found dying of stab wounds in Harlem has been identified as a former Communist who trained in Moscow, but later turned against the party.

The victim, Charles White, 51, colored, had appeared as a witness in deportation hearings against Communists and was scheduled for new testimony.

However, police maintain his death had nothing to do with politics.

White was found in a Harlem doorway Thursday morning and was taken to Harlem Hospital, where he died later in the day. He was not identified until last night when an official of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service viewed the body.

The official said White "probably had been scheduled to testify at some hearings next week." He did not say who was involved in the hearings.

The official agreed with police, saying he did not believe the hearings or politics were involved in the slaying.

White had said in the past that he went to Moscow in 1931 for a year of training in sabotage methods. He broke with the party in 1935.

In 1948 he testified at a hearing which resulted in the deportation of a mysterious J. Peters, who was described as a top Communist agent in this country."

White was described by police as a "homeless derelict."

McCarthy Advises Witness Not To Testify, Then Announces She Was Red Party Member

WASHINTON, Feb. 24 (AP)—A weeping Negro woman, whose attorney said she was ready to deny being a Communist, decided not to testify today after Senator McCarthy (R-Wis):

1. Suggested she was too ill to take the stand.

2. Sternly warned her of possible perjury action.

After she had decided not to testify at today's session, McCarthy announced he had evidence, from other sources, which "clearly established" that she was a Communist party member.

Defense counsel for Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, 48, a $3,335-a-year Army Signal Corps employe in the Pentagon, cried out in protest to McCarthy:

'Condemned Before She Appears'

"You have already condemned her before she appears."

The sequence of events developed at a hearing before McCarthy's Senate Investigations subcommittee as the Wisconsin senator continued to press his charge of alleged "Communist coddling" by the Army.

Mrs. Moss had already taken the witness stand and was about ready to testify, when McCarthy raised the question of her health and indicated she might want to put off her questioning until a later date.

Prepares to Deny Charge

Mrs. Moss' lawyer, George E. C. Hayes, told newsmen his client came to the hearing prepared to testify that she was never a Communist.

"I would have preferred to have her testify and get it over with, as she has been under a great strain and ordeal," Hayes said.

He said he didn't believe McCarthy had "coaxed or induced" Mrs. Moss not to testify.

"I gathered that he was concerned that the committee should not be put in the position of forcing her to testify if she was not in physical condition to do so," he said.

Row With Stevens

Newsmen asked Hayes if he had heard suggestions that it would hurt McCarthy's case in his row with Army Secretary Stevens if Mrs. Moss denied under oath she was a Red.

"I imagine, from what I saw," Hayes replied, "that that was his strategy."

Later in the day, the McCarthy-Stevens row died down with an agreement in which Stevenson yielded to McCarthy demands.

McCarthy opened today's hearing with an announcement that two "Communist witnesses," a husband and wife, "broke with the party" last night and that one of the unidentified pair had named Mrs. Moss as "a member of the Communist conspiracy."

Warns Of Perjury

He turned to Mrs. Moss and questioned whether she was "well enough" to testify. Commenting that "she does not look well," he warned:

"If she testifies, if she perjures hersef, her case will be submitted to a grand jury."

The senator also remarked that in his estimation "this witness is not of any great importance."

Later, McCarthy said that despite Army denials, he knew Mrs. Moss handled "encoded and decoded" messages in the Pentagon code room.

Army Enters Rejoinder

McCarthy's charge yesterday that Mrs. Moss handled "top secret" messages in the code room brought a rejoinder from the Army that she "never" had access to secret codes or uncoded secrets.

Mrs. Mary S. Markward, a former FBI undercover informant, testified yesterday she knew Mrs. Moss was on the Communist party membership list in World War II. Mrs. Markward was uncertain whether she knew Mrs. Moss by sight. She said today she had seen her in the hearing room but "I couldn't positively swear I knew her."

McCarthy, in deprecating Mrs. Moss' importance as a witness, said it was "vastly more important" to find out "who in the Army, knowing her to be a member of the Communist party, promoted her from a waitress to a decoding clerk."

RECEIVE PRISON SENTENCE—Detroit.—Five Michigan Communists convicted of conspiracy against the Government leave the courtroom after they were sentenced to jail for periods of four to five years. In addition a Federal judge fined each of them $10,000. They are, from left: Nat Ganley, 48; Thomas B. Dennis, jr., 35; William Allan, 46; Saul Wellman, 48, and Philip Schatz, 39. A similar sentence was handed out to Mrs. Helen Winters, a sixth member of the group.

Six Convicted Reds Turn Down Offer to Send Them to Russia

By the Associated Press

DETROIT, Feb. 20. — Six Michigan Communists today elected to take their chances on a four-to-five-year jail terms rather than going to Russia.

The five men and one woman —leaders of the Communist Party in Michigan—were sentenced in Federal Court yesterday for conspiring to overthrow the United States Government.

Federal Judge Frank A. Picard in imposing the jail terms told the defendants that if any of them chose instead to go to Russia, "I can arrange it." He did not elaborate.

Several hours later, the defendants, all Detroiters, rejected the Russian offer which they called "a play for headlines by the judge." They said they would appeal the prison sentences.

Sentences Listed.

Judge Picard handed down the following sentences:

Nat Ganley, five years; Saul Wellman, four years and eight months; William Allan, four years and six months; Thomas D. Dennis, four years and six months; Philip Schatz, four years and four months, and Mrs. Helen Allison Winter, four years.

The six also were fined $10,000 each. Under the law the fines must be paid before the prisoners can be given any time off for good behavior. Bonds totaling $112,000 were set for the six pending the appeal.

The six admitted Reds were convicted Tuesday. Judge Pickard told the prisoners they had been "convicted of the greatest offense of which a citizen could be found guilty—conspiracy for the overthrow of your Government."

Goats, Not Martyrs.

"You're not going to jail for your beliefs," he said. "You are going to jail because you want to force those beliefs on others. So you're not martyrs—you're goats and Russian goats at that."

Judge Picard said he thought the six were sincere in their beliefs but had become "victims of a virus known as Russianitus in their belief that they could secure socialism in the United States with the help of Russia and then shrug off the Soviet Union."

In a joint statement, the prisoners said it was impossible for them to get a fair trial and maintained they were victims of "congressional investigations approaching the Salem witch hunts."

Mrs. Moss Can Avoid Testifying Only on Her Doctor's Orders

Evening Star

By Robert K. Walsh

Washington, D. C.

Senate subcommittee questioning of Mrs. Annie Lee Moss hinged today on whether the former Army code clerk produces a doctor's certificate that she is well enough to answer testimony linking her with Communist membership.

Senator McCarthy, subcommittee chairman, said she will have to testify tomorrow if she does not get the doctor's certificate. She attended a subcommittee session yesterday. Senator McCarthy excused her when her attorney said she was willing to testify but was too ill and nervous to do so at that time.

Times Herald 2/25/54

The Republican Senator did not insist on immediate questioning. He indicated the subcommittee might agree to hear her in closed session if she wished tomorrow. But he did not relent in his effort to have two balky witnesses yesterday identify her as a former Communist.

Both witnesses refused, on constitutional grounds, to answer many questions about Communist affiliations and activities here. One of them denied she ever saw or heard of Mrs. Moss before this week.

34d

"Mystery Couple."

Senator McCarthy announced that Mrs. Moss, a 49-year-old colored resident of Washington, has been identified as a former Communist Party member here by a woman who, with her husband, decided to break from the Communist Party only two days ago. This couple, Senator McCarthy said, held official positions in the party here and eventually will testify before the subcommittee. Meanwhile, they are giving information to the FBI, he added.

Emphasizing that the main purpose of the hearings centering around Mrs. Moss was to determine whether the Army "coddled" Communists, Senator McCarthy declared:

"This witness (Mrs. Moss) is not important in herself. The important question to us is who in the military promoted her from a cafeteria waitress to a decoding clerk and kept her there knowing she was a Communist? Apparently she had no educational qualifications but suddenly you find her a worker in the code room handling messages."

MRS. ANNIE LEE MOSS.
On witness stand yesterday.

Challenges Explanation.

Senator McCarthy took issue with an earlier explanation from the Army that Mrs. Moss had not been in a position dealing closely with classified material.

The subcommittee later made public a Civil Service Commission job description of the work she was supposed to do in the Army Signal Corps code section. It described the job's major duties as receiving and transmitting messages over radio or wire circuits from stations all over the world, and ascertaining and recording the final disposition of messages addressed to that office from overseas or the State Department. The subcommittee also said it had evidence that the Army informed the Civil Service Commission that Mrs. Moss would have a "sensitive" job.

Witnesses heard yesterday were Miss Sally Peek, colored, Mrs. Charlotte Oran, and Mrs. Mary S. Markward, a former FBI confidential informant. Mrs. Markward testified last Tuesday that with FBI knowledge she joined the Communist Party here and obtained information from 1943 through 1949. She insisted yesterday that Mrs. Moss was a Communist Party member here during that period. She said, however, she was not sure she previously had ever seen her.

Miss Peek refused to say whether she recruited Mrs. Moss as a Communist Party member or whether she herself ever was a Communist.

Mrs. Oran said she never saw or heard of Mrs. Moss before the current subcommittee hearings. She refused to answer questions as to whether she was a Communist, a party official or ever saw the name of Mrs. Moss on party records here. Mrs. Markward testified she worked with Mrs. Oran for seveal years when Mrs. Oran was Communist membership chairman in the District.

The hearing caused several flare-ups. Senator Jackson, Democrat, of Washington, objected when Senator McCarthy said to Mrs. Moss's attorney, George E. C. Hayes, that "you do not look like the typical kind of Communist lawyer."

Senator McCarthy said he had not meant to question the loyalty of Mr. Hayes, a prominent Negro lawyer here. But the Wisconsin Senator asserted that Senator Jackson seemed intent on rushing to the defense of all lawyers for witnesses linked with Communist affiliations.

Mr. Hayes made no special plea that Mrs. Moss be excused from testifying. He said she was willing to testify and would deny Communist membership. She did so earlier this week before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in closed session.

Illness Keeps Mrs. Moss From Testifying

Journal Atlanta, Ga.

BY ALVIN SPIVAK

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Army secretary Robert T. Stevens yielded to Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's demands for access to secret records in the case of an ex-officer accused of being a communist and for the reappearance of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker as a senate witness.

As a result of Stevens' sweeping concessions, made at a meeting reportedly suggested by President Eisenhower, McCarthy called off Thursday's public hearing which had been billed as a "showdown" in the Senator's battle with the Army Secretary over alleged "communist coddling."

34d

Stevens agreed to give McCarthy's investigating committee the names of all Army personnel involved in the promotion and honorable discharge of Maj. Irving Peress, ex-Army dentist who has refused to say whether he was a Communist. This was a reversal of the Army's previous position.

COMPLETE ACQUIESCENCE

The Army Secretary also bowed to McCarthy's demand that Stevens rescind his directive to Zwicker to ignore the Senator's order for further testimony in the Peress case.

Stevens' directive to Zwicker, the commandant, Camp Kilmer, N. J., where Peress was separated from the service, was issued after the Army Secretary attacked what he called McCarthy's "abuse" and "humiliation" of the general, who was told by the Senator that he was "not fit to wear the uniform."

Zwicker was excoriated by McCarthy for refusing to name the personnel involved in the Peress promotion and discharge on the ground that a Presidential order prohibited him from divulging such information.

PUBLIC AIRING AVERTED

The unexpected agreement — averting an explosive public airing of the bitter feud between Stevens and McCarthy—came at a two-hour meeting in which the Army Secretary and the Wisconsin Senator were joined by other GOP members of the investigating committee.

Stevens told newsmen after the secret conference that he did not consider he had "capitulated" to McCarthy. He said: "I do not consider that I am a person who retreats or capitulates."

Asked to explain why he had reversed the position he took after his public statement blasting McCarthy for "abusing" Zwicker, Stevens declined comment other than to say: "I have every reason to believe that Army personnel will not be abused."

The secretary denied reports that he was considering resigning.

As the climax of the McCarthy-Stevens battle neared, there were other top developments in the Senator's probe of alleged "Communist-coddling" by the Army. They included:

1. At a public session, McCarthy told Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, 48-year-old Pentagon worker, that he has "complete" evidence she was a Communist, including secret testimony from a Red leader who suddenly decided to break with the party.

EXCUSED FROM TESTIFYING

2. Mrs. Moss, a widow who, according to a McCarthy statement denied by the Army, had access to secret messages, wept and trembled as the Senator excused her from testifying on the ground that she was too ill to withstand the ordeal. The senator said she would be heard when her health permits.

3. Mrs. Moss' attorney, George E. C. Hayes, said the woman in sworn testimony before the House un-American Activities Committee on Monday denied she ever had been a Communist or Red sympathizer or that she knew anything about secret codes.

"EX-REDS" TESTIMONY

4. McCarthy said two Washington Communist leaders who had made a sudden break from the party had announced their willingness to aid his probe. He said one of them had "confirmed" the testimony of Mrs. Mary Markward, ex-FBI counterspy, that Mrs. Moss was a Communist in 1944. The Senator explained he had instructed the ex-Reds to "go to the FBI" and tell all they knew before becoming Senate witnesses.

5. Mrs. Charlotte Oram, who McCarthy said had been identified by Mrs. Markward as a "member of the same cell" to which Mrs. Moss allegedly belonged, swore that she had "never seen" Mrs. Moss before and could not recall ever having heard of her. Mrs. Oram refused on grounds of possible self incrimination to say whether she herself was a Communist.

6. Miss Sally F. Peek, also named by Mrs. Markward as a Communist, similarly invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to confirm or dney the charge and in declining to say whether she knew or knew of Mrs. Moss.

7. McCMarthy clashed with Sen. Henry Jackson (D.) Wash., over the Wisconsin's Senator's remark to Hayes that he did not consider the attorney a "typical Communist lawyer." Jackson said the remark implied that Hayes was a Communist, even though not "typical."

McCarthy and Cohn Called On to Present Moss Case Evidence

Senator McCarthy and the chief counsel of his Senate Investgating Subcommittee, Roy M. Cohn, were under fire today to produce "corroborative evidence" they claim they have against Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, suspended Pentagon code clerk.

The demand was voiced yesterday by Democratic members of the subcommittee after Mrs. Moss, colored, vehemently denied accusations of being a member of the Communist Party.

In an uproarious climax to Mrs. Moss' voluntary appearance before the subcommittee, Senator McClellan, Democrat, of Arkansas, lashed out at Mr. Cohn and denounced as unfair the "convicting of people by rumor, hearsay and innuendo."

Symington Joins Attack.

Senators Symington of Missouri and Jackson of Washington, other Democratic members of the subcommittee, joined with Senator McClellan in assailing the nature and incompleteness of the evidence Mr. Cohn sought to introduce against Mrs. Moss.

Senator Symington interjected at one point this remark to Mrs. Moss:

"I may be sticking my neck out, but I think you are telling the truth. If you are not taken back into your job in the Army, you come around and see me and I'm going to see that you get another one."

The Democrats raised the point that the accusations that Mrs. Moss was a member of a Northeast Washington Communist club in the 1940s may be the result of mistaken identity.

Won't Identify Witness.

The flareup came when Mr. Cohn sought to say that the subcommittee has received testimony behind closed doors from a witness who has not been identified publicly that Mrs. Moss was a member of the Communist Party unit.

Senator McClellan quickly interrupted to say that the accused had the right to have the testimony produced in her presence He also said the public had a right to know what it was to weigh its value.

"I don't like to try people by hearsay evidence," he declared.

Mr. Cohn and Senator Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, the acting chairman, said the "corroborative evidence" had been obtained from a former undercover informant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. For that reason, they said, there was a question as to whether the evidence could be produced because the unidentified witness was still being questioned by the FBI.

Applauded by Audience.

Senator McClellan retorted that the matter should not have been brought up in a public hearing unless the entire testimony could be revealed.

Applause from the audience punctuated Senator McClellan's statements. Senator Mundt made no effort to silence the crowd.

Senator McCarthy was not present at the time, having left the hearing after a few minutes.

Senator Mundt ordered Mr. Cohn's remarks concerning

"corroborative evidence" stricken from the record. He said the matter would be discussed in a closed subcommittee session.

Suspended From Job.

Mrs. Moss testified she was suspended from her Pentagon job after the charges of being a Communist were brought against her before the subcommittee in Senator McCarthy's efforts to press his charges of communism in the Armed Services.

She has been employed as a code clerk but she told the subcommittee she had never been in the code room in her life. She described her work as routine transmittal of messages.

Earlier, the subcommittee had received testimony from Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, Washington housewife and former secret FBI informant in the Communist Party here. Mrs. Markward testified she received dues from an Annie Lee Moss but said she did not recall ever seeing her.

Communist Testifies.

In another phase of the subcommittee's investigation yesterday, John Saunders of New York City testified he is a former Communist, suspended recently from his job at the Federal Telecommunications Laboratory at Nutley, N. J.

"I was recruited (to communism) while working at Federal Telecommunications Laboratory, he said, naming Harry Hyman, also of New York, as the man who recruited him.

Another witness, Harriman H. Dash, a chemist of Levittown, N. Y., said he decided to tell of his past Communist Party membership after receiving a committee subpoena to testify.

He testified he realized that unless a former Communist witness "tells the truth," he has no chance to clear himself of "suspicion of sabotage."

Asked by Senator Symington whether he had ever been a member of a sabotage ring, Mr. Dash replied: "No, sir. Absolutely not."

Negro Red Convict Asks Race Mixing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—A Negro Communist leader filed suit in Federal Court today seeking to have segregation in federal prisons declared "unlawful and unconstitutional."

The suit was filed by Benjamin J. Davis Jr., a former New York City councilman, who was among the 11 top party leaders convicted in New York in 1949 under the Smith Act. This act makes it unlawful to advocate and teach the overthrow of the government by force.

Davis, confined in the Terre Haute, Ind., penitentiary, asked a court order directing Atty. Gen. Brownell and James V. Bennet, director of the Bureau of Prisons, to "terminate and abolish" the practice of classifying prisoners according to race or color.

The suit was filed by Atty. Ralph E. Powe, one of the lawyers defending the Civil Rights Congress before the Subversive Activities Control Board against a charge that it is a Red front.

E. H. ARMSTRONG WORRIED BY RED QUIZ: McCARTHY

Gave Probers Data on Communists

BY WILLARD EDWARDS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, Feb. 2—Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, noted radio engineer who plunged to his death in New York City yesterday, had been "tremendously disturbed" by exposure of communist infiltration in the radar laboratories of the army signal corps, Sen. McCarthy [R., Wis.] revealed today.

Armstrong had voluntarily given information to the senate permanent investigations subcommittee headed by McCarthy, the latter disclosed. He was interviewed in October by the subcommittee's chief consultant, G. David Schine, now in military service.

The man whose inventions provided much of the basis for modern broadcasting said at that time that the subcommittee's investigation of alleged espionage and subversion at Fort Monmouth, N. J., had caused him to come forward as a prospective witness. He was conversant with conditions at Fort Monmouth where the senate investigation had caused the army to suspend 33 civilian employes as security risks.

"Conscience Troubles Him"

Armstrong told the investigator his "conscience had been troubling him" because he had information which might be valuable to the subcommittee. He had gone to Washington and consulted a friend, a high official of the Eisenhower administration, who advised him to tell all he knew to the McCarthy group.

McCarthy said Armstrong told the subcommittee staff that while working in Washington he had heard thru authoritative channels that President Roosevelt at the Yalta conference in 1945 had promised to send Stalin a cruiser or destroyer equipped with the latest electronic and radar devices.

Whether the gift, which has never been publicly recorded, was given before Mr. Roosevelt's death in April, 1945, was not known to Armstrong. But he noted that such a transfer would have put the Russians on a par with the United States in the latest development of electronic war weapons at the time.

Gives Data on Reds

McCarthy said Armstrong had given the subcommittee information on suspected Communists at Fort Monmouth and that some of those subsequently had been questioned on the basis of this information.

[A CHICAGO TRIBUNE dispatch dated Oct. 27 told of this interview with Armstrong, without disclosing his identity, and described him as "troubled in mind."]

The apparent suicide of Armstrong, after he had been found dead below his 13th floor apartment in New York City, was attributed to sorrow over an estrangement from his wife.

Recall Duggan Death

But certain features of the death have caused the federal bureau of investigation to make inquiries, it was learned. The major's body, for instance, was fully clothed, even to hat, overcoat, and gloves, when it was found. As in the mysterious death fall of Laurence Duggan, a former state department employe who died after questioning by congressional investigators, the possibility of murder was not entirely discounted.

McCarthy said the major had not expressed fears of reprisals when he gave information to the subcommittee. He said his group planned no investigation because the chance of a connection between the death and his subcommittee investigation was remote.

"Maj. Armstrong's fears stemmed from the possibility that secrets he helped to develop were being leaked to foreign agents," McCarthy said. "It should be emphasized that he was an entirely voluntary and co-operative witness and motivated by patriotic motives in coming to us."

Armstrong was a signal corps officer in both wars. He was the inventor mainly responsible for the development of frequency modulation, which is static free radio, and used to provide the sound part of television broadcasting.

Stands on right not to disclose groups she's joined

PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Goldie B. Watson, of N. College ave. near 23rd st., who taught at Martha Washington school, was one of five Philadelphia teachers suspended last week for refusing to answer questions concerning alleged Communist affiliations before the House un-American Activities committee.

Wilbert McCabe, a social studies teacher at the Sulzberger junior high school and Mrs. Celestine Fulchon were two of the three teachers denying ever having any affiliation with the party who were retained in their jobs by School Superintendent Louis P. Hoyer.

Mrs. Watson was threatened with a contempt citation by Chairman Scherer (Rep., Ohio) when she flatly turned down questions on membership in organizations "because they violate my constitutional rights."

Threatened With Contempt

She did not, however, invoke the protection of the Fifth Amendment.

Scherer told her: "Your manner clearly indicates you are in contempt of congress."

Mrs. Watson replied that she was aware of the "risks and dangers," but added that "my rights are very sacred to me."

Rep. Walter (Dem., Pa.) said of Mr. McCabe and Mrs. Fulchon, teachers who denied Communist affiliations, that they "never should have been called in open session."

Implicated by New Yorker

Mrs. Dorothy Funn of New York is the person who brought Mrs. Watson's name before the committee when it held preliminary hearings in Philadelphia earlier this year.

Mrs. Funn, an admitted former Communist and a former school teacher, told the committee that Mrs. Watson had attended a school in New York where communist doctrines were discussed. The latter was not called upon to testify at that hearing.

WOMAN RED HAD TOP SECRET JOB, SAYS M'CARTHY

Army Immediately Denies Prober's Charges

By ROGER D. GREENE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) charged today that a woman identified by a witness as a card-carrying, dues-paying Communist during the 1940s is now handling "top secret" messages in the Pentagon code room.

McCarthy's accusation — the latest move in his running feud with Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens—brought a quick statement from the Army. It said the woman, Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, "never" had access either to secret codes or uncoded secrets.

Mrs. Moss' attorney said she denies ever having been a Communist.

McCarthy, speaking out at a televised hearing before his Senate Investigations subcommittee, said Mrs. Moss was still working in the code room "as of today."

The Army retorted:

1. As a result of the Army's own investigation, undertaken "prior to any action by the McCarthy committee, Mrs. Moss was shifted from her $3,335-a-year job as a communication relay machine operator for the Signal Corps in the Pentagon to an "unclassified position" on Feb. 5.

Had No Access to Code

2. Mrs. Moss formerly operated equipment handling "unintelligible code messages, both classified (secret) and unclassified," but "never had access to the codes, to the cryptographic rooms or to the code rooms."

The Army said the coded tape which goes through the relay machines is handled outside the "highly guarded code room" and could not be understood even if it fell into the hands of unauthorized persons. It said the tape itself "cannot be deciphered" — presumably without a coding machine.

Emphasizing that its investigation was undertaken before McCarthy moved into the case, the Army said its checkup on Mrs. Moss was based on President Eisenhower's executive order of March 23, 1953, which directed federal department chiefs to re-examine the security status of their employes.

A spokesman said the Army's inquiry is continuing.

Secrets Not Accessible

Prior to her transfer, the Army said, Mrs. Moss worked under a supervisor with 50 other employes performing the same duties in a communications center outside the code room.

She never had access to uncoded secret or confidential messages, it said.

Firing a new blast in his charge of "Communist coddling" by the Army, McCarthy had said earlier that the facts about the woman's alleged Communist background should come as "no surprise to the Army."

"The Army had the same information months ago," he said.

Subcommittee Counsel Roy M. Cohn said the subcommittee had information that FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover sent a memo to the Army and the Civil Service Commission on Sept. 11, 1951, bearing on Mrs. Moss' loyalty status.

McCarthy said he had advised Pentagon officials some time ago he planned to air the case publicly unless they "did something" about it, but he commented:

"I doubt very much that Army Secretary Stevens personally knew about this case."

McCarthy produced a Civil Service document describing a Mrs. Annie Lee (Crawford) Moss as a $3,175-a-year telegraphic-typewriter operator at the Pentagon.

The document said Mrs. Moss handled messages "in code and clear text" from all over the world for such sensitive federal agencies as the State Department, the Army Security Agency, Central Intelligence Agency and the "general staff."

It described Mrs. Moss as a native of Durham, N. C., born Aug. 9, 1905, and said that in applying for an Army job in 1950 she had signed an affidavit swearing she was not then and never had been a member of the Communist party. Subcommittee counsel said she is a Negro.

George E. C. Hayes, attorney for Mrs. Moss, told newsmen his client "has taken the position she is not now and never has been a member of the Communist party."

May Testify Soon

Hayes said Mrs. Moss has been ill, but probably will appear before the Senate subcommittee at a later time. Rep. Velde (R-Ill) told newsmen Mrs. Moss had been questioned yesterday at a closed door hearing of the House Un-American Activities Committee, which Velde heads.

As corroboration for his charges, McCarthy drew testimony from Mrs. Mary S. Markward, a former FBI undercover informant, that she knew Mrs. Moss as a member of a Communist party cell in Washington during World War II.

Mrs. Markward said she had given reports on Mrs. Moss to the FBI as early as 1949 when she herself ended her six-year role as a secret FBI informant working in the Red party.

Under questioning by Sen. Jackson (D-Wash), McCarthy said he didn't know whether there was any data to show Mrs. Moss is a Communist today, but he said there is evidence "concerning Communist activities" on her part as late as September, 1951.

Takes Jab at Stevens

As the hearing progressed, McCarthy took another jab at Army

Secretary Stevens, who has accused the Wisconsin Senator of jeopardizing Army prestige and morale by "abusing" Army officers with "unfair" investigative tactics.

Stevens is scheduled to meet McCarthy in a nationally televised showdown before the subcommittee Thursday.

At one point in today's session McCarthy called out to ask if a "representative of the Army" was present in the hearing room. When a man in plain clothes stepped forward, the Senator asked him to tell Stevens "I think he was grossly misadvised" in making the accusation of "abuse."

Five Others Called

McCarthy also told the Army man:

"I don't think Bob Stevens wants to protect Communists in the Army any more than any member of this committee does."

In recessing today's hearing, McCarthy said Mrs. Markward had named five other persons as among those she knew in the same Communist cell with Mrs. Moss. All five will be called to testify tomorrow, McCarthy said.

He said Mrs. Moss would appear "sooner or later."

Mrs. Markward, whose role as an undercover worker for the FBI came to light during a 1951 inquiry by the House Un-American Activities Committee, testified she and Mrs. Moss were both members of the "Northeast Club in the District of Columbia, which she described as a Communist unit.

At the time, the witnesss aid, Mrs. Moss worked in the Pentagon cafeteria.

Identifies Moss Woman

Sen. McClellan (D-Ark) raised the question whether the Mrs. Moss known by Mrs. Markward was the same woman now employed in the Pentagon message center.

Mrs. Markward replied she was "not sure" she could identify Mrs. Moss now, even if she were present. Later, when McCarthy asked the same question put by McClellan, the witness replied:

"There is no question in my mind, sir."

Cohn and Francis P. Carr, subcommittee lawyers, also declared there was no doubt on that point. They said other FBI informants besides Mrs. Markward had identified Mrs. Moss.

Cohn said records showed Mrs. Moss was appointed as a communications clerk in the office of the chief signal officer on Dec. 19, 1950, and that she has been there ever since.

Schools Urged to Study Nature of Communism

By Fred M. Hechinger

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 15.—Eliminating Communists from the nation's schools must be "clearly distinguished from inquiring into the nature of the Communist state," Benjamin C. Willis, Superintendent of Schools in Chicago, told an assembly of school administrators today.

Addressing 16,000 delegates to the eightieth annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators, Dr. Willis said: "The American public and American educators are now fully aware that the Communist party in the United States is not just another political party, but is instead an integral part of the systematic world conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States when the time is ripe."

Members of the Communist party, therefore, have no right to hold positions in American schools, Dr. Willis said.

But, Dr. Wilils added, quoting President Eisenhower, "We must in these times be intelligently alert not only to the fanatic cunning of the Communist conspiracy—but also to the grave dangers in meeting fanaticism with ignorance." Dr. Willis warned against "zealots" who oppose freedom while pretending to protect it.

Assembly Hears McKay

Students must learn, Dr. Willis said, "to distingush between hysterical acclamation or denunciation, and the straight recital and annalysis of established facts.." Instead of evading controversial issues, "we should confront children with thorny questions ata their own maturity level and give them guidance in working with others in dealing with the issues that arise when honest people have differing opinions."

In bringing to the assembly the personal greetings of President Eisenhower, Douglas McKay, Secretary of the Interior asked for the school administration's co-operation and help which he termed "essential if the Federal government is to play its proper role in solving the critical educational problemss which we all recognize."

The Executive Committee of the A. A. S. A. today also threw its support behind the Mason Bill, HR-5180, which proposes to exempt from Federal income tax a total of $1,500 retirement income of all retired persons not now covered. Lawrence Derthick president of the association stressed that the bill applies "not only to teachers, but also an estimated 900,000 retired persons not now exempted, including firemen, policemen and Feedral and municipal employees." The bill was introduced by Rep. Noah M. aMson, R., Ill.

Sees Lag in Social Science

In an address tonight, Lawrence A. Kimpton, Chancellor of the University of Chicago, deplored the inadequacy and confusion in social science research. Such research, he held, lags dangerously behind that of the physical sciences and of industry. He called for a closer look at the classroom and for greater consideration of the teachers who actually work with children.

The A. A. S. A. is a department of the National Education Association. Meetings will continue through Thursday.

Ex-Red Won't Tell On Others

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Eight present or former Philadelphia school teachers refused to tell House probers whether they ever were Communists. A ninth admitted he was an ex-Red but refused to name others.

The group of teachers testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee at a resumption of its investigation into Communism in the Philadelphia school system.

The lone witness to admit former Communist membership was Wilbur Lee Mahaney, a 51-year-old history teacher at the West Philadelphia High School.

But he flatly refused, using no legal grounds, to name other persons he knew as Communists. He declared it was a "matter of conscience" that he could not be "an informer" or "tale bearer" about others.

Mahaney said that he joined the Communist party in 1934 or 1935 and quit in the fall of 1948. He said he left the party because he was remarried, his mode of life was changed and he just lost interest

Jury Finds Six Michigan Reds Guilty

Wellman [left], Allan, and Mrs. Winter.

Detroit, Feb. 16 (AP)—Six top Michigan Communists were convicted today of conspiring to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the United States government.

A federal court jury of seven women and five men deliberated less than seven hours before reaching a verdict.

The defendants, five men and one woman, all admitted communists, could be sentenced to five years imprisonment.

Federal Judge Frank A. Picard cancelled the bonds of the five men, sending them to jail to await sentencing at 11 a. m. Friday. The $5,000 bond of Mrs. Helen Allison Winter was continued. She had been ill thruout the four months trial, but attended all sessions, some in a wheel chair.

Schatz [left], Ganley [center], and Dennis.

Show No Emotion

The six received the verdict without show of emotion. Previously they'd expressed belief they'd be convicted.

The courtroom was almost empty when the jury reported, in contrast to crowds which the trial drew. Ernest Goodman, attorney for three defendants, said he would appeal.

Mrs. Winter is the wife of Carl Winter, one of 11 top Communists convicted in the first conspiracy trial under the Smith act in 1949. He is serving a 5 year term imposed by Judge Harold R. Medina. Detroit's was the eighth such trial under the anti-conspiracy act; its verdict one of the fastest reached in any of them.

Others Convicted

Convicted with Mrs. Winter today were: Saul Wellman, chairman of the Michigan Communist party and currently serving a 60 day contempt of court sentence imposed during the trial; William Allan, editor of the Michigan edition of the Daily Worker; Thomas D. Dennis Jr., Nat Ganley and Philip Schatz, all former state party officers or organizers.

Wellman and Schatz served 30 days for contempt during the trial for refusing to say whether a woman acquaintance not on trial was a Communist party member.

COMMONWEALTH COLLEGE (ARKANSAS)
ON LIST OF SUBVERSIVE ORGANIZATIONS

These Days . . . . . By George Sokolsky

Situation in Arkansas

DURING the days of the Okies and Arkies and similar fomentations of social disorder, a curious institution appeared first in Louisiana and then in Arkansas. It was called, "Commonwealth College", which has since been placed upon the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations.

Sokolsky

On February 16, 1935, a joint committee of the Arkansas legislature made an investigation of this college, which had been founded principally by Dr. W. E. Zeuch. Dr. Zeuch went to work for Harold Ickes in the Department of the Interior and Lucien Koch took over the directorship.

The money to set up this institution came from the Garland Fund, the Carnegie Fund (Foundation?) and Mrs. Leonard Elmhirst. In a word, the original money came from New York. The students did not need to have any academic qualifications to enter this college.

Democratic Congressman William L. Dawson of Illinois, who is also Vice Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, discusses national campaign issues and reminisces with former President Harry S. Truman in the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C. Mr. Dawson called on Mr. Truman to review a long-standing friendship during the latter's visit to Washington to attend the National Jefferson-Jackson Dinner and Conference May 5-6, and to fulfill speaking en gagements in the East.

Will Democrats Nominate A Conservative In '56?

WILL the Democrats in 1956 nominate a conservative or a Fair Dealer like Adlai Stevenson for President? The Advertiser does not pretend to know. But it is, of course, unchallengeable that millions of Democrats hope that their party will become more habitable by returning to the moderation of another day.

While we will undertake no prophecy, it is clear that the struggle between the conservative and Locofoco wings for the soul of the Democratic Party will be renewed.

P 2 B

The reverberating, teeth-rattling victory of Gov. Allen Shivers over the CIO's millions and the Rayburn-Garner wing in Texas proclaims the force and purpose of the conservatives. Shivers led Texas into the Republican column in 1952, and in 1954, Texas gave him its hand in approval.

Moral Journey

THE elegant, courageous young governor is sweet pap in Texas. He holds a mandate to do it again if he chooses. He has announced that he will never again run for office and will thus face any hazards with entire composure over the consequences. He will be the leader of Democrats wishing to restore their party to moderation.

You can imagine the convention floor and its proceedings. There will sit the lean Texas tiger at the head of a delegation from a state with 23 electoral votes. Some will want to boot him out, but that would be the same as booting all Texas.

At Shivers' right will be Senator Price Daniel, a Texas Democrat. Senator Daniel joined Gov. Shivers in carrying Texas for the Republicans.

Speaker Sam Rayburn will be somewhere about. He is a very able and widely esteemed figure, but he puts the Democratic Party above the State of Texas. Rayburn can take Truman or anything else, as we have seen. He will be loathing Shivers, but he will have to tip his hat in passing because Shivers is his master in Texas. Texas just said so.

Also there from Texas will be Senator Lyndon Johnson. Johnson is the elected leader of the Democrats in the Senate. The same electorate that elected Senator Daniel and Gov. Shivers elected Johnson.

Johnson is something of an embarrassment to Democrats like Adlai and Truman. In the case of tidelands oil, Truman growled "giveaway" and Adlai trilled it after him as he did everything else. Yet there is the Senate Democratic leader who voted for the "giveaway" and yields not at all in calling it righteous.

WITH Shivers will be other conservatives such as Byrd of Virginia, who was powerful enough to take Virginia Republican in 1952. There will be the Russells, Talmadges, McClellans, Eastlands, Stennises, Georges, Smathers. This Shivers & Co. will be seeking a moderate candidate to run against the Republican nominee.

Their opposition, both as to platform and candidate, will be powerful and may well prevail. There will be Senator Hill and Senator Sparkman. We imagine that this time Folsom will avoid the blunders which kept him from representing Alabama at the 1948 Philadelphia convention. Whether Folsom or the two senators will be the big dog at the convention, The Advertiser leaves to the prophets among what might be called the invariable Democrats.

Harry S. will be there, combative and immensely influential. "Honest Ave" Harriman, the railroad man, will be there with CIO Reuther, AFL Meany, Estes, Senator Lehman, Walter White, and the violet-eyed Humphrey. Quite possibly Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., will be there, entitled Governor of New York.

That random collection of names from the opposing conservative and Locofoco wings of the Democratic Party suggests a struggle between keen and furious adversaries.

In photo at right are the new officers of the Illinois Young Democrats. Slate was chosen at annual convention in Springfield. Seated left to right are Rolland Tipsword, Taylorville, secretary; Joseph P. McMahon, Chicago, president, and Miss Jennie M. Williams, 23-year-old Chicago cashier, who was named treasurer. Standing are Louis P. Farcina, Chicago, second vice president; James T. Londrigan, Springfield, first vice president, and W. D. Thomas, Granite City, third vice president.

Arkansas Democratic State Committee Adds Three Negroes To Rolls

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — (ANP) — Changing a lily-white status that has existed since Reconstruction days, the Arkansas Democratic State committee last week added three Negroes to its rolls.

Without a murmur of protest, the committee also voted to name three more Negroes as soon as it could screen a large number of recommendations made from the First, Fifth, and Sixth congressional districts where the Negro population is heaviest.

The first Negroes ever to sit on the Democratic party's policy-making and ruling body will be P. W. Black Jr., of Blackville, Jackson county, Rev. A. J. Pearson of Fort Smith, and W. C. Mackey of Texarkana.

Selection of the Negroes came under a change in the party rules adopted last month to enlarge the state committee from 53 to 59 with the additional six to be named by the 53 elected at the convention. Negroes were not specified for the extra membership, but it was generally understood that at least some of them would be for Negroes.

Demos To Defy Dixie Jim Crow

Defender Chicago, Ill.

By ETHEL L. PAYNE
(Defender Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — The Democrats will defy Jim Crow when they invade New Orleans for a two day stategy meeting December 3.

A threatened breach in the party over the selection of this city as the site of a meeting of the Democratic National Committee was healed this week after assurances were made that all sessions including the $100 a plate dinner and other facilities would be conducted on a strictly integrated basis.

The dispute occurred after Louisiana Negro Democrats protested that they would be barred from the Roosevelt hotel, the original meeting place selected by the committee.

The tense situation mounted after Cong. William L. Dawson, vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee who wields tremendous influence in the policy of the party indicated that he would not attend the meeting even though he was to be accorded the same high level treatment as Chairman Stephen Mitchell and other key party leaders.

Walter Reuther, president of the CIO, telephoned Mitchell that holding the meeting in the South was an affront to Negro voters all over the country who by their unprecedented turnout at the polls at the recent Congressional elections had made a major contribution to the victories won by the Democrats.

Other Democratic committeemen from key states like Michigan joined in the flood of protests and for a time, it looked as if the meeting would be cancelled or withdrawn from New Orleans.

However, Negro leaders like C. C. Dejoie, publisher of the Louisiana Weekly, Alexander Tureaud, insurance executive, and Dr. Albert Dent, president of Dillard university after holding conferences with Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana and other Party leaders decided that the psychological value of holding an unsegregated meeting in the South would outweigh the criticisms.

TWO FACTIONS IN STATE

In Louisiana there are two factions of the Democratic Party, one headed by Sen. Long, rated as a Southern liberal and the other by Gov. Robert F. Kennon, who along with Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas in 1952 bolted the Democratic Party for Eisenhower.

It is the Long faction with whom the Negro Democrats are aligned. The meetings were thereupon withdrawn from the Roosevelt hotel and Tulane university was procured as the site with its International House scheduled to feed and house delegates on an integrated basis.

The $100 a plate dinner will be held in the Municipal Auditorium on a guarantee of no segregation.

Reached by phone in Chicago, Cong. Dawson said that he had had assurances of the most enthusiastic cooperation by Democratic leaders, white and colored in New Orleans and that elaborate precautions would be taken to see that no incidents of discrimination would mar the proceedings.

DEMOCRAT

Demo Regulars Hold 61-11 Edge Over Dixiecrats

Democratic party regulars now hold a 61-11 edge over Dixiecrat States Righters on the state Democratic Executive Committee.

According to official returns, states-righters won only two of the 13 seats decided in the June 1 runoff. Both of them were in the Second District, of which Montgomery is a part.

Loyalists picked up three more in the Second, six in the Seventh and two in the Ninth to go with the 50 seats they won in the first primary on May 4.

Sate Rep. L. W. Brannan Jr., of Foley, with 17,129 votes, and Frank Mizell, Jr., of Montgomery with 16,345, were the States' Righters elected in the Second District.

B. Theron Bradley of Montgomery with 16,749, W. M. Hodgson of Bay Minette with 16,058 and Vernon B. Millsap of Evergreen, with 15,798, were the victorious party regulars.

TWO STATE'S RIGHTERS and two loyalists ran off for two contested places from the Ninth District and both Democratic regulars won. Floyd G. Ansley polled 20,693 votes, William G. Barber 24,873, William C. Brannon 20,222 and Alan T. Drennen, Jr., 20,531.

Eleven regulars fought it out in the Seventh District for the six places undecided in the first primary. These were 12 contestants, but one dropped out.

Victorious were R. F. Blake of Haleyville, with 17,847 votes; William B. Fite of Hamilton with 18,220; Fuller Kimbrell of Fayette, 18,700; John M. Miller of Cordova, 17,729; John D. Petree, Jr., of Jasper, 17,682, and Benjamin Grady Wilson of Jasper, 16,909.

In the two primaries, loyalists won eight seats in the Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth districts, and five in the Second.

State's Righters took all eight in the First District and three in the Second.

Wants Complete Integration

Powell to Urge Retention Of Negroes in Dewey Jobs

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW YORK—Fresh on the heels of an overwhelming victory in which he beat his Republican opponent five to one, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell drew up plans to establish a solid political foothold in the district which he said "has no official liaison" with the Democratic leadership.

Oct. 11-13-54

At a press conference in the offices at his church, Abysinnian Baptist, 132 West 138th Street, Congressman Powell said that he would ask the present elected county committee to elect him as their leader if a meeting is convened. If they do this," he said, "I will give them and the captains that they represent complete cooperation, along with loyal captains and workers of the People's Democratic Club, 2499 Seventh Avenue, who have worked so diligently this year accomplishing the two tremendous victories in our area.

P. 14

"If the County Committee is not convened, or if it is convened and does not elect me, I will, nevertheless, run for leader in 1955."

* * *

HE SAID also that he has urged Governor-elect Averill Harriman to completely integrate into the state offices, qualified members of the Negro and Puerto Rican groups of the city.

"To do this," Congressman Powell said, "he must first not let a single position to which the Republican party appointed Negroes be taken away from them.

"In the second place, he should boldly go forward from Governor Dewey's appointments and I can think of no bolder step than to appoint a Negro Secretary of State."

For this position, Congressman Powell said, he would fight for Atty. Carson DeWitt Baker.

Finally, Mr. Powell announced his All-Legislative Conference to be held, Dec. 11 and 12.

He said he has asked Justice Hubert T. Delany and Judge Harold Stevens to preside over the judicial panel; City Councilman Earl Brown to preside over the city panel; Senator Zaretski to preside over the state panel and the Congressman himself will preside over the Federal panel.

He said that for a closing mass meeting on Sunday, Dec. 12, he had invited three Negro Congressmen of United States: Hon. William Dawson of Illinois, Hon. Charles Diggs Jr. of Michigan and himself.

STATE LEADERS CONDEMN ATTEMPT TO REORGANIZE JIM CROW DEMO ORGANIZATION

Meeting Planned For Muskogee Feb. 13 Called "Step Backward"

RETURN TO WARRING FACTIONS LOOMS

Forgetful that the democratic party in Oklahoma in the last gubernatorial campaign, integrated the Negro voters fully and completely into the state central committee set up, and for the first time in the history of the state installed a Negro, Robert E. Lee, Muskogee, in the state offices in Oklahoma, with a secretary, four Negroes have issued a call, sent out all over Oklahoma, asking Negro Democrats to revive the old defunct jim crow Negro Democratic Central Committee, which was denounced as shameful by the late Governor E. W. Marland.

"A Call to Duty"

According to the green circular sent out, under the caption, "A Call to Duty," and signed by Major Walter Seward, McAlester, Pliney Twine, Muskogee, George R. Ragland, Oklahoma City, and D. C. Cooksey, Muskogee, the meeting is to be held on the 13th day of February, Muskogee, is the Liberty College building, Muskogee.

"Raise Uncle Tom Issue"

Some idea of the reactionary thinking of the signers of this call for a jim crow political meeting can be gotten from one statement in the petition circulated in which there is reference to "empty integration," which of course means the Uncle Toms who sent out the call to not think there is any great and substance in the elimination of segregation in American life. In other words, this group wants to lead the Negro back to segregation, and in the last paragraph of the call issued by them the writers say, "We know the name Uncle Tom will be given to the writers."

Williamston Denounces Meeting

Dr. H. W. Williamston, Idabel, the man who officially dissolved the old Negro Democratic Association, in a letter to the Black Dispatch Saturday said: "This effort should be fought by every liberal minded individual in this great state. It is most unfortunate that this kind of movement has to be fought when we just about have our freedom in our grasp." Williamston is the state president of the Oklahoma Conference of Branches, NAACP.

"Backward Step," Says Moon

Principal F. D. Moon, of Douglass high school, Oklahoma City, when shown the hand bill Saturday, being circulated over Oklahoma, said, "I think this is a step backward. I think the Democratic party did the right thing last election when it planned the organization and blocking of Negroes into the precincts. That is the democratic method and procedure we should pursue from now on."

Randolph in Bull Session

R. Taylor Randolph, representative of the State Board of Affairs, when approached on the subject in Oklahoma City Saturday said he had planned to be in Muskogee as an observed on the 13th, "But I told the boys in Tulsa the other night, when they held a bull session in a newspaper office there, I was opposed to any such plan. One of the boys argued the new program was intended to protect the jobs of the 1500 Negro teachers in the state, and I told them if that was the purpose they should have been organized and active durin the past two years," Randolph said. "I think the boys are more interested in jobs for themselves than they are about the teachers," Randolph concluded.

Precinct Work Developed

More Negroes have identified themselves with precinct work since the disintegration of the old jim crow organization than ever before. In Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Muskogee, Negroes spread out farther into precinct organization than ever before, which immediately gives them representation in the county and state conventions. This is the healthy way to grow up in the state Democratic organization. The tendency of the jim crow officials has always been to discount precinct organization and make absurd estimates of the strength of the Uncle Tom factions.

Warring Factions

Smith Hester and other Democratic officials endorsed the integrated program during the last presidential election and it is known that most of the Democratic state officials are apposed to the clashing that always comes when Negroes in the jim crow setup seek to supercede in authority the precinct officials at election time. Internicine war of this sort always develops especially in Tulsa, Oklahoma City and Muskogee. During the Roy Turner gubernatorial campaign the State Democratic Central Committee had to maintain four headquarters in Oklahoma City to accommodate and pacify the warring factions.

Misrepresentations Made

Taylor Randolph was shocked Saturday when he saw a letter from Williamston denouncing the meeting in Muskogee February 13, for he said the group in Tulsa, with whom he talked, assured him that Williamston approved the meeting and would be present and preside over same. Rev. J. G. Holt, Oklahoma City, who announced sometime ago he was managing the gubernatorial campaign for Jim Arrington, was terribly hot in the collar last Monday when he arrived at the Black Dispatch office and announced that George R. Ragland, Oklahoma City, had since the announcement in the Black Dispatch of Arrington, sought to run under him and take over the Arrington campaign.

Believes in Total Integration

"The time has come," decalred Ira Hall, state high school inspector, when the jim crow circular was called to his attention, "for the Negro to pin his faith in total integration, economic and political, and any judgment reached aside from this view is due to immature and illogical thinking."

The call as issued by Ragland, Seward, Twine and Cooksey, reads as follows:

"A Call to Duty"

"We feel that it is urgently necessary to call the Negro Democrats of the state of Oklahoma to get together, organize and prepare to intelligently participate in the coming election, don't you?

"We know, I mean all we line Democrats, and here we refer to the many of us who first organized and made a Democratic party of the colored folks of the state, that the last gubernatorial election forgot the ones who made it possible for the last election of the chief executive in question. We are aware of the fact that the running from end to end of the state in all out effort to elect the present head of the administration has been openly ignored, and to put it in the vernacular of the street, this administration has smilingly bitten the hand that fed it.

"New, we have no time to lose in an effort to be integrated into the white Democratic party. Altho let it be understood, we do not object to be so integrated. Yet we honestly believe that there is more for the race if we operate our own political machine, and we are sure that it will enhance the Negro's executive ability to have the freedom to serve in any executive capacity in our own organization, rather than look on as the other fellow serves the organization after integration.

"However, integration or no integration, it is now time for action. We are speaking of unselfish, unbiased action for the sole benefit of the Negro race in the state, and not only for the loaves should guard Negro prisoners in state institutions in this state, Negro chaplains should be employed to invoke the blessings of our Great Master on the Negro prisoners. Negro foremen could pack the asphalt on the state highway with a Negro crew.

"All of this is possible if a committee of real men will see the likely winner of a gubernatorial election, and the state legislators in the different counties, we mean demand in a courteoust way something for the Negro other than empty integration. If prisons are places to remold the lives of those who have errer and to give society a better product, there should be some literary accomplishments required for the guards to teach, or the institutions will be a place of punishment and will not attain the point for which it was destined.

"Speaking of integration, we feel that the Negro race needs first integration in some of the many jobs which his tax money is spent to create and maintain, regardless of what one may know, or what school or college he may have emerged, if he has no money, neither can qualify for employment, he will be passed as a Cadillac passes a thumber. No one has any time to spend with a beggar. No one is hunting a poverty stricken person, but will elude him every time it is possible to do so.

"Now, we know that this article will not hit the spot with many men and women of our race, we know that the name 'Uncle Tom' will be given to the writer of this article, but thank God, this is America, the land of the free, and Uncle Tom, and Aunt Lizzie or Grandpa Enoch can think as he pleases and their thoughts do not have to be directed, neither dictated by any one.

"We would like to hear from all Democrats on this issue. We welcome your suggestion for a meeting place in Oklahoma City, Muskogee, or Ardmore at an early date to effect state organization."

$100-a-plate dinner of Democrats attracts 17 minority group stalwarts

34 d

WASHINGTON

Loyal Democrats turned out en masse, Thursday night, for the annual Jefferson - Jackson $100-a-plate dinner of the Democratic National Committee at the Mayflower Hotel.

Some 1,500 Democrats swelled the coffers of the National Committee some $150,000 by attending the affair.

Highlighted by the presence of former President Harry S Truman, the dinner was the kick-off of the 1954 Congressional elections campaign.

There was a scant attendance of colored Democrats — 17 in number — at this year's dinner, but their presence was marked by completely integration at dinner tables.

Roy Garvin, Washington attorney, was seated at a table with Democrats of the other race from Okahoma and Alabama and a coridail atmosphere existed.

Some Democrats who attended the last such dinner given in New York City were absent Thursday night, however. Among these were Dr. Frank S. Horne, housing official, and John S. Sengstacke, Chicago publisher.

Among Those Present

Among those present from Washington were:

Todd Duncan, who sang the National Anthem at the dinner, and Mrs. Duncan: Richard R. Atkinson, attorney and RLA board member; Mrs. Christine Davis, minority clerk of the committee on expenditures in the executive department; Frank B. Reeves, Mr. Garvin, James M. Leak, Charles L. Duncan and Belford V. Lawson all Washington, attorneys; Charles L. Franklin and George L. P. Weaver.

From Juneau, Alaska, came Leonor S. Shofner. Harvey Johnson was present from Cleveland.

Also present were Theodore R. Henry of the Democratic National Committee staff and Mrs. Venice M. Spraggs of the women's Division of the National Committee.

Ovation For Dawson

William L. Dawson of Chicago, vice chairman of the national committee, was seated on the dais between W. Averell Harriman and Stanley Woodward of New York City. Mr. Dawson received an ovation when he was introduced by Toastmaster W. John Kenney.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York City was also present and had a table for his guests.

The top brass of the Democratic high command was on hand, led by National Chairman Stephen Mitchell, who sat next to Mr. Truman. James A. Farley, Dean Acheson, Carmine DeSapio David Lawrence and a full contingent of senators and representatives were also on hand.

Truman's Talk Brief

Mr. Truman's brief talk was "off the cuff" and urged the Democrats to continue in the role of leadership through legislative action.

He also urged the party leaders and members to study the history of the party and take pride in the accomplishments of the Democrats.

Gov. Dennis J. Roberts of Rhode Island, in his address, came closer to the racial or minority group picture than any other speaker. Governor Roberts declared:

"The present administration has borrowed or continued basic democratic programs. They have, of course, accepted only minimum goals; but in accepting basic democratic legislation, they have admitted the validity of the great social program of our party, which, when out of office, they so fiercely condemned."

Other speakers were former Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn of Texas, Sens. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas; Earle C. Clements of Kentucky and Paul Douglas of Illinois, who read a message from Adlai Stevenson, 1952 Democratic presidential nominee.

The dinner had been preceded by a two - day conference and meetings of the national committee.

Food they ate at $100 per plate

Here's what the Democrats got for their $100-a-plate dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, Thursday night

GESSNER T. McCORVEY

'Loyalty Oath' Bans McCorvey From Democrats

Executive Committee 'Rigging Primaries,' Mobile Leader Cries

By GEOFFREY BIRT

Gessner T. McCorvey, architect of the Dixiecrat movement organized in 1948, has been "Heflinized."

McCorvey said last night that the effect of the new state Democratic loyalty oath for political candidates will be to prevent him from seeking re-election this year to the State Democratic Executive Committee.

In 1928 the state committee met after the late Sen. Tom Heflin had played a leading role in the Hoovercrat movement and strengthened the loyalty oath of that time in such a way that Heflin had to seek re-election to the U.S. Senate as an independent. He was defeated by the late Sen. John H. Bankhead, the official Democratic nominee.

Telephone Interview

Speaking by telephone from his Mobile law office. McCorvey said as a result of the new candidates' loyalty oath passed by the committee on Saturday, "It would be impossible for me to qualify as a candidate for the state committee."

All 72 members of the state committee will be up for re-election this year. McCorvey said further:

"In my opinion, the majority of the present state committee is endeavoring to rig the primaries so as to make the Democratic Party of Alabama a little private club for the special benefit of Democrats who share the views of men like Sens. Lister Hill and John Sparkman."

McCorvey's exit from the Democratic Party may be followed by many other men who have followed his lead in the past six years.

Also, the new oath which McCorvey considers has barred him from seeking re-election to the policy-making committee of the Democratic Party in Alabama, will probably affect others.

McCorvey was chairman of the state committee until 1952 when Democrats won back control of the party machine, by 44 seats to 28, in that year's election. He was then succeeded by incumbent Ben Ray.

University Trustee

The former chairman is a trustee of the University of Alabama. He was appointed to this self-perpetuating board May, 1923, succeeding his Mobile law partner, Thomas S. Stevens, who had resigned. His father had taught political science at the University. McCorvey, head of one of the largest law firms in the state, is also a former president of the Alabama Bar Association.

Though architect of the 1948 Dixiecrat uprising, McCorvey failed to get elected as a delegate to the 1948 Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia that year. However he was one of Alabama's 11 electoral voters who cast their votes for the States Rights ticket of South Carolina Gov. Strom Thurmond and Mississippi Gov. Fielding Wright that year.

Asked if he had any knowledge of how many candidates would be affected by the new loyalty oath this year because they voted for President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon GOP electors, instead of the Democratic electors pledged to Adlai Stevenson and Sen. Sparkman, in 1952, Democratic Committee Chairman Ray said:

"I have no way of knowing, of course, how many may be affected." He stressed that the loyalty oath is aimed only at candidates seeking elective public office on the Democratic ticket, and not toward the voter.

From sources close to Ray it was learned, however, that the party chairman in Alabama woud accept in good faith the sworn affidavits of all candidates willing to run for office, and leave it to others, if they so wished, to challenge any qualification they doubted in the courts.

Fla. Demo Group Mixes Committee

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—Negroes in Jacksonville and Duval County became a part of the Duval County Democratic Executive Committee last week.

Its chairman, Edgar W. Waybright, former state senator from Duval county, made the announcement before the Duval County Democratic Alliance, (a Negro organization) of which David Dwight is chairman. Twenty-two members of the group have been appointed to qualify as committeewomen and committeemen for the May 4 and May 25 primaries.

States' Righters weaken hold in Demo committee

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 11 —(AP)—States' Rights Democrats in Alabama are chomping at a bitter bit designed to keep them following the straight party path.

But so far their bucking has only weakened the States' Rights toe-hold in the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee, the powerful party organization that slapped on the galling loyalty pledge and made it stick.

Two rebels on the committee have resigned in a huff. A third States' Righter announced he wilfully refrained from voting at all in the 1952 presidential election and thus disqualified himself from running again for the policy-making state group.

The loyalty pledge, adopted last month by the state committee, bars as candidates any who voted the Republican ticket in the 1952 general election or who "wilfully, intentionally or purposely refused to give aid and support" to all party nominees.

THE PLEDGE is aimed at preventing a recurrence of the 1948 States' Rights rumbarb — when Alabama's 11 electoral votes went to the Southern splinter party that sought to elect South Carolina's J. Strom Thurmond as president.

Two States' Righters on the Democratic Executive Committee, Buster Lowery of Mobile and former State Sen. Ben N. Glover of Leroy, have turned in their resignations.

In a letter to Committee Chairman Ben F. Ray, Lowery said he wanted it made clear he was backing out only from the Democratic Executive Committee "and not from the Alabama Democratic Party."

He said he voted for President Eisenhower in 1952 because he was "sick of Trumanism."

Gessner T. McCorvey, a former chairman of the committee and a leader of the 1948 revolt, disqualified himself for reelection by announcing simply that he hadn't voted for anyone in 1952.

Some protest has been kicked up, too, among county executive committees, which are required by law to follow the state committee's lead on rules for qualifiers in the Democratic primary.

The Washington County committee refused to go along with the loyalty pledge, and the Dallas County organization stalled off action by tabling it. A few counties questioned the advisability of the oath, but approved it nevertheless.

It is possible that the state committee, if it decides to take action could void the election of a county candidate qualified by the dissenting organizations on grounds that he was illegally qualified.

Strictly white Demo primary in Alabama called 'unworkable'

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

Talk that efforts would be made to hold a strictly white Democratic primary election in Alabama, with Negro candidate excluded, was dismissed today by States Rights Leader Gessner T. McCorvey as an "unworkable" proposal.

McCorvey, Mobile attorney and three times chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, told The News that "any such plan simply wouldn't work under the U. S. Supreme Court ruling."

Entry of several Negro candidates for legislative, county Democratic committee and school board posts stirred reports in Birmingham that an attempt would be made to hold a separate "white primary" election from which Negro candidates would be excluded.

The regular Democratic primary has been called for May 4.

Reported plan is for white candidates in a separate primary bear expense of such an election.

Another States' Rights leader—Birmingham Atty. Sidney W. Smyer—also dismissed such plan as "an impractical idea."

Smyer pointed out that it would cost approximately $125,000 to hold a statewide primary, expense of which is paid by the state and counties out of taxes paid by all citizens—white and Negro.

"Such a separate primary certainly couldn't be held under the state's primary election laws," said Smyer. "And it would be impracticable to try to hold a separate and private primary because of the enormous expense involved.

"Besides, I don't think it could be done under the law."

It also was pointed out that voting machines now used in elections here and in a number of other cities and counties are paid for by taxpayers in general.

Plan for holding separate Alabama 'strictly white'

BY FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

A new movement was under way here Saturday to hold a strictly white Democratic primary election in Alabama this Spring, with Negro candidates excluded.

It was contemplated that expense of such an election, which could not be held under the state's primary election laws and not be paid for by taxpayers in general, would be borne by white candidates entered in it.

These reports persisted, despite the fact that two leading States' Righters—Mobile's Gessner T. McCorvey and Birmingham's Sidney W. Smyer, both lawyers—dismissed such plan as "impracticable" and "unworkable."

TAYLOR

Entry of several Negro candidates for legislative, county Democratic committee and school board posts over the state stirred reports that an attempt would be made to hold a "separate white primary" election.

The regular Democratic primary has been called for May 4, with a runoff set for June 1

Roger W. Snyder, Birmingham attorney and former legislator, said "white candidates could hold a private primary election, with the candidates paying for it themselves."

The Democrats coud call, as the Republicans already have done, a Democratic convention and nominate candidates for the various offices, instead of electing them in a primary," said Snyder, one of the prime movers in organizing the Voters Protective League of Alabama.

"I'm not advocating that we do like the Republicans and hold such a convention," added Snyder. "But we might have to do it."

Snyder, former Circuit Court judge, had planned to run for the Legislature from Jefferson but said he was barred from becoming a candidate by the Democratic Party loyalty oath.

McCORVEY, LONG-TIME member and former chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, said earlier the loyalty oath prevented him for running for reelection to the party governing body. He said he did not vote the Republican ticket in 1952, but refused to vote for the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket, while supporting Democratic nominees for state offices.

The loyalty oath bars as primary candidates those who voted Republican or "failed or refused" to vote for national Democratic nominees.

McCorvey said that any plan to hold a separate "white primary" in Alabama "simply wouldn't work under the U. S. Supreme Court ruling."

Smyer, likewise a member of the state committee, tossed aside such a proposal as "an impracticable idea."

Smyer, a former legislator and constitutional authority, pointed out that it would cost some $125,000 to hold a statewide primary. And expense of the regular Democratic primary called by the state committee is paid for by the state and counties outo f taxes paid by all citizens—white and Negro.

"A separate white primary certainly couldn't be held under the state's primary election laws," said Smyer. "And it would be impracticable to try to hold a separate and private primary because of the enormous expense involved. Besides, I don't think it could be done under the law."

SNYDER, WHO said he did not vote for the Republican presidential ticket but "took a walk" on the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket, filed incorporation papers for the Voters Protective League here a week ago.

Among its objectives, he said, would be interrogation of all public and party office candidates as to their stand on "white supremacy" and racial segregation.

He said that the league, "which is spreading all over Alabama," had decided not to sponsor candidates for the State Democratic Committee.

"But we're going to check on every candidates who files for the state committee and find out how he stands on this loyalty oath," added Snyder. "We believe an entire slate of eight men willing to vote for repeal of this loyalty pledge could be elected in Jefferson County."

The former legislator said the league has called an "open meeting" for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Fraternal Hall, adding that "we expect a big crowd."

Allen's musicmakers—Those merry musicmakers, teenagers Judy and Terry Brown, will help whip up crowd enthusiasm for Lt. Gov. James B. Allen in competition with ex-Gov. James E. Folsom's "Corn Grinders" during the gubernatorial campaign. The Brown sisters (Judy seated at electric organ and Terry playing accordion) helped whoop it up for Allen at his recent kickoff rally at Gadsden. The girls will be accompanied by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brown Jr., Gadsden. They also play other musical instruments.

Two kickoffs

WITH LT. GOV. James B. Allen already having kicked off his bid for the governorship with a rally at Gadsden, other campaign-launchings are expected soon in the eight-man governor's race.

State Sen. James H. Faulkner's home countians in Lamar, where he was born and grew up, are preparing to stage a whopping big one for him at Vernon, his old home town. This is expected to come about the middle of March.

Faulkner, as a very young man, moved to Bay Minette, where he established a weekly newspaper—The Baldwin Times—and has prospered phenomenally. He now owns three weekly newspapers, a radio station, is interested in real estate developments and has other holdings.

Plans already have been announced for a big "Back Jack" kickoff rally for Jack Owen for governor by his home county backers at Centreville March 6.

Olen Belcher, rally chairman, said a public meeting has been called for 7:30 p.m. Monday to complete plans for the campaign-launching for Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission.

Ex-Gov. James E. Folsom, who has actually been campaigning for three years, is expected to stage a "get-goin'" rally around March 1, with his "Corn Grinders" whooping it up for him.

Winston Gullatte, Bruce Henderson, Elbert Boozer and Henry Sweet will announce kickoff rallies in their campaigns for the big Goat Hill office.

Negro Heads Give Backing To Dr. Byrd

BALTIMORE, May 8 (AP)—Dr. H. C. Byrd received a joint public indorsement yesterday from nine Baltimore Negro presidents of various Democratic clubs in his campaign for nomination for governor.

[According to the United Press, observers pointed out that Byrd's rival for the nomination, George P. Mahoney, carried nearly all Negro precincts both in 1950 when he lost the Democratic gubernatorial race and in 1952 when he lost the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate . . . each time without the support of organized Negro groups.]

Headquarters for Mahoney announced meanwhile that his candidacy had been indorsed by the Central Democratic League of Maryland.

In Baltimore yesterday, Mahoney summarized his stand on several state issues, calling for fulltime road commissioners without outside business interests, a "real ceiling" on state expenditures, a reorganization of "the sprawling structure" of the State government and taking conservation appointments out of the field of politics.

Venice Spraggs Is Party Girl Of Different Type

By MATTIE SMITH COLIN

One of the ranking women in politics today hopes the time will come when she can content herself with designing and making feminine wear and keeping her husband happy with pot roast and corn muffins.

Venice Tipton Spraggs, hard-working assistant to Congressman William L. Dawson, Illinois, in his party capacity as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, granted the interview which took four days while in Chicago.

The chief item on her agenda was a guest speaking appearance at the Memorial meeting honoring the late Mrs. Ada S. McKinley, founder of a Southside settlement house now named for her.

Mrs. Spraggs, a former Defender correspondent, told of her ultimate ambition to design and make women's clothes. She pointed out that she used to make some of her own clothes.

She also knows her way around the kitchen, and likes to prepare William W. Spraggs' favorites — potroast and corn muffins. Her personal favorites are southern-fried chicken, corn souffle and hot breads.

NATIVE OF ALABAMA

The Brimingham, Alabama-born woman — a tremendously energetic person with a wonderfully magnetic personality — is an honor graduate of Spelman college in Atlanta. She later taught in the public schools in Brimingham and at Spelman college.

As a teacher, she recognized tardiness on the part of Alabama students as one of the school's major extra-curricular problems.

Working directly with the children — and on her own — she succeeded in reducing "late lines" to a minor annoyance.

She became a supervisor in the National Youth Administration during FDR's administration in her native state with out-of-school youths. Her endeavors were of such high caliber that she was upgraded to Alabama state advisor on Negro affairs for the NYA.

Mrs. Spraggs heeded the call of Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, then director of the NYA, to come to Washington, as senior personnel assistant with the bureau. She served in this capacity until July 1943, when Congress terminated the agency.

CHIEF OF BUREAU

She became Washington correspondent for the Chicago Defender in October 1943. Three years later she was promoted to chief of the Defender's Washington Bureau. She resigned this position in 1953 to accept full-time employment with the Democratic National Committee.

Mrs. Spraggs, whose various positions have given her the opportunity to travel widely throughout the United States and the Caribbean, has received many honors.

In 1946 she was elected to Theta Sigma Phi, national honorary and professional group for women in journalism; she was named to the National Council of Negro Women's honor roll for "superior work in journalism" in 1947, and received the National Urban league's "outstanding achievement" in journalism in 1948.

The same year she won the Women's Civic Clubs award for encouraging political activity by Negro women in Alexandria, Va. The Republic of Haiti awarded her the National Order of Honor and Merit.

She said that the two women who have influenced her life most are her mother and Dr. Bethune, who "cut across the lines of race and early privations of childhood to blaze the trail for the participation of American Negro women in areas which formerly had been closed to them."

Mrs. Spraggs, whose affiliations with top organizations are legion, has no children of her own. But she and her husband, who is a tailor, have helped to educate four —two young women and two young

TREASURED EXPERIENCE

One of her treasured experiences is that which occurred when she was a newspaper woman in the nation's capital. A more experienced newsman there had promised to see that she got an interview with the then Attorney General Tom Clark, But he delayed several days.

Then he told her that he had finally made it possible for her to talk to Clark. He was thunderstruck when she revealed that she had interviewed Clark the day before — without his "magic help!"

Because of what she calls the "bread and butter" issues Mrs. Spraggs thinks women should become more active in politics.

"I think that women particularly have a special contribution they can make to politics, because these bread and butter issues affect them and their family so greatly. Women have the patience and understanding and sense of organization which makes them especially suited for political activity."

The proficient feminine political leader, told this reporter that she had purchased one hundred acres of land on Cape Cod, for summer cottages, which she hopes to open this year.

Alabama Groups to Fight To Keep Segregation Laws

Candidates Would Pay for Strictly White Demo Primary

By FRED TAYLOR
Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 20—Two newly formed Alabama groups this week began fights against any breakdown in segregation laws, with leaders of one proposing a strictly white Democratic primary election this spring.

Expense of such election, which attorneys said could not be held under the state's primary laws and not be paid for by taxpayers in general, would be borne by white candidates entered in it.

This exclusion of Negro candidates was advocated by the Voters Protective League of Alabama, Inc., after entry of several Negro aspirants for public and party offices over the state.

The league, led by former State Rep. Roger W. Snyder, Birmingham attorney and States Righter, wants to repeal the recently adopted State Democratic Executive Committee loyalty pledge.

So does the new American States Rights Association, Inc., which elected Olin H. Horton, Birmingham insurance executive, as its president, and reportedly planned to back Democratic Committee candidates pledged to knock out the loyalty oath.

Oath Bars Bolters

This oath, adopted by the committee late in January, bars as candidates in the regular May 4 Democratic primary election those who voted Republican or "failed or refused" to vote for the full Democratic ticket, including presidential nominees Adlai Stevenson and John Sparkman, in 1952.

Snyder, a former Circuit Court judge, had planned to run for the Legislature from populous Jefferson County in the regular Democratic primary. But he was barred from becoming a candidate by the loyalty oath because he did not vote for the Democratic presidential ticket as well as party nominees for state offices.

"I never have voted a Republican ticket and I don't intend to," said Snyder, who organized the league and filed incorporation papers in Probate Court here.

Sports Bar

Recent action by the Birmingham City Commission revising an ordinance which banned Negroes from participating in baseball and football games with white players also aroused the ire of those organizing the States' Rights Assn.

And some members of the group at its organization meeting were called on to help get signatures on petitions for a city election for public expression on the touchy issue.

Some thought that if they were successful in obtaining some 5,000 names of qualified voters necessary for calling such election, then an attempt might be made to recall the three commissioners. That is, unless they changed their stand.

Mayor James W. Morgan, commission president, and Associate Commissioners Robert E. Lindbergh and Wade Bradley, who voted unanimously to revise the ordinance, later refused to grant a request by a citizens group to reinstate the ban against mixed athletic exhibitions.

It was explained that the ordiance was revised mainly to permit exhibition baseball and football games between teams with Negroes in their lineups. Because of the long-existing ordinance, such teams have been passing up Birmingham in arranging exhibition contests.

H. M. Abercrombie, Birmingham lawyer and rebel member of the State Democratic Committee, called on the association to "take control of the Democratic Party in Alabama by backing Democrats, as distinguished from Truman-crats," as candidates for the committee in the May 4 primary.

This contingent was led by Hugh A. Locke, Birmingham attorney and likewise a States' Rights leader.

ARKANSAS DEMOCRATS MAY SELECT NEGROES

Recognition Test Slated In Choices Today

From The Commercial Appeal
Little Rock Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 6.—The question of whether Negroes will get recognition in ruling circles of the Arkansas Democratic Party will be answered here Thursday afternoon.

Two congressional districts in particular will be the biggest testing points because of heavy Negro population.—The First, in East Arkansas, and the Fifth, with Little Rock as its center.

The issue follows a meeting of the Democratic State Convention here two weeks ago, in which delegates voted to enlarge the membership of the State Central Committee from 51 to 57.

The convention issued no specific mandate that the six additional governing positions should be filled by Negros. But there was a "tacit" understanding that at least some, if not all, the positions would go to Negro Democrats.

Tom Harper, state Democratic chairman, will head the central committee meting at 2 p.m. in Hotel Marion.

A party spokesman said he understood there were "a number of applicants" from the first and fifth districts because of a large Negro populace. Interest for the positions appeared low in the other four congressional districts, he added.

HARLEM STIRRED BY ROOSEVELT JR

Serenading With Jazz Band He Makes Pleas to Register at Seven Street Rallies

By LEONARD INGALLS

Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. campaigned with the aid of a Dixieland jazz band last night in Harlem to stimulate the registration of voters.

The Democratic-Liberal candidate for Attorney General drew a warm reception from throngs of 300 to 500 persons at seven street-corner rallies.

In brief talks at each stop in the tour Mr. Roosevelt criticized the Republican Administration for failing to enforce fully the state's laws against discrimination. He blamed Governor Dewey for higher rents, the 15-cent subway fare and overcrowded schools.

The motorcade, in which Mr. Roosevelt rode in an open convertible, started out at dusk with horns blaring and red flares burning in traditional style.

Use of the flares was abandoned when one of them touched a roof-top sign on the lead car and set it afire at Park Avenue and 111th Street. Campaign workers quickly beat out the flames. There was only slight damage and the caravan continued.

Alternating With the Band

At each intersection rally, Mr. Roosevelt implored his listeners to register.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke from the back seat of the convertible or from the top of a sound truck at gatherings along Eighth Avenue at 115th, 126th, 136th and 148th Streets and along Seventh Avenue at 146th, 136th and 124th Streets.

At each stop his appearance was preceded by the ten-piece Dixieland band that played such favorites as "South Rampart Street Parade" and "Muskrat Ramble."

As Mr. Roosevelt's car came into view, the band would break into "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones." By that time there would be a crowd and people leaning from tenement windows. The band would go on to the next place as Mr. Roosevelt started to speak.

He promised that he and the rest of the Democratic-Liberal ticket—Averell Harriman for Governor, George ... DeLuca for Lieutenant Governor and Aaron Jacoby for Controller—would "really do something" about housing, discrimination, higher rents and higher subway fares.

"There is only one thing you can do," he declared. "Register and vote Democratic."

At the end of each talk, he was besieged for autographs. Flashing his smile, the tall candidate moved through the crowds signing small cards and bits of paper.

"You're going to be just like your father," one woman remarked to him.

"I'm sure going to try," he replied earnestly.

Mr. Roosevelt's tour was the first of ten he will make—primarily in low-income neighborhoods—during the registration period to get out the vote.

Ark. Democrats get challenge

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (NNPA)—The Arkansas Democratic Voters Association on Wednesday demanded that the Democratic party in Arkansas "stand on its feet and say whether or not it wants us."

Speakers at the association's annual convention here declared that the group would appeal to county and state Democratic officials for membership on county committees and representation on delegations to Democratic state conventions.

I. S. McClinton of Little Rock, president, said, "if the Democratic party doesn't want us, we'll find a place to go."

— o O o —

THERE WERE open and implied threats of voting Republican or independent, if demands are not met, but later the association voted to support the Democratic nominees in the November general election.

Orval E. Faubus, Democratic nominee for governor, speaking briefly at the convention, said: "The first duty of any party member is to work seriously and conscientiously to make it a good party and cure its defects. If they are not able to do that, then any citizen is free to select any party or group it chooses."

— o O o —

FAUBUS TOLD the association of about 50 persons:

"If I am to be governor, I'm going to be governor of all the people.

"There will be no discrimination as far as I am concerned because of creed, color or position in life. That is in accord with my beliefs and the oath I hope to take as the next governor of Arkansas."

Virginia Dem Rally Bars Negroes, Storm Brewing

NEWPORT NEWS, Va.—A political storm is brewing in Virginia over the refusal of the Hampton democratic Association to include Negro democrats in a giant party rally September 11, which will feature Democratic National Committee Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell as speaker.

Five Negro Democratic leaders, including members of the executive committee of the Democratic Party in Newport News, have protested to Mitchell and to Congressman William Dawson, vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee, as yet to no avail.

Refusing to accept the Hampton Democratic Association's claim that the banquet-rally, to be held at the Hotel Chamberlain, Old Point, Va., is a private affair, the protesting group contends this is not true since the announced purpose of the rally is to raise $1500 for the entire First District.

Signatures of the following persons appeared on the letter to Wilson and Dawson: Mrs. Daisy L. Morris, Lewis Thompson, Phillip S. Walker, Richard S. Jackson and W. Hale Thompson, all of Newport News, located in the First District.

Asking the National Committee to withhold sanction of the rally, the letter read, "We do not believe that the National Committee would give its blessings to the proposition of excluding party members from a party activity because they happen to be classified as Negro."

Victor P. Wilson, chairman of the rally committee, informed Thompson that the Hampton Democratic Association "reserves the right to invite only those whom the association selects as its guests."

Thompson quoted Wilson as saying "there is no place for the 'Negro'" in the banquet-rally.

Furious Negro Democrats countered by reminding Wilson and Stephen Mitchell that "many so-called Democrats in Virginia deserted the party in 1952 when our state went Republican. Voting statistics, however, will show that over 90 per cent of the vote of our group went to Mr. Stevenson."

A recent Democratic fund raising affair in Danville, Va., saw Negroes in full participation. This drew considerable unfavorable comment from several daily newspapers.

Arkansas Demo Group Plans To Add Negroes

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 26 (AP)—Six Negroes virtually are certain to be named members of the Arkansas Democratic State Committee, the party's ruling state group, within the next two weeks.

The biennial state Democratic convention, at its closing session adopted a resolution directing the state committee to add six persons to its membership—one from each of the state's six congressional districts.

After the convention adjourned, Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Orval Faubus said "I hope the committee will name some outstanding Negro leaders as members."

RACE BARRIER EASED BY DEMOCRAT PARTY

Three Negroes Win Places On Central Committee In Arkansas

By KENNETH JOHNSON

From The Commercial Appeal Little Rock Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 7.—The Arkansas Democratic Central Committee broke down traditional gates Thursday by adding three Negroes to its membership and issuing orders that three more be named as quickly as possible.

The action followed enlargement of the state committee two weeks ago at the Democratic State Convention, when delegates paved the way for Negroes to be given an active role in leadership for the first time in the history of the state's majority party.

But Not In Writing

Two weeks ago the convention increased the size of the State Central Committee from 51 to 57, with it understood—though not definitely stated—that the six new members would be made up at least in part with Negroes.

The Central Committee Thursday went one step further by voting "unanimously" that all six of the positions be filled by Negro Democrats.

However, in Thursday's meeting only three of the six positions, one from each of the state's six congressional districts, were definitely filled.

Three Are Listed

P. W. Black of Blackville community near Newport was named as committeeman from the Second District, the Rev. A. J. Pearson of Fort Smith, Third District, and W. C. Mackey of Texarkana, Fourth District.

Yet to be named are Negro members from the First, Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts, where Negro populations are heaviest in the State.

A subcommittee appointed by the Central Committee as a whole and headed by Fred Pickens Jr. of Newport was unable to make final decisions on various names recommended from those three districts. A later meeting will be held for filling those three.

The action means that Negroes now will have at least a token voice in shaping Democratic Party policies in Arkansas. They had been extended full membership in the party four years ago when color barriers were knocked down, but the recognition went no further than the membership level.

Under Faubus Lead

Agitation by the Arkansas Democratic Voters Association, a Negro organization headed by I. S. McClinton of Little Rock, had preceded the state convention action in creating positions for Negroes. During the convention itself, Orval Faubus of Huntsville-Democratic nominee for governor-sounded the policy note when he said he thought Negroes should be given more recognition within the party.

Tom Harper, chairman of the central committee who presided at Thursday's session, said he hoped the subcommittee headed by Mr. Pickens would fill the other three positions quickly.

"I think the committee would like to have that done as soon as possible," he said.

To Study Contest

The central committee also appointed a subcommittee to study the outcome of a county committee in Poinsett County on Aug. 10.

In the election, Thurman Tillery won over Ezra Pogue and M. H. Kyle defeated John M. Simmons, all four are from Harrisburg. The candidates' names were left off the ballot in four Harrisburg wards, and the losing candidates claimed they should have been listed there to make a true contest for the committeeman positions.

Rebating the matter before the central committee were State Senator Fred Stafford of Marked Tree and John Mosby of Lepanto, who represented different factions in the dispute but who both asked the state committee to order the Poinsett County Central Committee to view the disputed election.

Democrats Issue Call For Aid To Party

From The Commercial Appeal Little Rock Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 7.—The Arkansas Democratic Party issued a top-level rallying call Thursday for all good Democrats to come to the aid of their party.

Without mentioning by name either Orval Faubus, the Democratic nominee for governor, or Pratt Remmel, the GOP candidate, the State Central Committee called upon "all citizens of Arkansas who have always aligned themselves with our political faith" to turn out a big vote on Nov. 2.

The battle cry was backed up with a pledge of $2,500 cash from party funds to be spent in behalf of "those nominees of our party who have heretofore been designated as standard bearers in primary elections" this summer.

Authorization of a cash expenditure, to be spent presumably on advertising or speaking time, was unusual in that Democrats in past general elections haven't given much notice to Republican threats.

Mr. Faubus is the only top-level Democrat who has Republican opposition in the general election. However, a segment of former supporters of Gov. Francis Cherry—whom Mr. Faubus defeated this summer in the primaries—appear to be bolting party lines and swinging to Mr. Remmel.

NIXON FORECASTS DEMOCRATIC SPLIT

Vice President Tells Houston Millions of Opposite Party Will Vote for G. O. P.

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 14—Vice President Richard M. Nixon, deep in Democartic territory, predicted tonight that millions of Democrats would vote to give President Eisenhower a Republican Congress.

"On the basis of my travels through twenty-two key states, I predict tonight that the Democratic vote will be split again in 1954 as it was two years ago * * *," he told a $100-a-plate Republican dinner.

Mr. Nixon also addressed a convention of the National Association of Retail Druggists and spoke informally to a group of party workers.

These were the final speeches of the Vice President's third tour of the campaign. He will return to Washington in the morning and start out again next week on a final tour that will take him to the Pacific Coast again.

Passes Lone Picket

To enter his hotel here, Mr. Nixon crossed a one-man picket line. A local of the International Union of Operating Engineers, A. F. L., claims it has been "locked out" by the Rice Hotel.

"Is there a strike on?" the surprised Vice President asked as he stepped out of the car that took him from the airport and was confronted by the sign-carrying picket.

The Houston Chronicle said the appearance of the lone picket "was strangely coincidental" with the arrival of the Vice President. It said the last time a picket sign had been seen there was about two months ago.

At the airport, Mr. Nixon told reporters who asked him about the bird-dog-kennel dog remarks on unemployment by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, "I don't believe in the history of the country there has been a more distorted picture of what a man has said."

Mr. Nixon said he was not blaming "the working press," but people like Walter P. Reuther, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, who, he said, were guilty of the distortion. He said that because of this distortion he believed the Wilson incident would end up as a "plus" for the Republican campaign.

Greeted by G. O. P. Leaders

Mr. Nixon was greeted by Republican leaders who are trying to elect William B. Butler to the House of Representatives in place of the veteran Democrat, Representative Albert Thomas. Mr. Butler is a young Houston lawyer, former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, and former naval intelligence officer.

Although they were able to persuade the Vice President to come here, Mr. Butler's backers say they have failed so far to get any affirmative support from Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, a member of the President's Cabinet, whose husband is publisher of The Houston Post. Mrs. Hobby is Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

While The Post has spoken in general terms for a Republican-controlled Congress in the second half of the Eisenhower Administration, it has not spoken up for Mr. Butler specifically.

On the contrary, said Thad T. Hutcheson, the Butler campaign manager, W. P. Hobby, the publisher and former Governor, is co-chairman of a testimonial dinner for Mr. Thomas. The dinner will not be held until two days after eletcion, but Mr. Hutcheson said, "by no stretch of the imagination can we regard this as nonpolitical."

Mrs. Hobby, he added, has accepted speaking engagements in behalf of Republican candidates in other states, but not at home.

Democrats Denounced By Former Powell Manager

NEW YORK — Tammany Hall officials were attacked last week for their alleged practice of discriminating against Negro leaders by a former Harlem Democrat, who declared at a press conference that he was supporting Senator Irving Ives and Congressman Jacob Javits, Republican candidates for Governor and Attorney General, respectively, because of their excellent civil rights record.

Joseph E. Ford, former campaign manager for Congressman Adam Powell and who is influential in Harlem political circles, attacked Tammany Hall and defended Herbert L. Bruce and Joseph Pinkney, veteran politicians whom he claims fought for and got a Negro Borough president and then were ostracised and kicked out of Tammany.

"I AM first an American Negro, second a registered Democrat, but I am at all times loyal to friends of my people regardless of party," Ford said at a press conference at the Republican State Campaign Committee headquarters at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Praising President Eisenhower's action in abolishing discrimination in the nation's capital and the Supreme Court decision in outlawing school segregation under a Republican Chief Justice as typical of the Republican drive to win full equality for all minority races in every sphere of American life, Ford continued:

"I am for Ives and Javits because on all labor issues their records are good.

"I am for Ivesand Javits because of their knowledge of our state problems and because of their platforms."

AVERELL HARRIMAN, the Democrat's gubernatorial candidate also was scored by Ford, who said "he hasn't shown any interes in my people.

"I am against Harriman because he is sponsored by our enemy, the Tammany county leader."

Unholy Alliance

THE UNABASHED love feast between the northern and southern branches of the Democrat party at the recent meeting of its National Committee in New Orleans was the first public evidence of the unholy alliance for a donkey victory.

The breach between the northern head and the southern tail of that strange political animal (which was so painfully manifest with the defection of the States Rights (Dixiecrat) group in 1948 and the capture of several Southern states by Eisenhower in 1952) must be healed if the New-Fair Dealers are to have the slightest chance of winning in 1956, hence the New Orleans marriage of convenience.

In all such deals somebody has to lose so others can win, and indications are that the compromise effected is at the sacrifice of the once loudly-acclaimed civil rights program with which many Negro votes were garnered in the past.

To a man, the leading Southern politicians have refused to accept this civil rights program, have said as much in loud voices in season and out, and have even broken with their party over it, regardless of national consequences.

Their determination is to rule or ruin, and their Northern counterparts have now made a deal to bury civil rights in the hope of winning the White House and the rich patronage that flows therefrom.

To be sure some prominent Northern Democrat leaders with large and strategic blocs of urban Negro voters continue to give a little lip service to civil rights and occasionally profess their affection for equal rights for all because they have no practical alternative, but privately they are shaking the bloody paws of the Ku Kluxers who in January will chair all of the important House and Senate committees.

After all, the 1956 stake is much bigger than appeasing Negro Democrats, whom experience has demonstrated can always be bamboozled into following behind the donkey as long as placards praising civil rights and FEPC are tied to his tail.

To be sure, the National Committee's meetings and $100-plate dinner were held in interracial surroundings so as not to embarrass the colored delegates attending the confab, but the hearty handshakes, moist eyes and great camaraderie between Northern and Southern whites in attendance showed that the wounds of 1948 and 1952 had been healed.

After all, however unholy this alliance may be, it is certainly practical from the Democrat viewpoint because experience has demonstrated to the donkey politicians that they can count on the Northern Negro ghetto vote whatever happens.

In the 1954 elections the Northern (and Southern) Negro urban vote went largely to the Democrats despite the unprecedented record of Republicans on Negro appointments and racial issues, and the knowledge that Democrat control of Congress would be to the Negro's disadvantage.

Those elections blew up completely the sedulously cultivated fiction that Negroes in

FORMER PRESIDENT HARRY S. TRUMAN

DEMOCRATIC

Harry Truman airs views on a few topics for AFRO

WASHINGTON — Former President Harry S. Truman was in a big hurry to get away from his suite in Washington's Mayflower Hotel Wednesday morning, but he did pause for a few hasty moments to give an AFRO repotrer his views on one or two matters.

Natty in a double-breasted brown suit, ruddy of cheek and with the beaming, infectious Truman smile, the former President was as gracious as a man could be under the circumstances.

Those circumstances were chiefly that his "boss" — Mrs. Bess Truman, dressed in blue and ready to take him off to a previous engagement was standing there waiting with that gleam in her eye which said, "Come on, Harry, you know it's time to go." Maj.-Gen. Harry Vaughn was also rushing his old boss to some engagement.

Saw Rep. Dawson

Between ushering out his friend, Rep. William L. Dawson (D. Ill.) and getting photographers out of the suite, and trying to please Mrs. Truman and General Vaughn, Mr. Truman couldn't get in much of a conversation with the AFRO.

However, he did let it be known that he felt the Republican administration was letting colored Americans down by its failure to push civil rights.

"You know I always stood up for civil rights and pushed them wherever I could, and I don't think the Republicans are helping colored citizens by not working on civil rights," he said.

Commented Thursday

Mr. Truman had already expressed a critical comment on this subject on Thursday night, when asked to comment on the failure of the Republicans to introduce any civil rights legislation in Congress.

"Did you expect them to?" he had asked then.

Asked to comment on the Republican "economy" which has reduced the number of federal employees while the federal payroll had increased, Mr. Truman called attention to what he was to say in a speech in Atlantic City, N.J. Thursday. In that speech he said:

"The Republican Party believes that the best economic results are obtained by working from the top of the economic scale downwards. The Democratic Party believes that the sturdy tree of American progress must be nourished at its roots, and not from the top down."

The former President declared that the Republican "economy" had brought on an economic recession, and he lashed at that recession.

"It has already lasted too long It has already inflicted too many cruel hardships upon too many people," he declared.

Hits GOP On Housing

Mr. Truman told the AFRO he was disappointed, too, by the way the Republicans have treated the housing program.

"They're making a great mistake in cutting the housing program as they have," he said.

Under his administration, Mr. Truman asked for 135,000 housing units. The Eisenhower program called for 35,000, but that figure was later cut to 20,000 units.

"That's hurting your people," Mr. Truman said.

Won't Discuss Appointments

The former President declined to comment on the appointments of colored persons made by the new administration, at least, at this time.

"I don't know enough about the appointments to discuss them," Mr. Truman said. "And when I don't know about something, I'm the first person to say so," he added with a smile.

"However, I tried to do whatever I could without any regard for race or color, for I feel that we are all Americans regardless of race or color," he said. He added that he had left patronage matters to the Democratic National Committee head, then William Boyle.

Mr. Truman did say, however, that he might have something to say about that later.

Praises Rep. Dawson

He had praise for Congressman Dawson, "my friend," whom he told "If you ever need me for anything, just let me know."

Mr. Truman spoke highly of the work Representative Dawson had done in building the Democratic Party in the South.

"And whenever you're around here, you just come on in and see me," Mr. Truman said as Representative Dawson left.

Then, with a playful nudge of General Vaughn, Mr. Truman added to the Illinois Congressman:

"And don't you bother about folks like these; you don't need an appointment; just come on in and see me anytime."

Then he turned to the AFRO reporter and smiled, and the hasty interview was over. Mrs. Truman took his arm, smiled also, and the 33rd President was off to be greeted—and chatted with—by other friends.

DIXIECRAT

Thurmond vs. Demo Nominee Sets Hot Senate Race in S.C.

Dixiecrats Map Write-In Campaign Against Edgar Brown in November

By S. L. LATIMER JR.

Editor, The Columbia State
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

COLUMBIA, S.C., Sept. 11—For the first time in modern history there will be a real battle in the general election in South Carolina this year to decide who will hold a seat in the United States senate.

The old premise that Democratic nomination is tantamount to election is being challenged because the state executive committee, instead of ordering a primary to name a man to go on the Democratic ticket in the place of the late Sen. Burnet R. Maybank, saw fit to pick the nominee itself. Mr. Maybank was renominated in June for a full six-year term starting next January. So quite a plum is at stake.

Interim Appointment

The committee, after refusing 31 to 18 to hold a primary, selected State Sen. Edgar A. Brown of Barnwell, who is the national Democratic executive committeeman from this state.

Already former Gov. Strom Thurmond, saying that he had had many requests to run, has announced that he will oppose Brown as a "write-in" ticket candidate. Donald Russell, president of the University of South Carolina, and prominently mentioned, will not offer. But, Bryan Dorn of Greenwood, member of Congress, is still toying with the idea. He has denounced the committee for not calling a primary.

In the meantime, South Carolina will be represented in the Senate for four months by a native of Georgia, Charles E. Daniel of Greenville, who was born in Elberton in 1895, but who moved with his family to this state when a boy. He is a contractor, doing building on a large scale in various parts of the South. He is normally a Democrat, but voted for Mr. Eisenhower in 1952 through an independent ticket of electors composed of dissident Democrats.

The big argument over Mr. Brown's nomination by the state executive committee arose in this way. Sen. Maybank died early the morning of September 1 at his summer home in Flat Rock, N.C. He had no opposition for nomination for another six-year term next January, to which he would have been elected in November. His death therefore left the party without a nominee for this office, and the law says a party will certify its candidates to the secretary of state at least 60 days prior to the general election, which this year will be held Nov. 2. This made Sept. 3 the deadline, provided there was strict adherence to the 60-day provision. The attorney general as far back as 1953, when asked to rule in another case, had said that the 60-day clause was not mandatory, merely to insure that there was time to print the tickets.

Committee Divided

Be that as it may, the committee took the position that it would not order a primary, but would do the nominating itself, which, under the law, it could, if there was not sufficient time for a primary. The decision was a divided one, 31 to 18.

There were several opposing arguments. One was that the 60-day clause was flexible. Another was that the name of a "figurehead," say the secretary of the party, could be placed on the ticket, and, after a primary was held, the winner's name substituted for that of the "figurehead." The law says a substitution may be made in case of resignation, which would have been expected of the "figurehead."

But the primary argument being used in general discussion is that the people are entitled to make the nomination and that a quirk in the law which permits the state executive committee to nominate should not apply while the full term is at stake.

If it were a matter of filling out for a short period there probably would be no opposition to the committee's action anymore than there is to an appointment by the governor until an election can be held. But the committee saw fit to nominate, making political history in this state, and thus created an argument that instead of subsiding has grown in intensity with each passing day.

Pledged to Nominee

Under South Carolina law a voter is sworn to support the nominee of a primary, in which he participates. But there is no pledge to support the nominee of a committee or convention. That was why in 1952 Democrats could vote for Mr. Eisenhower without violating an oath. There is no presidential primary in this state.

A voter is free on Nov. 2 to choose the committee nominee or any other available candidate, voting for the latter through the write-in method. A person offering as a write-in candidate, however, obviously is under a disadvantage.

Both Mr. Thurmond and Mr. Brown are vigorous speakers, and both will wage strenuous campaigns if they follow the patterns they have previously set.

Alabama Old-Line Democrats To Keep State Loyalty Oath

Executive Committee to Hold Organization Meeting Jan. 17

By FRED TAYLOR

Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

34d

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 25—Dixiecrats and "Eisenhower Democrats" don't like it, but Alabama's old-line national party Democrats are going to keep their stringent loyalty pledge in this state.

The loyalty oath, which barred 1952 party bolters as candidates in this year's primary elections, or one very similar to it, is expected to be adopted again when the State Democratic Executive Committee holds its organization meeting at Montgomery Jan. 17.

"I don't think there's any question but that a great majority of the state committee's 72 members will again adopt a loyalty oath," said Chairman Ben Ray.

Ray, who is winding up four years as chairman and who was reelected to the committee from the Ninth (Jefferson County) District without a runoff last May 4, bore the brunt of the fight waged by the Dixiecrats in 1952 to knock out the pledge. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld its validity.

Jasper Judge Roy Mayhall, committee vice chairman and reportedly Gov.-elect James E. Folsom's choice for elevation to the chairmanship, likewise is strongly for retention of the loyalty oath.

Judge Mayhall, who pointed out that old-line national party stalwarts were elected to 61 of the 72 places on the new state committee, declared "I feel certain we'll keep our loyalty pledge. I'm for it 100 per cent."

"The Dixiecrats and Eisenhower Democrats, who opposed adoption of the pledge, would like to see it discarded," said the jurist. "The Dixiecrat leaders want to be able to cut the Democratic Party's throat in the presidential election, but still be able to run for office themselves in Alabama under the prestige and protection of the party."

Persons for Pledge

Outgoing Gov. Gordon Persons strongly favored the pledge, which the old committee adopted last Jan. 23. And incoming Gov. Folsom is just as strong for it.

In addressing a $25-a-plate Democratic rally in Birmingham recently, which also was addressed by former Democratic National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, Folsom lauded the state committee for adopting the loyalty oath.

"I was for it when it was adopted," said Folsom. "And I'm going to use all the power and authority I can to see that the rule is carried out during the next four years."

The present pledge, which was adopted by a 42-to-19 vote after long and heated debate, is two-pronged. It not only was aimed at knocking out as public office candidates those who bolted to the Republican Party in the 1952 presidential election, but it hit those who "took a walk" in that election.

Its language barred as candidates those who "wilfully, intentionally or purposely failed or refused to aid and support, or vote the Democratic ticket."

Resolution Voted

However, as to the rank-and-file voters, regardless of whether they strayed to the GOP camp, the Democratic committee unanimously adopted a resolution welcoming them back into the Democratic fold.

As to the general question of a loyalty oath, which was discussed by Judge Mayhall and others of the national party advisory committee from over the nation at New Orleans recently, he and other Alabama party leaders point out it has been and should continue to be left up to the individual states.

Birmingham's Mrs. Dorothy Vredenburgh, secretary of the Democratic National Committee; Judge Mayhall and others who attended the New Orleans sessions, said the question of a national party loyalty oath is still "a wide-open matter."

Segregation and Party Loyalty Main Issues in Alabama Race

Industrial Interests Back Battle In Effort to Unseat Sen. Sparkman

By FRED TAYLOR
Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 24—National political eyes were on Alabama as Sen. John Sparkman and three opponents surged into the final week of a bitterly fought race to determine whether he will be reelected.

Sparkman, who was Adlai Stevenson's vice presidential running mate two years ago, has branded the campaign against him as "a Dixiecrat-Republican conspiracy" to defeat him and weaken the Democrats nationally.

And the man business and industrial interests are banking on to unseat the junior senator is Birmingham Rep. Lauria Battle, serving his fourth term as congressman from this state's largest and richest district, which is comprised of populous Jefferson County.

Other Candidates

There are two other candidates—Wetumpka's retired Admiral John G. Crommelin, who ran as an independent against Sen. Lister Hill four years ago, and Jacksonville Atty. William C. Irby Sr. But the main fight is between Sparkman and Battle. Sen. Hill and his forces are supporting Sparkman, with Hill predicting that the junior senator will win renomination over his three opponents in the May 4 Democratic primary.

Racial segregation and loyalty to the Democratic party are two issues which have stirred up most of the fighting in this race, although the Birmingham congressman has accused Sparkman of voting on both sides of the Taft-Hartley law.

Battle has assailed Sparkman repeatedly on the question of segregation, charging the senator with "toting water on both shoulders" and being "the double-talk champion" on civil rights legislation. He has struck at him for serving on the platform committee which wrote the civil rights plank in the 1952 Democratic platform.

Sparkman has slammed back by citing his record of having voted against civil rights bills 24 times, of having filibustered against them in the Senate and of having been picketed while speaking in the North as vice presidential candidate because of "My Southern civil rights stand."

Sen. Sparkman has said that his "Republican-sponsored" opposition stemmed largely from the fact that he had been chosen to run on the Democratic ticket with Stevenson.

As to Battle's assault on Sparkman and the Democratic civil rights plank, the senator challenged Battle to explain why he condemns the 1952 party platform which he says he supported two years ago.

Attacks Stand

Sparkman pointed out that Battle himself had taken an oath to support that platform and its civil rights plank in his race for congress two years ago, and said:

"Battle claims that he's a loyal Democrat and that he supported the Democratic platform and the Democratic ticket in the 1952 presidential campaign. Yet, he's condemning me for the 1952 Democratic platform—the same one he supported. Why didn't he speak out against it then? It seems to me he's meeting himself coming back."

He added that "Battle thought I was good enough to support for the vice presidency two years ago, but now he doesn't think I'm good enough for the Senate."

Battle has repeatedly denied that Texas oil interests have been putting money into his campaign in an attempt to defeat Sparkman. But he has charged that "outside interference" in the race, asserting the national CIO-PAC Director Jack Kroll has been in Alabama directing the Senator's campaign. He said the CIO-PAC has a "slush fund" which it is using in an attempt to elect "rubber stamp senators and congressmen."

As to the question of party loyalty, the Birmingham congressman contends that he is "a better Alabama Democrat than John Sparkman because I spoke out against the so-called civil rights plank in the 1952 platform."

Sparkman Favored

With the campaign now in its closing days, seasoned observers are predicting that Sen. Sparkman will be renominated. Some think his margin of victory will approximate 100,000 votes, of some 550,000 expected to be cast.

Sparkman represented North Alabama's eighth congressional district 10 years before he was elected to the post vacated by death of the late Sen. John H. Bankhead. And keepers-in-touch says Sparkman's majority over Battle in the heavy-voting northern section of the state will be lopsided.

Even so, Battle supporters are clinging to the belief that final days of campaigning will turn the tide in their favor. They are counting strongly on the Birmingham congressman carrying black belt and South Alabama areas.

Dixiecrats Making Bold Bid To Recapture Party Control

Alabama's emocratic Regulars Wage Battle to Hold Gains

By FRED TAYLOR
Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 17—Warring factions among Alabama Democrats—old-line national party regulars and Dixiecrats—are at each other's political throats again.

They are locked in a new fight for control of the 72-member state Democratic Executive Committee. But all indications are that the regulars—those who believe in sticking by the National Democratic Party—will be able to keep party machinery firmly in their hands.

Loyalty Oath Repeal

While the torrid campaigns for governor and U.S. senator roared on toward the May 4 primary election, 139 candidates listed as party old-liners or Dixiecrat rebels were slugging away in their intra-party battle for state committee places.

The Dixiecrats, who very much want to wrest party control, have as their main objective repeal of the new Democratic loyalty oath.

This banned as candidates in the party primary elections May

ALABAMA

4 and June 1 not only those who bolted to the Republican ticket in 1952, but those who "failed or refused" to support the Democratic presidential ticket of Adlai Stevenson and John Sparkman, while voting for state and local party nominees.

This loyalty pledge hit many of the Dixiecrats who veered away from the Democratic fold to line up behind the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket, as well as those who "took a walk" on the Democratic presidential nominees.

It was in 1948 that the Dixiecrats staged a revolt against the national party presidential nominees to give Alabama's 11 electoral votes to the Strom Thurmond - Fielding Wright ticket. And they held a strange hold on the state committee until 1950.

Upset Bolters

But that year the Democratic regulars, led by Sens. Lister Hill and Sparkman, together with several Alabama congressmen, won an overwhelming victory to wrest party machinery control from the bolters.

The Dixiecrats were able to retain only 28 places on the 72-member party governing body four years ago. And today they hold even fewer seats.

Old-line Democrats, who won 44 seats at the polls then, have gradually increased their majority. This was done through the election of new members to fill vacancies caused by resignations and deaths.

Desperate Moves

At first, the Dixiecrats in the present campaign quietly embarked on what has been called a move to "infiltrate" the state's all powerful party governing group. They projected slates of candidates, some of them at the 11th hour, for qualifying on March 1 in all but three of Alabama's nine congressional districts. Eight members are elected from each district.

But now they have begun to throw all the force they can muster behind vote drives in the last two weeks of the campaign. They want desperately to regain party machinery control. But failing in that, the Dixiecrats hope to capture more committee seats than they would now hold.

Strongly backed by some erstwhile Democrats, who bolted to the Republican party long before the 1952 Eisenhower-Stevenson race, the Dixiecrats chieftains have carefully plotted their campaign. And some of them have hopes of wining a narrow margin of committee control when the votes are counted in the primary elections.

But of the 139 candidates seeking the 72 places in the nine districts, Democratic regulars are certain to make complete sweeps in at least three. Those are the fourth, fifth and eighth districts, in which no Dixiecrats have filed.

But there are fights in the other six, where outspoken Dixiecrats, or candidates with Dixiecrat leanings, are battling it out with party regulars.

McCorvey's Endorsement

Down in the first district, Mobile Atty. Gessner T. McCorvey, one of the chief planners of the Dixiecrat revolt and former committee chairman, has announced his endorsement of a slate of eight candidates. McCorvey, who is still a committee member, did not seek reelection himself because he said the loyalty oath barred his becoming a candidate. He said he did not vote the Republican ticket, but admitted "taking a walk" on the Democratic presidential nominee, while voting for state and local party nominees.

McCorvey said he was leaving the selection and backing of States' Rights candidates for the committee from other districts to Dixiecrat spokesmen in those areas.

Who Determines Party Loyalty?

Editor, The Advertiser:

Geoffrey Birt in his article relative to candidates for member of the State Democratic Executive Committee, classified me [under] "Dixiecrats or others." Please allow me the privilege of presenting my side of the matter.

First, I [illegible] how Mr. Birt arrived at his classification of me. Immediately after I qualified for the race one of your writers, Sue Chandler, called and asked me several questions and when she concluded she asked if there was anything I would like to add. I told her yes, that I was a loyal Democrat. I am sure that she will verify this.

Next, on April 9, Mr. Joe Jones called me and asked me "if I was with Ray or McCorvey." I told him that I was not lined up with either one of them, but that I was a loyal Democrat and was certainly not a Dixiecrat. He said, "then you are a loyalist." I said "yes." I am sure he will verify this. I have lost votes from my closest friends because I have been honest about my beliefs, have expressed my beliefs.

Now my complaint is that Mr. Birt comes along and attempts to mislead the voters of this district (and the other districts) by "for their guidance" publishing a so-called slate of "official" candidates of the "Democrats." Who, may I ask Mr. Birt, were the high and mighty Democrats who made this so-called slate of candidates, and under what authority were they acting to make it "official." And who are they who have put up these slates that have the privilege of making the slate "official." If it was Mr. McCorvey or Mr. Ray or Jim Folsom or John Sparkman or John Doe, then why did you not name them, when and where they met and under what authority they acted?

I have not been contacted by anyone to appear on a slate. Do not get me wrong, I have no desire to obligate myself to any person, Ray, McCorvey, or [illegible] t have you, nor to any so-called group who meets in obscurity, without notice and whose names are not of my [illegible] t the same time if Mr. Birt prints a so-called list of "official" Democrat candidates, then I think that the voters are entitled to know who named that slate and why they (many other Democrats) did not have an opportunity [illegible] part in it.

[illegible] have no personal animosity toward Mr. Birt or anyone concerned. I just want to get the record straight.

Scott Wins Over Dixiecrat Attack

DESPITE injection of the Supreme Court decision outlawing school segregation into the campaign by his chief opponent, former Gov. Kerr Scott won the Democratic Senatorial nomination in North Carolina over incumbent Sen. Lennon.

The Scott forces charged Lennon's supporters with circulating reprints of a "phony" newspaper advertisement saying Scott worked for non-segregation. Similar tactics caused the defeat in 1950 of former Sen. Frank Graham, whom Scott had appointed.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther wired congratulations to Scott, saying "working men and farmers especially have every reason to rejoice with you and the people of your great state. We in the CIO are sure that you will make a great contribution in statesmanship and service to our nation and to the free world."

SCOTT'S victory was assured when Lennon conceded after unofficial returns showed Scott leading the seven-candidate field by a majority of 4178 votes. His total of better than 310,000 votes out of 613,000 cast was the biggest vote ever cast for a candidate in a North Carolina primary.

Scott had strong support from farmers and labor groups in the state, and one of his strongest assets was conceded to be a 14,000-mile road-building program during his four years as governor.

His victory is the third for Southern liberals in recent weeks. The others were primary victories for Sen. Sparkman (D. Ala.) and for James E. Folsom, who won the Alabama gubernatorial nomination in the same primary.

Other Primaries

Atty. George Huddleston, Jr., of Birmingham won the Democratic nomination for the Alabama 9th Congressional Dist. seat being vacated by Rep. Battle.

In South Dakota, Joe Foss, Marine World War II ace, won the Republican gubernatorial nomination by nearly two to one.

The Democratic gubernatorial primary in Nevada was won by former Gov. Vail Pittman over a field of four other candidates.

Defeat in Alabama's Runoff

Party Regulars Gain 5-1 Margin In Seats on State Committee

By FRED TAYLOR

Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special To The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 12—Dixiecratism may not be completely dead in Alabama, but its leaders have suffered their worst defeat since they staged a spectacular revolt against the National Democratic Party in 1948.

Official canvass of returns this week from the runoff primary election showed that Democratic old-line party regulars — those who believe in sticking by the national party—had clinched a five to one margin over Dixicrats in seats won on the all-important State Democratic Executive Committee.

Party regulars, led by salty State Democratic Chairman Ben Ray in the May 4 primary voting, already had scored triumphs in most of the nine congressional districts to increase their majority over States' Righters. Each district elects eight state committee members.

Final Tabulation

But final and official tabulation of votes in the June 1 runoff primary showed national party Democrats wining 10 of 13 paces to give them an overwhelming bulge of 60 seats to 12 for Dixiecrats on the 72-member state party governing body. Chairman Ray, who had been the target of many shots fired by the Dixiecrats, was especially pleased over the fact that not only had he won reelection in first primary voting but that party regulars had made a clean sweep in his bailiwick of Jefferson County to win all eight places.

Populous Jefferson, which has Birmingham for its county seat and which comprises the Ninth District, has been a key battleground in the bitter fight between party regulars and Dixiecrat rebels. In a hard-fought campaign four years ago, each side won four seats.

However, harmony - loving Chairman Ray, a Birmingham lawyer who is famed for pouring oil on troubled waters, believes that the line of cleavage has been erased between what he calls Democrats and Dixiecrats.

ALABAMA

"It has been erased by the voters, because all the candidates for the State Democratic Executive Committee had to meet the same qualifications," said Ray.

Same Loyalty Oath

He was referring to the fact that all the candidates, regardless of whether they won or lost in the recent primaries, had to swear to the same loyalty oath.

This loyalty pledge, which was aimed at rebellious Dixiecrats as well as at bolters to the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in the 1952 presidential election, did this:

It barred as candidates in the Democratic primaries not only those who voted and campaigned for the GOP ticket, but also barred as primary candidates those who had "failed or refused" to support the Democratic presidential ticket in 1952, while voting for state and local Democratic nominees.

While some of the state committee candidates, who were branded as Dixiecrats and pro-Republican, were able to qualify as primary entrants under the Democratic loyalty oath, they strongly opposed retention of the oath.

Dixiecrats' Goal

Repeal of this loyalty oath was the main objective of the Dixiecrats and was so declared to be by Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile attorney and former state committee chairman, who assailed it as a "hog-tieing" measure.

McCorvey, who was one of the chief planners of the 1948 Dixiecrat revolt, was not a candidate for reelection to the state committee. He was barred by the loyalty oath from becoming a candidate, even though he had not voted for the Republican presidential ticket. He had publicly announced he was supporting Democratic nominees for state and local offices, while refusing to vote for the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket in 1952.

But under McCorvey's leadership in this year's May 4 primary, candidates opposing the loyalty oath won all eight state committee seats from his home First District, which includes Mobile.

And in the adjoining Second District, Dixiecrats won four of the eight places. These 12 seats from Alabama's conservative South Alabama were all that the anti - loyalty oath campaigners were able to win.

FAIR ELECTIONS PRACTICES DECLARATION

6 National Religious Leaders Call Upon Politicos For Fair Practices

NEW YORK—Six national religious leaders in the United States joined this week in urging the national Republican and Democratic Parties to adopt a "Fair Elections Practices Declaration", eliminating racial and religious prejudices from the 1954 congressional campaign and to set up machinery for policing any violations.

Both the Republican national chairman, Leonard W. Hall, and the Democratic national chairman, Stephen F. Mitchel, were asked to transmit the elections statement to their respective state chairmen so that they, too, could indicate publically their approval of its contents.

The leaders asking adoption of the Declaration are: The Rt. Reverend Henry Knox Sherrill, presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U. S. A.; The Most Reverend Edwin V. O'Hara, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Kansas City, Mo.; Dr. Julius Mark, Rabbi of the Temple Emanu-El, New York City; Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College of New York City and prominent Catholic layman; Mrs. Douglas Horton (Mildred McAffee Horton), president, National Social Welfare Assembly and prominent Protestant lay leader; and Irving M. Engel, president of the American Jewish Committee.

The anti-prejudice declaration was endorsed in 1952 by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, then national Republican chairman, and by Frank H. McKinney, then national Democratic chairman. It calls for organizating non-partisan, non-sectarian committees in every community in the United States "to keep a watchful eye on campaign activities and to call to the attention of politicial leaders any instance of appeal based on religious or racial prejudice."

"Nothing is more harmful to a self-governing people", the statement declares, "than confusion of issues by base appeals to racial and religious bigotry. . .

"Let us make certain that our election campaigns are in every sense free and worthy of a nation founded on the principle of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God."

The full text of the statement and the requests for its reendorsement were transmitted to Mr. Hall and Mr. Mitchel in telegrams signed jointly by the six national religious leaders and made public by them last night in a release to the press.

Why many people still vote Democratic

Finds President Eisenhower has sold himself but failed to win friends

By JAMES L. HICKS

WASHINGTON

President Eisenhower has earned the right to look at the election results and then call Val Washington over to the White House and say: "Look man, what do I do to get your folks to vote Republican?"

Follow me closely now. I said Eisenhower has earned that right. did not say the Republican Party has earned that right.
did not say the Republican Party has earned that right.

Let's face it. Ike himself has done all right by us since he has been in office. I don't care if you vote Democratic, Republican, Socialist Liberal, or Independent.

— o O o —

YOU KNOW as well as I do that where Ike has had the chance to put in a punch in our favor he has surprised even the most optimistic. I wouldn't doubt but what he hasn't even surprised Val Washington himself with some of the appointments he has made.

Sure I know we do not yet have a national FEPC law with teeth, nor an anti-lynch bill and there are many other things we don't yet have that we've been yelling for for a long time.

But you know as well as I do that such things require action from more than one man so you can't blame Ike for such failures.

On the other hand you can start with the appointment of J. Ernest Wilkins and run down that long long list of top jobs held by colored people and in the final analysis you've got to say "Ike did it."

— o O o —

THAT IS why I began by saying that Ike has earned the right to call Val in and ask him what he must do to get colored people to vote Republican.

And that is why I said Ike and not the Republican Party has earned that right. As much as the President may dislike it, I for one am keeping him separate from the Republican party where colored people are involved.

If Ike should call Val in and pop the question, I am sure that as astute and articulate as Val is, he would be at a loss to give Ike a good answer.

Let me put the question to you: Why didn't you vote Republican?

I've been looking for the answer as to why most colored people vote Democratic for a great many years.

— o O o —

WHEN I was first assigned as a reporter to New York an AFRO editor cited the record of Governor Thomas E. Dewey to me so far as Harlem was concerned. The record was impressive.

It included the giving of good jobs to Harlemites, the first city court judge, enactment of an FEPC law with teeth, the appointing of a colored FEPC commissioner and the expansion of the FEPC act to embrace educational opportunities.

In addition he redistricted Harlem so it could elect a colored Congressman. Harlem elected Adam C. Powell, a Democrat.

Further, Dewey actually took liquor store licenses away from white holders and gave them to colored people in the colored areas.

Afro-American

Then the editor said to me: After you learn a little about Harlem try to write me an article which will explain why, in spite of such a record from the Republicans, Harlem always votes overwhelmingly Democratic.

Baltimore Md.

I've never written the article. As a matter of fact, I'm convinced now that if I could find the answer I could make myself a nice piece of change by selling the answer to the befuddled Republican State Committee.

— o O o —

I CAN'T GIVE the answer, but I can come close to it. It suddenly struck me one night backstage at the Paramount Theater.

Sat. 11-20-54

I had been invited backstage at the Paramount by Metro Goldwyn Mayer to attend a cocktail party given in honor of torch singer, Joni James who was then just a rising young star.

I arrived late and got lost in the maze of hallways and offices backstage at the Paramount. As I wandered down a dark hallway without seeing or hearing anyone I met a young white girl dashing down the hall.

As she came near me, for want of something better I simply said "Hi."

The young girl immediately answered me by saying "Hi, Man! What's shaking?"

— o O o —

FRANKLY, I was a little taken aback at having someone downtown greet me in the language of uptown Harlem. This gal was speaking my kind of talk so I talked some more. I asked her where the party was. She pointed out the place to me and I went on in.

About a half hour later at the peak of the party they trotted out Joni James, the honored guest to introduce her to the press.

Guess who it was? The gal that I had met in the hallway. When I was formally introduced to her I asked her where she was from. "I'm from Chicago — Southside" she said with a big smile.

All of that to say this: From that moment on I've been a Joni James fan. Anything she sings is all right with me.

It's not that she put me under any kind of spell with her beauty. And its not that I go around flipping for torch singers. Doris Day is better looking and Kitty Kallen can sing just as well as Joni.

BUT SOMEHOW I went for Joni James because I felt she was "my kind of people." She hit me where it counts — with language I understood.

Now, I don't know Joni's politics. But I'd be willing to bet that when she votes she votes Democratic.

As a matter of fact I get the feeling that I can stay in a mixed crowd of people a couple of hours and then go around and tap all the Republicans on the nose and pick out all the Democrats.

What I'm trying to say is that it seems to me when it comes to mixing up the races, the Democrats know how to do it with no effort at all while the Republicans seem to be having a hard time.

It's like this: At an interracial Democratic affair you have to push and shove like Hail Columbia to get to the bar and get some free whiskey before the white Democrats drink it all up from you.

— o O o —

BUT AT the same kind of Republican affair the white Republicans will either have two drinks with you and rush on off to some other meeting where there are nothing but whites, or stay in the background and make you feel uncomfortable by trying to prove to you that they bought all the whiskey just for you.

In a word I think the majority of white Republicans "patronize" colored people while the majority of Democrats get down with them and fraternize."

I'll take the "fraternizers" every time.

There are exceptions of course among the Republicans and the exceptions — the ones who can genuinely meet and greet colored people as their equals, have no trouble getting colored votes.

But the exceptions are few and far between.

— o O o —

EISENHOWER is an exception. During the '52 campaign I met both him and Stevenson personally. I'm forced to say that there was no degree of difference in their warmth or sincerity.

But I also met the late Republican Senator Taft and the outgoing Democratic vice president Barkley.

I met Taft in Cincinnati and when we talked it was as if I were talking to the Sphinx and shaking hands with a dead catfish.

— o O o —

I MET BARKLEY at his home under the magnolia trees at Paducah Kentucky. The Veep almost wrung my hand off, led me to a seat where we chatted for 10 minutes despite his busy schedule.

He then whispered to me to tell the other reporters that he had a bar stashed away down over the hill outside the view of Adlai Stevenson, who does not drink.

Now maybe you are ready to ask me "Is that all you ask of a politician — a slap on the back and a drink — to give him your vote."

The answer to your question is "no."

First I want to know that he is a man and that he recognizes me as one too.

After I learn that, I want to know if he acts like a man around me as he does around other men.

And if he begins by speaking my language — it sure helps him a lot!

GENERAL

GOP Comeback, Sparked by Ike, Frets Democrats

Washington D.C. Star 10-31-54

P. 1 B

Robert C. Albright

Staff Reporter

THE American voter, probably more than a little fuddled by what he's been hearing, on Tuesday will attempt to penetrate the fog of one of the strangest off-year campaigns in modern history.

Post

Seldom has he received such conflicting advice or listened to such an eleventh-hour clatter of denunciation, recrimination and just plain campaign oratory.

Until recently he was supposed to be apathetic about it. Wasn't this just another "local" election in moderately prosperous times? All he had to do, if he went to the polls at all, was cast a vote for Congressman, Senator or Governor on the basis of the record. There wasn't any overriding national "issue."

But no one could remain apathetic very long in the face of the most recent developments. A President of the United States was on the stump for a Republican Congress, something not exactly routine in an off-year. His 1952 Democratic presidential opponent, Adlai Stevenson, was campaigning just as hard for a Democratic Legislature.

And all down the line in both parties, the "shock troops" were maneuvering on a national scale. Some names and reputations were being hurt in the battle to get out the vote. Democrats charged Republicans were desperately using a campaign of "slander" to pull an otherwise lost election out of the fire.

Even Democrats Were Awed

AS OF one week ago, it seemed apparent that the Republicans had lost the decision. Election of a Democratic Legislature in Alaska, traditional tip-off of a national Democratic victory, followed close on the heels of Maine's almost unbelievable election of a Democratic Governor.

Impartial observers were in universal agreement that the Democrats would take back the House by a secure margin. Most of them believed that the Senate would tilt Democratic, too, by one, two or three seats.

As forecasts piled up from state after state, there was talk of a strong Democratic "trend." Some of the more optimistic reports were regarded with a little awe and incredulity by the Democrats themselves.

New York was the real shocker. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was supposed to yield his GOP gubernatorial seat to Sen. Irving M. Ives without any great challenge. Then the New York Daily News unveiled a poll showing Democrat Averell Harriman 'way out in front of Ives.

While the Democrats pinched themselves, badly-frightened Republicans unleashed such a last-minute "blitz" as seldom has been attempted in an off-year.

P. 2 B

For Mr. Eisenhower himself had rolled up his shirt-sleeves and gone to work for election of a Republican Congress as no President before him had ever done. So, apparently, had every member of his Cabinet.

Now it was the Democrats' turn to get worried. Had they literally frightened the Republicans into conducting the kind of campaign that could win for them—an all-out organization effort from the top of the party down?

Washington, D.C.

THE DEMOCRATS' real concern in the tenth inning is based on a whole crop of nightmarish second thoughts.

- Could it be that they have violated their own No. 1 campaign rule, "Be nice to Ike," and thus incurred the wrath of the voters? Mr. Eisenhower's personal rating is still tops throughout the country. Lately, a few Democrats, including National Chairman Mitchell, have been pushing him around.
- Did they allow themselves to be lulled into complacency by belief in that Democratic 'trend" whose Nation-wide existence remains to be proved?
- Did they play right into Republican hands by shooting their wad too early in the campaign, enabling the Republicans to come up from behind when it counts?

The Democrats hope not. They still stoutly maintain that Alaska called the turn, that the economic issue they are using is a real one and that disillusioned voters will catch up with Republicans come election day.

ACTUALLY, the President's deep personal involvement incurs vast political risks to the Republicans as a party and to the President's own great presige.

In this century, only a handful of Presidents have attempted to influence the outcome of a mid-term congressional election, and those few have failed:

In 1919, Woodrow Wilson appealed for election of a Democratic Congress to give the Nation "unified leadership" to finish the war and make peace. The voters' answer was to give the Republicans a plurality of 46 seats in the House and an additional six Senate seats.

In 1938, the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt entered the congressional campaign in an effort to purge certain members of his party. He not only failed to purge the dissidents; the election resulted in an increase for the Republicans of 80 seats in the House and six in the Senate.

And in 1950, President Truman hit the "whistle stops" and lambasted Republican "obstructionists" in an effort to increase House and Senate Democratic majorities. Instead, the voters cut back his Senate plurality from 12 to two and his House edge from 90 to 34.

IT MIGHT BE argued that what Mr. Eisenhower is doing cannot be compared with any of these precedents. Each of his predecessors was trying to swing voters to his own way of thinking—an almost impossible task. The campaigner doesn't live who can change the basic thought of a nation, or of any single voting unit, in a short space of time.

In contrast, Mr. Eisenhower is merely attempting to get out the Republican vote, or at least the pro-Eisenhower vote. These people do not have to vote against anybody or to change a basic concept that they have; all they have to do is to come out.

Some of the "I like Ike" folks who lacked interest and were not even planning to vote in the current congressional races will be moved by such an appeal. At least that's the theory.

EVEN IF the strategy works—and it's a gamble—Mr. Eisenhower isn't likely to save the House for the Republicans. The Democrats are counting on a minimum of 225 House seats (a majority is 218) no matter how hard the Republican winds blow.

In the nip-and-tuck fight for Senate control, however, there's a fair chance that any votes pulled to the polls by the President's electioneering could be the deciding ones. The best the Democrats hope to do in any event is reverse the present Senate lineup of 49 Republicans, 46 Democrats and one Independent.

And what if the strategy fails?

There can be no remotest doubt that Mr. Eisenhower would suffer a loss of prestige, but it would take a long stretch of the imagination to construe it as a vote of "lack of confidence" in the President of the United States. Few Democrats have publicly challenged Mr. Eisenhower's leadership. Many of them have campaigned on a platform of giving the President more support than their Republican opponents did.

FOR THAT MATTER, Mr. Eisenhower probably would run more risk, from the standpoint of leading his own party, in electing a Republican Congress than he would in a Democratic resurgence. That's because some of the Republican seats in greatest danger are held by simon-pure Eisenhower Republicans of the pre-Chicago school.

These include men like New Jersey's Clifford Case and Kentucky's Sherman Cooper in the Senate races and Pennsylvania's Hugh Scott and New Jersey's Bob Kean in the House. It is entirely possible for Case and Cooper to be defeated, for example, and for the Republicans still to capture control of the Senate. Indeed, that is what some extreme right-wing members of the Republican Old Guard are praying for.

In that event, the Old Guard would be securely in control of the Senate, or at least in control of the party in the Senate, with the strongest of all talking points for nominating an old-line conservative when and if Mr. Eisenhower steps aside in 1956.

WHAT HAPPENS if Mr. Eisenhower wins all the way? The man who stands to benefit, possibly even more than Mr. Eisenhower himself, is Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

A member of the so-called Dewey-Eisenhower wing of the party, as opposed to the Old Guard extremists, Nixon is in the normal line of 1956 succession if Mr. Eisenhower does not choose to run again.

It was Nixon, probably more than GOP National Chairman Leonard Hall or any other Republican, who devised Republican bell-ringing tactics in this campaign and himself was the No. 1 bell-pusher in repeated sorties around the country.

If the Republicans win, Nixon will be given much of the credit for the triumph. In fact, Mr. Eisenhower already has awarded the kudos in advance in his wire reading: "No man could have done more effective work than you . . ."

In the process of ringing doorbells, however, Nixon pushed some buzzers that could short-circuit that route to the White House. By linking Reds and security risks, and implying Democratic toleration of communism, he himself became a highly controversial figure. That's not now, and never has been, the most sought-after trait in a presidential candidate.

SO IT IS that the man who stands to benefit most from a Republican victory could in the long run pay the highest price for it. But all the historical odds are against such a victory ever coming about.

Except in 1934, when Mr. Roosevelt's charm was still fresh and the New Deal was an irresistible force, the party in power has lost congressional strength in every midterm election in the last four decades. In that year the Democrats picked up from Republicans, then in power, 10 seats in the Senate and nine in the House.

In the current election, few are seriously suggesting that the Republicans will gain seats in the House or even in the Senate for that matter. If the Republicans do gain in both, it will be a modern miracle on a par with that illustrious 1934 "exception."

The Republican problem is to avoid a midterm rout—to hold onto approximately the number of seats they now have and thus retain control of Congress. And that in itself will take a little magic.

The Tale of Two Letters, or

Wherein Our John Clark Admits Non-Infallibility

By JOHN L. CLARK
(Courier Political Analyst)

The political record on Savannah, Ga., carried in the Dec. 26 edition, brought contradictions and supplemental information from two sources.

Less than five days after this story was published, communications were received from Leroy Wilson in Savannah and Edgar Oliver Prince in Brooklyn.

The writer graciously accepts corrections and criticisms from both gentlemen and regrets the inaccuracies of political leaders interviewed in Savannah last summer.

BOTH LETTERS place emphasis on the number of persons and organizations participating in the 1946 registration drive but make no alteration of the opening statement in the original story, which read:

"Negroes in Savannah blazed a new political trail in the South seven years ago, then gave way to indifference when their dynamic leader was not replaced."

Also uncontradicted was the cause of shallow response of Negroes in registration drives of 1951, 1952, after the "legal purge" of 1950.

Substantially, the original report is factual, except for spelling, names of organizations and residence of one of the leaders, which had not changed from Savannah.

FOR THE purpose of providing readers an opportunity to study these communications and draw their own conclusions, parts of both letters are reprinted.

From Leroy Wilson in Savannah:

"With reference to an article printed in your paper Dec. 26, 1953, by your John L. Clark . . . Some parts are correct, others incorrect.

"First — there never was a time that there were 20,000 Negroes on the books in Chatham County—it was near that, but not that much.

"Second—And at that time the man referred to as John McLaughlin, spells his name John McGlocton.

"Third—The name of this organization is not Negro Democratic Club, the name is Citizens Democratic Club of Georgia, Inc.

"FOURTH—The man that succeeded John McGlocton was not a Reverend; he was a Deacon and never used the title Reverend.

"Fifth—And by no means in the world was the president that succeeded Ulysses Elleby named Joseph Wilson. My name is Leroy Wilson, and I was elected May 13, 1953.

"Sixth—The Rev. Mark Gilbert may have had some kind of confusion with the church, but the Rev. Marke Gilbert has never left Savannah to live since he came here. His address is 611 West Thirty-sixth Street, Savannah. This has been his address over a long period of time.

"HE DID NOT move to Detroit, Mich., and he is the pastor of the First African Baptist Church here in Savannah and has been ever since he has been here.

"He is still in politics, at least he was on Oct. 21, 1953, because he and I were battling each other, and he was on the losing side. I beat him two to one. He is a friendly person, and you would not want to meet a finer fellow, but of course, that doesn't go very far in politics. John McGlocton was with the Reverend, too, and he also went down swinging.

"The full story is that the boys just don't get out like they should.

"And, so now here goes the real truth. When Governor Talmadge of Georgia had all the Negroes and whites taken off the voters list, these 'high top-notchers' who were leading at that time did not have guts enough to go through with it again. They have offered all kinds of excuses to clear themselves but the truth is the truth. When John McGlocton's term of office was up we tried to get him to succeed himself, but he declined.

"HE SAID that he had high blood pressure and the doctors had told him to stay off . . . and out of politics. But every time since then when there is an election, his blood pressure goes down to normal and the side that talks right will get his services.

"Now, that you have the facts, let's take a look at the record. When those of between 17,000 or 18,000 Negroes registered in those two fateful years, Eugene Talmadge was living then and he was campaigning to be elected and was scaring the Negroes into fits. That is what brought them out to register—not those very fine gentlemen whom you were referring to. So, let's keep the record straight.

"The Citizens Democratic Club, Inc., is chartered and we are still rising."

And, from Brooklyn, N. Y., Edgar Oliver Prince writes:

"Having read your coverage of the political activities of Savannah, Ga., during the period of 1946-49, I am forced to mail in the following historical facts for your column so that the necessary corrections can be made.

"During this period, just after the Negro was given the ballot by the ruling of the Supreme Court, several state figures, such as John Wesley Dobbs, State Republican Leader, and Atty. A. T. Walden, State Democratic Leader, joined

LEROY WILSON
. . . president, Citizens Democratic Club of Georgia

hands to spearhead a state-wide registration drive, including leaders of the state NAACP, veterans, fraternal, labor organizations and the religious leaders.

* * *

"IN EACH COUNTY, such as Chatham, movements were instituted by local leaders.

"In Savannah, this movement was directed and supported by the Hub Club, Chatham County Civic League, World War II

EDGAR OLIVER PRINCE
. . . ex-organizer, director Chatham County Civic League

Veterans Association, NAACP, Ministerial Alliance, Bishop Grace's Civic Leaders, International Longshoremen Locals, NAACP Youth Group, Elks, Savannah Tribune, the Herald, and other civic, veterans and religious groups.

"Personalities that spearheaded this movement were Dr. Mark Gilbert, W. W. Law, Sidney Jones, John McGlocton, Rev. Holley, Rev. Baker, Edgar O. Prince, Ulysses Elleby, J. Young, Wimpy Butler, Rufus Rivers, the Rev. Holsey, Rebecca Douglas, Faye Patterson, Virgil Dewey, Julius Bowen, Walter Scott Sr., Walter Scott Jr., L. B. Toomer, J. C. Lemon, Willis Hubert, Dr. N. R. Collier, Major T. J. Hopkins, Dr. Wilson, Mrs. Nannie G. Williams, Frank Dillwork, Wilston C. Scott, the Rev. Mr. Scott, Arthur Given, Walter Bogan, Attorney Eubanks, Eulie Bellinger, Sol Johnson and many others.

"After the registration drive was completed, the two major political or civic organizations in Savannah were the Chatham County Civic League, headed by Major Edgar O. Prince; the Hub Club and its political counterpart, the Citizens Democratic Club, headed by John McGlocton and O. Jefferson.

"SEVERAL SMALLER political groups were organized in Savannah, headed by Walter Bogan, Arthur Givens and D. Young, which contributed to some of the progress of Negroes in Chatham County.

"Gus Hayes and Count Atkins, two major politicians of the city, contributed their influence in the political bargaining with the two major political machines of Savannah, which were the CCDC and CPL.

"The Citizens Progressive League was headed by Attys. John C. Willy and James R. Rahel, Albert L. Cobbs and Emanuel Lewis. The other major party was headed by Attys. John Boune, Aaron Kravich, Spencer Grayson and others.

"There are many other facts that I can't afford to write. But I am quite sure if you would contact several leaders mentioned, you may be able to obtain a true story of the period of political progress made by Negro citizens in Savannah."

Political Parties Pledge Fair Campaign Practices

NEW YORK—Congressional candidates of both major political parties are responding almost equally in pledging ot abide by the Code of Fair Campaign Practices. The latest tally shows signed pledges received from 259 candidates in 41 states, including 125 Republicans and 123 Democrats. Others were from third parties and independents.

The Codes and pledges were mailed September 14 and approximately 35 per cent had been signed and returned to the Fair Campaign Practices Committee by Saturday, September 25. Ultimately, all 1047 candidates for Congress will receive copies. States such as New York, which did not hold primary elections until September 14, are not included in the tabulation. It was expected that mail to the western states would be longer in arriving and that other delays in receiving the pledges would occur among candidates touring their districts. In some areas, elections are uncontested.

Twenty-four Senatorial aspirants from 19 states have signed the fair play pledge, including 10 Republicans and an equal number of Democrats. Of these, seven are incumbents. Among the 238 pledges received from candidates for the House of Representatives, 113 were from Republicans and 115 from Democrats, including 86 incumbents. In 39 contests, the candidates of both major parties have signed.

Kentucky was the first state in which all candidates for Congress signed the fair play pledge. John S. Cooper and Alben W. Barkley, opponents for the Senate, took the lead by signing simultaneously and becoming the first in the nation to do so.

New Jersey is second in the percentage of candidates who have forwarded their pledges, with 68 percent. Following are Connecticut, 58 percent; Indiana, 50 percent; West Virginia, 50 percent; Wyoming, 50 percent; Ohio, 45 percent; Missouri, 41 percent; Pennsylvania, 40 percent; Maryland, 36 percent; Virginia, 35 percent; Michigan, 28 percent; Iowa, 25 percent; and California with 23 percent.

Many candidates have informed the Fair Campaign Practices Committee of their plans to hold public ceremonies at a later date in order to reaffirm their pledges to abide by the fair play code and requests for copies have come from a number of civic groups interested in soliciting pledges on a state and local level. Organizations as distant as the Virgin Islands have also requested information about the Code. All such requests are being fulfilled as rapidly as possible.

A Report From Louis B. Toomer

Savannah (Ga.) Political Record Clarified by Top GOP Leader

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By JOHN L. CLARK

WASHINGTON—The original report on Savannah, Ga., carried in the Dec. 26, 1953 issue of the Courier has been contradicted and revised by two subscribers and political leaders.

One, Leroy Wilson, is still a resident of Savannah and president of the Citizens Democratic Club of Georgia.

The second, Edgar Prince, now lives in New York State but took a prominent part in the successful registration in 1946, covering Savannah and Chatham County.

p. 13

NOW COMES an observation from Louis B. Toomer, president of Carver Savings Bank, Savannah, and Registrar of the Treasury of the United States Government.

A restatement of facts, without engaging in a controversy over names and people, places Mr. Toomer's remarks in the role of conciliating previous statements and clarifying Savannah's political record.

His letter is reprinted:

"Dear Mr. Clark—For many years I have been a reader of the Pittsburgh Courier. I think it is one of the most outstanding newspapers of the century. I believe its staff writers is second to none in the country.

"I pursue its columns diligently each week and look forward to receiving the valuable information contained therein.

"The Courier, is, from its editorials and cartoons, considered to be a well balanced newspaper and excels in journalistic achievement. The data contained in its column are often used by speakers as an accurate source of information. Its publishers, editors and columnists are respected, honored and considered by the public to be altogether trustworthy.

"Having attained such an exalted position in the esteem of the general reading public, it is encumbent upon them to realize their very great obligations, especially as to accuracy of statements made nad as to the reliability of its sources of information.

"In your column of Dec. 26, you mentioned that our Savannah political situation had deteriorated to a considerable extent, and you intimated that it was because of certain important political gentlemen had left town, thereby ceasing our political activities.

"It is true that our position, politically, has deteriorated to some extent. But it was not because of the inactivity of any individual or group of individuals. It was brought about by circumstances over which we had no control.

"Namely, jealously, hatred, and fear on the part of certain political legislators who were very important and influential in the Georgia Legislature—and because of affiliations, had the ear of political bosses of the state.

"By a tremendous outlay of money and energy, we had been able to place on the registration books approximately 21,000 Negroes, which constituted 85 per cent of Negroes qualified to register.

"This was one-third of the entire registration of Chatham County (Savannah).

"This display of political strength represented a threat to many hate-mongers and political demogogues.

"As an indication of power contained in our registration of 21,000, there was elected through our support, a Mayor and a slate of aldermen by a tremendous majority.

"In recognition of our support, we were given twelve Negro policemen, two deputy sheriffs, a restaurant inspector, a floor walker in the jail, an assistant recreation director, a matron in the women's division of the city barracks, and many other positions of lesser value.

"At this time, Chatham County (Savannah) had a larger Negro registration than any other county in the state, not excepting Fulton (Atlanta) with its population of approximately 400,000.

"This strength was particularly disturbing to certain politicians and they immediately set about to do what they could to nullify its effect.

"They attempted to put through the State Legislature a law, making the unit vote a measuring rod in the general elections. But this had to go before the people. And while it passed in the Legislature, it was defeated in the referendum.

"However, our enemies were determined and resourceful.

"There are 159 counties in the State of Georgia, and they (our enemies) were successful in pushing a law through the Legislature compelling a re-registration of all persons.

"Mind you, this unjust and unfair legislation was directed solely at one County (Chatham) and did not apply to the other 158 counties.

"This law did not have to be approved by a referendum of the people, but was effective immediately upon signature by the Governor.

"By dent of extreme hard work we have been able to re-register about 12,000 up to date and are continuing our efforts and activities in registration.

"I am extremely sorry that your informants gave you the wrong inpression when you were in our locality.

"However, as stated above, we are of the opinion that those who write in newspapers should take the precaution of finding out that their information is reasonably correct in order that irreparable damage may not be done to an individual or a locality.

"Knowing you and your newspapers as we do, we are sure that in justice to the people of Savannah, you will give due publicity to whatever portion of this letter is necessary that justice be done."

Preparation for new role is women's responsibility—Jack

NEW YORK — Women can play a vital role in aiding youth to become prepared to meet the new demands of democracy, Hulan E. Jack, Manhattan Borough president, said here, recently.

Mr. Jack was speaker for the Founders' Day dinner of Zeta Phi Beta sorority held in Hotel McAlpin, Saturday.

The goal of American democracy is within reach, but must have capable and intelligent leadership, he said.

Fight Not Finished

Warning that the battle has not been completely won, Mr. Jack said:

"But we must remain ever aware that the crusade for equal opportunity does not end just because a few gains have been made here and there. We must not permit personal educational development, when it is completed, to enclose us like a Chinese Wall of indifference to the needs and hopes of those around us. We must not become lost in artificial attitudes and superficial values.

"We must reach out to the grass root level and understand the rumblings that are there and the reason for their existence. We must create and develop a spirit and desire for leadership to lead us out of the wilderness of apathy.

"Everywhere there are definite signs that the walls of discrimination are crumbling down. Through education we can overcome the inequality that remains in the field of education. Through education will come greater economic justice and more abundant job opportunity. This is truism that cannot be denied. It matters not whether our area of participation is on an industrial cultural or community level, the same requisites for incentive to leadership can apply in our everyday life.

"During the past ten years the pattern has been drawn in many channels of community participation. My own election as president of the Borough of Manhattan, where I am the chief administrator for 2,000,000 people living in the richest and most important political subdivisionn in the world, is proof that people of every race, creed, color and national origin can determine their community leadership within the framework of our democratic society.

Vote Convinced

"By their overwhelming vote through the ballot box the people of New York County last November, told the Talmadges of Georgia, the Shivers of Texas, the Byrnes of South Carolina, that democracy can be a living and workable demonstration against bigotry, discrimination and segregation.

"It is a strange contradiction that while we are fighting to obtain the right to vote in the South, we are losing sight of the prevailing opportunity to make our full voting strength count in the North.

"In the 1948 Presidential election the heavy colored vote decided the election of Harry S. Truman to the White House when the ballots were counted in Illinois, Ohio, and California. This is significant example of the importance of the rights of useful and practicing citizenship.

"At the present time there are ten million colored persons entitled to vote. When presidential elections and state and local elections are determined very often by narrow margins, it is easy to see how important our participation in governmennt becomes if we want to obtain the civil rights and human rights that are the heritage and the constitutional right of every American.

"The progress we make to help to advance and expand the rightful benefits of democracy will depend upon our active, every day participation in government on every level. The entire success of the civil rights and human rights program is within your power if you exercise your privilege of voting.

Women's Role

"At this point I must add a note of caution: With the advent of increased equal opportunities, will come new responsibilities that will affect all people. Before we can accept these new responsibilities, we must be equipped by training and education to fulfill the new demands which will be made upon our talents and capabilities. This is an area of preparation where the women of America can play a vital role.

"The destiny we dream of reaching is within our grasp if we supply the qualities and vision so closely related with intelligent and understanding leadership."

PULPIT ECHOES

Turnipseed Points To Negro Political Progress

By DR. A. S. TURNIPSEED

So far the two most significant events of this Alabama election year are: (1) The effects of the modification of the poll tax revealed in the registration of more than 100 thousand new voters with thousands of Negroes now qualified to vote. (2) The filing for public office in the Democratic Primaries of at least three Negroes. These two developments call to mind our unique Southern history.

An imposing accumulation of historical research discloses the sordid story of how the naive Negroes exercising political power were used by designing white men after the War Between the States. Woodrow Wilson in his Division and Reunion described how Negroes in public offices "submitted to the unrestrained authority of small and masterful groups of white men whom the instinct of plunder had drawn from the North."

TURNIPSEED

Yet for fifteen or twenty years after the "Carpet-baggers" had left the South the Negroes continued to vote and factions within the Democratic party of the South vied with one another to gain their support. Only with the rise of the Populist party in the 1890's did the Southern aristocrats seriously consider the complete elimination of Negroes from politics.

The Populist party was a people's movement which appealed to all dispossessed men, both white and black. A "po man's party" was a threat to the oligarchy and the Bourbons took constitutional and legislative steps to disfranchise all colored people.

SOME OF THE legal devices employed to bar the Negro from voting have been held unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. The most famous instance of this was in 1915, when the high court declared all "grandfather clauses" in state constitutions null and void. These clauses had stipulated that a person could not vote if his grandfather was ineligible to vote in 1860.

The poll tax, literacy tests, property qualifications and white primaries for a long time have stood tests in the courts. No until April 3, 1944, in the case of Smith vs. Allwright, did the United States Supreme Court hold the white primaries unconstitutional.

In that case the court ruled that Negroes may not be barred from voting in the primary elections of the Democratic party in Texas. As a consequence of this decision, Negroes, in comparatively small numbers, voted in 1946 in the Democratic primaries in Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia.

The poll tax has been a weapon used most effectively to keep Negroes from voting. Until recently all the states which composed the Confederacy had the tax. North Carolina, Louisiana, Florida and Georgia in the order named repealed it. This leaves Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia with the poll tax.

A STUDY OF 1940 statistics shows how effective the poll tax is to prevent poor white and Negroes from voting. That year there were eight poll tax states (Georgia included) with an adult Negro population of 3,233,500. Of these only 144,000 voted. More poor whites are hurt by the poll tax than Negroes.

Where the tax does not obtain, almost 75 percent of the entire adult population votes. In the states having the tax about 23 per cent of the adult population votes in the primaries and 15 per cent in the general elections.

When the poll tax is repealed a sharp change occurs. After Florida repealed the tax, the average number of people voting in two primaries to elect United States senators increased 140% over the average for the four previous primaries.

What changes will be brought in Alabama politics by the modification of the poll tax and the qualifying of Negro candidates in the Democratic primaries should be increasingly evident as the present campaigns for public office develop.

Unbecoming Political Extravagance

In an age in which there is such an educational awakening with huge appropriations from the tax till for modernizing the whole facility, it is regrettable that there are those who would seek the highest office in the gift of the state through a medium belonging to the dark ages.

In an enlightened era in which progressive states are pooling their every resource to present a commendable front, commensurate with the changing trends, it would seem that no state should suffer the political antics we witness today.

In the name of tolerance and decency, those who love their state and have striven all through the years to make it a better place in which to live, should strive to bring about better relations, through a system of encouragement to qualified men to run for and hold office.

As strange as it may seem, the voters of a state are responsible for the type of campaigning most of the candidates for governor are making. Candidates are students of the weather; they know the pulsation of the voter; they know the type of campaigning his appetite calls for and they come upon the scene to feed the lust of a people long deluded and wedded to an outmoded past.

As long as this type of campaigning pays off in votes, the irresponsible is going to see to it that it continues.

When the people rise up and show their disgust and reemphasize it at the ballot box, candidates will cease to confuse them with false issues.

One candidate went so far as to say that the only penalty for disobeying a court order, or some such statement to that effect, would be jail; that he would go to jail and run the state from his cell!

It is hardly believable that the people of Georgia would put a candidate in such a strait that he would give the nation and the world this type of drivel.

For the sake of the record and in defense of an intelligent and enlightened people, we feel called upon, despite that appetite demands much of what is being said, nobody would hardly put a candidate in such a position to hand out this type of threatening defiance.

One candidate in the race has come up with an old patent phrase, "Come hell or high water," which has long been buried in the red ruts of Georgia roads before the paving era. There is another—"'Till hell freezes over"—all belonging to the days in which people did not have daily newspapers, radios and televisions for their enlightenment.

It is nothing short of a sad case of unbecoming and careless extravagance, which no intelligent voter would exact from a candidate seeking his ballot.

HOUSE PANEL AIMS AT 'HATE' GROUPS

Report Expected to Request Brownell to Act Against One of Organizations

By C. P. TRUSSELL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—The House Committee on Un-American Activities is expected to approve soon a staff report striking hard at neo-Fascist and extreme right "hate" groups and asking prosecution of one of them for advocating violent overthrow of the Government.

The formal call upon Herbert Brownell Jr., the Attorney General for the opening of grand jury proceedings against the National Renaissance party was expected within a week. It seemed certain also that "Common Sense," a semi-monthly publication termed by committee researchers as consistent in fostering hatred for minority groups, would be recommended for investigation.

A legal drive against extreme rightist organizations appeared sure to be carried to the House Committee's capacity. For years this and other Congressional investigative panels concentrated on communism. In 1938, however, the first drive was made against the organizations that had taken the Nazi side.

The House committee, then headed by Representative Martin Dies, Democrat of Texas, first went after the German-American Bund. Its leader, Fritz Kuhn, wound up in jail. It investigated the Silver Shirts, headed by William Dudley Pelley. Pelley went to jail.

Both Kuhn and Pelley were sentenced on charges indirectly related to their organization activities developed at the committee's hearings.

The committee also put out of business the Knights of the White Camellia, headed by George E. Deatherage, and other similar organizations. Then came the concentration on communism.

Little, if anything, has been heard of extreme Rightists since.

The impending report is not yet complete. It has been passed out in tentative form to members of the committee for study, with an urgent call that a "yes" or "no" be given by next Thursday.

The committee members are expected to answer "yes," and agree on public release of the report not later than Monday.

The report, which still requires the House committee's approval, includes such findings as the following:

¶That the National Renaissance party appeared to have controvened the Smith Act (against advocacy of overthrow of the government by force or violence) as much as had the Communist party itself.

¶That "Common Sense" was anti-Jewish and anti-Negro and denounced it as "a vehicle for the exploitation of ignorance, prejudice and fear." Its circulation, by direct mailing from headquarters and through indirect mailing from various points throughout the country, is held to be large.

¶That the National Renaissance party had virtually borrowed wholesale" from Fascist and Nazi dictators material for its program that has been put out from its fofice in the Yorkville section of Manhattan.

¶That this program included: Abolition of parliamentary government in the United States in favor of a "trained élite"; establishment of a fascist corporate economy; encouragement of "racial pride," with preservation of the "white Aryan race by gradual deportation of the "unassimible," and the denial to Jews of citizenship, professional and political posts and the right of "intermarriage."

Uniform Emblem Noted

The report draft says that, reminiscent of the German American Bund, the National Renaissance party has gone in for uniforms, but with the arm design of a lightning bolt replacing the swastika Nazi emblem. At the same time the role of the Renaissance party is said in the projected report to be a fostering of the Russian "superbly efficient economic system."

The size of the National Renaissance party appeared not to be known even to the committee investigators. Estimates have run from 200 to 700 members. However, although dangers were seen by investigators even in such comparatively small numbers, a precautionary suggestion was put into the proposed report:

"Such antics exaggerate their influence, and the committee would do no service in overestimating the importance of an element which will undoubtedly take pride in being publicized as a menace.'"

Former Red Testifies

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 (AP)—Nicholas Bela, Hungarian-born actor and writer, related to the House-Un-American Activities Committee today experiences as a Communist party member in Hollywood from 1937 to 1943.

In testimony before Representative Kit Clardy, Republican of Michigan, and Francis E. Walter, Democrat of Pennsylvania, Mr. Bela said he knew that in 1937 a Brandon Films, Inc. of New York distributed films to promote the Communist cause.

Committee aides reported the concern was not listed under the Foreign Agents Act but they could not say whether the company still was operating. On Mr. Walter's motion, the committee asked the Justice Department to look into the matter.

Mr. Bela, 54 years old, said he now lived in New York and wrote plays.

The writer-actor, who had been identified as a former Communist by previous committee witnesses, talked freely about his membership in a Beverly Hills, Calif., party cell. He named a number of persons he said he knew personally as Communists in the 1938-43 period, most of the names already appear in committee files.

One of those was George Willner. Mr. Bela pictured him as an important fund raiser for the party. Committee counsel said Mr. Willner, a writers' agent, had declined to answer questions about Communist affiliation in appearing before the committee in 1951. Mr. Clardy directed that Mr. Willner's present whereabouts be ascertained.

Comments on His Films

Thomas J. Brandon said here last night that his concern had been distributing "classical" and "cultural entertainment value" pictures made in the Soviet Union. However, he stressed that this was 'only a small part" of films handled by Brandon Films, Inc., of 200 West Fifty-seventh Street.

"I have distributed motion pictures which have been approved by official censor boards," he said. "If this person [Mr. Bela], means by communistic films such mction pictures as 'Alexander Nevsky' and 'Potemkin,' certainly I have and still do.

"I think that anybody who takes offense at the showing of such films is in need of understanding Mr. Sulzberger's recent speech reprinted in last Sunday's New York Times Magazine, and could also profit by President Eisenhower's speech to the Land Grant Colleges last Oct. 19."

The reference was to the article by Arthur Hayes Sulzberger, president and publisher of The New York Times, based on a speech before the Hundred Years Association. In it, Mr. Sulzberger stressed that the alternative to "the views of freedom" was a "tightly controlled society in which every dissenter, every man who wishes to think for himself, is enchained in a futile effort to insure conformism in the name of security."

President Eisenhower's speech also was a plea for freedom and tolerance.

ERRY-GO-ROUND

U. S. Negroes Nixed The Reds'

Communists Made Very Little Headway Trying To Exploit Minority's Aspirations

BY DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON

THE MANNER in which the Communist Party attempted to use the American Negro, but was rebuffed in turn by the Negro, is the subject of an important confidential report now being prepared by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

"The fact that the Communist Party has experienced so little success in attracting the American Negro to its cause can only reflect favorably on these Americans," states the committee in its preliminary findings.

Going back over the past 25 years, the House Un-American Activities Committee gives in detail various efforts of Moscow to win over the Negro and even set up a "buffer state" south of the Mason and Dixon Line calculated to split the United States into two parts.

Instead of winning converts among American Negroes, however, the congressional committee states, the Negro discovered that the Communists deserted him generally, and "even attempted to destroy Negro gains" in employment opportunities when those gains conflicted with the Stalin-Hitler pact.

"The committee cannot stress too strongly that this program (of winning over the Negro) was formulated by the executive committee of the Communist Internationale and not by the American Negro," the report states. "No group member or element of the American Negro in the United States did then or now advocate such a course of action as called for in the Communist line.

"At one time," states the Un-American Activities Committee, "the Communists theorized that American Negroes throughout some 100-odd counties extending from Virginia to the Delta comprised a national minority, and a majority of the population throughout that area." Therefore, the Communist Party was directed to "organize the Negroes in that area along the line of a 'revolution program' to ally themselves with the workers . . . and to be considered a buffer state . . . under Soviet leadership."

The Communist penetration plan, however, was a miserable failure.

Ex-Communists Testify As To Reds' Using Them

THE UN-AMERICAN Activities Committee based its conclusions on the testimony of various Negro ex-Communists. Piecing together their amazing testimony, it is clear that the Negroes' experience with communism has been one of false hopes, Machiavellian betrayals, and tragic disappointments.

"Communist leaders," states the committee, "have exploited this demand of Negro liberation when it served their purpose and abandoned it when it was expedient to do so."

"If things are running all right," testified Louis Rosser, an ex-Communist, "the Communist Party makes partial demands for the Negroes. If things are going rough and they think the Soviet Union is in danger, the Communist Party raises the slogan of rebellion."

Rosser claimed that Negro Communists eventually saw through the Communist scheme of a Negro state as an attempt to "segregate the Negroes once the revolution is had."

Testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee told how the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had defended Negro rights during the war while the Communists refused to support the protests of Negroes being forced to unload ammunition under hazardous conditions at Port Chicago, California. There had already been an explosion at this port and courts-martial were threatened. But Communist Leader William Schneiderman dismissed Negro protests by saying:

"What is more important, loading these ships standing in the harbor for the Soviet Union or these 50 men over there who are going to jail?"

"In 1932 the Communist Party gathered together a group of reputable young Negro intellectuals and persuaded them to visit the Soviet Union," states the Un-American Activities Committee. "The purpose of this visit was ostensibly to make a motion picture in Russia. The theme was to represent a distorted Russian version of Negro life in America, and the movie was to be exhibited in Africa and Asia. Rosser pointed out that this excursion to Russia failed to convert these young American Negroes.

"Instead, some of those who saw Russia as it really is, are among the foremost anti-Communists in America."

Hatemongers May Get New Look And Some Publicity

THE HOUSE committee on un-American activities will soon publish a sensational, but tragic, report on "neo-Fascist and hate groups," a subject that the committee has ignored for almost 10 years. Communism, during that period, offered better headlines.

The report singles out the National Renaissance Party for possible prosecution under the Smith Act; and also blasts the hate-peddling paper Common Sense. This is the first official suggestion for applying the anti-subversion statute to a Fascist group during the act's 15-year history.

The committee found that "the program and propaganda of the National Renaissance Party is virtually borrowed wholesale from the Fascist and Nazi dictators."

The little Hitler in charge is a "young fanatic," James M. Madole, of 10 W. 90th St., New York City, whose sneering boast is that "What Hitler accomplished in Europe, the National Renaissance Party shall yet accomplish in America."

The party is replete with a "uniformed Elite Guard in the Nazi style," the report goes on, though a bolt of lightning has replaced the Swastika as the party symbol.

The committee sums up NRP's aims as "preservation of the white Aryan race by gradual deportation of the unassimilable, the denial to Jewish people of citizenship, professional and political posts and the right of intermarriage."

While avowedly anti-Communist, NRP isn't above sweet-mouthing the Red line when it serves its purpose. It praised the anti-Semitic purges in Prague two years ago and agrees with the Communists that "the economic and political ambitions of a small coterie of Wall Street bankers" are pushing the U. S. into war. And it has high praise for "the superbly efficient totalitarian economic systems of the Communists."

'Common Sense' Called The Road To 'Salvation'

SECOND TARGET of the un-American Activities Committee report is the anti-Negro, anti-Semitic hate sheet, Common Sense, which has blasted about every prominent American including President Eisenhower, whom it labels a "Marxist stooge."

"The solution customarily offered by Publisher Conde McGinley Sr., to 'save America,'" says the committee, "is an increase in the circulation of Common Sense. It is apparent that the publication represents a modern example of the racketeers who made a business out of hate propaganda during the 1930s."

The McGinleys also do a good business hawking hate books and pamphlets from their headquarters in Union, N. J. Paid subscriptions to Common Sense jumped from fewer than 10,000 to more than 20,000 during 1951, the year of the Korean war.

The un-American Activities Committee winds up its indictment of these two Fascist threats with this appeal: "The committee is convinced that there is a concurrent need for continuous investigation, exposure and, where necessary, prosecution, to the end that no activity of a pro-Fascist nature will ever be permitted to gain substantial stature or influence in the United States." ©

Teacher Indicted For Contempt of Congress

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Mrs. Goldie E. Watson, a teacher in the Philadelphia public schools, was one of four persons indicicted for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer questions of the House Un-American Activities Committee who pleaded innocent in Federal District Court here Friday.

Mrs. Watson was accused of refusing last February 17 to answer questions regarding Communist party activities. She based her refusal on the First Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids abridgement of freedom of speech, of religion or of the press.

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws fixed bail at $1,000 and assigned the case for trial in March.

When Mrs. Watson appeared before the House Un-American Activities committee, she was told that a friend of hers, Mrs. Dorothy Funn, a New York public school teacher, had testified publicly before the committee in Philadelphia that she had known her as a member of the Communist party.

Mrs. Watson was asked if she was a member of the Communist party. She also was asked if she had attended a Communist school for instruction of Communist teachers in New York State or at any place, if she had been active in the National Negro Congress, and if she was a member of the Communist party at the time she took the loyalty oath.

She refused to answer any of these questions on First Amendment grounds, although her counsel advised her of the risk she was taking.

Mrs. Watson is 44 year old. She was born in South Carolina November 8, 1910. Her family moved to Philadelphia in September, 1924.

Prior to moving to Philadelphia she attended Claflin university. She completed her high school education at William Penn High School in Philadelphia, graduated from the Philadelphia Normal School, and attended the University of Pennsylvania.

She served as a substitute teacher in Philadelphia from September, 1929, to Febrauary 19, last, when she was suspended for refusing to answer questions of the House Uu - American Activities Committee.

At a hearing before the Philadelphia Board of Education, Mrs. Watson said she invoked the First Amendment before the committee because of inequities existing against colored people and unless they have the right to meet, talk, and petition the government, there is no political freedom for them.

She said she knew that if the courts found that she was wrong she would be fined and would spend at least a year in jail, but she was willing to take the risk.

Two weeks before she appeared before the House Un-American Activities Committee, she said, representatives of that committee called on her and tried to persuade her to cooperate with the committee by naming other persons as Communists. She said she refused to do so.

She said she told a representative of the committee that there were "two sets of people in this country who know I am not a Communist—the Communists and the FBI.

PAUL ROBESON

American diplomats shunned the Bolshevik Revolution anniversary reception at the Soviet Embassy here last week because of the B-29 incident, but Singer Paul Robeson (right) was there, wearing a Stalin Peace Prize medal. He is shown shaking hands with Mrs. George Zarubin as Russian Ambassador Zarubin looks on.

Robeson denied visa to Russia

NEW YORK — Paul Robeson has been refused permission by the passport office of the State Department to travel to Moscow to attend the Congress of Soviet Writers which opens Dec. 9.

Willis H. Young, acting director of the passport office, told Mr. Robeson that since an earlier application was tentatively denied in 1954, it will be necessary for him to proceed in accordance with the procedure outlined in Section 51.137 of the passport regulations, if he desired to get further consideration.

THE REGULATIONS referred to require an applicant to "prove" that his views do not deviate from those of the State Department as a prerequisite for receiving a passport.

Mr. Robeson is challenging the right of the secretary of state to wield such arbitrary power. He is bringing a suit in federal court to compel the department to issue him a passport on the ground that refusal to do so deprives him of his constitutional rights.

Paul Robeson Denied Passport To Attend Soviet Writers Meet

New York, Nov. 20—Paul Robeson, the internationally famed artist, has been refused permission by the Passport Office of the State Department to travel to Moscow to attend the Congress of Soviet Writers which opens December 9.

Upon receipt of an invitation from the noted novelist, Alexander Fadeev, chairman of the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers, Mr. Robeson contacted the Passport Office and requested that a passport application which he had filed in July be amended to include his participation as a guest in the two-week meeting of Soviet writers. His earlier application was made for the purpose of fulfilling concert engagements in England, France, Israeal and the Scandanavian countries, including a London production of "Othello" under the management of Leslie Linder Productions.

A letter to Mr. Robeson from Willis H. Young, acting director of the Passport Office dated November 18, states that since the earlier application was "tentatively denied by this office on July 26, 1954, it will be necessary for you to proceed in accordance with the procedure outlined in Section 51.-137 of the Passport Regulations if you desire to have the Department give further consideration to your case."

The regulations referred to require an application to "prove" that his views do not deviate from those of the State Department as a prerequisite for receiving a passport. Discretionary power in granting or withholding permission to travel is placed in the hands of the Secretary of State and an appeal board estabilshed within his Department.

Mr. Robeson is challenging the right of the Secreatry to weild such arbitrary power. He is bringing a suit in federal court to compel the Department to issue him a possport on the ground that refusal to do so deprives him of his constitutional rights for freedom of speech, thought and assembly, and the freedom to earn a living guaranteed by the First and Fifth Amendment of the Constitution.

The invitation to the Congress of Soviet writers was also signed by Boris Polevoy, an outstanding Soviet author who has written a play about Robeson which has been produced in Moscow and other centers of the Soviet Union. Mr. Polevoy, supporting the formal invitation with a personal message to Mr. Robeson, stated: "We do not lose the hope . . . to see you among us, you the greatest singer of our days, a man of great soul and pure heart, Paul Robeson."

AUDITORIUM AT UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO OVERFLOWS AS PAUL ROBESON APPEARS IN CONCERT

Singer Hopes to Secure His Passports For Foreign Concert Tours As of Yore

POLICE SQUAD UNNECESSARY DURING PERFORMANCE

(By Luix Virgil Overbea)

CHICAGO — (ANP) — A full house thronged Mandel hall on the campus of the University of Chicago last week to hear controversial singer Paul Robeson in a recital (with vain to get in.

After the recital, Robeson said in an interview that he hoped to return to the entertainment world and also to regain his passport. He also added that he had not changed his philosophical and political beliefs.

Two squads of uniformed policemen plus a number of plainclothesmen were on duty to halt any threatened violence or possibly to stop Robeson's appearance if he started to make a political speech.

The recital was sponsored by the SRP (Student Representative party) on the U. of C. campus. These students sponsored the affair despite threats from the American Legion and derogatory editorials in several community newspapers.

Despite the large crowd, which had to be dispersed because the auditorium was filled and no standees were admitted, there was no violence.

Sharing the concert platform with Robeson was his accompanist, Alan Booth, who played eight selections at the piano.

Robeson was called back to sing three encores as he gave a program which included Negro spirituals (some with the words changed), three songs in recognition of Mother's Day (Songs My Mother Taught Me, Cradle Song by Schubert, and Lullaby, a Mexican folk song), an excerpt from the opera, "Boris Gudonov," by Moussorgsky, as well as his famed "Ol' Man River" and "Water Boy" plus several others.

His voice compared favorably to its more prosperous days of several years ago, and the enthusiastic audience cheered him. Most of the audience was white, consisting not only of the student body, but numerous adults.

After giving his final encore, Robeson thanked the audience for its applause. In his dressing room he said of the recital:

"Tonight's recital may open up other opportunities for me in other universities. I am happy that it occurred without incident."

Concert appearances, he felt, may lead to the restoration of his passport which he surrendered to the U. S. State Department in 1950 because of his many left wing statements and activities. Overseas, he said, he will be able to perform in "Boris Gudonov," "Othello" and other productions.

During the past year he has given several recitals at various AME Zion churches (his brother is pastor of Mother Zion in New York.) He is to sing at his brother's church June 6.

In connection with his passport, a cultural salute to Paul Robeson will be given May 26 at the Renaissance Casino in New York as the opening of a national campaign to restore his overseas traveling privileges.

Of reports that Robeson was deserting his stand of the past few years, he said:

"I am fighting until we darker people are free all over the world."

He denounced the well-known syndicated columnist and television commentator as well as a popular Negro weekly magazine which gave out the first reports of his so-called change of attitude.

The Othello recording company, he said (It's run by his son, Paul Jr.), is doing well. He has two new albums, "Solid Rock," and "Songs of Peace and Freedom."

Incidentally, the SRP won a student campus election despite the unfavorable publicity given in connection with Robeson. Paul Breslow, a white student of Perth Amboy, N. J. and chairman of SRP, said his group brought Robeson to the campus in spite of his political views, because he was an "outstanding artist worthy of being heard."

Robeson Hailed

BULGARIA recently celebrated the birthday of Paul Robeson, American singer, with a 20-minute national broadcast. The program included recordings by Robeson and an account of an alleged assassination attempt against him while he was singing in New York.

PAUL ROBESON

PAUL ROBESON

Passport again denied Robeson

WASHINGTON, (ANP) — The State Department has no intentenion of issuing a new passport to Paul Robeson at this time, according to an official spokesman.

This statement was released last week following an announcement in New York by the famous singer that he plans to make a six-month tour abroad to fulfill concert engagements.

Planned Recitals

Mr. Robeson said he had applied for permission to leave the country for a half year to appear in recitals in Israel, England and other European countries.

The singer's passport was revoked four years ago allegedly for making pro-Russian speeches. Since that time, he has had three or four applications on file for new passports, declared the government spokesman.

Robeson visa denial scored

NEW YORK—New scores of protests and pledges of support are streaming into the office of the Provisional Committee to Restore Paul Robeson's Passport from Europe, Asia, Africa, the Caribbean, South America, Canada and Australia.

Mr. Robeson's application for a passport to travel to England, Israel, France and Scandanavia was submitted July 2. The State Department reply of July 27, signed by R. B. Shipley, director of the Passport Office, said that the issue of a passport was "precluded" under passport regulations "upon the basis of information which the department has received from various sources."

—oOo—

PAUL ROBESON states he will appeal this decision to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, on constitutional grounds.

"This fight is not a personal one alone," he said, "but one that affects an increasing number of artists, scholars and others, particularly of my own people, who are now being denied passports."

HIS THIRD BORDER CONCERT PAUL ROBESON SINGS

The artistry of Paul Robeson winged across an international frontier with the appearance of the world-beloved singer and actor in his third annual concert in beautiful Peace Arch Park in the United States-Canadian border.

Although denied a passport to appear in their country, Robeson sang to friends from many lands as the audience was swelled by athletes and visitors from all parts of the British Commonwealth who are in Vancouver for the famous Empire Games.

The many thousands who made the annual pilgrimage to the Peace Arch spread out across the smooth green lawn, up the gentle flower-splashed slope, which make the park a natural amphitheater, and overflowed into the trees rimming the eastern boundary. Estimates ranged from fifteen to twenty thousand. However, a Canadian Mounted Police check of 8,000 cars lends weight to the larger figure.

Although the informality and warmth of an outdoor affair remained, Robeson, this year, sang a complete, formal concert program ranging from the beloved sprituals of his people, the folk music of many lands, to the somberly dramatic "Prayer and Death" excerpt from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunov". The artist freely admitted that he had some doubts as to the suitability of this selection for a huge, outdoor audience, but these soon vanished. The audience loved it and cheered when the singer expressed the hope that he would soon be able to present it on the opera stage of Europe and "even in my own country."

Since its inception the annual border has been linked to the fight to force the U. S. State Department to rescind its ban on Robeson's passport. The first was held when the singer was unable to get permission to leave the U. S. to appear in a Vancouver, B. C., concert sponsored by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers. If Robeson cannot come to us, the union said, we will go to him. So the great artist went to the border and the people flocked to hear hm. Each year Mine Mill has sponsored the concert.

This year the union put out an elaborate, printed program which contained greetings from many Canadian trade union and fraternal groups. Included as well were some of the mesages from personages all over the world protesting the passport ban. Harvey Murphy, Mine Mill regional director, introduced Robeson as a "great American who is lover througout the world."

As a special tribute to the fighting traditions of the Canadian union, Robeson presented a reading of the scene "I speak for Joe Hill" from the play "The Man Who Never Died" by Barry Stavis. And the program included, as it does every year, a request for "Joe Hill". In response to the greetings from Murphy the singer pledged to his audience that he will "press for the freedom of Africa and all colonial people" and will "keep fighting for the dignity of my people and all people"

During an intermission a young Australian athlete paid tribute to Robeson and presented him with gifts from the youth movement of that country. The gifts included a boomerang and Australian Empire Games pin.

Flowers Predicts GOP Will Capture Negro Vote Strength

Used at Atlanta, Ga

WASHINGTON, D. C.— Harold Flowers, Arkansas Negro civil rights lawyer and former member of the National Bar Association, today predicted that the Republican Party will capture a substantial increase of the Negro voting strength in marginal districts" in the coming congressional elections.

Jan 10-29-54

Flowers, assistant to the chairman of the National Citizens for Eisenhower Congressional Committee, is winding up a six week nation wide speaking tour.

"Negroes all over the country," said Flowers, "are grateful for the orderly transition in the program of desegregation under the leadership of President Eisenhower."

Flowers declared that "loyal Negro Democrats will place partisan politics aside and vote for Republicans to help the President complete the job which was begun in 1952."

Speaking of integration in the public school system, the 42-year-old lawyer deplored the "complacency and indifference that still exist among many Negro citizens in the North, East and West." Flowers has spearheaded the drive in Arkansas for equal educational opportunities.

"Ten million Negroes in the South," he said, "constituting 70 per cent of the total Negro population in the United States, will be disappointed if Negroes in other sections of the Nation do not grasp the opportunity to establish a strong two-party system in the South."

Flowers, presently touring in Nevada and Oregon, will make a television appearance in Dayton, Ohio today.

LEHMAN DECRIES TACTICS OF G. O. P.

Times P. 25

Says Attacks on Harrimar Have Boomeranged and Nov. 2 Victory Is in Air

New York, N.Y.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Oct. 27—Senator Herbert H. Lehman told a rally here tonight that Republican attacks on Averell Harriman, Democratic candidate for Governor, had boomeranged to the point where a Democratic victory on Nov. 2 was "in the air."

Thur. 10-28-54

Senator Lehman said the Republicans, and in particular Senator Irving M. Ives, candidate for Governor, had "resorted to some of the most reprehensible tactics I have ever witnessed in any campaign—and I've seen a lot of them."

At first, Senator Lehman said, Senator Ives promised the voters he would "talk sense and stick to the truth." But then his party became aware that a hurricane of protest "more violent than Carol and Edna and Hazel all put together" was sweeping the country, and the Republicans switched their tactics, Mr. Lehman continued.

"They dug up events of thirty years ago," he said, "perverted and distorted the facts to their own purposes, and tried their best to smear the character of a man who is known in every part of this state and in every capital of the world as a statesman, a patriot and a great public servant—our candidate for Governor, Averell Harriman."

One of the main issues on which New York voters will vote Democratic, he predicted, is "the giveaway." He cited specifically the "giveaway" of an estimated $100,000,000,000 worth of oil and power resources; the "giveaway implicit in the scandalous Dixon-Yates contract" for private power in the Tennessee Valley Authority area; the "giveaway of consumer protection on the price of natural gas"; and "the tax giveaway."

The Republicans, the Senator said, "have shown themselves willing to advance the selfish interests of a privileged few, while ignoring and neglecting the well-being of the many."

The Democrats, he asserted, have "a fundamental devotion to the welfare of the people—of all the people, of individual people."

"We believe in the welfare state," he said, "the welfare of the many, not of the fortunate few."

Mississippi Knocks Out Black And Tan Element of The Republican Party

BLACK AND TANS LOSE REPUBLICAN PARTY TITLE IN MISSISSIPPI

Washington—(ANP). The United States Supreme Court agreed by a 5 to 3 vote Monday to throw out the case originating in Mississippi to determine which political faction of that state has the right to be considered the "Republican Party of Mississippi," thus giving the lilly whites the GOP name.

Five Justices voted to vacate the judgement and to remand the case to the District Court with instructions to dismiss the complaint. Mr. Justice Black, Reed and Douglass dissented with Chief Justice Warren taking part in the consideration and disposition of the case.

The court action thus virtually ousted the Black and Tan faction, led by Perry Howard, which dates back to Reconstruction Days.

The suit was filed by the Negro faction including Howard, a national committeeman of the Repub- Edna E. Redmond, national committeewoman; S. W. Miller chairman of thee state executive committee; and C. T. Buler, secretary of the state executive committee, in behalf of the officers and members of the Republican party of Mississippi and thousands of citizens of the state who are similarly situated and have a common grievance.

Howard claimed that his group has the right to be recognized as the Republican party of Mississippi since this faction was organized in 1872, while the Lily White faction was not organized until 1928 as the "Independent Republican Party" and has only been using the present designation since 1948.

The white faction denied this contention, claiming that the colored organization is an outgrowth of a minority group which detached itself from the Republican party in Mississippi in 1924 and, with the aid of the Democrats of that state, obained recognition by Republican National Convention of that year.

The white group argued that the Republican party was reorganized by the people of Mississippi in 1928, and has functioned as such ever since, with the approval of a majority of the Republican voters and has never changed its name. They did admit that state officials, the press, and some members of the public from time to time have called their organization the "Independent Republican Party among other names; and that at their 1948 convention, a resolution was adopted to reaffirm the previous use of the name. "Mississippi Republican party and to repudiate the "unauthorized and unwarranted use of the words "Independent" and "Lily Whites."

The Mississippi State Supreme Court had previously ruled that the "Lily White Republican faction had [illegible] ive right to appear on [illegible] s the State Republican Party, [illegible] the name "Mississippi Republican Party."

This ruling was overturned by a special three-judge Federal Court in Jackson, Miss., on Oct.. 26, 1953.

Perry Howard has been the long directing head of this faction of the party down in Mississippi although he always maintained his home in Washington,, D. C. where he has become very successful and prosperous as a lawyer.

For The Best Interests

The hierachy of the Republican Party has pitched this year's Congressional campaign on an attempt to instill a fear in the nation's voters that to elect a Democratic Congress will result in "cold war" in the Houses of Congress.

Such a threat is made, despite the voting statistics which show Pres. Eisenhower has only been able to project his program through the assistance of Democrats, while the conservative GOP members of his team opposed him tooth and nail.

Naturally we are concerned with the city and state offices in the election next Tuesday. St. Louis, presently is facing a tremendous program of progress. It is being implemented under the guidance of a Democratic team. The maintenance of that team as a whole is important to the future of this city. On the issues concerning minority rights, the spade work has begun in this regard. The declaration of policy regarding minority rights as issued by the Land Clearance Authority a few weeks ago is evidence of recognition of the Administration in an area where it counts most, jobs and housing.

The term "civil rights" rises, forthrightly or belatedly, in most political campaigns. It is history that it gained its roots under Roosevelt and blossomed into full bloom under Truman.

In a release from the Republican National Committee this week, Val Washington, the director of minorities, lists seven points as the reasons Negroes will vote Republican next Tuesday. Here are Washington's reasons and our answers:

1. The Supreme Court decision on public schools.

Ans: The Supreme Court is a non-partisan judicial body. And anyway, eight of the nine justices were appointed by Democratic presidents.

2. Elimination of segregation in the armed forces.

Ans: This was started by Harry S. Truman, a Democrat. On April 28, 1948, Dwight Eisenhower, then a general told the Senate Committee on Armed Services: ". . .when you put (Negroes) in the same organization and make them live together under the most intimate circumstances men of different races, we sometimes have trouble. . ."

3. Segregation's end in the nation's capital.

Ans: Give the GOP credit for this in the area of theatres and hotels.

4. Equality in appointments.

Ans: Numerically there is a balance between the two parties.

5. Executive Order banning racial discrimination in Government contracts.

Ans: President Roosevelt issued two such orders. President Truman established the Contract Compliance Committee.

6. Eisenhower's insistance that crime against Negroes be prosecuted.

Ans: Both Roosevelt and Truman did likewise.

7. The President's insistance that all U. S. Attorneys and FBI agents receive instructions on civil rights laws.

Ans: That is a part of the training of all such agents of the government.

Negroes, as all other minorities, have received greater advances under the Democratic administrations because of the Democrat's forward policy on important social legislation. This includes, housing, social security and jobs. Negro voters will do well to continue their support of Democratic candidates.

Top Republican Lists Seven Points; Democrat Leader Answers Claims

WASHINGTON — Val J. Washington, director of minorities for the Republican National Committee, said this week that more Negroes would vote for Republican candidates for Congress on Election Day than since 1936.

He made this prediction following a survey of absentee ballot applications in the District of Columbia and informal checks of sentiment in several states with large Negro population. "More Negroes have applied for absentee ballots than ever before and most of them are going to vote Republican," Washington said.

"President Eisenhower has done more to make the Negro a first-class citizen than any President of the United States since Abraham Lincoln," he added. "The Negro voter realizes this and appreciates it. He knows, furthermore, that to continue this progress, it is imperative that the Republican Party retain control of Congress. That's why a majority of the Negroes will be supporting Republican candidates for House and Senate on November 2."

Washington listed seven specific reasons why the Negroes are supporting President Eisenhower's request for the re-election of a Republican Congress:

1. The historic Supreme Court decision ending racial segragation in public schools.

2. The elimination of segregation in the armed forces.

3. The end of segregation in the nation's capital. What had been described under Truman and Roosevelt as the most prejudiced capital in the world has become as liberal as any of the northern cities during the Eisenhower Administration.

4. Giving the Negro equality to appointments to the Federal government—including the appointment of J. Ernest Wilkins, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

5. An executive order banning racial discrimination on all contracts for government work.

6. President Eisenhower's insistence that crime against Negroes be prosecuted in every part of the nation.

7. The President's insistence that all U.S. Attorneys and FBI agents receive instructions and directions concerning civil rights laws.

Beyond those specific measures, Mr. Washington said that the new social security law passed by the Republican 83rd Congress would mean more to the Negroes than any other group of citizens.

"The increased economic protection given to Negroes under this law includes extension of social security benefits to farmers and domestic workers. There are more Negroes engaged in farming than in any other single occupation. Nearly all of these farmers will now have the protection of social security—including tenant farmers and share croppers."

WASHINGTON CHAMBERS

Jordan W. Chambers, titular head of the Democratic Party in the city, this week issued a strong answer to the seven points of GOP staffer Val Washington of Washington, D. C. on why Negroes will support the Republican Party in next Tuesday's election. Chambers, in discussing the whole political picture predicted that 90 percent of the Negro voters will support Democrats in the Tuesday election. He based his prediction on "the failure of the Eisenhower administration to provide adequate housing and the lack of the GOP in coping with rising unemployment."

Chambers said the Eisenhower administration has had control of Congress and all chairmanships and despite this eight bills which would ban racial discrimination in Interstate travel have been introduced "and yet Eisenhower has not prodded any of these bills out of committee."

"I want to be fair with the man," said Chambers, "but the record speaks for itself."

Specifically answering the seven points advanced by Washington, Chambers declared:

1. The lawsuit instituted involving the public schools was done so while Dwight Eisenhower was still in the Army. Eight of the nine justices of the Supreme Court were appointed by Democrats and if they had not concurred in the opinion, it could not have carried.

2. President Eisenhower did issue a directive abolishing segregation in the Armed Services, but it merely served to catch up a few loose ends after desegregation was started under Roosevelt and Truman. Much of the delay in Mr. Truman's desegregation program was due to the hostile attitude of Gen. Eisenhower and Gen. McArthur. The U. S. Navy ended its racial segregation much earlier under Secretary Forrestal and the Air Force under Secretary Symington, both Democrats.

3. Segregation has not been abolished as a practical matter. There has been a law on the books since the 1800s providing that restuarants and other public places should serve Negroes. Surely Mr. Eisenhower can't claim credit for a law passed before 1900.

4. The GOP administration has appointed 45 qualified Negroes, including Assistant Secretary Wilkins, to various posts. In these appointments there are three White House doormen, two members of the House Post Office department, one White House secretary and one assistant secretary in the Department of Labor. Five of these jobs are firsts. Truman appointed 75 Negroes, including an ambassador, two Federal Judges plus alternates to the United Nations, 14 racial relations advisors and one civilian advisor to the Secretary of Defense.

5. Franklin Roosevelt in 1941 issued Executive Order 8802 banning discrimination in U. S. Government Contracts. In Dec. 1951, Harry Truman set up a Contract Compliance Committee and in January 1953, Presdient Truman sent President Eisenhower a letter asking that that committee be continued.

6. President Eisenhower has nothing to do with state law enforcement and all good officials are seeking the elimination of crime.

7. Harry Truman is the only President who has had the courage to go before Congress in his State of the Union message and specifically urge the banning of segregation according to race. Mr. Eisenhower, in two "Union" messages has not so stated. In fact, the GOP standard bearer has never been specific on rights of minorities.

POWELL DENIES SWITCH TO REPUBLICAN PARTY

Solon To Meet With Press Aug. 27

WASHINGTON — Congressman Adam Clayton Powell in Europe on an inspection tour for the Air force, Friday categorically denied a copyrighted story that he plans to switch to the Republican party and run for congress on that ticket.

Powell announced a press conference for Friday Aug. 27 in his Washington office when he will return from abroad.

However, a source close to Powell hinted broadly that he will confirm his switch in politics at this time.

A Republican spokesman said they had learned that the New York Congressman was writing an article for Reader's Digest magazine in which he will praise the Eisenhower administration.

Asked if they would welcome Powell into the Republican fold, the spokesman grinned broadly and said "no comment."

Reason Behind President's Curt Answers To Negro Reporters At Press Conference

BY ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON—(ANP)- Maxwell M. Rabb, cabinet secretary and associate coounsel to President Eisenhower, publicly stated last week that no questions raised at the Presidential press conferences had to be submitted in advance for approval by the White House.

The statement was made in an ierview bnt-

The statement was made in an interview by Dr. Thomlinson D. Todd, director on its American All radio program over station WOOK. The question was no doubt raised by the interviewer because of the apparent annoyance which the President has recently shown when questioned on civil rights issues by Negro reporters.

His most recent outburst of impatience came in last week's conference when a woman reporter asked if the administration were lending its support to proposed legislation to bar segregation in interstate travel.

In clipped words, the President remarked that he did not know by what right the reporter should say that the legislation would have to have administration support. He added that the administration was not trying to suport any parjcular or special group of any kind but was trying to do what it believed to be decent and just.

On other occasions when Negro reporters have raised questions involving civil righs issues, on which the President could act, they were referred to the heads of the agencies in question.

On almost every occasion when Negro reporters raised questions of interest to their group, the President has admitted that he was not familiar with the issue but would have his press secretary, James Hagerty to look into it and inform him.

When these matters were first being brought to his attention, he President seemed interested and took immediate action. Among the earlier questions was one concerning racial segregation in schools on army posts. Mr. Eisenhower admitted that he did not know such situation existed but he would look into the matter immediately. In less than a week the President has issued an order correcting this situation.

Likewise, he took quick positive action in appointing a Committee on Government Contracts, after the matter had been brought to his attention by a woman reporter.

It was al o brought to light, through a question by a woman reporter, that the administration was not going along with Secetay of Labo Mitchell in supporting compulsory fair employment practices legislation.

Another question raised by a Negro woman reporter gave the President an opportunity to offer apologies to the Howard university choir for the discourtesy which it received at the hands of prejudiced policemen at the Republican box supper.

The president's lack of knowledge on many racial issues, raised by reporters of Negro newspapers, seems to have become embarrassing after awhile, and his impatience bagan to show. On one occasion he told a reporter that he shouldn't be expected to know every little detail which existed in the government.

This caused some critics to whisper around that the women reporters were perhaps out-of-step. Maybe they should inform the White House in advance on questions they intend to ask so that the President could be briefed on them.

It was probably this rumor which caused Todd to ask what the procedure is in conducting the President's conferences. This question brought an imphatical reply from Rabb that all questions raised at the conference were spontaneous and the President never know in advance what he was going to be asked.

The curt manner in which the President has begun answering the questions posed by Negro reporters has been observed and mentioned by many of the press and radio people present.

It has also given rise to a crucal blast" issued upon the women reporters by the lone Negro man who attends the President' conferences. This unethical journalistic action has resulted in a running word battle between the man reporter and those who would dare speak out in defense of the women.

responsible for the little quip in a national magazine stating that a Negro weekly newspaper man was receiving $50 a week from the White House to advise officials on how to handle the Negro press. This charge was vigorously denied by the White House.

A White House spokesman stated voluntarily that they did not wish to become involved in the controversy still they wished to apologize to the women reporters for this unfortunate incident.

The disease of professional jealousy seems to be very contagious as it is apparently spreading to other male columnists who are joining in the fray and vehemently tossing word stones of unpleasantness at those who would dare go to the bat for issues affecting ten percent of America's pupulation.

This inexcusable breach of journalistic ethics has caused an unprecedented professional battle-of-the-sexes which is not only unpleasant but very unfortunate.

Powell Lauds Ike In Digest Article

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Editor's note: The Reader's Digest, the world's most widely circulated periodical, has graciously permitted the Courier to reprint this significant article on President Eisenhower's excellent job in the White House, written by a prominent Democrat and a member of Congress. This article clearly shows that the Eisenhower Administration has gained the respect of both major political parties and Negroes in general.

Courier 10-2-54 Pittsburgh, Pa.

By ADAM C. POWELL JR.

(U. S. Congressman, New York)

I am a Negro by birth and a Democrat by choice; for nearly a quarter of a century I have worked to advance the rights of Negroes. During the 1952 Presidential campaign, I tried desperately to get Dwight D. Eisenhower to endorse a Federal Fair Employment Practices Act. This he steadfastly refused to do. I did not understand why and, like many Negroes, I feared his election meant a setback in the struggle for fairer treatment and equal opportunities for our people. Sat. 10-2-54

I was wrong.

In less than two years in the White House, President Eisenhower, without political trumpeting, has quietly started a revolution which, I firmly believe, means an era of greater promise for Negro citizens. Today, I think I understand what the President believes, and why he believes it. I know now that he practices what he preaches.

> "There must be no second-class citizens in this country."—Dwight D. Eisenhower.

OUR CHIEF EXECUTIVE does not believe that civil rights are primarily the responsibility of the politician. He believes this issue is a problem for every citizen and that, through personal leadership, by personal example, Americans can be counted on to follow decent instincts without legislation. In an open letter to me in the early months of his administration, he made this declaration:

"I shall continue to devote my earnest efforts to advance the spirit as well as the fact of equality. We shall not take a single backward step. There must be no second-class citizens in this country. To achieve our purpose we must work together and not be content until we have gained our goal."

* * *

THOSE WERE fine words. The President has proved he means them.

The example he has set began in the White House. Until he took over, no Negro had ever been employed there except as messenger or janitor. President Eisenhower installed Mrs. Lois Lippman as the first Negro secretary. Politics had nothing to do with her appointment. She was hired not because of her color or in spite of it. She had proved to be an efficient secretary when working in General Eisenhower's campaign headquarters in New York. The White House needed capable secretaries, and so she was brought to Washington. No publicity use was made of it. Nor has political capital been made of the President's appointment of forty-seven Negroes to important posts, or to the fact that twenty-seven of those positions had never been held by Negroes.

SINCE THE Taft Administration, no Negro had been appointed to a post of "Little Cabinet" status until Eisenhower appointed J. Ernest Wilkins, prominent Chicago attorney, as Assistant Secretary of Labor. Mr. Wilkins was not appointed on account of his color, but because Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell believed him to be the best man for the job and so recommended him to the President. In the same way Scovel Richardson, former dean of law at Lincoln University, became the first Negro Federal Parole Commissioner.

The population of Washington, D. C., is more than one-third Negro. Segregation has been the established pattern. As candidate, General Eisenhower said: "I shall never cease to work to get rid of this in the District of Columbia."

* * *

THIS IS the Eisenhower record:

Washington's restaurants following vigorous action by the new Attorney General, have stopped segregation. Officials of the Restaurant Association report not a single case of serious friction.

At the urging of the Eisenhower-appointed chairman of the District Board of Commissioners, segregation has been voluntarily eliminated from bars and restaurants in Washington's hotels. As a result of this some hotels are following a more liberal policy with regard to rental of rooms.

With the help of movie magnates, jim crowism has been wiped out in Washington's big downtown movie theatres. This was done with such an absence of publicity that last summer a group of Negroes, bent on picketing a theatre, were so surprised when tickets were sold them that they turned around and went home.

SEGREGATION HAS been abolished in the city's recreational areas and facilities—without a reported case of serious trouble. It has been ended in twenty-one out of twenty-three departments of the District Government.

The District's public-housing agency has ordered that the 4,000 dwellings to be constructed with Federal aid be made available to low-income families without discrimination as to race. "White" and "Colored" signs have already come down from all but four of the nineteen projects already occupied.

WASHINGTON AT last is becoming the capital of our democracy in fact as well as in name. Today, when foreigners come to study our democratic institutions, Americans, instead of apologiizng, can point with pride to their national capital.

In 1948, President Truman ordered complete integration of white and colored soldiers in the armed services. Four and a half years later, when President Eisenhower took office, 40 per cent of the Army's all-Negro units were still intact; 75 per cent of Negroes in the Navy were servants in the segregated messmen's branch.

Today, there is not a single all-Negro unit in the Army.

It was reported to the President that at twenty-one Army, Navy and Air Force bases segregated schools were operated for the children of servicemen. Investigation disclosed that at other bases, some in the South, integration had been successfully achieved. Whereupon many months before the recent Supreme Court decision, the President ordered all schools at all military bases put on a non racial basis.

SOON AFTER his inauguration, President Eisenhower ordered an inquiry to find how segregation could be eliminated with a minimum of friction from many Southern Naval bases and installations. The action which followed was another example of the President's silent revolution. At night, the "White Only" and "Colored" signs were removed from drinking fountains at these bases. A few days later, the signs pointing to "White" and "Colored" restrooms were painted over. Soon without announcement, cafeterias were opened to both races. Within a few months segregation was completely eliminated in twenty-one naval plants employing 70,000 white and Negroes. Sat. 10-2-54

"THE WALLS ARE really tumbling down," said a grateful Southern Negro leader. This approving opinion is shared by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Formerly there was racial segregation in forty-seven hospitals of the Veterans' Administration—ranging all the way from separate waiting rooms for Negroes to their total exclusion from some institutions. Today, on orders from Harvey V. Higley, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, there are no segregated libraries; partitions separating the races at snack bars have been torn down; recreational facilities have been made open to all; Negroes are treated at previously all-white hospitals and there are white patients at the former Negroes only hospital at Tuskegee, Ala.

SINCE 1942 virtually all Government contracts and subcontracts have contained provisions prohibiting job discrimination for reasons of "race, creed, color or national origin." For ten years this clause meant little or nothing. In mid-summer 1953, Eisenhower set up the President's Committee on Government Contracts to deal with this problem. The new committee is headed by the Vice President. Its fifteen members include the Secretary of Labor, Mr. Mitchell, the Deputy Attorney General, William P. Rogers, and distinguished representatives of business and organized labor. It lacks any enforcement authority, but with active Presidential support, it accomplishes through quiet persuasion what a decade of legal agreements failed to do.

THE COMMITTEE, for example, appealed to the telephone company serving Washington to drop its color bar in employment. This appeal was supported by one of the President's White House assistants. "The President wants you to know," he said, "that he's not trying to hit anybody over the head. But whatever you do here in Washington to help end segregation will have an influence all over the world on people who are judging democracy by us." Today, without friction, Negro and white clerks are working side by side. In scores of other companies doing business with the Government, friendly appeals from the committee have produced like results.

Recently the Chicago Defender, an influential Negro newspaper which supported Truman and Stevenson, commented with "delighted astonishment" on President Eisenhower's race record. What he has done, said the Defender, "is not so much from a political motive, but more from deep-seated moral and spiritual convictions. Dwight Eisenhower is determined to be President of all the people."

* * *

I AM A Democrat. I, nonetheless, believe that he is proving to be such a President, and all the people, Negroes and white, will be better, and America stronger, because of it.

GOP Weakened in South

Says Segregation Move Ruined Party Chances

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Irrespective of the merits of segregation or non-segregation as a social question and looking at the controversy solely as a realistic development in American politics, it is not too early to say that the Republican party has lost out in the South for decades to come.

From now on it will be found that affiliation of most of the Republicans in the South with the Democratic party has been resumed in the hope of keeping the South on the conservative side.

It isn't generally realized perhaps what has been happening in the South since the Roosevelt and Truman administrations began agitating the civil-rights issue. Thus, the Republican vote in the 11 states of the so-called solid South went from 700,942, or about 18 per cent of the Southern vote in 1932, to 3,955,254, or 46 per cet of the total, in 1952.

WHERE DID this big Republican vote come from? In 1948, when the civil-rights issue was hotly contested in the South, the Republicans polled 1,361,742 and the States' Rights party got 1,154,525. Combining these two, we get a total of 2,516,267. This was just slightly under the vote of 2,557,402 cast by the Democrats that same year.

Unquestionably in 1952 virtually all the States' Rights vote went to the Republicans because they polled 3,955,254 and the Democrats got 4,428,163 in those same 11 states.

Why did the States' Rights Democrats vote for Eisenhower? They believed he was committing the Republican party to states' rights because in his campaign speeches he said that he believed in "states' rights." That was a magic phrase in the South. Mr. Eisenhower's position on the tidelands oil issue, moreover, was accepted as concrete evidence of his fidelity to the doctrine of states' rights.

But since the Eisenhower administration sent a special counsel from the department of justice to appear before the Supreme Court of the United States to argue against segregation, and later boasted about the part it played in persuading the justices to rule as they did, there is no longer any doubt in the South that the Eisenhower administration has reverted to the traditional position of the Republican party on the civil-rights issue. The move was wholly unnecessary from a political standpoint, and the weakness in the strategy that prompted it was the assumption that there would be a compensating vote among the Negroes in the North. But the Negro vote in the North is no longer as solid as it used to be for any party, and today the labor unions and radical organizations swing large numbers of Negroes to the Democraic party.

THE STATISTICS of the voting in the South in the last few elections indicate what a return of the "independents" to the Democratic primaries can mean. Added strength for the conservative side will come from those Democrats who have voted regularly for their own party heretofore but who now have been stirred up by the segregation decision. Many foresee it as opening of the doors of intermarriage because state laws forbidding this might be held unconstitutional.

With the Southern conservatives in possession of committee chairmanships in Congress and with the Southern bloc committed against radical and socialistic legislation, the conservatives of the North will be told they may find that the Democratic party is better able in the long run to ward off a socialistic government than is the Republican party of so-called "liberals."

It's really the formula which by analogy President Eisenhower proclaimed in his Denver speech last Friday. He called for the continuing support of the "independents" who came from the Democratic party to vote for him in 1952. Spokesmen of the White House in recent months have repeatedly described these "independents" as of the so-called "liberal" school. In the border states, however — Maryland, Kentucky, Oklahoma, and West Virginia — many of the "independents" are aggrieved over the segregation issue, and it is doubtful if in any of those states the Republicans will retain the seats in Congress which they now hold.

By dividing their votes between the two parties heretofore, the conservatives in both the North and South have been losing their leverage in American politics. Much will be heard hereafter on the proposal that, by uniting everywhere within a single party—the Democratic party — and fighting for the nomination of non-radicals in the primaries, the conservatives may have a chance to keep governmental policies from moving into the direction of state socialism, public ownership, control of all education by the federal government, and the heavy tax burdens that come from the so-called "welfare state."

High court decision knifes Howard GOP

Dismissal order recognizes claim of 'lily white' group

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Without a hearing, the U. S. Supreme Court Monday vacated the judgment of the Federal District Court at Jackson, Miss., and ordered dismissed the suit brought by "black and tan" Republicans against "lily - white" Republicans.

The effect of the order is to leave standing a decision of the Mississippi Supreme Court under which the "lily whites" constitute the legally - recognized Republican party in Mississippi.

This means the "black and tan" group, headed by Perry Howard, can no longer hold themselves out as a Republican organization in that state.

Committee Recognition

The group, headed by Howard, the Republican national committeeman for Mississippi, had its delegates seated in the 1952 Republican national convention and is recognized by the Republican National Committee.

The vacating of the judgment and sending the case back to the District Court with instructions to dismiss the complaint was entered by a 5-to-3 vote.

Justices Hugo L. Black, Stanley F. Reed and William O. Douglas dissented. Chief Justice Earl Warren took no part in the consideration and disposition of the case.

Controversial Law

The controversy between the "black and tan" and "lily-white" Republicans grew out of a 1950 law passed by the Mississippi legislature and aimed at the Trumancrats (democrats who supported President Truman in the 1948 election).

It provided that each political party would register its name with the Mississippi secretary of state within 30 days after the law was passed and that thereafter no political party could use or register any name which had already been registered.

In the footrace which followed the governor's signing the law, the States Righters registered as Democrats and the "lily whites" as the Mississippi Republican party.

Registration Declined

When the "black and tans" later sought to register as the Republican party of Mississippi, the secretary of state, on advice of the attorney general of Mississippi, declined to register them.

The "black and tans" brought suit in the Hinds (Jackson) county Circuit Court to compel the secretary of state to cancel the registration of the "lily whites" and register the Howard group as the State Republican party. Court, but their petition was filed late and, for that reason, was denied.

The "black and tans" then went back to Mississippi and brought suit in the Federal District Court at Jackson to enjoin the secretary of state from enforcing the state statute on the ground that it violated the 14th Amendment.

District Court Ruling

A district court held unconstitutional that part of the Mississippi statute which denied the "black and tans" the right "to continue to use its name, merely because another political party had already been registered using the name 'Republican.'"

The Howard group petitioned the United States Supreme Court for a review of the judgment of the Mississippi Supreme Court, but their petition was filed late and, for that reason, was denied.

The "black and tans" then went back to Mississippi and brought suit in the Federal District Court at Jackson to enjoin the secretary of state from enforcing the state statute on the ground that it violated the 14th Amendment.

District Court Ruling

A district court held unconstitutional that part of the Mississippi statute which denied the "black and tans" the right "to continue to use its name, merely because another political party had already been registered using the name "Republican.'"

The Federal Court ordered Secretary of State Heber Ladner to register the "black and tans" under the remaining valid portions of the Mississippi law.

Enter Appeal

From that judgment the "lily whites" appealed. They claimed that the Federal Court lacked jurisdiction to hear and decide the case.

They said the issues had been decided against the "black and tans" in state courts and the "black and tans" were precluded from bringing a new suit.

The Hinds county Circuit Court held that the "lily whites" were improperly registered and ordered their registration cancelled and the "black and tans" registered.

Registration Cancelled

On appeal, the Mississippi Supreme Court reversed the circuit court and reinstated the registration of the "lily whites" and cancelled the registration of the "black and tans."

The Howard group petitioned the United States Supreme Court for a review of the judgment of the Mississippi Supreme

REPUBLICAN

GOP segregation brief called sham

Afro-American p5. Baltimore, Md.

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA) —Is the Republican National Committee trying to work both sides of the street in the school segregation cases?

This question arose after James F. McKillips Jr., assistant to Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, had given out an interview in Columbia, S.C., in which he said the Eisenhower Administration "did not commit itself one way or another on the school segregation cases" in the brief filed by Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr.

Shown McKillips' statements, Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, accused the Republican National Committee aide of trying to placate southerners who thought they could use President Eisenhower to block the progress of civil rights.

Handles Patronage

McKillips is from New Orleans. His job with the Republican National Committee is to handle Republican patronage in the 11 states of the deep south.

"I do not believe that McKillips has read the brief filed by Attorney General Brownell — and certainly not the transcript of the argument made by Assistant Attorney General Lee Rankin," said Mr. White.

The NAACP secretary, who was shown the McKillips interview in the lobby of the White House, pointed out that Mr. Rankin told the United States Supreme Court that under the 14th Amendment the court has not only the right but the obligation to abolish segregation in public schools.

Court Question

Mr. White said one question asked Assistant Attorney General Rankin was whether the court had the right to rule either way and "he said, 'No, sir, this court can only rule that segregation violates the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.'"

McKillips' interview, Mr. White said, "seems to be an attempt to placate southerners who got the notion that they could use President Eisenhower against any progress in civil rights."

When McKillips' interview was brought to the attention of Sen. Irving M. Ives, (Rep., N.Y.), and a member of the resolutions committee at the 1952 Republican national convention in Chicago, Senator Ives said:

Ives' Viewpoint

"If the Chicago platform does not commit the Republican party against segregation, I do not know what does." Senator Ives intimated that McKillips "had better look at the platform."

At his press conference Friday, James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said he had not seen McKillips' statements. He said he has no comment until he sees the statements.

It also was learned that McKillips has been trying to work a squeeze play, by which federal patronage going to Mississippi would be divided between Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman for Mississippi and a representative of the Eisencrats.

Perry Howard Group Assumes New Label

Defender p1

JACKSON, Miss. — (AANP) — The Black and Tan Republicans under their new name of the Mississippi Black and Tan Grand Old Party was being processed in the state this week.

Headed by Perry Howard, the party filed with the secretary of state, Heber Ladner, under the 1950 registration act.

The group lost its republican party label in a court fight to have a section of the act declared unconstitutional. The law says only one organization can use a party name on a ballot.

The lily white faction organization by former Gov. George L. Sheldon of Nebraska who now resides in Clinton registered first as Republicans and won state recognition, even though Perry Howard was recognized by the National Republican party and is still national committeeman for the state of Mississippi.

Ike's Popularity To Aid Followers In Next Election

By JOHN L. CLARK
(Courier Political Analyst)

The Eisenhower banner will have the most decisive voter appeal in the 1954 congressional elections.

Republican candidates for the U. S. Congress and even state and local offices who rally around the banner as inspired and unswerving apostles of the President will have contagious appeal to rank and file electors at the polling places.

Eisenhower is more popular today as Chief Executive of the United States than in 1952 when he aspired to the office.

This position in the hearts of Americans has been achieved through his philosophy which aims at peace in the world, and equally shared prosperity, home comforts and unrestricted rights and privileges for Americans of all races and religions.

Mr. Clark

Candidates for Congress must qualify as followers of the "Eisenhower Forward March" this year, as they have nothing to boast about for their "behavior" in 1953.

* * *

THE FIRST session of the 83rd Congress was preparatory to the Eisenhower long-range objectives of 1954.

And many Republicans were not prepared for this "new look."

They were so inclined to factional politics, stupid about threats from the Soviet Government, conversion from wartime to peace economy and all encompassing conditions throughout the country, that only with help from Democrats did parts of the Eisenhower program receive legislative endorsement.

A review of the first session of the Eighty-third Congress reveals no important performance by Republican lawmakers, acting in unity over the opposition, that will prove to voters that they should be returned to the Nation's Capital.

IN CONTRAST to this perfunctory and unsatisfactory record, Eisenhower maneuvered a truce in Korea, brought to American homes thousands of youngsters and restored happiness to millions of American fathers, mothers and relatives.

By December the President had worked out a psychological stroke. He went before the United Nations and invited Russia to join the United States in atomic-power-for-peace talks.

In his State of the Union Message on Jan. 7, President Eisenhower warned the Communists that our nuclear weapons would be used to preserve our freedom.

The last two declarations confirmed his belief that the United States was no longer waiting for the aggressor to strike before taking action, but held the initiative, could demand more in the Korean truce talks and interrupt the Communist aims to conquer all of the free nations in the world.

THE ACCUMULATED experience of forty years in military service provided the President with the intuitive knowledge to bring about changes in Korea and ease tensions elsewhere. These are standout accomplishments of the first Republican Administration in twenty years . . the accomplishments that the rank and file voters recognize and will remember.

During 1954, the President has asked the Congress to back him up on a new and less costly foreign program, defense of our own boundaries, flexible credit and debt management policies, tax measures to stimulate consumer and business spending, suitable lending, guaranteeing, insuring and grants-in-aid activities, strengthened old-age and unemployment insurance measure, improved agricultural programs, public works programs laid in advance, enlarged opportunities for international trade and investment, revision of the Taft-Hartley law, public and private housing, slum clearance, development of the St. Lawrence Seaway and home rule for the District of Columbia.

On the nation's economy, he points out that we are "changing from war-time to peace-time living; cost of government has been reduced, income taxes have been reduced and excess profits taxes expired; he proposes to further reduce taxes for the low-income group and small business; calls for keeping the current rate of 52 per cent tax on corporation income, also excise taxes, due to be reduced on April 1, on liquor, tobacco, gasoline and automobiles; also extension of the Renegotiation Act of 1951, to eliminate excessive profits and prevent waste of public funds in the purchase of defense materials.

THE PRESIDENT confesses the budget cannot be balanced this year, even with reduced cost of government functions.

Under the existing conditions, revenue through taxes has been lowered, while taxes on the Government debt continues and defense costs must be retained at a protective level.

Director of the Budget Joseph M. Dodge threw some light on the public debt in a speech delivered before the Economic Club of Detroit on Oct. 12, 1953.

Said Mr. Dodge: "The Government debt was about $267 billion in January (when the Republicans took over), financing this huge debt is complicated by the fact that nearly 60 per cent of the publicly held debt is concentrated in obligations due within one year or on demand, and the Treasury has to refinance about $75 billion of marketable and non-marketable securities during the 1954 fiscal year."

* * *

PREVIOUSLY, he had stated that "Your Government is a business that spends an average of about $300 million every day of a five-day work week, $6 billion a month. A Treasury balance of about $6 billion is needed to meet one month's normal expenses, but there can be reduction of as much as $3 billion in the first half of some months."

These staggering figures confuse most Congressmen as much as they do the average reader, which accounts for unjustified opposition to extending some taxes and opposition to extending some posing an increase of $15 billion to the statutory debt limit.

Other issues will enter the campaign this time. Some will be supported, while others will be opposed by the Administration.

Negroes have received practical consideration under Eisenhower, although he made no promise of a Federal Fair Employment Practices recommendation.

He opposed this legislation, explaining that he considered it the duty of the separate states to pass these laws.

Several times, however, he did say, while campaigning, even in the South, that "America can have no second-class citizens unless it becomes a second-class country."

State Republicans Against Ballot Tag

State Republicans in convention assembled Monday afternoon, at 2:30, when the resolutions committee reported, unanimously accepted a resolution presented by J. T. Armstrong, Luther, as follows:

RESOLVED, that it is the considered judgement of this convention, that the legislative enactment, requiring Negro citizens of this state, who run for public office, to identify their racial extraction on the ballot, is a miscarriage of justice and democratic and should be forthwith repealed.

We pledge ourselves to have a bill introduced in the next legislature, requesting the majority party in this state to join with us in correcting this injustice to the 175,000 loyal and patriotic Negroes in the state of Oklahoma.

Court Reverses Miss. GOP Party

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The Supreme Court voted 5 to 3 yesterday to overturn a decision requiring Mississippi to permit the so-called "Black and Tan" faction in that state to go on the ballot as "the Republican Party."

With Justices Hugo Black, Stanley Reed and William O. Douglas dissenting, the court handed down a brief order stating that the Judgment is vacated and the case "remanded with instructions to dismiss the complaint."

Chief Justice Earl Warren took no part in the decision.

Another Mississippi faction known as the "Lily Whites," composed mainly of whites and formed in 1928, won exclusive right to the use of the party's name in the last Presidential election. It applied for registration first and claimed a larger vote.

However, the "Black and Tan" faction had the recognition of the GOP national convention and a much longer history, going back to 1872.

A three-judge Federal court held last October that under the U. S. constitution, Mississippi tax could not deny a political party "existing long before the enactment of the statute" the right to "register and continue to use its name."

The appeal was filed by J. A. Durant, Miss., and other leaders of the "Lily Whites."

Although the "Lily Whites" favored President Eisenhower and the "Black and Tans" the late Senator Robert A. Taft before the convention both were prepared to suppero Mr. Eisenhower at the time of the election.

Freeholder Curtis Begins His Duties

$8,000 job pleases voters; many messages laud Becker

Political history was made here this week, when, for the first time, a colored person was sworn in as a member of the Essex County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

The new member is James A. Curtis, 44, an attorney and former Republican Assemblyman who lives at 325 N. 11th st., with his wife and three children.

Mr. Curtis was elected unanimously last Thursday by the eight other members of the board to fill the unexpired term of Jacob S. Glickenhaus, who resigned to become a District court judge.

AFRO Editorial Near Scoop

The precedent-setting action came a day after the New Jersey AFRO-AMERICAN hit the newsstands in Essex county carrying a front-page editorial titled, "An Essex Freeholder."

After praising Essex county as "one of the best governed of New Jersey's 21 counties," and paying tribute to "the high calibre of men who have served as freeholders," the editorial said in part:

"Despite this governmental efficiency, however, we feel that the democratic process in Essex county can be greatly strengthened by breaking away from tradition to end the lily-white personnel of the Board of Freeholders.

"In the last 30 years, colored people in Essex county have watched with uneasiness the political process by which representatives of other racial and religious minority groups have been elevated to the county judiciary, the Board of Education, the prosecutor's office, the sheriff's office, and various major boards and agencies and departments of the county government . . .

Curtis Top Choice

"As taxpayers, the more than 100,000 colored people in Essex have a vital stake in the composition of the Board of Freeholders. And their business and professional status cannot be brushed aside as insignificant. Also, in no other county do colored people in the state show better cultural advancements than in Essex.

"These are considerations that should compel the Essex County Clean Government to give serious consideration to the endorsement of a highly qualified colored person for election to the board of Freeholders, and to issue the party edict that will insure his election.

"Among some of the people we feel can meet the qualifications to serve as Freeholders are:

"J. A. Curtis, a former Assemblyman and a member of the American Bar Association; Mrs. Mary Burch, a member of the Newark Board of Education, a former school teacher, and a member of the Board of Governors of the State Republican Women's Assembly . . ."

Salary $8,000

The position pays $8,000 per year, but it does not require Mr. Curtis to discontinue his law practice.

News of his election was hailed throughout the county and state by Republicans and Democrats alike.

Congratulatory messages from members of the legal profession, loyal party stalwarts and civic and interracial leaders were sent to George H. Becker, chairman of the Essex Republican Clean Government, who recommended Curtis' election.

Ware's Hands Stronger

It strengthens the position of Toussaint Ware, chairman of the Third Ward (now the Central Ward) Republican Committee, who gave Curtis strong support.

The appointment or election of a colored Freeholder has long been one of the major objectives of the Third Ward Republican Committee.

In Democratic circles, however, it was felt that the decision of the Essex Republicans to integrate the Board of Freeholders was dictated primarily by political expediency.

Colored Democratic leaders point out that, the overwhelming support given by the majority of colored voters in Newark and Essex county to the Democratic Party candidates in the 1952 Presidential election, and the 1953 gubernatorial election, forced Mr. Becker to do something constructive for colored Republicans.

They reason that Governor Meyner's decision to give some top appointments to colored Democrats made it imperative for the Republicans to guard against further defection by colored voters in the coming Congressional electon next November.

Curtis Well Trained

Mr. Curtis is a native of South Boston, Va., and received his early education in the East Orange public schools and Barringer high school, Newark.

He graduated from Amherst College in 1933 and from Rutgers University Law School in 1940.

He was admitted to the bar in 1942, became a counsellor in 1946, and was admitted to practic before the U.S. Supreme Court in 1950.

Mr. Curtis served in the Assembly from 1948 to 1951, and was a leader in the historic fight for stronger statutes to halt racial discrimination in the state.

Civic Leader

He is a former president of the Newark NAACP Branch a former member of the board of directors of the Urban League of Essex County, and is a member of 13th Avenue Presbyterian church.

He formerly served as an extension worker at the New Jersey Manual Traming School at Bordentown.

Mrs. Curtis is the former Miss Catherine Fletcher of Princeton. They were married in 1941. Their children are: James A. Jr., 11; Ardele Susan, 10; and John Fletcher, 4.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT GIVES VALIDITY TO WHAT ATTY. PERRY HOWARD CALLED MISSISSIPPI'S "FOOT RACE" LAW

Nation's Highest Tribunal Upholds Exclusive Right Of Lily-White Group To Use Of Name Of The Republican Party In The State Of Mississippi

Decision Seen As Marking The Beginning Of Two Party System In The South

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 9—(DSN)—The long reign of Perry W. Howard as National Republican Committeeman for the State of Mississippi, and what may have eliminated the presence of a Negro member on the Party's National Committe for many years to come was brought about in a decision handed down by the United States Supreme Court here Monday in which the nation's highest tribunal gave validity to what Howard called Mississippi's "Foot Race" law, by upholding the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi in its ruling that the "Lily-White" Republican Group of the state had obtained the exclusive right to the use of the name of the Republican Party in the state under a law passed by the 1950 Session of the State Legislature.

Th e1950 law passed by the state legislature seen at the time of its passage as meant to prevent the development of two wings of the Democratic Party in the state during the Dixiecrat deflection provided that only one group could use the name of a national party, such group to be the first to register as the official party in the state under the New law. The Lily-White group, headed by Ex-Governor George L. Sheldon, of Nebraska, long since a resident of the state, beat Perry Howard's "Black and Tan" Republican group, so-called because of its Negro-White membership, in the race for registration which lead to the law suits on which the Nation's highest court rendered its decision here Monday.

The "Black and Tan" group, headed by Perry Howard who has been the National Republican Committeeman for the state since 1924 has through the years been recognized as in the last National Convention as the official Republican of the state. However, informed observers here in Washington point out that since the National Committeeman is elected in the state convention each election year, now that the high court has ruled on the law in favor of the Lily-White group Howard's election as National Committeeman, despite recognition by the National Committee become null and void and thus ends his tenure as National Committeeman for the State, which now goes to Ex-Governor George L. Sheldon leader of the Lily-White Group.

Informed observers here in Washington noting that the Party's National Committee showed little if any interest in the case see the decision as marking the beginning of a real two party system in the South, and although the decision immediately effects the party organization in the State of Mississippi it may also mean the beginning of the end of the "Vest Pocket" Republican organizations which have long existed throughout the south.

OPINION

Shifts inevitable

President Eisenhower has been in office eighteen months.

During his campaign for the presidency, a wide majority of colored voters was certain that no Republican could do as good a job as President Truman.

The result was that they voted against Ike in the big cities two to one.

Now that they have had a chance to look around, they begin to believe that Ike is making an excellent President.

First out, Ike's attorney general, Herbert Brownell, wrote a magnificent brief in the five school cases which undoubtedly helped the Supreme Court to decide unanimously to outlaw segregation.

The President appointed a colored secretary to his White House staff without any fuss or feathers.

Individuals, who because of their position should be invited, have been guests at White House social affairs.

An unprecedented number of people have been appointed to important positions in the Government in and outside of Washington.

The Democrats have been quick to point out in this regard that President Truman appointed two colored Federal judges and that Mr. Eisenhower has thus far made no score in this field.

But President Eisenhower has insisted on ending segregation in the Army, Navy, and Air Force and mixing the schools on military posts and other base facilities of the armed forces.

The President as much as anybody else is responsible for the end of segregation in the restaurants and theatres of Washington.

Swimming pools and playgrounds have been integrated in the District of Columbia.

Clauses in Government contracts forbidding discrimination because of race or color, have been strengthened and enforced.

When the Supreme Court outlawed segregation, the President passed quietly word down that he wanted it done in the nation's capital without delay and he expected the city to be a model for the rest of the country.

Even while running for office, the President said he thought segregation was wrong.

It wasn't difficult for him then to say he wanted segregation in veterans' hospitals abolished and get results.

All Washington knows now that President Eisenhower is against segregation. Therefore, officials act accordingly.

There are seven Democrats and two Republicans on the Supreme Court. Only one of these justices was appointed by President Eisenhower.

That one is Mr. Chief Justice Earl Warren, former governor of California.

Before Mr. Warren was named, the Supreme Court was badly divided on most cases. But on the important school segregation decision, the court voted unanimously.

It is stupid, therefore, to talk about the Supreme Court justices themselves as being political.

However, the decision was made during a Republican administration and, of course, Ike gets the full credit for it.

Although the votes of colored Americans two years ago went Democratic by two to one in crucial areas, even the most astute politician can't tell with any degree of accuracy what is going to happen in the elections this fall.

That there will be some swing of former colored Democrats to the Republican side to us appears inevitable.

Perry W. Howard Tells Of Long Service As Republican National Committeeman For Mississippi

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 1(Special) — Perry W. Howard, 72 year-old Negro Lawyer here in ar interview with Arthur Edson of the Associated Press Tuesday, t lkec about his long service as Republi can National Committeeman fo the state of Mississippi.

Howard has been a member o the GOP's National Committee for 30 tempestuous years.

"That's longer than anybody else," Howard said, "Even Republicans like Mark Hanna and Matt Quay never served that long."

By Howard's figure — and National Committee officials say they are sure he is right — he has beaten the previous record set by Howard Colladay, who put in 29 years as a District of Columbia GOP committeeman before he dropped out several years ago.

Mississippi, as everyone knows, is not overrun with Republicans. And those who are there appear, to the outsider to spend much of their time bickering with each other.

The 1952 Republican convention, you may recall, had some knockdown fgihts between the forces of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio for control of such Southern delegations as those from Texas, Louisiana and Florida.

But Mississippi even improved on that. It presented a three-way fight with factions led by Howard, by Lester E. Wills of Meridian, and by Bernard W. Chill of Jackson.

There seemed to be but one area of agreement. Both Wills and Chill were 100 per cent anti-Howard. They particularly stressed the view that Howard has been a Washington lawyer for so long—he came here during the Coolidge administration — that he now knows little about his old home state.

When the National Committee voted for Howard anyway, Wills said it had picked a man who worked with the Democrats to keep the Republicans weak, and Chill said: "The real interest that has developed in Republicans politics in Mississippi will be effectively killed."

All of which surprised Howard not at all.

"I was a delegate from Mississippi to the 1912 convention," he said, "and my seat was contested. It has been contested every four years ever since.

"They say I don't keep up on things there. Why, I read the Jackson paper, I keep my legal residence there, and I go back every chance I get."

On the wall directly behind Howard was a photograph of the man he always supported in national politics. On it was written: "To my friend, Perry W. Howard, with kindest regards, Robert A. Taft."

When Howard saw your reporter was looking at it, he said: "One of our greatest men. Smart, able honest, sincere. My ideal."

But when his ideal failed to get the nomination. Howard said it never occurred to him to do anything but pitch in and work for Eisenhower.

Said the man who holds the record for service on the Nationa Committee:

"How could I fail to love my party, the party which took th shackles off my mother and fath er?"

GOP Committee Time Record Held By Negro In Mississippi

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—A tall, gaunt, 77-year-old lawyer from Mississippi, whose mother and father were slaves, reported today he now holds a record no other Republican ever attained.

Perry W. Howard has been a member of the GOP's National Committee for 30 tempestuous years.

"That's longer than anybody else," Howard said. "Even Republicans like Mark Hanna and Matt Quay never served that long."

By Howard's figure — and National Committee officials say they are sure he is right — he has beaten the previous record set by Howard Colladay, who put in 29 years as a District of Columbia GOP committeeman before he dropped out several years ago.

President to End All Race Discrimination, 300 Assured at Rally

President Eisenhower's campaign pledge two years ago to eliminate discrimination and create equality of opportunity for all "will go on until it is completely redeemed," a White House aide said yesterday.

Maxwell M. Rabb, counsel to the President and secretary to the Cabinet, told a group of 300 District Negro Republican women and their guests that "the President is constantly aware of his pledge" to fight for civil rights "which has not been completely redeemed, but which will go on until it is."

Colored Appointees Honored.

Mr. Rabb spoke at the fifth annual luncheon of the Virginia White Speel Republican Women's Club of the District at National Airport. The luncheon honored 54 leading colored appointees of the Eisenhower administration.

Archibald J. Carey, Jr., Chicago city councilman and alternate to the eighth session of the United Nations General Assembly, said that "the rest of the record" of Republican efforts in behalf of racial minorities "to which Abraham Lincoln set his hand, has been accomplished by President Eisenhower."

"Here in Washington," Mr. Carey declared, "we see a different city. The knockout punch to Jim Crow in the District of Columbia has been administered by the actions and the attitudes of Dwight Eisenhower."

Urge G. O. P. Congress.

Mr. Carey and other speakers called on club members to strengthen the hand of the President by campaigning for a Republican Congress in the November elections.

Other speakers included Miss Bertha S. Adkins, director of the woman's division of the Republican National Committee; Mrs. Ida Smith Taylor, president of the club; Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the District Republican State Committee, and Mrs. Carmel Carrington Marr, staff member of the U. S. Mission to the U.N.

Ike Says Elect Republicans To Avoid "Partisan Politics" War

Daily World Sat. 10-9-54
Atlanta, Ga. Sat. 10-9-54

BY ROBERT E. CLARK P. 1

DENVER — (INS) — President Eisenhower warned in another fighting call for election of a Republican Congress last night that there will be a "Cold War Of Partisan Politics" in Washington if Democrats win control of the Legislative branch.

He hammered again on what he called the danger of letting the opposition party take over the House and Senate in a major campaign address carried over the largest television network ever cleared for a political speech.

Mr. Eisenhower declared that politics "runs riot" in the capitol when the White House and Capitol Hill are in conflict with each other.

He likened such a situation to an automobile with two drivers and asserted:

"You know perfectly well that you just can't have one car with two drivers at the steering wheel and expect to end up any place but in the ditch — especially when the drivers are set on going in different directions.

TWO PHILOSOPHIES

"You cannot have efficient Federal government when the Congress wants to follow one philosophy of government and the Executive branch another."

The President was the star speaker at a GOP rally in Denver which climaxed Republican "precinct day" rallies across the nation.

He remarks were piped into 26,500 other rallies where an estimated two million GOP precinct workers gathered to hear his pep talk.

The President's prepared address sounded the same theme as his recent Hollywood Bowl speech, which won an enthusiastic reception from Republican leaders anxious to have Mr. Eisenhower take a more active role in the campaign.

STRATEGY SESSION Daily World

The President held a campaign strategy session before his speech with GOP Congressional leaders, who were introduced to the nationwide audience to demonstrate the Republican "partnership" in Washington. Sat. 10-9-54

Mr. Eisenhower praised the "unsurpassed record" of the Republican 83rd Congress as evidence that the Executive and Legislative Branches must be under control of the same party.

He ticked off a long list of achievements resulting for this partnership, including the administration's success in dealing with the Communist menace on the home front.

The President said that when Americans elected him in 1952 they did not consider the Communist conspiracy in this country "a red herring" — the label once applied by Former President Harry S. Truman to the Alger Hiss case.

The Negro Vote and the G. O. P.

Republican Official Declares Eisenhower's Record On Racial Issues Ought to Win Colored Votes

"If only Ike were running, how we'd bring those Negroes home!" moans Val Washington, minorities director of the Republican National Committee.

He has in mind an Eisenhower civil rights record which prompted the New York Negro Congressman, Adam Clayton Powell, to write recently in the Reader's Digest: "I was wrong (about Gen. Eisenhower). . . . Without political trumpeting (he) has quietly started a revolution which, I firmly believe, means an era of greater promise for Negro citizens."

Even without the President on the ticket, Mr. Washington claims an average increase in the Negro vote of 10 per cent over 1952. These claims are based on polls made by an outfit which in 1952 surveyed the scene and warned that Negroes would not leave their Democratic moorings.

Democrats don't argue against the President's civil rights record but they assert it is cancelled out by unemployment. Despite their increased membership in unions, Negroes have much less seniority than the average, so are still first to go when jobs fall off.

The recent CIO poll showed, too, that the relatively few Negroes who had gone over to the Republicans in late years were coming home. CIO spokesmen expect no defections from Democrats by Negro members of their unions.

It is conceded by Mr. Washington that many Republican candidates are not too well known to Negroes generally, while in all industrial areas Democrats are well known.

Nevertheless, he feels that his campaign literature—mostly reprints from the Negro press describing what Gen. Eisenhower has done—is making a real impression on better-educated and professional Negroes. Thus he says the G. O. P. will be helped in cities like Louisville, Ky., Harrisburg, Pa., and South Bend, Ind., where excellent Negro neighborhoods flourish.

About 2 million Negroes vote outside the solid South, and even there the big cities are showing a significant Negro vote. Outside the South about three Negroes vote Democratic to one Republican. In the South they copy the white pattern, apparently feeling they have got to be Democrats in order to make their weight count.

The President's record includes ending segregation in the Army and the District of Columbia, expansion of the Social Security Act which meant so much to all low-paid workers, and appointment of many Negroes to Government posts which their race had not hitherto held. Mr. Washington said that Gen. Eisenhower himself forbade the party to list the Supreme Court decision ending segregation as an administration achievement.

If the Negro vote is not a sleeper in the election—that is, a hidden issue which will affect the outcome in key posts—can any other be looked for?

Both parties answer no. They believe that the emotions generated by war among racial groups have died down. There is some evidence that Jews do not like the Dulles policy of arms for the Middle East but not that it means a shift of votes thought to be safely Republican. The farmers who surprised everybody in 1948 are already out in the open with their complaints.

Democrats Jolted By One Of Their 2 Negro Congressmen

Hon. Adam Clayton Powell Cites Gains Made By His Race Under President Eisenhower; Sensational Article By New Yorker Published in October Issue Of Readers Digest

Pleasantville, N. Y.—"Without political trumpeting, President Eisenhower has quietly started a revolution which, I firmly believe, means an era of greater promise for Negro citizens," declares Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., of New York, a Negro and a Democrat, writing in the October Reader's Digest. Dr. Powell is also Minister of the Abyssinian Bapt. church in New York, the largest Baptist church in the world.

"Like many Negroes," Powell writes, "I feared Eisenhower's election meant a setback in the struggle for fairer treatment and equal opportunities for our people. I was wrong."

Powell states that the example set by the President began in the White House when he installed Mrs Lois Lippman as the first Negro Secretary—not for reasons of politics but because Mrs. Lippman's capabilities were known. No Negro had previously been employed in the White House except as messenger or janitor.

Similarly, no political capital was made of the President's appointment of 47 Negroes to important posts, 27 of which had always been held by whites. Eisenhower's naming of J. Ernest Wilkins as Assistant Secretary of Labor marked the first "Little Cabinet" status for a Negro since the Taft administration. Scovel Richardson became the first Negro in the post of Federal Parole Commissioner.

Eisenhower has kept his campaign promise to work against segregation in the District of Columbia, Powell says. Segregation has been ended in Washington's restaurants and bars, including those in hotels, and some hotels follow "a more liberal policy" in rental of rooms. Jim Crowism has been wiped out in the city's recreational areas and big movie houses. In 21 of 23 departments of the District Government, Negroes are employed.

The District's public-housing agency has ordered that the 4000 dwellings to be constructed with federal aid be made available to low-income families without discrimination as to race.

Under Eisenhower's administration, segregation in the Armed Forces has been almost eliminated. Not a single all-Negro unit exists in the Army today, though many were still intact when Eisenhower took office. At southern Naval bases, signs reading "White only" & "Colored" have been removed in cafeterias and rest rooms. In 21 naval plants employing 70,000 whites and Negroes, segregation is only a memory.

Negroes are now treated at previously all-white hospitals of the Veterans' Administration. At 47 VA hospitals the practice of separating the races at snack bars, in libraries and recreation rooms has vanished.

Though he is a Democrat, Rep. Powell declares his conviction that Eisenhower is proving to be "a President of all the people."

BATTLE OVER MISSISSIPPI GOP:

Perry Howard's reign challenged

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) —"Lily-white" Republicans in Mississippi Wednesday appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court in their efforts to overthrow the "black and tan" organization headed by Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman.

Sat. 1-9-54

The "lily whites" are seeking to have the Supreme Court set aside the judgment of a special three - judge Federal District Court at Jackson, Miss., requiring the secretary of state of Mississippi to register the Howard group as the Republican party in the state.

p.3

The Howard faction is recognized by the Republican National Committee as the regular Republican organization in Mississippi. The claims of the "lily whites" that they were the regular organization were rejected at the 1952 Republican national convention in Chicago, and the delegates from the Howard group were seated in the convention.

Appellants' Claims

The appeal was brought to the Supreme Court by J. A. White, Durant, Miss., who claims to be secretary of the Republican state committee; former Governor George L. Sheldon of Nebraska, now a Mississippi farmer, who claims to be the national committeeman; Nelson E. Taylor, Greenwood, who claims to be the state chairman, and Mrs. John Hancock, Indianola, who claims to be the national committeewoman.

In addition to Mr. Howard, the appellees are Mrs. Edna E. Redmond, Jackson, Republican national committeewoman; S. W. Miller, Jackson, chairman of the Republican state executive committee, and C. T. Butler, Meridian, secretary of the executive committee.

The Howard group applied for registration April 29, 1950. The Attorney General of Mississippi ruled that, the "lily whites" having registered under the name "Republican," no other registration under that or a similar name was permitted by a Mississippi statute.

Claim Succession

The "black and tan" faction claims to have succession as the Republican party in Mississippi since 1872. In their appeal, the "lily whites" deny this. They say the Howard organization is the outgrowth of a minority group which split from the Mississippi Republican party in 1924 and, with the aid of Mississippi Democrats, gained recognition by the 1924 Republican national convention.

The Howard group contends that the "lily whites" organized as the Independent Republican party in 1928. The "lily whites" say the people reorganized the party in 1928 and that the organization has functioned as such with the approval of a majority of Republican voters and has never changed its name.

The Howard faction brought suit originally in the Hinds County (Jackson) Circuit Court in August, 1950, to compel the secretary of state to register their organization. That court cancelled the registration of the "lily whites" and ordered the registration of the "black and tan" faction.

Judgment Reversed

On appeal, the Mississippi Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Circuit Court and ordered reinstatement of the registration of the "lily whites."

The Howard faction then brought suit in the Federal District Court at Jackson, asking for a three-judge court to be convened, that the Mississippi statute be declared unconstitutional, and that they be granted an injunction requiring the secretary of state to register their party.

The district court ordered the re-registration of the Howard faction without disturbing the registration of the "lily whites," but the "lily whites" are still out in the cold because the Republican National Committee recognizes the Howard group.

Perry Howard Says No Injury Has Resulted

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) —"Black and Tan" Republicans of Mississippi Monday asked the United States Supreme Court to dismiss the appeal of the "lily white" faction from the decision of a special three-judge Federal District Court at Jackson, Mississippi, ordering registration of the "black and tans" as the Republican party of Mississippi.

p.1

NO INJURY

Opposing the appeal of the "lily whites", the organization, headed by Perry W. Howard, Republican National Committeeman, contends that the "lily whites" have suffered no substantial injury as a result of the decision.

The Howard faction told the court that the "lily whites" are no "aggrieved parties" because no relief was granted against them, except the dismissal of their counterclaim and assessment of court costs against them.

The District Court held unconstitutional that part of the Mississippi statute which would deny to the Republican party of Mississippi the right to register and continue to use its name.

FOOT RACE

The statute, passed in 1950, was aimed at Mississippi Democrats who supported President Truman. It provided that each political part would register its name with the Secretary of State for Mississippi and that thereafter no other party would use that name.

A footrace developed with the "lily whites" registering first as the Republican party of Mississippi. The "black and Tans" were later denied the right to register as a Republican organization.

The Howard faction brought suit in the Hinds (Jackson) County circuit court and were granted an injunction ordering the Mississippi Secretary of State to register them. On appeal the Mississippi Supreme Court reversed the decision.

SOUGHT REVIEW

The "black and tans" sought a review by the United States Supreme Court but were later in filing their petition. They then brought suit in the Federal District Court at Jackson.

In their opposition to the appeal of the "lily whites," the Howard faction points out that they named in their suit in the Federal District Court the officers of the 'lily whites' and the Mississippi Secretary of State.

The court issued a mandatory injunction requiring the Mississippi Secretary of State to register the "black and tans" as the Republican party of Mississippi. The Howard faction says the "lily whites" were ordered to do nothing except pay the court costs.

STILL REGISTERED

The "black and tans" point out that the "lily white" are still registered as a political party and that the order of the District Court did not make it mandatory that their registration be cancelled.

The Howard faction asserts that the "lily whites" had no vested right in the exclusive registration of their party as the "Republican party" in Mississippi. They add that both the "lily whites" and the "black and tans" have existed side by side in Mississippi for a least twenty-five years.

It is possible that the "lily whites" might be recognized by the Republican national convention, but it is equally possible that the "black and tans," even under another name, might be acceptable to the national group, the Howard faction state.

Lily Whites Out To Upset Howard

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) — "Lily-white" Republicans in Mississippi Wednesday appealed to the United States Supreme Court in their efforts to overthrow the "black and tan" organization headed by Perry W. Howard, Republican National Committeman

The "lily whites" are seeking to have the Supreme Court set aside the judgment of a special three-judge Federal District Court at Jackson, Miss., requiring the Secretary of State of Mississippi to register the Howard group as the Republican party in Mississippi.

The Howard faction is recognized by the Republican National Committee as the regular Republican organization in Mississippi. The appeal was brought to the Supreme Court by J. A. White, Durant, Miss., who claims to be secretary of the Republican state committee; former Gov. George L. In addition to Howard, the appealees are Mrs. Edna F. Red mond, Jackson, Republican National committeewoman; S. W. Miller, Jackson, chairman of the Republican state executive committee, and C. T. Butler, Meridian, secretary of the executive committee.

While the fight between "lily whites" and "black and tan" factions of the republican party has been going on in Mississippi for years, the present controversy grew out of a statute passed by the Mississippi legislature in 1950.

The "black and tan" faction claims to have succession as the Republican party in Mississippi since 1872. In their appeal, the "lily whites" deny this. They say the Howard organization is the outgrowth of a minority group which split from the Mississippi Republican party in 1924 and, with the aid of Mississippi Democrats, gained recognition by the 1924 Republican national convention.

Black And Tans Lose Republican Party Title

WASHINGTON— (ANP) — The United States Supreme Court agreed by a 5-to-3 vote Monday to throw out the case originating in Mississippi to determine which political faction of that state has the right to be considered the "Republican Party of Mississippi," thus giving the lily whites the GOP name.

Five Justices voted to vacate the judgement and to remand the case to the District Court with instructions to dismiss the complaint. Mr. Justice Black, Reed and Douglas dissented with Chief Justice Warren taking no part in the consideration and disposition of the case.

The court action thus virtually ousted the Black and Tan faction, led by Perry Howard, which dates back to Reconstruction Days.

The suit was filed by the Negro faction including Howard, a national committeeman of the Republican party of Mississippi; Mrs. Edna E. Redmond, national committeewoman; S. W. Miller, chairman of the state executive committee; and C. T. Butler, secretary of the state executive committee, in behalf of the officers and members of the Republican party of Mississippi and thousands of citizens of the state who are similarly situated and have a common grievance.

Howard claimed that his group has the right to be recognized as the Republican party of Mississippi since this faction was organized in 1872, while the Lily White faction was not organized until 1928 as the "Independent Republican Party" and has only been using the present designation since 1948.

The white faction denied this contention, claiming that the Negro organization is an outgrowth of a minority group which detached itself from the Republican party in Mississippi in 1924, and with the aid of the Democrats of that state, obtained recognition by the Republican National Convention of that year.

The white group argued that the Republican Party was reorganized by the people of Mississippi in 1928, and has functioned as such every since, with the approval of a majority of the Republican voters and has never changed its name. They did admit that state officials, the press, and some members of the public from time to time have called their organizations the "Independent Republican Party" among other names; and that in their 1948 convention, a resolution was adopted to reaffirm the previous use of the name, "Mississippi Republican Party" and to repudiate the "unauthorized and unwarranted" use of the words "Independent" and "Lily Whites."

The Mississippi State Supreme Court had previously ruled that the "lily white" Republican faction had the exclusive right to appear on the ballot as the State Republican Party, using the name "Mississippi Republican Party."

This ruling was overturned by a special three-judge Federal Court in Jackson, Miss., on Oct. 26, 1953.

'Black And Tans' Ask High Court To Dismiss Lily-White GOP Appeal

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) —"Black and Tan" Republicans of Mississippi Monday asked the United States Supreme Court to dismiss the appeal of the "lily white" faction from the decision of a special three-judge Federal District Court at Jackson, Miss., ordering registration of the "Black and Tans" as the Republican party of Mississippi.

Opposing the appeal of the "lily whites," the organization, headed by Perry W. Howard, Republican National committeeman, contend that the "lily whites" have suffered no substantial injury as a result of the decision.

The District Court held unconstitutional that part of the Mississippi statute which would deny to the Republican party of Mississippi the right to register and continue to use its name.

The statute, passed in 1950, was aimed at Mississippi Democrats who supported President Truman, right in the exclusive registration of their party as the "Republican party," in Mississippi. They add that both the "lily whites" and the "Black and Tans" have existed side by side in Mississippi for at least 25 years.

It provided that each political party would register its name with the Secretary of State for Mississippi and that thereafter no other party would use that name.

A footrace developed when the "lily whites" registered first as the Republican party of Mississippi. The "black and Tans" were denied the right to register as the Republican organization.

The Howard faction brought suit in the Hinds (Jackson) County circuit court and were granted an injunction ordering the Mississippi Secretary of State to register

Lauds Eisenhower As 'Great Leader'

Courier Sat 3-27-54 p. 5

NEW ORLEANS—The main difference between the Roosevelt-Truman Administrations and the present one, with respect to civil rights, is that the former made many promises and did a lot of talking for twenty years, but accomplished nothing, while the latter talked less and has done more in a practical way, United Nations Alternate Delegate Archibald J. Carey, Chicago, said as principal speaker for the People's Republican Club's Centennial mass meeting in Union Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church here Wednesday night.

Introduced by John Minor Wisdom, Louisiana's Republican National Committeeman, Carey appraised President Eisenhower as a "great American and a good administrator motivated by the highest patriotic attitude." He added that President Eisenhower will go down in history as one of "the great Presidents."

* * *

AFTER COMPLIMENTING John Minor Wisdom as a GOP stalwart, he praised Alex F. Laneuville, president of the People's Republican Club, for his courage and persistency during the Presidential campaign, and for his efforts toward supporting a strong two-party system.

Carey said the two-party plan further supports the the founding fathers' system of checks and balances and as such has always served to improve government.

He pointed out that the Eisenhower Administration has made thirty-one appointments of Negroes from seventeen states to high departmental positions, has eliminated segregation in the nation's capital, in the schools on Army posts in the South and in naval installations.

* * *

CAREY, POINTING out that he is the fourth generation of AME ministers, urged clergymen to be concerned with politics. He said Negro Americans should possess serenity to adjust themselves to things they cannot change, should change the things they can, and should pray for wisdom to know the difference.

He said that in politics, as in religion, citizens should "be anchored somewhere," and that political opportunists gain little.

Also appearing on the program were Fred N. Ogden, Republican candidate for Mayor of New Orleans in the April 6 elections; the Rev. G. N. Collins, pastor of Union Bethel; the Rev. Noah Copelin, Miss Anna Bell Bernard and Jesse W. Cook, general chairman, and Henry W. Citizen, co-chairman.

Flimsy Excuse Is Given for Holding Separate Meetings

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat 4-10-54 34d p. 11

(Special to the Courier)

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Are the Republicans in this area attempting to make their party lily white?

It would seem so, judging from recent events.

Most recent example is the jim-crow workshop set up by the party for Negro women.

As expected, only five Negro women attended the jim-crow meeting held in the Abe Scharff Branch YMCA, most of them choosing to stay away.

The jim-crow meeting was set up after white women of the party had attended a workshop in Peabody Hotel with Congressman Judd as speaker.

FLIMSY ALIBI given for setting up separate meeting places was that whites and Negroes could not meet together in Peabody Hotel. However, Memphians recall that Negroes and whites have met together in Peabody Hotel. A national conference on housing, a medical meeting and an Episcopalalian banquet were attended by Negroes and whites in the Peabody.

Why then, should the Republican party, founded on freedom for Negroes, stoop to discrimination? This question was asked of GOP party leaders last week.

White ladies of the so-called New Guard Republicans and the Citizens for Eisenhower Group have been accused of setting up the separate conferences.

Said Lieut. George W. Lee, national as well as Tennessee Republican leader: "The Negro in the South has always been shut out of the Democratic party, so this new wave of lily-whitism in the South poses a battle ground for all Negroes to fight to keep from losing grounds gained in the Republican organization on precinct, county and state level, because it's a most valuable weapon for Negro Democrats to use to open the door of the Democratic party in the South."

MANY REPUBLICANS here saw the jim-crow workshop as a means of dealing around Mrs. Evelyn Stuart, chairman of the women's group. Mrs. Stuart is president of one of the three women's organizations in Tennessee chartered by the Republican women's group of the Republican National Committee

Credited for helping make a failure out of the jim-crow workshop goes to a committee of women headed by Mrs. Stuart, Mrs. Patsy Keyes, chairman of the Fifty-first Ward, and Mrs. Dan Fields, secretary of the Sixty-first Ward. These ladies contend that "the approach of their white sisters was wrong and that their explanation that they could not meet with Negroes at the Peabody Hotel was also wrong."

President Praises Role Of Women In America

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON — (ANP)—President Eisenhower last week expressed his gratitude to the women of this country who cast 52 per cent of the votes responsible for the election of this Republican administration.

Speaking at the luncheon given at the Statler hotel by the Republican Central Committee Conference, the President praised women for the seriousness with they manifest in their jobs. Women, he said, are great workers with undaunted determination and business energy.

He charged women of this country with the responsibility of carrying out the ideals in which America believes. Only by so doing, he said are we going to be safe in a free and prosperous world.

THREE DAY CONFAB

The luncheon climaxed a three-day conference sponsored by the Women's Division of the Republican National Committee in celebration of the 100th anniversary of th eRepublican party.

More than 1,000 women, including a number of Negroes, attended the conference from all sections of the country. Mrs. Jane Morrow Spaulding, of the War Claims Commission, and Miss Roberta Church of the Department of Labor shared the guest table at the luncheon along with the President and Mrs. Eisenhower; Mrs. Richard Nixon, wife of the vice president; wives of cabinet members and others outstanding Republican women.

PARTY'S FUTURE

In addressing the luncheon meeting,, Mrs. Alice K. Leopold, director of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, reminded these Republican women leaders that their group composes "The key to your party's future."

Perhaps the greatest single asset the country possesses, she said, is the effective emotional and intellectual arsenals with all kinds of light and heavy ordnance for the major battle ahead. She urged them, therefore, to boldly face the job of interpreting the policy of their party and persuading voters to support this policy this fall.

BOLD LETTERS

This, she warned, is their responsibility since they have been "chosen by destiny to serve as a kind of historical marker on the road of human progress—a signpost indicating in bold letters where women stand today."

In outlining the role which women have played in Republican politics from the very beginning of this party, she pointed to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," an historical novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe, as perhaps being of great importance in the organization of the party.

Mrs. Stowe, she said, was the wife of an absent-minded husband and the mother of several small children. She was badly in need for some extra money so she turned to writing, one of the few ways that the women in those days had to earn money.

She named a few other early leaders who contributed much to the advancement of the party such as Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Blackwell, Antoinette Brown Blackwell and Clara Barton.

Among the Negro women delegates attending the centennial celebration were Mrs. Maggie Gaines and Mrs. Hattie Green of Atlanta; Mrs. Fred Bowers, Mrs. Gussie Bradley and Mrs. Ethel Thompson of Dayton and Mrs. Edna P. Coleman of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Evelyn Reynolds of Philadelphia and Mrs Fannie E. Lee of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mrs. William Groves of Detroit; Mrs. Adam Cambrell, and Mrs. Lola Lee of Memphis; and Mrs. Ida Taylor and Mrs. Isadore Litcher of the District of Columbia.

More than 20 years—

GOP says Hill, Sparkman led in delayina civil rights

BY JAMES FREE
News Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 9 — The Republican National Committee would be well advised to keep its news releases on racial segregation out of Alabma until after the November general election.

Certainly they won't be much help to GOP candidates—particularly those who have charged that Sen. John Sparkman, Alabama has not been a strong enemy of civil rights bills.

In a recent release GOP National Committee pointed with pride to the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

BLAMING THE Democrats for preventing "real civil rights progress for 20 years," the Republican committee's release listed seven "significant" accomplishments of the Eisenhower administration:

1. Abolition of segregation at Army post schools by executive order.
2. Outlawing segregation in public restaurants and ending "discrimination" in employment on federal service contracts in the District of Columbia.
3. Ending segregation in Navy installations in the South.
4. Banning racial discrimination on federal contract jobs.
5. Ending segregation in major Veterans Administration hospitals in the South.
6. Abolition of segregation in recreation facilities in the District of Columbia the day after the court decision.
7. Appointment of 45 Negroes to high positions in the federal government.

AS PROOF of the claim that Democrats have blocked civil rights bills for more than 20 years, the GOP release cited a 1950 statement of Sen. Lister Hill of Alabama.

Said Hill: "It is the power and influence of your senators and congressmen that have made possible the defeat of FEPC and other so-called civil rights bills. They hold this power and influence as members of the Democratic Party.

"The Republican Party brought the civil rights bills into being, and today the Republican leader in the House and the Republican leader in the Senate proclaim the Republican Party's solemn commitment to these bills."

To this, the GOP subscdibes. And, it adds: "Times haven't changed."

THE RELEASE also quoted without challenge, these 1950 words of Sen. Sparkman:

"I am against the civil rights proposals—always have been and always will be . . . As long as we can operate as Democrats—on the inside—there will not be any such legislation."

The Republican National Committee release said that the GOP—"in contrast to the Sparkman-Hill line"—"is still the party of human freedoms, civil rights and the 'climate of equality.'"

Mississippi Negro Group Seeking to Name Party

'Black and Tan' Leaders File Application

(The Times-Picayune Capital Bureau)

JACKSON, Miss., June 4 — Leaders of the "Black and Tan" Republican faction in Mississipp have filed an application with Secretary of State Heber Ladner to register the "Mississippi Black and Tan Grand Old Party" as a state political party.

The application was filed with Ladner under the state's 1950 party registration act which forbids the use of a party name by more than one group.

The "Black and Tan" organization, traditionally headed by Perry Howard, Negro attorney of Jackson and Washington, D. C., have been barred from use of the Republican name since a rival all-white party group became the first to register under the 1950 law.

In filing the application for registration, the "Black and Tan" group called themselves the successors to the Republican party of Mississippi formed in 1872.

The all-white Republican faction had been organized in 1924 by George Sheldon, one-time governor of Nebraska, who lives at Clinton, Miss. Present chairman of the group is Nelson Taylor, Greenwood.

The Howard faction had filed a suit in the state courts contesting the 1950 law and the registration of the rival white faction, but after winning in the lower court, they were reversed in the state supreme court and later the United States supreme court upheld the state high court. In a subsequent action, however, the Howard group won an action ordering the secretary of state to register them as a party organization, but the ruling by the federal court did not direct that they be given the name "Republican."

Chairman of the "Black and Tan" group which filed the application with Secretary Ladner is S. W. Miller, Jackson Negro contractor. L. B. Patton, Carlisle, was listed as secretary and Howard as national committeeman.

Members of the party executive committee were listed as: W. J. Box, Corinth; G. H. Murphrey, Aberdeen; C. V. Murphey, Winona; W. B. Smith, Vaiden; Dr. T. L. Zuber, West Point; F. S. O'Shea, Charleston; F. H. Miller and C. A. Johnson, both of Mound Bayou; J. C. Gilliam, Clarksdale.

Others are C. D. Parker, Lawrence; E. F. Shanks Sr., Taylorsville; Rev. T. C. R. Brown, Meridian; Rev. G. C. Wells, Hattiesburg, and Dr. H. L. Brown and L. T. Ellis, both of Laurel.

Black and Tan GOPers seeking recognition under new name

JACKSON, Miss., June 5—(AP)—"Black and Tan" Republicans, defeated in their move to be the official Republican Party of Mississippi, applied for recognition as the "Mississippi Black and Tan Grand Old Party."

The group, mostly Negroes, filed their petition with Secretary of State Heber Ladner Friday. He will submit the petition to Atty. Gen. J. P. Coleman for a routine check before registering the party under Mississippi's Political Party Registration Act of 1950.

The Black and Tans headed by Negro Atty. Perry Howard of Jackson and Washington, D. C., picked their new name after the "Lily Whites" won a court fight to be known as the Mississippi Republican Party.

The Lily Whites beat the Black and Tans to the Secretary of State's office in 1950 and registered first. The law gives the first group to register exclusive right to use a party name.

S. W. Miller, Negro contractor of Jackson, is chairman of the Black and Tan GOP, which includes some whites. L. B. Patton of Carlisle is party secretary. Howard is the group's national committeeman.

THE BLACK AND TAN group has been recognized consistently by the National Republican Party.

The Lily Whites, all-white Republican group, were formed in 1924 by George L. Sheldon of Clinton, former governor of Nebraska.

TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

There is in Washington at present a colored leader who is welding more influence with the "powers that be" now occupying the seats of the mighty in government than the whole kit and caboodle of Negro Democrats during the Roosevelt-Truman regime.

The man is Val. J. Washington, assistant to the Chairman of the Republican National Committee. It is the result of Mr. Washington's leadership, spelled out in the unprecedented advance of Negroes in being accorded their civil rights which his race should be glad to point to with pride. The New-Fair Dealers were a tribe who specialized in getting themselves written up for the alleged success they were having in casting Southen Democrats into the outer darkness and building a new CIO-PAC sponsored Democrat Party.

They also bragged about how they even had gone Down South and put the Negro masses by wholesale into the Democrat party of the region and therefore were making Southern Democrats "yes-men" of the conglomeration Up North called the "Americans for Democrat Action."

But Mr. Washington took the Republican torch that fell from the hands of Oscar DePriest, Roscoe Simmons and "Bob" Church, helped mightily in the election of Gen. Eisenhower for president and, when he easily could have gotten for himself a soft Federal job in Washington, refused to take one, preferring to retain his post as an advisor to the Republican leaders.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Washington lent his influence in the decision of the GOP leaders not to walk into a Democrat "bear trap" by trying to get the Eisenhower administration to waste time and the taxpayers money in an effort to get laws of doubtful constitutionality passed in the face of a certain Democrat filibuster.

A tremendous amount of legislation of benefit to the American people of all classes and races has been enacted by the 83rd Congress. Practically none of it would have been enacted had the Republicans tried to pass the civil rights legislation" that Negro Democrat lobbyists clamored for during the recent session of congress.

Back during the Truman regime, Negro Democrats were loud in their claim that the "President's Civil Rights Program" was the greatest document that had been issued in Washington since Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. That was a silly pronouncement because the proclamation announcing the enactment of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution, was even greater than Lincoln's Proclamation. And as far as the Truman "Civil Rights Program" was concerned it was mere froth, foalm and false pretense which made Negroes who fell for it fit subjects to have their heads examined.

In other words, there was nothing in the "program" which could not be vouchsafed to the people by a courageous enforcement of the 14th Amendment.

Eisenhower has been and IS NOW enforcing the 14th Amendment, whereas under FDR and Truman little or nothing was done to challenge the nation to enforce laws already on the books, but on the other hand the New-Fair Dealers tired constantly to intrigue us with promises of something FREE or NEW.

Maybe the great host of colored brethren and sisters who followed Stevenson and Sparkman to the LEFT while the nation was going RIGHT, with Eisenhower, Nixon and Val J. Washington, learned a good lesson and maybe not.

PROOF OF FRUSTRATION

Sound thinking colored leaders of the South are quite aware of what it is that makes the most "outspoken" colored leaders Up North tick so disagreeably. It is something the psychologists call "frustration."

Yes, the outspoken brethren Up North have frustration—but bad. And that being so, left-wing whites Up North can use them to their own satisfaction.

For instance, one of the brethren Up North, well known for his facination for, and participation in, left-wing projects was on the air recently and took time to warn "his white folk" to keep an eye on Southern Negroes who have a "vested interest in segregation."

This wild statement was a clear demonstration of the fact the brother is frustrated and therefore is "usable" for whatever job lift-wingers wnat to concoct to create a disturbance in the South, at a time when its best people are moving in to do a masterful job of bringing about an orderly transition from the harsh way of life under general segregation to a happier condition for all concerned.

Of a necessity this transition must be gradual, because it is going to be a new and permanent way of life Down South. And the very best way to hasten the transition is for our thoughtful men and women to accept as their responsibility leadership in the cause of better race relationships, based upon the teachings of Christ.

Despite the charge that colored folk Down South have a vested interest in segregation, it is a fact that it has been these same persons who not only have prayed for a better way of life for themselves and their children, but who also have contributed more substantially from what they have accumulated in a segregated society to the projects the Northern brethren have launched to emancipate themselves and us.

We are unashamed of the institutions and movements we have launched and nurtured in a segregated society. We are unashamed of what the rugged individualists of the Negro race achieved in a segregated society—including our insurance companies, our lodges, our publishing houses, banks, schools and churches. It is what we have done in keeping these institutions alive in a segregated society that gives Negroes North and South whatever they have of a just claim to a place in an integrated society. It is that material progress and not more dependence upon the "thrilling phrases Thomas Jefferson put into the Declaration of Independence.

If we seem to annoy our brethren because we are not making haste to neglect our own institutions out of fear of being smeared for having a "vested interest in segregation" we can tell them we have an abiding faith in the teaching of Holy Writ which says:

"Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good."

We also know that frustrated brethren Up North have just as much of a vested interest in their own segregated way of life as we have in ours Down South. Verily, it is because they see so much more than we have done to win acceptance into the promised new way of life for the nation than they have done under more favorable opportunities for material achievement, that we accept the smear of having a "vested interest" in segregation as no more than proof that out of the mouths of the frustrated come the very words which prove they "are just that."

Ike Demonstrates For Elks An "Abiding Faith" In Youth

BY CHARLES W. HAIRGROW

THE WHITE HOUSE — WASHINGTON — (SNS) — Dwight David Eisenhower, President of the United States, demonstrated here at the executive mansion yesterday, an "abiding and everlasting faith" in American youth, and strongly urged that America do the same.

The President, expressed deep gratitude and definite concern over the "tremendous job" that American youth is doing and went on to make a long extensive inquiry into the progress and problems of Negro youth in America.

George W. Lee, of Memphis, Tennessee, Elks Grand Commissioner of Education, prominent Negro Republican leader, told Mr. Eisenhower following inquiry addressed to him, that his department had to date given over 780 University scholarships to deserving young Negro men and women, and also stated that a fund of one million, two hundred thousand dollars raised for the express purpose of financing an extensive educational program for Negro youth, was near exhaustion.

ORATORY AWARD

The occasion at the White House with over 18 prominent Elks in attendance was the presentation of a white Morroco bound copy of his winning address; "the Negro and the constitution.' by Huey Shepard of Long Beach, California, the manifested eloquence of presentation and composition by Shepard at the Elks National Convention in Atlanta last August won for him a four year sholarship, with all expenses paid to any college or University of his choice, and subsequently a trip to the White House.

Refusing to call any name, the President told Lee that he had a colored friend, a graduate of the University of California, who had done "a remarkable job" with the Educational aspect of Negro Culture. Lt. Lee told the President that the Elks had students on scholarships, in some thirty colleges and Universities across the nation, to which Ike stated emphatically, "is that so." President Eisenhower then asked the Educational Commissioner, how many Negro Elks there were in America today, to which a reply of "over 700,000" was given.

INTERESTED IN WORK

Lifting his head, slightly, tilting one eyebrow, and addressing the other members of the delegation, the President then wanted to know more about the work and structure of the Negro Elks and especially the Department of Education.

The Grand Commissioner of Education, for whom Candidate Eisenhower not too long ago stopped a two mile long parade, proceeding through the streets of downtown Memphis, Tenn to greet and consult, then told his old friend that wherever he found American youth, struggling for survival, to be free, for an equal education, and consequently an equal chance in life. Regardless of color of skin, texture of hair, or previous conditions of servitude, they would try to help him.

He went on to tell him about the male student that he had on an education diet at his home State University, the University of Kansas, Ike became amused and broke out in smiles.

Tired and bored with the whole affair, Gilda Hatti Lee, 10- year old daughter of the Commissioner, soon turned the magnanimous dignity of this occasion into one of hilarity and eventually stole the show away from the Elks.

While the President and her daddy were discussing the future of tomorrows leaders, she stood by, frequently casting an admiring glance at her nations President.

Finally not being able to resist the unpretensive charms of this little girl any longer, Ike bent down to shake her hand, and with one arm around her waist, cordially welcomed her to the White House.

Griffing affectionally, Hilda and the President conversed below desk level for almost two minutes. Representing the student of tomorrow, she presented Ike with a copy of her schools yearbook, St. Augustine High in Memphis, Tenn.

In presentation of his epitac to the President, Shepard firmly gripped the Chief Executives hand and told him in a voice choked with emotion, "it is the thrill of a lifetime to meet you, Mr. President," His reply was,. "The very best of luck to you, Lt. Lee, exalted Ruler Johnson, and the Elks, may God bless you all, and thanks for coming."

Members of the official party who saw the President included; Robert H. Johnson, Grand Exalted Ruler; Mrs. Netti Carter Jackson, Grand Daughter Ruler, Bill Houston, Grand Secretary; Pearl Brown, Grand Treasurer; Ethyl Mae Charleston, Grand Directress of Education, Mrs. Findley Wilson, wife of former Grand Exalted Ruler, Findley Wilson; (deceased) Mrs. Emma Turner, Grand Registrar; Miss Anna Belle Reid, Assistant Grand Daughter Ruler, Rosetta Jordan, Assistant Grand Daughter Ruler, Hobson Reynolds, Grand Commissioner of Civil ;Liberties; Judge Perry B. Jackson, Grand Treasurer; Perry Howard, Grand Legal Advisor; Dr. J. B. Martin, Grand Director of Athletics; Dr. H. W Hunter, Assistant Grand Commissioner of Education; Lt. Lee, Ernest H. Copeland, representing the ranks, Charles P .McClane, Grand Director of Publicity; and Herbert Jones, Grand Organizer.

State GOP Taps Abernethy For Governor, Goes On Record In Favor Of Segregation

BIRMINGHAM, May 23 (AP) — Alabama Republicans today pledged a finish fight for a full slate of state offices next November and advocated the use of "all legal means" to keep segregation.

The platform, adopted without debate or a record vote at the state convention, included this plank:

"We favor and advocate all legal means calculated to maintain and preserve our southern customs and institutions and the traditional rights of the individual states."

This was an obvious reference to the U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

Tom Abernethy, 46-year-old editor of the Talladega Daily Home, was nominated for governor to oppose former Gov. James E. Folsom, Democratic nominee, in the November election.

Abernethy, son of a Methodist minister, is a former States Rights Democrat. He resigned from the State Democratic Executive committee in 1952 to campaign for Eisenhower. Four years previously he had supported the States Rights ticket for President.

J. Foy Guin Jr., 30, of Russellville was nominated for the U.S. Senate, to oppose incumbent John Sparkman, who was the 1952 Democratic nominee for vice president.

Abernethy, in a brief acceptance speech, promised a hard fight for the office of governor

"The shackles of one-party government in Alabama must be broken for all time," he said. "We will fight all the way. The end next November will be the greatest political upheaval in southern history."

Other Republican nominees for state offices were:

Lt. Gov. — William E. Brooks Jr., Brewton; atty. gen. — Max J. Howard, Fort Payne; secretary of state — Mrs. Kathleen Putnam, Birmingham; state treasurer — Mrs. Ethlyn Isbell Rainey, Gadsden; supt. of education — Fred Allen, Calera; commissioner of agriculture — O. H. Aycock, Russellville; state auditor — Reuben Dollar, Douglas Springs; public service commission — Charles H. Hembree, Mobile, and Supreme Court No. 3 — Milton H. Lanier, Huntsville.

The 565 delegates to the state convention re-elected all state party officials with Claude O. Vardaman of Birmingham remaining as state chairman.

J. Foy Guin Sr., Russellville, was named vice chairman and O. P. Drake, Haleyville, secretary-treasurer. In addition, W. L. Longshore of Birmingham was chosen second vice chairman, a new office.

Vardaman made what he called "an interim speech," given while committees were outside the convention hall to nominate a slate of candidates and officers and to suggest a party platform.

He said the "plundering plutocrats of the Potomac" now have become the "gloom and doom boys" who hope to "ride back into power on the misery of the American people through a depression."

Ike Accents Liberal Human Relationships

BY ROBERT E. CLARK

WASHINGTON — (INS) — President Eisenhower drew a sharp line between his administration's philosophy and that of the new deal and said he seeks to be "liberal" in human relationships but "conservative" in economic affairs.

The Chief Executive authorized direct quotation of his News Conference statement defining his philosophy of government, which was as follws:

"When it comes down to dealing with the relationships between the human in this country and his government, the people in this administration believe in being what I think we would normally call liberal, and when we deal with the economic affairs of this country, we believe in being conservative."

The President's statement came when a newsman said: "Some people have characterized your legislative program as an extension of the New Deal. I think former President Truman is one that has one that."

"LOOK AT BUDGET"

Mr. Eisenhower replied that the best comment on that is to take a look at the budget he has submitted to Congress. He said that while previous administrations were plunging the country increasingly into debt, he was trying to reduce government expenditures and go the other way.

He then defined his Administration's basic philosophy.

Other News Conference highlights:

1. Mr. Eisenhower said he was so disturbed when he read of the arrest of Cpl. Edward S. Dickenson that he immediately called Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson. He added that Wilson will see to it that no injustice is done the young GI who changed his mind about staying with the communists.

2. He declared he fully supported the Army's action in ordering dishonorable discharge for the 21 U. S. soldiers who cast their lot with the Reds.

"HONORABLE" DISCHARGES

3. The President agreed to consider a proposal that some kind of honorable discharge certificates be given government employes leaving under normal conditions, so they would have proof they were not fired as security risks.

4. Mr. Eisenhower said he has decided against renewing his request for a "freeze" in the Social Security tax rate in view of the broadened Old-Age Insurance coverage he has recommended to Congress.

5. He said Rep. Robert L. Condon (D) Calif., accused of once attending a "closed Communist meeting" and barred from witnessing atomic tests, should be given every chance to clear himself.

CONFIDENCE IN DULLES

6 The President expressed utmost confidence that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will carry out the policies of the United States in the Big Four Meeting at Berlin, on Red China and other East-West issues.

7. In response to questions, Mr. Eisenhower observed that all he knows about prospects for a compromise on the controversial Bricker Amendment to limit Presidential Treaty-making powers is what he reads in the newspapers.

8. With some heat, the Chief Executive denied that his felixible farm price support program is a departure from his campaign pledges, and insisted that he never promised to continue present 90 per cent price supports indefinitely.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN IN CONFERENCE HERE. — A conference of Republican women of Missouri was held here last Thursday, May 13, upon the occasion of the visit to the state of Mrs. Ruth Caston Mueller, assistant to the director of the women's division of the Republican National committee. The conference was held in the office of Rep. Jeffrey Hillelson in the federal courts building at 811 Grand Ave. Shown here with Mrs. Mueller, center, are Mrs. Leona H. Pouncey, left, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for magistrate in the third district and Mrs. L. C. Davis, of Boonville, Mo., right, candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman from the 11th district. Mrs. Mueller came to the state to be the banquet speaker at the National Pan-Hellenic Council meeting in St. Louis May 7 and 8 and filled speaking engagements in Sedalia, Columbia and Boonville.

Negro Congressman Cites Race Gains Under Ike

PLEASANTVILLE, N. Y.—"With out political trumpeting, President Eisenhower has quietly started a revolution which, I firmly believe, means an era of greater promise for Negro citizens," declares Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., of New York, a Negro and a Democrat writing in the October Reader's Digest. Dr. Powell is also Minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in New York the largest Baptist Church in the world.

"Like many Negroes," Powell writes, "I feared Eisenhower's election meant a setback in the struggle for fairer treatment and equal opportunities for our people. I was wrong."

Powell states that the example set by the President began in the White House when he installed Mrs. Lois Lippman as the first Negro secretary—not for reasons of politics but because Mrs. Lippman's capabilities were known. No Negro had previously been employed in the White House except as messenger or janitor.

Similarly, no political capital was made of the President's appointment of 47 Negroes to important posts, 27 of which had always been held by whites. Eisenhower's naming of J. Ernest Wilkins as Assistant Secretary of Labor marked the first "Little Cabinet" status for a Negro since the Taft administration. Scovel Richardson became the first Negro in the post of Federal Parole Commissioner.

Eisenhower has kept his campaign promise to work against segregation in the District of Columbia, Powell says. Segregation has been ended in Washington's restaurants and bars, including those in hotel, and some hotels follow "a more liberal policy" in rental of rooms. Jim Crowism has been wiped out in the city's recreational areas and big movie houses. In The District's public-housing agecy has ordered that the 400 dwellings to be constructed with federal aid be made available to low-income families without discrimination as to race.

Under Eisenhower's administration, segregation in the Armed Forces has been almost eliminated. Not a single all-Negro unit exists in the Army today, though many were still intact when Eisenhower took office. At southern Naval bases, signs reading "White Only" and "Colored" have been removed in cafeterias and rest rooms. In 21 naval plants employing 70,000 whites and Negroes, segregation is only a memory.

Negroes are now treated at previously all-white hospitals of the Veterans' Administration. At 47 VA hospitals the practice of separating the races at snack bars, in libraries and recreation rooms have vanished.

Though he is a Democrat, Rep. Powell declares his conviction that Eisenhower is proving to be "a President of all the people."

The big metropolis on Lake Erie is the seat of Cuyahoga County and the prize to be captured by politicians especially in a gubernatorial or senatorial race for without the huge vote of Cleveland as one leader put it: "You're a dead pigeon."

This industrial center has a polyglot flavor and like many other cities, its population was swollen during the war to the bursting point. It has one of the largest foreign born and Negro populations in the country. Though it is rated as a liberal town, it has its tensions.

It is the stronghold of the Democratic party in a Republican state. This year's election outcome is anybody's guess. Particularly unpredictable is the huge Negro vote. It is safe to say, however, that among Negroes there seems to be an edge for the Democrats.

Since the Negro vote totals about 50,000, we ought to take a look at the Bender-Burke campaign for the seat held so long by the late Sen. Robert Taft.

Sen. Thomas A. Burke, who was appointed by Gov. Frank Lausche to fill the vacancy when Sen. Taft died, is the Democratic candidate. He was formerly the mayor of Cleveland.

Privately his supporters worry about his lack of political sex appeal, but they are counting on his record as a good mayor. That record as far as Negroes go, is challenged by some leaders as being tepid or just barely lukewarm. Questioned about this, one person shrugged his shoulders. "Well he hasn't done anything against us, but what has he done for us?"

The attitude of Negro party leaders is "we'll go along," but there is not much enthusiasm.

Opposing Burke is bouncing George Bender a flamboyant boisterous extrovert who has lately tried to Emily Post his behavior at the advice of his associates.

A congressman for 18 years, Bender is widely known throughout the state and has the blessings of the administration.

His record on civil rights is good. However, there is doubt as to whether he can win in the Negro districts.

Cleveland has a crop of brilliant able Negro leaders in both parties. It also has four Negro city council members. And it has an influential good newspaper, the Call Post.

Wards, 11, 12, 17, and 18 are predominantly Negro but there are also strong segments in the 24th, the 25th which is about half and half, the 16th, and the 10th.

Representing the 11th ward is Mrs. Jean Capers. A small, good-looking woman, with intense drive. Jean plays the tough game of politics with the same cool skill she used to become a champion tennis player.

Jean Caper's power extends outside of her immediate balliwick by virtue of her control of the County Women's Democratic organization. Its endorsement is eagerly sought by candidates and woe betide the one who runs a-foul of it.

Only recently, Jean and County Chairman Ray Miller made their peace after a running feud. Miller bucked the Capers machine and found the truth of an old adage. "Never underestimate the power of a woman."

Theodore Williams, an able Cleveland lawyer, won the election for councilman of the 12th ward after Herman Finkel, who had held the post for 37 years died. The ward was formerly Jewish.

Williams is a native of Cleveland. He has been active in politics since 1938. He was assistant city prosecutor for six years and as assistant county prosecutor for five years. A conscientious party worker, Democrat Williams is expected to carry his ward for Burke.

Smooth-skinned graying Charles V. Carr is the councilman of the 17th ward with a 50,000 population and 22,000 registered voters. Carr has been a ward leader for 16 years and knows his district like the back of his hand.

Young John W. Kellogg the Republican leader of the 18th ward, is a comparative newcomer to politics. He graduated from Western Reserve university Law School in 1948, entered politics for the first time in 1951 and won easily. His ward is one of the best GOP in the city. It does not have the problems of overcrowding and poor housing as the other wards do.

You cannot size Cleveland up without mentioning Judge Perry B. Jackson. A member of the Municipal Court bench, he is running for judge of the Common Pleas Court on the Republican ticket.

He has the respect and admiration of leaders of both parties. A quiet, hard-working small, gray-haired man, he is a tireless supporter in civic, fraternal, and church organizations and has a wife, who is as well known as he is for graciousness.

President of the state-wide Federation of Democratic Organizations is John Holley, a Clevelander, best known for his Future Outlook League, a movement which gained popular appeal in depression days.

An influence in politics is William T. McKnight a lawyer, who worked closely with Kefauver in 1952 and is a close friend of Louis Seltzer, editor of the powerful Cleveland Press. Seltzer is said to call the tune for the fiddler.

Lone Negro member of the Cleveland Civil Service Commission is Claiborne George, a Republican.

Prominent religious leaders include Rev. Wade H. McKinney, pastor of Antioch Baptist church and Rev. Hubert N. Robinson, pastor of St. James AME church.

Florida Republicans Gaining Steadily in Party Strength

Registrations in Miami Area Doubled Over 1952 Figure

By CHARLES HESSER

Staff Writer, The Miami Daily News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

MIAMI, Fla., April 24—The Republicans have made a big gain in party strength in Florida since the 1952 elections, and although they are still far outnumbered by the Democrats, they are encouraged over their progress.

The state has 1,335,000 voters registered for this May's primaries, 122,000 more than were signed up for the primaries two years ago.

Of this number, 1,197,000 are Democrats and 131,000 are Republicans. The remainder are independents, prohibitionists and other minority party members.

Democrats Gain, Too

This represents a gain of 43,000 for the Republicans the past two years, but during the same period the Democrats were adding 78,000 to their rolls.

The Republicans have made their most notable gains in the big population centers.

As an example, in Dade County (Miami), the state's largest voting area, there are 256,000 Democrats and 33,000 Republicans. This compares to 217,000 Democrats and 15,000 Republicans registered for the 1952 primaries.

The other extreme is little Glades County, with 1,041 Democrats and just two Republicans.

Herbert Hoover carried Florida for the Republicans in 1928, just as Dwight Eisenhower did in 1952. But the GOP claims the similarity ends here.

Lagged After 1928

Following Hoover's victory in Florida, state GOP leaders did little or nothing to consolidate their gains. They passed out patronage jobs, but permitted the registration books to gather dust down through the years.

It took Eisenhower to rekindle the party embers.

And although the "Eisenhower" Republicans have resembled their brothers of yesteryear in that they squabbled over patronage, they have worked at building party strength.

The rivalry of two GOP factions in the state may actually act as a spur in making a stronger party—building it from the precinct level up. This rivalry has resulted in the biggest number of candidates qualifying for committeemen and women posts in state GOP history.

More than 2,000 Republicans are seeking these party offices. This is 10 times the number that qualified in 1950, when the last election was held for committeemen and women.

G. Harold Alexander, chairman of the GOP state executive committee, reports "the Republican party in Florida has shown the largest gain percentagewise of any state in the Union."

State Vote Low

But, at the same time he warns party members against a repetition of the 1952 GOP primary, when only 16,000 votes were cast for the two gubernatorial candidates.

"The small number of Republicans voting in the primary two years ago was a disgrace," declares Alexander. "Many of the opposition Democratic newspapers enjoyed a Roman holiday at the expense of the Republican Party. Another vote such as that certainly won't encourage anyone to become a Republican."

FLORIDA

But Florida Republicans aren't expecting another such debacle at the polls and are already looking to the general election in November.

A centennial celebration in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Republican party at Ripon, Wis., in 1854 is being planned for the summer.

'Name' Speakers

The Republican National Committee, according to Alexander, has promised to cooperate in staging the centennial by sending in "big name" speakers.

National party leaders already assigned to beat the drums for the GOP in Florida include Mrs. Katherine Howard, deputy administrator, Federal Civil Defense Administration; Scott McLeod, administrator, Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs of the Department of State; James H. Smith, assistant secretary of the Navy; Val Peterson, Federal Civil Defense Administrator, and James H. Smith, assistant secretary of the Navy.

Florida Republicans are confident they will capture one congressional post and possibly two in the general election; they hope to gain additional seats in the state legislature—they now hold six; they believe they can win more county posts, but they realize they have no chance to win the governorship.

Both of the GOP candidates for governor previously sought office on the Democratic ticket.

Long-range Republican plans call for the party to contest for all state offices and most county posts in the 1956 elections. But one thing is certain, they'll first have to do something about little Glades County, with its 1,041 Democrats and two Republicans.

GOP women peeved over confab slight

By JAMES L. HICKS

WASHINGTON

The majority of the 40 colored GOP women leaders from 11 states and the District of Columbia who attended the Republican Centennial Conference, left this city Thursday keenly disgruntled.

They were disappointed over the failure of their party to give their groups adequate participation in the three-day activities.

The centennial which was called to mark the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Republican Party and to discuss issues and techniques for the 1954 campaign, featured GOP speakers ranging from President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles to "grass roots" speakers from the hinterland.

Mere Song And Prayer

But colored participation in the three days was limited to a vocalist, who sang the "Star Spangled Banner," a minister who gave an invocation, and the seating of two colored women on the dais when the President spoke.

Most colored women attending the conference went into a slow burn when they noted the lack of any colored speaker on the official program.

The AFRO queried 21 of the women from out of town and asked this question: "What is your reaction to this conference?"

Nineteen of the women to whom the question was put, said in various ways: "I'm disappointed. Some colored person should have been allowed to have a speaking role somewhere in the conference."

Two of the women said they felt everything had been "just fine."

Twenty of the women asked specifically that their names not be used in answering the question.

Mrs. Napier Speaks Out

But dark eyed, attractive Mrs. Bernice N. Napier of Greenwich, Conn., not only gave the AFRO permission to quote her disapproval, but she flatly stated her disapproval to Mrs. Bertha S. Adkins, driving force behind the conference.

The fiery Mrs. Napier asked Mrs. Adkins why no colored leaders had appeared on the program.

Mrs. Adkins is said to have answered that efforts had been made to get a colored choral group to sing on the program but that this effort had failed.

She was reported as having told Mrs. Napier that she believed that certain forces were at work to make it diffucult to get colored people to appear on Republican programs.

She further pointed out that the majority of women appearing before the conference were state committee women and called attention to the few colored women at that level.

"Sick" Of Sterotype

Mrs. Napier told the AFRO that she didn't consider singing and praying as being key participation in such a conference. "Everyone expects us to come up singing or praying or eating' she said and "I'm sick and tired of it."

Her words were echoed by many others who asked that their names not be used. Some of the women cited the fact that the GOP has twice this year used blackface comedians as their principal colored representation, once in Connecticut and once in Washington, both times at Lincoln Box lunch suppers.

They said they felt certain that there were both men and women within their party who could have been far more informative in the workshops of the conference than some of the speakers who were heard. In this connection they cited such men as Valoris Washington, J. Ernest Wilkins, Joseph Ray, Lewis B. Toomer, Frederic Morrow and Archibald Carey.

Money Wasted

One woman said, "I paid my fare here, I paid $10 a day at the Statler for my room, and I paid $22 to register for this conference and what do I get? People not only fail to recognize that I'm here but they also fail to recognize the people I represent."

Some of the criticism by the women was levelled at Mrs. Ruth Mueller, a member of the GOP national staff in the women's division. The AFRO learned however, that Mrs. Mueller did not frame the program.

Mrs. Napier is known to also have called the matter to the attention of Valoris Washington, top colored member of the GOP party. Mr. Washington, however, did not advise the women on their program either.

The AFRO can report that 10 days before the conference an AFRO reporter asked Mrs. Adkins' office for information as to what colored people would appear on the official program. At that time the AFRO was told that efforts were being made to get a choral group, and a minister.

In Same Hotel

The conference itself followed a firm integrated pattern with all delegates living at the Statler and mixing freely with other women from all parts of the nation.

Among those present were:

Connecticut: Mrs. Bertha Ray, Mrs. Mabel Blakeley, and Mrs. Napier. District of Columbia: Isadora L. Blakely, attorney, and Mrs. Ida S. Taylor, Mrs. Margaret K. Nelson, Mrs. Mildred Carter and Mrs. Wesley Williams.

NEGRO VOTE GAINS EXPECTED BY G.O.P.

Leaders Assert Party Might Win Majority for First Time in 20 Years

WASHINGTON, April 10 (UP) —Republican campaign strategists said today that President Eisenhower had opened the way to win a majority of the Negro vote for the first time in twenty

Their statement was based on what they called "solid achievements" to improve the lot of Negroes during the first fifteen months of the Eisenhower Administration. They said the President has done more with less talk than his Democratic successors.

Politicians agree that the Democrats have won an overwhelming majority of the Negro vote since 1932. Prior to that the Republicans had a big edge.

Republican estimates indicate that the party got only about 32 or 33 per cent in the last two Presidential elections. They expect to get more than 50 per cent in this year's Congressional election and still larger share in the 1956 Presidential voting.

Hopes Put on Big Centers

The greatest gains are expected in cities like New York, Chicago, Detroit and similar centers where the Negro vote may gress in this year's electiont-A be big enough to increase the Republican margin in Congress in this year's election.

Party optimism is based principally on steps the leaders say President Eisenhower has taken to give Negroes "equality of opportunity." Among these they cite "outstanding appointments" of Negroes to Government jobs and "concrete steps" to eliminate discrimination in several fields where it could be done by executive order instead of legislation.

The patronage list includes appointment of Louis B. Toomer of Savannah, Ga., as Registrar of the Treasury; Joseph B. Kay of Louisville, assistant to the Federal Housing Administrator; Everett F. Morrow of Hackensack, N. J., legal consultant in the Commerce Department; Archie Alexander of Des Moines, governor of the Virgin Islands; J. Ernest Wilkins of Chicago, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Mrs. Lois Lipmann of New York, as the first Negro secretary in the White House.

Steps stressed to provide equal opportunity include:

¶Establishment of a Government Contracts Committee, headed by Vice President Richard M. Nixon, to obtain compliance with the non-discrimination clause in all Government contracts.

¶Executive orders and participation in court actions to end discrimination and segregation in the nation's capital.

¶Abolition of segregation in schools on military establishments, in Veterans Administration hospitals, in the recruiting of Navy stewards and in all facilities used by civilian employes at naval installations.

¶Justice Department arguments before the Supreme Court that segregation in public schools violates the Constitution.

Val Washington, Negro head of the Republican National Committee's special section on minorities activities, drew a contrast between the Eisenhower and earlier Democratic administrations.

Ike Urged To Appoint Negroes To U. S. Bench

NEW YORK, — President Dwight D. Eisenhower has been urged to give "careful and sympathetic consideration" to qualified Negroes in making future appointments to the federal courts.

Acting on instructions of the board of directors of the NAACP Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman and Walter White, executive secretary, wrote to the President on April 13 expressing the NAACP's "keen regret that none of several eminently qualified Negro attorneys were included in the nominations announced on April 7 to fill vacancies on the federal bench."

The letter, addressed jointly to the President and Attorney General Herbert Brownell, reiterated the NAACP policy against asking for political or other appointments for individuals."

Nevertheless, the association spokesmen told President Eisenhower and the Attorney General, the NAACP has consistently maintained that race should not be "a deterrentto the nomination of qualified persons to important posts."

The failure to include a single Negro appointee, the letter said was "particularly noticeable and regrettable in view of the precedents established by Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman in the appointment of qualified Negroes to the federal bench, such as Judge William H. Hastie to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Irvin Mollisor of the U. S. Customs Court, and Judge Herman E. Moore as District Judge for the Virgin Islands.

Copies of the letter were sent also to Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Rupublican National Committee and to Republican governors.

GOP Women To Play Big Role In Fall Congressional Elections

By ETHEL PAYNE

WASHINGTON — Republican women will play a major role in the off-year Fall Congressional elections.

At a nation-wide mobilization in Washington recently, President Eisenhower credited women with marshalling the biggest percentage of votes which led to his victory and said therefore that he was greatly indebted to them for it.

More than 3,000 women gathered at the Statler hotel for a three day session of seminars and panel discussions, pep talks and banquets climaxed by a pageant at the 100th anniversary of the Republican party.

The delegates were briefed on campaign strategy by top leaders in the party. Host to the confab was Miss Bertha Adkins, national committeewoman from Maryland and director of women's activities for the Republican National committee.

The slogan for the drive to increase the margin of Republican seats in both houses of Congress will be "Let's Talk About it," the Eisenhower record.

Party workers will concentrate on door to door canvassing of voters armed with literature of all types telling the story of the Eisenhower achievements.

Among the things stressed will be the ending of the Korean War; tax reductions, the Farm program, and economy in government spending. Included also is mention of appointments of Negroes under the Eisenhower administration.

Among the delegates were representatives from some 10 states. The Illinois group had Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, president of the National Association of Colored Women, Atty. Jewel Stradford Rogers, Miss Mamie Hansberry, Miss Maurice Hanshen, and Mrs. Minnett Roberts.

Mrs. Berenice Napper, Mrs. Bertha Ray and Mrs. Mabel Blakely came from Greenwich, Conn. Michigan was represented by Mrs. William Grobes of Detroit.

Ohio delegates listed Mrs. Ora Mae Pates, Mrs. Edna Coleman, Mrs. Fred Bowers, Mrs. Ethel Thompson, and Mrs. Gussie Bradley.

Mrs. George W. Booth was there from Topeka, Kan. Tennessee sent Mrs. Evelyn Stuart, Mrs. Edna Gambrell, Mrs. Lola Lee, Mrs. Idella McNichols, and Madame G. S. Morgan Young. From Atlanta came Mrs. Hattie Green and Mrs. Maggie Haines.

The New York group included Mrs. Maude Prichardson, Mrs. Sadie Williams, and Mrs. Juanita Lockhart. Pennsylvania stalwarts included Mrs. Hobson Reynolds, Mrs. Fannie Lee, and Mrs. Mayme Robinson.

Marylanders were Mrs. Pearl Hampton, Mrs. Violet Rideout, Mrs. Mollie Neal, and Mrs. Marian Boyce. The District of Columbia was represented by Mrs. Margaret Key Kelson, Mrs. Mildred Carter, and Mrs. Wesley Williams.

Also noted were Mrs. Isidore Letcher, Washington and Miss Jeannette Carter of the District, Mrs. Ida Taylor, D. C., and Mrs. William Pelham, D. C.

Plot To Kill Ike Told In Virginia

Unidentified Man Tells Plan To Police

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., May 9 (AP)—Police Superintendent A. G. Kendall said today police uncovered what may have been a plot against President Eisenhower's life while the President visited here today to place a wreath on the grave of Mary Ball Washington.

Kendall said a Negro man he described as being "reliable" came to police headquarters yesterday afternoon and told police he had been approached with plans to "knock the President off." Kendall declined to make public the man's name, since he said this might put him in danger.

Kendall said the man told police he had been in a restaurant yesterday morning when two men approached him and asked if he would like to make $500.

Said He Would Help

The man told police he answered that he would, and that he was taken outside to a car. He described the men as being either "awfully light-skinned Negroes or Puerto Ricans," Kendall said, and added that he had trouble understanding them because they spoke with accents.

Inside the car, the man said, the two showed him a .32-.20 caliber rifle with telescopic sights. Police quoted the man as saying he was told they wanted to "knock the President off," possibly from a roof top.

Plan Night Meeting

The man told police the two made plans to meet him at 11 p.m. last night to make final plans. Kendall quoted him as saying that he lost his nerve and didn't go to meet the other two men as scheduled. He was taken to Fredericksburg, where he was jailed in what Kendall called protective custody until the President's visit was over. Then he was released.

Kendall said extra precautions were taken during the President's short visit here today.

Toland, chairman of the membership committee, set the association's goal at 1,500 memberships. Mrs. S. P. Harris presided.

'Knock on Any Door' Is the Call

Tuskegee Civic Group Seeks 1,500 Members in '54 Drive

Courier P. 16 Pittsburgh, Pa.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — "Knock on any door" was the admonition to the solicitors Friday night, by Frank J. Toland, chairman of the membership committee of the Tuskegee Civic Association, as the workers made partial reports on the current membership drive.

The committee has set as a goal 1,500 old and new members during a twenty-day campaign that began Sunday, Jan. 10, and will close this Friday, Jan. 29.

The chairman urged each worker to "make telephone calls and knock on any door in Macon County in your effort to recruit at least fifteen members."

FRANK J. TOLAND

MR. TOLAND said further, "I am heartened by the early response to the 1954 membership drive of the Tuskegee Civic Association."

In listing the purposes of the association, C. G. Gomillion, the president, stated that "legalized segregation has been, and still is, a great barrier to the realization of civic democracy in the South" and that "the association is opposed to legalized segregation on the basis of race or color and is committed to working for its elimination."

Tuskegee citizens group opens membership drive

FRANK TOLAND

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —Frank J. Toland, chairman of the membership committee of the Tuskegee Civic association, last week told workers in its membership drive to "knock on any door."

The committee has set a goal of 1,500 new and old members during a 20-day campaign that began Sunday, Jan. 10 and will extend through Friday. Jan. 29.

Interracial Group

The Tuskegee Civic Association is a mass interracial organization serving all citizens of Macon county.

In listing the group's purpose, the president C. C. Gomillion, said, "The Association is opposed to legalized segregation on the basis of race or color, and is committed to working for its elimination."

Toland Urges Workers To Push Drive For New Members Here

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala — "Knock on any door," urged Frank T. Toland, chairman of the membership committee of the Tuskegee Civic Association, as he attempted to fire up the workers in the drive for 1500 members.

The vigorous 20-day campaign is scheduled to close Friday night, Jan. 29.

Mr. Toland also suggested that each worker "make telephone calls and knock on any door in Macon County in your effort to recruit at least 15 members." Mr. Toland said further, "I am heartened by the early response to the 1954 Membership Drive of the Tuskegee Civic Association. Some solicitors have already reported the signing up of a large number of old members and, what is of great significance, the signing of a number of new members. With this type of response in the early stages of the drive, we feel certain that our goal will be realized."

The Tuskegee Civic Association is a mass interracial organization, serving all citizens of Macon County. The Association has adopted an ambitious program for 1954, and a greatly increased membership is necessary to accomplish these objectives.

In listing the purposes of the Association, C. G. Gomillion, the President, stated that "Legalized segregation has been and still is a great barrier to the realization of civic democracy in the south," and that "the Association is opposed to legalized segregation on the basis of race or color, and is committed to working for its elimination." He listed among the objectives of the Association this year, the nomination of a quilified Negro for a position on the Macon County Board of Education; and working to get Negroes appointed to the Macon County Welfare Department and the Board of Health.

Tuskegee Civic Groups Praised By TCA Chairman

By W. P. MITCHELL

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —"Persons cannot afford to be a member of the Tuskegee Civic Association," were the open statement of Frank J. Toland, chairman of the TCA membership committee, as he outlined his plans to recruit 1,500 new and old members during a 20-day membership campaign.

Mr. Toland urged those present at the monthly meeting of the Tuskegee Civic Association, held at Washington Chapel AME Church Sunday, who were not among the 100 solicitors selected to bring at least 15 members, to pass on to him the names of persons who they knew who had indicated a desire to become affiliated with Tuskegee's largest organization.

"The rapid growth of the TCA within the last 3 years from 100 odd members to 1,170 during 1953 is evidence that there are many citizens who need only to be contacted for their dues," Toland said. "I think the annual increase membership for the TCA represents an increasing awareness of civic-mindedness among citizens of our group. This is a healthy sign, and it signifies success for the TCA as it seeks to reach its goal of 1,500 members for 1954. We not only need 1,500 or more members on the membership roll of the TCA, but we need above all the active participation.

Let's again look to the future —this year 1,500 or more members—the years ahead let's work to gain the membership of every citizen in Macon County who is interested in first-class citizenship for all—regradless of race, and who is likewise interested in the civic progress of Macon County."

Campaign Ends Jan. 29

Toland stated that the campaign will close Friday night, Jan. 29, 1954.

C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Association, and who spoke from the topic: "The Old Order Changeth," listed many accomplishments of the group in the areas of politics and some professional organizations. He urged the Community Welfare Committee of the Tuskegee Civic Association to work to have qualified Negroes appointed to the Macon County Welfare Department and the Macon County Board of Health. Gomillion asked qualified voters to be prepared to sign a petition supporting a Negro for the Macon County Board of Education in the event the local Democratic organization refuses Negroes on the regular ticket.

James A. Johnson, chairman of the Community Welfare Committee, presented petitions for property owners of each street in designated areas of Tuskegee which he asked them to sign that will make possible the paving of streets in these communities. He urged each worker to return the petition to him within a week in order that they might be turned over to the Tuskegee City Council immediately.

Tuskegee Civic Association To Close Field Drive Tonight

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Jan. 28—The 20-day Tuskegee Civic Association membership drive will come to a close tomorrow night, Jan. 29, when the 100 workers make a final tabulation in the TCA office.

The chairman, Frank J. Toland, is urging each worker to report at least 15 members in the 1,500-member goal. He stated that he does not intend to carry the campaign for new and old members beyond the Friday night deadline, and asked that each solicitor report promptly at 7:30 Friday night.

Toland said that the Tuskegee Civic Association's program is too full to spend more than the 20 days to recruit members. "It is my belief that every person in Macon County will have been touched by Friday night. If at the conclusion of the reporting it is revealed that some persons have been missed, then a small mopping-up squad will be put in the field to gather the loose ends," Toland said.

Many persons have exceeded their quota of 15 members. This fact was brought out in the interim reporting dates.

Tuskegee civic association near membership goal

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —The Tuskegee Civic association's membership campaign recently passed the 1,000-member mark, with 40 solicitors yet to report.

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Allen, who was top member-getter last year when she reported 81 members at the close of the 1953 campaign, exceeded this record by reporting 118 members Friday night. Frank J. Toland, membership committee chairman, was second best with 110 members.

Reports 50 Members

I. L. Guzman reported 50 members; Dr. Wallace Capel 38; Mrs. Della Sullins 37; W. P. Mitchell 31; Mrs. E. F. Flenney 29, and D. L. Beasley 27. Each of the 100 workers was asked to bring in 15 members for the goal of 1,500.

The Tuskegee Civic association is an interracial mass organization, devoted to the study and interpretation of local and national civic and political trends and problems.

C. G. Gomillion To Give Speech In Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., April 2 — The Macon County Progressive Democratic Committee will provide the program at the Tuskegee Civic Association gathering Sunday, April 4, when the TCA holds its April meeting.

C. G. Gomillion, who will make the discussion, announced that the subject will be "Political Issues in the May Primaries." The Macon County Progressive Democratic Committee is a unit of the Alabama Progressive Democratic Committee which is headed by Attorney A. D. Shores of Birmingham. The organization strives to weigh all political issues affecting the welfare of the citizenry, and makes appraisals of candidates offering for public office — passing its objective analysis on to the electorate.

The meeting Sunday will be of special importance to voters and citizens of Macon County. Mr. Gomillion expressed a desire to have all Social Studies and Political Science public school teachers in the county at this meeting, which will be held at Butler's Chapel AME Zion Church, beginning promptly at 3:30 p.m.

Gomillion called attention too to the fact that the TCA is holding its April meeting on the First Sunday instead of the Second Sunday in April. He stated that the meeting is scheduled one week earlier in order that it will not conflict with the Tuskegee Institute Founder's Day observance.

MRS. ELIZABETH T. ALLEN

Mrs. Allen Leads In TCA Contest

Tuskegee, Ala. Tues. 2-9-54

The Tuskegee Civic Association's membership campaign has soared past the 1,000-member mark, with 40 solicitors yet to report.

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Allen, who was top member-getter last year when she reported 81 members at the close of the 1953 campaign, has exceeded this record by reporting 118 members already this year. Mrs. Allen also topped the 1952 group of workers.

Frank J. Toland, chairman of the membership committee, was second best with 110 members. I. L. Guzman reported 50 members; Dr. Wallace Capel 38; Mrs. Della Sullins 37; W. P. Mitchell 31; Mrs. E. F. Flennoy 29 and D. L. Beasley 27. Each of the 100 workers was asked to bring in 15 members in the effort to get 1,500 memberships.

The chairman is asking the solicitors who have not reported to continue to get members, and to make their report at Greenwood Baptist Church Feb. 14, at which time the TCA will observe Race Relations Sunday. Mr. E. Harold Mason, of San Francisco, Calif., will be the guest speaker at this observance.

In commenting on the successful campaign, Mr. Toland, the chairman, said: "I was confident from the beginning that we could get at least 1,500 persons to join this very worthwhile organization, and while we have not quite achieved this end, I am certain that when the 40 odd solicitors make their reports, this goal will have been attained."

Suspended teacher ready for 'test' on convictions

Afro-American

Baltimore

PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Goldie E. Watson, Wednesday, stated that her citation for contempt of Congress in the current Communist investigation was in line with her expectations.

The suspended public school teacher went on to say:

"I realized that the normal procedures would be taken. I didn't go into this with any idea that the regular processes would not be followed. I knew this would be a test, and I am ready for the test.

"My firm conviction is that my rights of free speech, assembly and association, as guaranteed by the 1st Amendmentl were violated."

Appeared Feb. 17

Mrs. Watson's citation by unanimous vote in the House of Representatives Tuesday was the result of her refusal to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee on Feb. 17.

She will get a hearing before the Philadelphia Board of Education on June 4. The hearing is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. in the board room of the Administration Building, 21st St. and the Parkway.

In accordance with her privilege, Mrs. Watson has requested that her hearing be open to the public. Charges were preferred against her by Dr. Louis Hoyer, superintendent of schools.

Superintendent Satisfied

Mrs. Watson disclosed that she was called in by Dr. Hoyer on Oct. 15, 1952. He stated that her replies to his questions, all of which she answered, were satisfactory, she said.

A teacher at the Martha Washington School, 44th and Apsen Sts., Mrs. Watson lives on N. College Ave. near 23rd St. She is one of 32 suspended teachers.

Mrs. Watson explained that her refusal to invoke the 5th Amendment was not because the founders of the country intended that it should suggest guilt on the part of persons who used it.

She said she refused to testify because the newspapers and radio have created an atmosphere of suspicion and [illegible] regard to all persons who [illegible] the 5th amendment for protection.

When asked what would be her next move, now that she has been cited, Mrs. Watson answered that there is no step for her to take. When a warrant for her arrest is issued, she stated, she will file a request that she be permitted to post bail.

The teacher emphasized that she is undaunted in the face of a jail sentence.

TWO 'HATE' GROUPS HERE CONDEMNED

House Panel's Report Decries 'Subversion From Right'—Asks Smith Act Inquiry

Special to the New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 — A House committee deplored today the re-appearance of what it called "subversion from the extreme right."

"The committee condemns any such resurgence of pro-Fascist and hate activity," the Committee on Un-American Activities said in citing two organizations as examples of "this demagogic menace."

Activities of the avowedly Fascist National Renaissance party, with headquarters in New York, were called "clearly subversive and un-American." The Justice Department was formally requested to consider prosecuting its leaders under the Smith Act, whic hmakes it a conspiracy to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the Government.

The semi-monthly publication, "Common Sense," printed at Union, N. J., was denounced as "a clearing house for hate propagandists." Legal action against its publishers, however, was not specifically proposed.

The two organizations, according to the committee, are representative of "neo-Fascist" and "hate groups" that are now exploiting racial and religious hatred.

Panel Created in 1938

Issuance of the report, which was based on staff investigations, marked the first time since World War II that the committee had turned its attention from the Communist menace to the possible danger of subversion from the extreme Right.

The report noted, however, that the first investigation undertaken by the committee after its creation in 1938 had dealt with the German-American Bund.

Advocates of fascism as well as communism, it said, are "of grave concern to the committee."

"Subversion cannot be combatted by subversion," it declared. "Those who would support the extreme right today do as great a violence to our national institutions as do those on the extreme left."

"Furthermore, the appearance of neo-Fascist organizations and methods in the post-war period serve only to impede the intelligent, united effort necessary in the current life and death struggle with communism."

The report was essentially the same as a draft prepared by the staff and made public last Tuesday. Some minor changes were made by committee members before approving it.

200 to 700 Members

The National Renaissance party, according to the committee, was formed in January of 1949 by James H. Madole of Beason, N. Y., and lists its present headquarters as Box 238, 208 East Eighty-sixth Street, New York. Its membership was estimated at 200 to 700, including an "elite guard in the Nazi style."

"The program and propaganda of the National Renaissance party is virtually borrowed wholesale from the Fascist and Nazi dictators," the committee said.

The organization's sporadically issued "Bulletin" describes its objectives as including "the abolition of parliamentary government" and "the use of all educational facilities to imbue the American youth with an intense feeling of racial and national pride as a sure antidote to the international poison of world communism."

The "Bulletin," reproduced in the committee's report, also calls for gradual deportion of Puerto Ricans, Negroes, Jews and Asiatics and loss of citizenship for "the Jewish race."

The committee described "Common Sense," a semi-monthly paper, as essentially pro-Nazi and anti-Semitic and "almost exclusively a vehicle for the exploitation of ignorance, prejudice and fear.'"

It is published at 530 Chestnut Street, Union, N. J., by Conde J. McGinley and his son, C. J. McGinley, operating under the name of "The Christian Educational Association."

'Clearing House for Hate'

"Through the columns of 'Common Sense' and innumerable booklets printed and offered for sale," the report held, "the McGinleys appear to serve as a clearing house for hate propagandists throughout the country. Among these are many of the native Fascists and hate racketeers who were active in the Nineteen Thirties."

In contrast to the Renaissance party, the McGinley enterprise appears to be "a shrewd and growing business," the committee found. Average circulation of the paper was estimated at 50,000 copies, about 30,000 of which are distributed free. Minimum income of the operation was estimated at $30,000 a year.

Headlines from the paper, as reproduced in the committee report, include such as the following: "A Rabbi Speaks! Foretells Gentile Doom"; "'Brotherhood'—Jew Trap for Christianity," and Zionists Threaten Russia with War."

Operates in Yorkville

The National Renaissance party has operated largely in Yorkville and its vicinity.

Mr. Madole presided two weeks ago at a meeting of "Patriots for McCarthy" at Wederman's Hall, 160 Third Avenue. About seventy attended the meeting.

Indoor meetings of the party during the last two years were held at a hall at 208 East Eighty-sixth Street. Outdoor meetings during spring and summer were held at York Avenue at Eighty-sixth and Eighty-seventh Streets. Attendance at these meetings was often accompanied by disturbances.

Mr. Madole said at one of the open-air meetings on May 1, 1953:

"I am proud of being a Fascist and a Nazi. They [the Jews] have got to get the same concentration camps as they got in Germany and Italy. We've got to get rid of them, the sooner the better."

At another meeting he described Adolph Hitler as "the George Washington of Europe."

The Bulletin, in its issue for May, 1953, said:

"Although Adolph Hitler is dead, his philosophy lives again in the growing strength of Fascist forces in America, Europe and the Middle East. What Hitler accomplished in Europe the National Renaissance party shall yet accomplish in America."

House Report Is Praised

Meanwhile, Irving M. Engel, president of the American Jewish Committee, described the report issued by the House committee as "an eloquent, timely and instructive warning to the American people of the dangers presented by groups on the extreme right." He added:

"The American Jewish Committee fully approves the Congressional committee's findings that such individuals and organizations are 'unscrupulously exploiting the menace of communism to promote other activities equally subversive and equally un-American.'"

The House committee, however was criticized for its failure to grant a hearing to the two groups it cited.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which describes itself as a private, nonpartisan organization dedicated to the promotion of the Bill of Rights, also deplored investigation of "any area of public opinion, no matter how repugnant are the views expressed by these groups."

MR. AUBREY WILLIAMS

Aubrey's Short Cut

As we have said before, Aubrey Williams, the Montgomery publisher and farmer, is one of the few authentic radicals we have known who was not a solemn, humorless ass. He is genial, genteel, a thoroughly companionable man who laughs all the way down to his transverse colon. It's always a refreshment to share a luncheon booth with him, which we did yesterday in abject envy for his courage in wearing shorts. His attire consisted of a short sleeve shirt, a nifty pair of navy blue walking shorts and navy blue socks reaching to the knee, looking like Sahib in the Punjab. If not the class of present fashion he certainly appeared to us to be the wave of the future. He reports that he has gradually mastered his feeling of sore thumb prominence and will consider himself a graduate when he enters the bank so attired. Meanwhile, our impression is that he is the only dirt farmer (as well as publisher) in Alabama with both the legs and nerve to do it.

DR. THOMAS A. WILLISTON

The Carol Williston Hearing

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 11-20-54

- Major charge husband was Communist member in '45
- Conference for Human Welfare cited

By LOUIS LAUTIER
(For NNPA)

WASHINGTON

Should a wife be held responsible for the repudiated ideologies of her husband?

That appears to be the chief issue in the security proceedings against Mrs. Carol Williston, wife of Dr. Thomas A. Williston, a physician.

Mrs. Williston, the director of the medical social service at Freedmen's Hospital, was suspended from her job on Sept. 13. Notice of her suspension and the charges upon which it was based was given her by Nelson A. Rockefeller, under secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

— o O o —

MRS. WILLISTON is the daughter of the late Dr. Simeon L. Carson, who was an outstanding and highly respected surgeon in his lifetime. She, herself, enjoys the confidence, respect and esteem of people who know her.

Among those testifying as to her good character, integrity, veracity and belief in her loyalty, are such highly respected individuals in the community as the Rev. Dillard Brown, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal Church; Dr. Montague Cobb, head of the department of anatomy at Howard University Medical School; Dr. Howard Payne, chief physician in tuberculosis at Freedmen's; and Belford V. Lawson, attorney.

Mrs. Williston

Mrs. Williston is not charged with being a Communist or being active in a Communist-front organization. The case against her apparently is based on reports, some of which probably came from informants of the FBI.

— o O o —

THE NAMES OF these informants are not available even to Mrs. Williston's attorney, George E. C. Hayes. It is doubtful that the chairman of the security board which gave her a hearing Wednesday knows them.

The security board convicts on evidence which it cannot even appraise. As Justice William O. Douglas said in one case:

"The critical evidence may be the word of an unknown witness who is 'a paragon of veracity, a knave or the village idiot.' His name, his reputation, his animosities, his trustworthiness are unknown both to the judge and to the accused.

— o O o —

"THE ACCUSED has no opportunity to show that the witness lied or was prejudiced or venal. Without knowing who her accusers are, she has no way of defending. She has nothing to offer except her own word."

The principal charge against Mrs. Williston is that her husband "has been reliably reported to be a member of the Communist party and of numerous organizations" listed by the atorney general as subversive.

Mrs. Williston's reply was: "It has not been my habit to question my husband's activities. He is a physician and as such his time is subject to the demands of the public.

"AS OF THE date of my suspension, I have specifically interrogated my husband and know from his statements that he was once a member of the Communist party and of numerous organizations coming within the purview of Executive Order 10450 (President Eisenhower's national security order), and that he gave information to this effect to the Federal Bureau of Investigation during this year.

"I am presently advised by my husband that he severed his connection with the Communist party some time ago. I, myself, have never held membership in the Communist party."

In the testimony of Mary Stalcup Markward, who joined the Communist party in 1943 as an informant for the FBI and continued her activities as such until October, 1949, Dr. Williston is twice mentioned.

THE MARKWARD testimony concerned communists in the District of Columbia and Maryland. It was given before the House Un-American Activities Committee in June, 1951.

In Mrs. Markward's first reference to Dr. Williston she identified him as being a member of the Communist Political Association in Washington between June, 1944, and October, 1945.

In her second reference to Dr. Williston, she testified he was a member of the Health Club. "I don't believe he attended meetings of the club," she said, "but he did pay his dues and keep his membership through this club."

— o O o —

MRS. WILLISTON was also charged with being a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy and contributing $1 to this group. This organization comes within the purview of the Presidential order.

Her reply was: "My best recollection is that sometime prior to 1942, I was approached for a contribution of $1 to the American League for Peace and Democracy. It has been my custom to contribute to welfare agencies and organizations so that I complied with the request since there was no apparent justification in questioning the intention of any group so named.

"I believe that I can say with certainty I never attended any meetings conducted under its auspices, if such were held, and I am not aware of having received any literature from the organization. After the donation, D.C. I gave no further thought to the matter until I was questioned and exonerated at the time of a previous hearing."

— o O o —

ANOTHER CHARGE was that Mrs. Williston's name "reportedly appeared on the active indices of the Washington Committee for Democratic Action at an unspecified date."

Her reply was: "I have no way of accounting for how my name should appear 'on the active indices' of the Washington Commitee for Democratic Action and no knowledge of having been connected in any way what-soever with such an organization.

"There is always the possibility that on the street or in a door-to-door canvass, someone asked me for a contribution for a so-called 'worthy cause' and that I met the request, but, if so, assuredly with no further thought about it."

— o O o —

THE NEXT CHARGE was that Mrs. Williston's name "reportedly appeared on the active indices of the American Peace Mobilization at an unspecified date."

Her reply to this charge was "much the same" as her answer to the charge concerning the Democratic Action Committee. "To the best of my knowledge," she added, "I have never attended any meetings or had any contact with such organization."

Mrs. Williston was also charged with affiliation with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in Washington in approximately 1947. To this charge she replied:

— o O o —

"I REMEMBER that a number of years ago the Southern Conference for Human Welfare conducted activities in Washington. There was a banquet at the Statler Hotel, I believe, at which time an award was made by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare to Associate Justice Black of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"The Southern Conference for Human Welfare held meetings in the homes of a number of prominent Washington citizens on which occasions funds were solicited. I am certain that I have contributed or pledged money for the work of this organization whenever present at a fund-raising because the purposes of the organization, as presented, seemed commendable."

Mrs. Williston also was charged with associating, for many years, with individuals, who, evidence indicate, were members of the Communist party or subversive groups. To this charge she replied:

— o O o —

"MY LACK OF knowledge of the political learning of the persons with whom I have been associated makes it difficult to refute point 5. May it suffice to say that, any associations which I have had with any persons possibly within the categories named have been purely and solely social contacts and have had no political implication."

A seventh charge was that Communist party meetings were held in Mrs. Williston's home. To this charge she replied:

"Particularly since having learned of the accuracy of Charge '6' with regard to my husband, and having talked with him about it, I can only answer '7' by saying that no such meetings were held with knowledge on my part and that I have not participated in any such meetings.

— o O o —

"MY HOME is so constructed, as to living quarters and my husband's office, that the entrances are separate and distinct and meetings could be held in the office without knowledge on my part.

"I understand, from my husband, that there was one such meeting in his office, at the end of his office hours, over ten years ago and that he so testified to the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Mrs. Williston also was accused of attending functions at the Russian Embassy within the past five years. To this charge she replied:

— o O o —

"IT IS MY recollection that I have not been present at any functions at the Embassy of the United Soviet Socialist Republic within the last five years.

"On two or three occasions in previous years I have attended affairs at the Soviet Embassy. I looked on the invitation as an opportunity for a new and unusual experience in the Nation's Capital, to-wit, a chance to be a part of a gathering including dignitaries and high officials of this government.

"Prominent persons, both white and colored, were in attendance and on one occasion, I can remember, the Vice President of the United States was among those present. Insofar as I was concerned, all contacts were in a social vein."

— o O o —

THE NINTH and last charge was that when Mrs. Williston was interviewed by Department of Health, Education and Welfare security officers in May, she said she had never questioned her husband concerning membership in the Communist party, but information in the department's files indicated that she had previously questioned him on this matter.

To this charge she replied that she had made such a statement, but she was shown a copy of the hearings in 1948 containing a statement by her that she would ask her husband to submit answers to charges pertaining to him and his activities.

"Technically, I did not question my husband," Mrs. Williston said. "I gave him the questions for reply. Nevertheless, had I remembered the details of the hearing, I would have pointed out that I had requested my husband's help on the questions.

— o O o —

"OBVIOUSLY, IT would have been pointless to deny a situation which was a matter of record over my signature. I was aware in May that my husband had been questioned by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and he had discussed the investigation with me.

However, he failed to tell me that he had been a member of the Communist party and that he had so advised the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"HAVING BEEN called myself for investigation and knowing my own innocence, it did not seem damning to me that he also had been called. Had he given me a complete report of the incident, it is logical to presume that I would not have denied a fact that was already a recorded matter.

Mrs. Williston pointed out in her answer that the charges, with one or two exceptions, went back to a time over 12 years ago. "To the best of my knowledge, she declared, contributions made by me in the support of programs, now designated un-American, pre-dated their being so designated."

Among the witnesses on Wednesday were:

Dr. Howard Payne, director of the Tuberculosis Annex at Freedmen's; the Rev. Dillard Brown, rector, St. Lukes P. E. Church; Dr. Charles Prudhomme, of Howard University's Medical School; Dr. Anne Cook, head of the drama department at Howard; Louis Welters, personnel director at Freedmen's Hospital; Dr. Montague Cobb, president of t he Medico-Chirurgical Society and Louis Lautier, NNPA correspondent.

The character witnesses, the AFRO was told, testified as to the loyalty and good reputation of Mrs. Williston.

Mrs. Williston, who has been employed at Freedmen's 20 years, has been under suspension since the middle of September, pending the outcome of the hearing.

THE TIP OFF

BY EMORY O. JACKSON

SELMA, Ala. —(SNS)— Dallas is one of the eight counties in the Fourth Congressional District.

Alabama has nine such districts. Little attention is paid by our political action leaders to these districts as such. Attention is directed at the big cities. Only medium-sized cities are located in the Fourth District.

Two Negro - serving colleges- Selma University and Talladega College - are located in this district. Both are located at the extremes of Alabama-one on the east and the other on the west. What can these colleges do in the program to political suffrage among the Negro group?

Let's take a look at these eight

Counties	Total Votes	Negro Votes
St. Clair	7,463	200?
Calhoun	23,759	1536
Talladega	17,374	1726
Clay	7,400	150?
Coosa	4,536	402
Elmore	10,500	200
Autauga	4,120	15?
Dallas	8,100	165
TOTALS	83,000	4,394

In three counties — St. Clair, Clay, Autauga — old or unconfirmed figures are used. The total Negro when the new figures from these counties come in will be bigger than the ones used. The Negro vote is about the same in everyone of the Congressional Districts.

Examine for a moment conditions in Dallas County of which Selma is the chief city and county site. In Dallas are 36,788 Negro persons and 19,810 white citizens. Of the estimated 12,597 white persons of voting age 7,835 are on the voters' rolls. Some 18,145 Negro persons in this county are 21 years or over but only 165 of them are eligible voters. Which means that approximately 17,980 potential Negro voters are disfranchised.

A civic leader reported at the political check up workshop held here Sunday, May 9, that about 1,000 Negro applicants for the ballot have been rejected in Dallas County. Apparently no documented record of these alleged vote denials has been kept. No proper protest has been made. No letters have been written to the editors of newspapers pointing out these rejection. No vote denial suits have been instituted.

Appointments and jobs in the Post offices, in some measure, revolve around the U. S. Representative from the District. New plants are moving into the Black Belt, some perhaps with government contracts in which anti-discrimination clauses are written. Enjoyment of the benefits in these two areas will reflect itself in the use made of the ballot.

Dallas County needs $5,327,500 to bring its Negro-serving schools up to acceptable standards and only $769,500 to tug the white-admitting schools up to par. The city administration of Selma is planning a $600,000 bond issue for school building purposes. What's in it for the Negro group?

Two stalwarts labored here and left. The Rev. J. F. Grimmett, a militant Baptist minister and C. J. Adams, a notary public and deluxe leader. But they left Selma as others have done before them. Things were tough. Always from somewhere come those to take up the fight and carry the cause forward.

Selma has the resources and the new leadership, provided the will and determination is there, to batter down those racial barriers standing between the group and the ballot box. Selma University which is the symbol of 300,000 Negro Baptist in Alabama could give inspiration and guidance. The Elks Club which is a part of the civil liberties program of the craft could supply financial and moral support. There is a branch of the NAACP which is a trademark for the best in trustworthy leadership.

More Whites On Voter's List Than Negroes

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, ALA. —Nearly every white person of voting age is on the voters list while little more than 5 per cent of the potential Negro voters are on the roster of electors.

This information was revealed in an analysis of the voting strength in Macon County made public this week by Andrew W. Walker. He presented his findings at a meeting of the Tuskegee Branch NAACP.

Mr. Walker used charts and graphs of the voting characteristics and potential of Macon County by precincts and race as the basis of his presentation.

Prospective Negro voters have at times run into difficulties trying to add their names to the voters' list. Several vote suits have been initiated by civic leaders seeking to break through the racial barriers erected against Negro applicants.

"The strength, then, of the wolf is in the pack, and the strength of the pack is the wolf. Reduced to its simplest terms: where we have votes, politically we are strong; where we have no votes—or relatively few votes-politically, we are weak" Walker said. It was brought out that the Negro constituted

ANDREW WALKER

5.38 percent of the voters in Macon County in 1948; 18.18 per cent in 1950; 19.52 per cent, and 22.00 per cent in 1954. The County has a total electorate of 3862, and of this number 855 are Negroes. It was further stated that Macon has a potential of 14,539 Negro voters or that this racial group could represent 82.51 per cent of the qualified voters in the county. The whites have 3007 of its potential of 3081 registered. It was further stated that, based upon the white population of voting age, only 7 additional whites could become registered.

Mr. Walker gave some occupational breakdowns of the Negro electorat which showed that there are 61 business men registered; 123 clerical workers; 68 college administrators and workers; 9 farmers; 38 physicians and 78 public school teachers are registered out of a total of 196 employed— or 39. 79 per cent of Negro teachers in the county are qualified voters. Of the 10 precincts which make up Macon County, ther are Negro voters in only 6 of these precincts, the report stated.

An Analysis Of May 4 Vote To Be Made By Toland Soon

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, ALA. —(SNS)— An analysis of the May 4th vote returns is scheduled to be made by Frank J. Toland at the meeting of the Tuskegee Civic Association scheduled for 3:30 on Sunday afternoon at the Washington Chapel AME Church.

Mr. Toland is chairman of the TCA's membership committee. His analysis will deal with both the state and local levels. He will attempt to evauate the effectiveness of the Negro vote in these areas of paricipation.

William P. Mitchell, TCA secretary announced that all voters are urged to attend this meeting. He also said that the general public is invited.

C. G. Gomillion, president of the 1300-member TCA, will make an announcement of the plans of the Political Action Committee affecting the June 1st Democratic run off at this meeting.

THE TIP-OFF

By EMORY O. JACKSON

The Alabama May 4 election returns will be closely studied selectively.

Particularly is that true in Jefferson County. There was, for instance, considerable conversation here over the complete returns which showed Atty. Arthur D. Shores running 28th in a field of 29 candidates. Seven places were to be filled.

Some 48,000 or more votes were cast in this bracket. He received 4,015. There are only 5,250 Negro voters listed on the 1954 voters roster in Jefferson County. Not all of the Negro voters cast their ballot and likely Mr. Shores polled voters other than Negro electors.

I have raised questions without reaching conclusions on the size of the Shores vote. Some with whom

I have talked consider his showing encouraging. Others think it was probably held as low as it is by ballot spoilage, the slow-down at the polls, and the going home without voting by some of those unwilling to stand in long lines for long hours seeking to cast their ballots. Naturally there were those Negro voters who did not go to the polls.

Important and not to be overlooked is the fact that Mr. Shores broke the ice by running for a political office. He conducted a high-class campaign which could set the pattern for others. In this he was pioneering in a field new to him. He used none of the novelities and was above resorting to appeals which were unsportsmanslike.

But the big lesson for our local political action leaders is the shocking realization, at last I hope, that Negro voters in this one-county Ninth Congressional District are too few. There is need for more leadership, or better, some leadership at the community level for increased voter-registration.

Jefferson County has 132,426 more Negro persons than Mobile County but only 18 more Negro voters than Mobile County.

In Macon County where Mrs. Jessie P. Guzman lost 716 to 2365 to B. L. Balch in her unsuccessful bid for a post on the Macon County Board of Education, some interesting observation can be made. There are 855 Negro voters and 3,007 white voters in this county. Assuming that Mr. Balch tallied nothing but white voters, this would mean that all but 692 white voters cast their ballots. Should Mrs. Guzman polled only Negro voters cast their ballots. Should Mrs. Guzman polled only Negro votes, this would mean that only 149 Negro voters stayed away from the polls.

Democratic elections where qualifications alone count would seem to serve as a double stimulation, at least in Macon County for bringing the fullest vote to the polls.

Political suffrage serves as the best mirror of race relations in the South. Where you can find voters supporting candidates on the basis of program, philosophy, personality and campaigning, you are likely to find healthy human relations. Increased Negro suffrage reflects improved race relations. Compare Mobile with Birmingham.

Race-issue politics is becoming losing politics in Alabama. Smear-sheet electioneering no longer fools many persons when TV is available to expose its use. Yet in Jefferson County, as could be evidenced in one race, racial bigotry still can find a disturbingly large number of followers. A study of the election returns will cast light on the communities where candidates who ride the race issue get their support.

From reports, those who voted at Legion Field had grounds for squawking in addition to some of those heard at other polling places. It is evident that two few voting machines were placed at this voting center. There was evidence that some of the poll official sought at one point to give advantages to white voters. But this practice was halted almost before it was initiated.

There are public officials in this county who take seriously their duty and their oath. The manner in which the mis-application of processing was corrected at the polling center at Legion Field serves to demonstrate this. It is good American practice that every person take his turn instead of trying to take advantage of his fellow man because of his station, occupation, or circumstance.

Negro candidates and Negro interest in politics contributed to the record-breaking turn out of voters in Alabama on May 4. But how much will it do to break the registration apathy in Birmingham and to challenge to the front new leaders who can inspire others to move forward? No election should be without its lessons.

Voting In Macon County

An analysis of voter statistics made by the Tuskegee Branch NAACP of Macon County provides some revealing information. The Negro vote in Macon County, this study reveals, is only 5.38 per cent of the total. All but 71 of the eligible-to-vote age white citizens are on the voter rolls. In contrast, 14,539 Negro persons of voting age are off the voter roster. Negro voters are listed in only six of the 10 Macon County precincts. But 78 of the 196 school teachers in this county are qualified voters.

Macon County is one of those Black Belt counties. There are 26,553 Negro persons and 4,946 Negro persons in this county. It is one of the 10 counties making up the Third Congressional District. Racial voting facts are about the same in all of these counties with the exception of Bullock which has only 7 Negro voters. There are 4,239 white persons and 11,815 Negro persons in Bullock county. A number of Negro vote applicants have allegedly been denied the opportunity to register as electors in Bullock County.

Tuskegee Institute is the only Negro-admitting college located in the Third Congressional District. It seems to us that those institutions of higher education which serve our group could have their political science departments make for the district in which they are located the same type of vote analysis as has been made for Macon County by the Tuskegee Branch NAACP.

Job For Tuskegee

(From The Baltimore Afro-American)

The Tuskegee, Ala., branch NAACP published some startling figures last week.

In the whole of Macon County, in which Tuskegee is located, 3,081 white citizens are eligible and 3,007 of them actually registered to vote.

In the same county, 14,539 colored persons are eligible to register and only 855 of them actually registered to vote.

The late W. Sampson Brooks, an AME bishop, was accustomed to say "your potention is important, but more important is how much of your potential you can use."

In Macon County, colored people use less than seven per cent of their voting strength. White people use 98 per cent.

Thus, it appears that 3,000 white voters in Tuskegee Institute's own county rule 14,000 colored residents by imposing taxes and electing all the county officials from dog catcher to county commissioner.

There may have been some reason for this in the old days when Booker T. Washington found it necessary to tour the country telling colored people it is more important to learn how to work with your hands than to vote.

But those times are past.

Tuskegee is one of the largest and most important educational institutions in the country. It has a national reputation.

It has produced monumental characters like Carver, Moton and Booker T. Washington, but its political effect upon its country has been nil.

Only 78 of 196 school teachers in the county are qualified voters. Only 68 persons registered from Tuskegee itself. There are only nine farmers and 39 physicians on the books.

In the Fourth and 10th precincts in Macon County, there are no colored persons registered.

It has long been pointed out that the Tuskegee influence on farming and on business in Macon County has been tremendous.

We agree with the Birmingham World that it is time now for Tuskegee Institute to make itself politically effective in its own county.

The Voter-Registration Vacation

Apparently those we label as leaders and the unled non-voters are on vacation from voter-registration. This is an unhappy situation in view of the low-vote estate of the Negro group. Less than 6,000 of the 108,000 vote-age Negro persons are on the qualified Jefferson County voters' list.

Throughout the state, leaders in the various counties are holding district meetings to exchange ideas and to share plans for increasing the number of voters. Birmingham is the chief city of the Ninth Congressional District. There are over 22 municipalities in this district. In each community there are unheard-of leaders ready to replace these non-action leaders.

Too long have we depended on these high-placed, title-worshipping, excuse-giving leaders. It is time now that a community-by-community search be made for leaders who have the interest and the will to work in the field of expanding suffrage.

Organizations like the NAACP, the Lincoln Republican Club, the Jefferson County Progressive Democratic Council, the Federation of Women's Club, the Prince Hall Masons, the Eastern Star, the Knights of Pythias, should pick up the challenge.

Those who are interested in voting should not wait for leadership. Be your own leader and move into the promise land of first-class citizenship.
